

Spot Copper Brings 30 Cents a Pound

Copper is very strong and prices are at a new high level, says the Boston Commercial. Lake and electrolytic are selling at 30 1/2 to 31 cents for cash, 29 to 30 cents for June and July delivery, and 28 to 28 1/2 cents per pound for delivery during the last quarter of the year. There are some features of the situation which indicate that consumers have not covered fully their requirements for May and June, and that producers have sold as much or more for delivery during those two months than they will be able to supply. It is not impossible, therefore, that the relatively small amounts of copper now being carried by speculators may command abnormally high prices. The market is in such a position it cannot be held in check by producers, and consumers have such enormous volumes of urgent orders on their books that they will pay any price asked for copper rather than reduce their activities.

It is estimated that as much as 600,000,000 pounds of copper has been sold in this country alone during the last three weeks, an amount equivalent to three months' production of all the world's mines. It must be understood that these sales did not represent accumulations of metal, and that they were made possible only by the extension of dates of delivery through to the end of this year and in some cases to 1917. Thus several hundred million pounds of copper has been sold which has not yet been mined.

Plans for the reopening of the old smelter at Sahuarita are being made, by companies in the Twin Buttes vicinity, according to reports. The smelter is owned by the Pioneer Smelting company and has been idle for some time. It is said that a new company will be formed for the purpose of taking over the smelter, and increasing the output from 125 tons daily to 500.

J. E. Masters, who has charge of the Burro in the Tyndall district, was in Patagonia few days this week, making arrangements for the disposal of ore from the Burro. He says development of the property will be continued. The tunnel is now in over 300 feet with very gratifying results. Mr. Masters also has control of the Joplin, adjoining the Burro.

C. J. Healy, Dr. Underwood and Hugo Miller, a party of mining men from Nogales, were in Patagonia this week, looking at different properties, principally the Cornucopia group, below the Mansfield camp. Samples were taken of ore from this property, the silver contents of which have caused much favorable mention on the streets of Patagonia for some time.

Capt. John H. Cady returned Tuesday evening from a trip of a few weeks to towns in different parts of Arizona, in the interest of his book, "Arizona Yesterday." He reports many sales of his interesting book.

Frank Reichert was in town Tuesday from Alto, where he reports considerable mining activity at the present time.

S. P. Boucher of Douglas was down the first of the week, and went out to the Mowry country, where he owns valuable claims.

Colin Timmons, the engineer, has secured control of the Blue Lead, a few miles northwest of town, and work is expected to commence within a short time.

Shannon and Dowd are still in on the good ore on their property, the Exposed Reef, in Alum Gulch. A deal has been pending on this property for several days.

Good word continues to come from the Blue Eagle in Alum Gulch, which recently came into the ore from a cross-cut from a winze down over 100 feet. The work is being done on the "Lepy" claim, owned by Harry Stevens.

Donald B. Gillis, Jud Newkirk and Wm. N. Pink, a party of mining men who have been operating in Mexico, arrived in Patagonia Wednesday from El Paso, and will spend several days in the district.

J. R. Coleman, a mining man from Mexico, and the Southwest in general, has been in the Patagonia country this week, looking over different properties. He is very well pleased with the mineral showing of this district, and may decide to make an investment here.

Mr. Schimmerhorn, an engineer who has been examining the Three L group, adjoining the Blue Nose in Harshaw district, is reported to be pleased with the property, and is expected to make a favorable report. This is a lead-silver proposition, and is owned principally by Judge M. Marsteller of Nogales.

After you had been working for years trying to develop a mine; when your very last dollar and almost your very last credit had been exhausted; when after many trials and tribulations you had finally got into some good pay ore, and then the smelters refused to accept it—wouldn't it get your goat?

The Harshell, being operated by Geo. B. Hosier and associates, has about 100 tons of high grade lead-silver carbonates and galena ore, which has been taken from old stopes and new ground, and is now lying on the 300 level, preparatory to being binned. Ten men are working in the mine, and new development faces are being pushed.

W. D. Abel and Mrs. Abel arrived in town this week from El Paso, where Mr. Abel has been engaged in mining. They were taken to the Three R mine, where Mr. Abel will be employed.

Easter Services Given by Sunday Schools

Sunday schools of San Rafael and Patagonia celebrated Easter by giving a basket dinner and exercises by the children at the Patagonia school house. Ladies active in Sunday school work in both Patagonia and San Rafael brought well-filled lunch baskets, enough in fact for many more people than were in attendance. The affair was very pleasant and appropriate, the children especially enjoying the celebration. The parents and children who took part in the observance of Easter were: Mrs. L. L. Nevius, Lois, Orville and Clara Nevius; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Parker, Emily and George Parker, Jr.; Mabel (Patsy) Gates, Mrs. Lida D. Withrow, Mrs. T. L. Pattison, Arthur and Ralph Pattison, Mrs. Frank Siebold, Doris, Frank and Helen Siebold; Mrs. E. P. Cook, LeVancha Cook, Mrs. James Brash, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Riggs, Ralph and Roger Riggs, Costello Ferrin, Herbert and Beattie Holcomb, Ernest and Vivian Reagan, Cecil and Charlie Shields, Cecil Wilson, Grace Kane, Lela Shields, Fay Richie, Lucille Fitts, Thelma Johnson, Clyde Holcomb, Chas. Brown, Miss Shaw, Ray Sorrells, W. D. Parker.

Celebration Planned Three R Mine Deal

Rastus Karns and other young men are preparing for a big celebration in Patagonia on Friday the 5th of May, the "Cinco de Mayo" day of the Mexicans. The affair will consist of horse races, pony races, goat roping, if goats can be secured, if not burro roping, etc. Things are to start about 10 o'clock in the morning, and there will be something doing every minute throughout the day. A large crowd is expected in town. At night a dance will be given at Patagonia Opera House, the music to be furnished by the Canelo orchestra.

Owing to the death of a sister in Reno Nev., of Judge W. A. O'Connor, the Superior court in session at Nogales this week, was adjourned until Friday, when Judge Lockwood of Cochise county occupied the bench. It is understood the case of Jack Falls, who murdered Tom Castleberry in Wilson's blacksmith shop in Patagonia a few weeks ago, has been put over until the next session of the court.

Geo. H. Brooks returned from Tucson Monday evening, where he had been on a business trip of several days. He went out to his home at Duquesne on the stage Tuesday morning. Mr. Brooks reported a very pleasant trip, and says the "Old Pueblo" is quite active with mining affairs at the present time.

A Sunday school has been organized at Duquesne, with the school teacher, Mrs. Persis D. Coombs as superintendent. A very good attendance and considerable interest is reported.

Court to Determine Title of Government

Whether the government loses all title to mining claims as soon as they are located, is to be decided by the supreme court of the United States. The attorney general has appealed the now famous Cameron case.

Ralph H. Cameron held some unpatented claims in the Grand Canyon. He applied for patent but the government filed a contest in the land office for this district. Cameron claimed that after the claims were located and the necessary proofs made the land office had no choice but to issue patents, that the government might then test the validity of the patents in a court of law.

The matter was taken to the federal court for the district of Arizona, which ruled against Cameron. He then appealed to the District of Columbia court of appeals, which upheld his contention. Now an appeal has been taken to the highest court in the land.

Catholic ladies of Patagonia are taking up a subscription to clean-up and improve the little chapel here. Arrangements will probably be made to have a priest come up from Nogales and give services at least twice a month.

Three R Mine Deal

The sale of the Three R mine, made last week at Tucson, through C. C. Sanders, was for $500,000, one-third of which is to be placed in the bank to cover the third interest claimed by the Heney interests, and will be paid to them in case they eventually win their case. It will go to Richardson with the other two-thirds in case Richardson wins. The $500,000 is to be paid in payments extending over a long period, and as the payments are made one-third of each will be placed in the bank to cover the Heney claim. A. E. Crepin and Ed. F. Bollinger do not own any interest in the mine.

A dance is advertised for tomorrow night (Saturday), at Fruitland hall. The Canelo orchestra will furnish music, and the orchestra is in receipt of several new musical numbers, both waltzes and two-steps, from the publishers which will be played. A good time is assured.

Howard Keener, a farmer in the San Rafael, who recently purchased a large tank from an El Paso firm, and when it arrived in Patagonia the freight charges amounted to more than the value of the tank, has received a satisfactory settlement from the firm, which rebated Mr. Keener an amount sufficient to induce him to accept the tank.

Advertising Helped Put Oatman on Map

Chas. Flynn, who has been in the Oatman district for the past several months, returned this week to Patagonia, where he owns valuable mining claims, and will make this camp his headquarters for awhile. Mr. Flynn has had a lot of experience in the mining game, and at different times has made some money. He tells a good story of early days at Oatman, now the big boom camp of the country. Before the boom struck the place, the miners were struggling along trying to get the camp on the map in some manner, in order to attract investors. With the exception of one big producer, there hadn't been any ore to speak of sent out from Oatman. Along about that time the Willard-Moran prizefight was being talked of. Six or seven hardluck prospectors standing on a street corner in Oatman one day evolved the brilliant idea of making an offer for staging the fight in Oatman, as an advertisement for the coming world-beater. Immediately an offer of $45,000 cash for the mill was wired to the managers. This offer was telegraphed over the world by the Associated Press, and had the desired effect—of letting people know of Oatman, and if little Oatman could offer such a sum for a prizefight there surely must be oodles of ore and money there. A prompt notification from Governor Hunt that the grand old commonwealth of Arizona would not permit the staging of a prizefight happily prevented the promoters of the affair from being called upon to put up any of the guaranty—and it is stated that it would have been impossible for the crowd to have raised over four bits among them, but the advertisement was successfully "put over." Oatman has made good since, and there is now $165,000,000 represented by the different companies operating in that field.

Rev. Arthur Leonard Wadsworth of South Pasadena, Cal., field editor of the Pacific Baptist, and Harry O. Anderson, copartner of the American Baptist Publication Society, were in town this week. They are touring southern Arizona. They preached in San Rafael Wednesday evening and in Sonoita on Thursday. Bibles, Testaments, tracts and books were distributed throughout the trip.

SAW THINGS IN NEW LIGHT

Society Woman Profited by Rector's Sensible Remarks on the Subject of Snobbishness.

"But, my dear Doctor Brown," exclaimed Mrs. de Puyster, "however excellent these people may be, you don't mean that I ought to treat them as my social equals?"

"And why not?" asked the rector. To the lady his voice did not seem so sympathetic as usual.

"Well, really," she returned, a little embarrassed, "it seems obvious that they are different."

"The differences you speak of are mostly petty, silly, and wicked distinctions without real significance. What clothes a man wears, who his father and mother were, what opportunity for schooling he had or was denied—do these things give any intimation of the man's essential worth or value?"

"Once, at a fashionable summer resort, I sat watching the crowd bathing. Among them three men were conspicuous. It was a pleasure to see their broad shoulders, their deep chests, their splendid limbs. Finally they left the water and disappeared into one of the bathhouses. Presently they reappeared in overalls! They were workmen building a house near by. To most of those who saw them, their physical superiority had vanished under their working clothes."

"Some day," continued the doctor, "we shall all lay aside our clothes and our bodies as well. Some who on earth seemed very impressive with their fine clothes and their attractive faces and bodies will then look pitifully shriveled and shrunken."

"If you could look into the servants' hall of some great castle and see the butler refusing to associate with the stableman, and the cook holding herself superior to the chambermaids, it would seem to you utterly silly and ludicrous for people to make such ridiculous distinctions! But are they really more absurd than we when we make the same kind of distinctions among our fellows?"

Mrs. de Puyster smiled. "I suppose we are absurd," she said.

"If we were only absurd it wouldn't matter so much," returned the doctor. "But it is not simply ludicrous. Snobbery isn't a minor fault or a venial error. It's one of the great sins. If I'm a snob, it's because in my heart I despise my fellow men, and have set myself up as their superior. I have repudiated the very heart of the message of Christ. I have cut myself off from the common humanity with which Christ proudly identified himself. Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me," means that Christ actually lives in humble human-kind. For me to be a snob means that I have cut myself off from humble humankind—and consequently from Christ himself! That is a serious thing!"

Mrs. de Puyster no longer smiled. "It is a serious thing. It's an awful thing!" she cried. "God be merciful to me a snob!"—Youth's Companion.

Here is some advice to the tired business man. If you are not getting efficiency from your typist don't "can" her, but get some music. This will speed up tired typewriter performers. The idea is suggested by the manager of a business college, says the New York correspondent of the Pittsburgh Dispatch. He claims that he gets better work from his students when he turns on the phonograph and it plays some lively fox-trot. And now the crafty employers here are thinking of putting the suggestion in action. The scheme is to turn loose a lively record on a talking machine, the lively strain offsetting the tired strain under which the typewriter operator is laboring. The moment the weary worker hears the invigorating sound she strikes her key on the type writer, and then all of the keys. Somebody has observed that the modern dances do not confine the action to the feet. No, the shoulders, elbows and arms all have a chance to move. Every step forward is welcomed by progressive business men, so why not one-step?

Whistle Scared Thieves. S. Magari's ability to give a correct imitation of a police whistle on his fingers saved the day's receipts of his restaurant when a lone robber entered and drove him out of the back door. "Get out of here, quick!" the robber commanded as he entered the front door of Magari's place, flourishing a revolver. Magari dropped a' paring knife and ran for the rear exit. As he passed through the door the robber fired a shot at him. The bullet embedded itself in the door casing. On reaching the open Magari, with his fingers to his lips, cut loose with a shrill whistle so nearly like the metal whistles used by policemen that the robber ran out of the place at top speed.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Rice Culture in Porto Rico. Experiments in lowland rice culture recently started in Porto Rico are arousing much interest there, because rice is the chief food consumed in the island. Porto Rico has spent approximately $5,000,000 annually during the last four years for this grain, and is the largest export consumer of American-grown rice.

FIGURES DOUBLE IN MEXICO

Announcer at Prize Fight Has No Trouble in Explaining Length of Advertised Battle.

In the good old days, before revolutions raged with their present frequency, there used to be prize fights at Juarez, just across the international boundary from El Paso, and gentlemen of sporting inclinations from the American side of the line attended regularly.

One sunny afternoon, as the gladiators sat in their respective corners waiting for the tap of the bell, the official announcer climbed through the ropes and, standing in the middle of the ring, addressed the gathering.

"We are now about to have the principal event of the day," he stated, "a ten-round bout between—"

"Hold on there," broke in a tall Texan; "didn't you advertise that this was to be a twenty-round fight?"

"Twenty rounds, Mex.," explained the announcer without an instant's hesitation, and went right on with his speech.—Saturday Evening Post.

Safe Subject. "Here comes Dubwaite. He quotes Shakespeare on the slightest provocation, but does it indifferently well." "We'll have to be careful not to mention any subject that will start him off."

"What shall we discuss?" "Suppose we talk about appendicitis? So far as I know, there's no reference in Shakespeare's work to appendicitis."

Real Conversation. "I hope you don't indulge in gossip." "I'm afraid," replied young Mrs. Torbins, "that I like it. Of course, I don't try to make any up for myself, and I don't care much for what my friends now and then mention. But I must say that Charley was never so interesting as he was while he was serving on the grand jury."

It's All Dark. "A man should try to make the best of his misfortunes," remarked the philosopher.

"True enough," replied the man with a worried look. "But when an inexperienced motorist tries to change a tire without assistance, there is simply no brighter side to the performance."

Mystery. "I've been all over de world, mum," said the tattered tourist. "Fur a little breakfas' I'll tell you how de other half lives."

"I'm not curious to know," replied the angular woman. "I've got six children and a worthless husband, and I haven't found out yet how we live."

Jealous. "Is Bliggins a reformer?" "The worst kind."

"What do you mean by 'the worst kind'?" "There are objectionable as well as praiseworthy reformers. Bliggins is one of those who hate graft because they never had a chance at it."

Odd State of Affairs. "It's rather odd when you think of it."

"What is?" "Why, my nearest relative lives eighty miles away and my most distant relative only about eighty feet."

CHAPTER I. A Small World.

Cazalet sat up so suddenly that his head hit the woodwork over the upper berth. His own voice still rang in his startled ears. He wondered how much he had said, and how far it could have carried above the throb of the liner's screws and the mighty pounding of the water against her plates. And then he remembered how he had been left behind at Naples, and rejoined the Kaiser Fritz at Genoa, only to find that he no longer had a cabin to himself.

A sniff assured Cazalet that he was neither alone at the moment nor yet the only one awake; he pulled back the swaying curtain, and there on the settee sat a man with a strong blue chin and the quizzical solemnity of an animated sphinx.

It was his cabin companion, an American named Hilton Toye, and Cazalet addressed him with nervous familiarity.

"I say! Have I been talking in my sleep?"

"Why, yes!" replied Hilton Toye, and broke into a smile that made a human being of him.

Cazalet forced a responsive grin. "What did I say?" he asked, with an amused curiosity at variance with his shaking head and shining forehead.

Toye took him in from crown to fingertips, with something deep behind his kindly smile. "I judge," said he, "you were dreaming of some drama you've been seeing ashore. Mr. Cazalet."

"Dreaming!" said Cazalet, wiping his face. "It was a nightmare! I must have turned in too soon after dinner. But I should like to know what I said."

"I can tell you word for word. You said, 'Henry Craven—dead!' and then you said, 'Dead—dead—Henry Craven!' as if you'd got to have it both ways to make sure."

"It's true," said Cazalet, shuddering. "I saw him lying dead, in my dream." Hilton Toye took a gold watch from his waistcoat pocket. "Thirteen minutes to one in the morning," he said, "and now it's September eighteenth. Take a note of that, Mr. Cazalet. It may be another case of second sight for your psychical research society."

"I don't care if it is," Cazalet was smoking furiously.

"Meaning it was no great friend you dreamed was dead?"

"No friend at all, dead or alive!"

"I'm kind of wondering," said Toye, winding his watch slowly, "if he's by way of being a friend of mine. I know a Henry Craven over in England. Lives along the river, down Kingston way, in a big house."

"Called 'Uplands'?"

"Yes, sir! That's the man. Little world, isn't it?"

The man in the upper berth had to hold on as his curtains swung clear; the man tilted back on the settee, all attention all the time, was more than ever an effective foil to him. Without the kindly smile that went as quickly as it came, Hilton Toye was somber, subtle and demure. Cazalet, on the other hand, was of sanguine complexion and impetuous looks. He was tanned a rich bronze about the middle of the face, but it broke off across his forehead like the coloring of a meerschaum pipe. Both men were in their early prime, and each stood roughly for his race and type: the traveled American who knows the world, and the elemental Britisher who has made some one loose end of it his own.

"I thought of my Henry Craven," continued Toye, "as soon as ever you came out with yours. It did seem a kind of ordinary name. I might have known it was the same if I'd recollected the name of his firm. Isn't it Craven & Cazalet, the stockbrokers, down in Tokenhouse Yard?"

"That's it," said Cazalet bitterly. "But there have been none of us in it since my father died ten years ago."

"But you're Henry Craven's old partner's son?"

"I'm his only son."

"Then no wonder you dream about Henry Craven," cried Toye, "and no wonder it wouldn't break your heart if your dream came true."

"It wouldn't," said Cazalet through his teeth. "He wasn't a white man to me or mine—whatever you may have found him."

"I had a little place near his one summer. I know only what I heard down there."

"What did you hear?" asked Cazalet. "I've been away ten years, ever since the crash that ruined everybody but the man at the bottom of the whole thing. It would be a kindness to tell me what you heard."

"Well, I guess you've said it yourself right now. That man seems to have beguiled everybody all around except himself; that's how I make it out," said Hilton Toye.

"He did worse," said Cazalet through his teeth. "He killed my poor father; he bamboozled me to the wilds of Australia; and he sent a better man than himself to prison for fourteen years!" Toye opened his dark eyes for once.

but once more Toye was regarding him as shrewdly as when the night was younger, and the littleness of the world had not yet made them confident and boon companion.

Eight bells actually struck before their great talk ended and Cazalet swore that he missed the "watches aft, sir!" of the sailing-vessel ten years before.

"Say!" exclaimed Hilton Toye, knitting his brows over some nebulous recollection of his own. "I seem to have heard of you and some of your yarns before. Didn't you spend nights in a log-hut miles and miles from any human being?"

It was as they were turning in at last, but the question spoiled a yaw for Cazalet.

"Sometimes, at one of our out-stations," said he, looking puzzled.

"I've seen your photograph," said Toye, regarding him with a more critical stare. "But it was with a beard."

"I had it off when I was ashore the other day," said Cazalet. "I always meant to, before the end of the voyage."

"I see. It was a Miss Macnair showed me that photograph—Miss Blanche Macnair lives in a little house down there near your old home. I

"Second Sight!" He Ejaculated, as Though It Were the Night Before.

Judge hers is another old home that's been broken up since your day."

"They've all got married," said Cazalet.

"Except Miss Blanche. You wrote to her some, Mr. Cazalet?"

"Once a year—regularly. It was a promise. We were kids together," he explained, as he climbed back into the upper berth.

"Guess you were a lucky kid," said the voice below. "She's one in a thousand, Miss Blanche Macnair!"

CHAPTER II. Second Sight.

Southampton Water was an ornamental lake dotted with fairy lamps. It was a midsummer night, lagging a whole season behind its fellows. But already it was so late that the English passengers on the Kaiser Fritz had abandoned all thought of catching the last train to London.

They tramped the deck in their noisy, shining, shore-going boots; they manned the rail in lazy inarticulate appreciation of the nocturne in blue stippled with green and red and countless yellow lights. But Achilles in his tent was no more conspicuous absentee than Cazalet in his cabin as the Kaiser Fritz steamed sedately up Southampton Water.

He had finished packing; the stateroom floor was impassable with the baggage that Cazalet had wanted on the five-weeks' voyage. There was scarcely room to sit down, but in what there was sat Cazalet like a soul in torment. All the vultures of the night before, of his dreadful dream, and of the poignant reminiscences to which his dream had led, might have been gnawing at his vitals as he sat there waiting to set foot once more in the land from which a bitter blow had driven him.

Yet the bitterness might have been allayed by the consciousness that he, at any rate, had turned it to account. It had been, indeed, the making of him; thanks to that stern incentive, even some of the sweets of a deserved success were already his. But there was no hint of complacency in Cazalet's clouded face and heavy attitude. His face was pale, even in that torrid zone between the latitudes protected in the bush by beard and wide-awake. And he jumped to his feet as suddenly as the screw stopped for the first time. The same thing happened again and yet again, as often as ever the engines paused before the end. Cazalet would spring up and watch his stateroom door with clenched fists and haunted eyes. But it was some long time before the door flew open, and then slammed behind Hilton Toye.

Toye was in a state of excitement even more abnormal than Cazalet's nervous despondency, which indeed it prevented him from observing. It was instantaneously clear that Toye was astounded, thrilled, almost triumphant, but as yet just drawing the line at that. A newspaper fluttered in his hand.

"Second sight?" he ejaculated, as though it were the night before and Cazalet still shaken by his dream. "I guess you've got it in full measure, pressed down and running over. Mr. Cazalet!"

TO SIGNAL TO MARS

May Be Done With Gigantic Light Rays.

Group of Mirrors About Two Hundred and Fifty Square Miles in Extent, It is Estimated, Would Be Required.

It is suggested that the only practical way to communicate with the inhabitants of Mars is by some gigantic mirror, or projector of rays of light, by which signals may be flashed, just as an army communicates with distant divisions, or as the navy communicates between ships. If two signal officers on earth are 25 miles apart they may communicate by a small mirror an inch in diameter, catching the rays of light and flashing them. It is by some such device that communication may be established with the Martians, if they are provided with telescopes at least as powerful.

It has been calculated that the mirror required for casting the ray of light the distance to Mars ought to be something like forty miles in diameter. But one of these mirrors would not be enough, for the ray sent back from it would be hardly more than a point of light by the time it traversed the millions of miles which separate us from Mars. It has, therefore, been suggested that ten mirrors, each one 40 miles in diameter, be grouped next to each other. The total of these mirrors would be about 250,000 square miles, and it would be an enormous problem to secure the glass, the quicksilver for coating the glass and the enormous quantity of iron which would be required for the frames of the mirrors. The difficulties are so great that many say they are insurmountable and that we shall have to wait until the electric waves have been perfected, or we have machines which can cast a ray of electric light through space. Perhaps wireless telegraphy indicates the way in which we shall communicate with Mars, and it may be by sound, not by sight. Science has advanced tremendously in the use of sound waves, being now able to talk 5,000 miles or more without wires. And in a year or two it may be possible to talk around the world by this method.

It must not be forgotten, however, that when Mars is nearest to the earth it is 30,000,000 miles away, and that its extreme distance is 45,000,000 miles.

It will probably be years and years before communication is established with Mars, and even in that event, success depends upon the Martians having receivers that will catch earthly communications.

Improved Electric Hammer.

An electric hammer of new design has recently been evolved by a leading American electric manufacturer. Briefly, the new hammer consists of a high-speed, series-wound electric motor driving an eccentric mechanism through reduction gearing; the mechanism, in turn, operating a plunger, which is virtually the hammer. A sleeve is provided in which the drill or hammer rod may be inserted, so that it can be rapidly struck by the plunger.

"Bowl of Death."
The latest thriller for amusement parks and similar institutions is a so-called "bowl of death," which turns from a horizontal to a vertical position and then back again as the rider drives his motorcycle at high speed around the rim. A picture of this device appears in the Popular Mechanics Magazine. The bowl is made up of segments of perforated steel, is 15 feet in diameter and is hemispherical in shape except for a flat section at the center and a sharp inward curve at the rim designed to furnish the rider some degree of protection against the danger of running off the edge. When the motorcyclist begins his ride the bowl is horizontal, with the open side up. As soon as the machine attains sufficient speed to ride on the vertical edge the bowl is slowly swung to a position in which the open side is vertical.

Growth of Rubber Industry.
The world's production of crude rubber last year amounted to 142,000 tons. This is a substantial increase over 1914. Of this amount of rubber 75,000 tons is used in the United States, and of that amount more than one-half finds its way into Akron, O., the home of the tire industry. It is a matter of record that in 1905 75,000 acres of land were devoted to rubber culture, and in 1915 there were 1,330,000 acres devoted to this industry.

CALOMEL SELDOM SOLD HERE NOW

Nasty drug salivates, makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist has noticed a great falling-off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition. (Adv.)

HORSE NOT YET OBSOLETE

Will Remain, It May Be Safely Asserted, Long After Some Prophets Have Been Forgotten.

Some prophets and sons of prophets who predict that horses on the farms will soon be only a memory will have passed away, and pleasing epitaphs will be carved into the stones which mark their resting place, long before their prophecies become fact. The introduction of the farm tractor will not, as some believe, remove the horses from the fields and from their pastures. Farm Machinery asserts. The advent of the street cars did not have that effect upon horses, neither did the bicycle nor automobile. Today there are more horses in this country than there were ten years ago, and prices are considerably higher. The one thing that the farm tractor will do is to supply the need of power on the farms which horses cannot give. Take away the farm tractors which are in use today and several hundred thousand horses would be required to replace them, or if horses could not be had the lands would have to go unplowed and untilled. The number of tractors now in use will be multiplied many times within the next ten years, but there will be as many horses in this country as there are today, and prices will be even higher than now.

Farm tractors are becoming a necessity, just as electric street cars have become—the same as telephones have supplanted the telegraph in a way and have taken the place of messenger boys and quick delivery of mail. No one will agree that there are not more miles of telegraph wire in use today than ten years ago, nor can it be said that there are fewer messenger boys, yet the telephone is in almost every business house and in many households, doing work for which there was little demand a few years ago.

The farm tractors will simply fit into the greater needs of the country and will do the heavier chores and drudgery which horses are little fit for. They will not replace the horses, but will simply assist them and make life easier for them. They will also enable farmers to breed better horses because their mothers will be kept for that purpose instead of spending half or more of their time in doing heavy work. Let us not dream too long upon the practicability of the horseless farm. It is a long way off, as yet.

MATERNAL INSTINCT IS ALIVE

Not Necessarily Abandoned by Women Who Have Chosen to Pursue a "Career."

We often hear that women used to be more maternal than they are now. The difference was that they had larger families and were compelled to do more work about the house, because modern household conveniences were then wanting, asserts Dr. Mary Kent Isham, a successful New York physician. The fact of a large family is not necessarily an indication that there is much maternal feeling in the mother. The maternal instinct is found in women who want children—whether they have them or not—and who occupy themselves preferably in ways which deal with the young.

The majority of single women and of women with careers do not lack the maternal spirit and do not lack the sex instinct, but they are wanting in a certain recklessness which would enable them to accept the wrong husband or go in for what has been called "unbridled motherhood." They are perhaps trained into too great self-control and caution. Others are too intense and passionately maternal to marry. They must have whole crowds of children with whom to deal, like the old woman in the shoe. The husband is a secondary consideration. A large number of women who are engaged in social service and who, for various reasons, have been deprived of homes of their own, or find the duties in their homes too limited, are spending their generous helping of maternal energy in a larger social field.

SWEEPS DUST FROM RECORDS

Automatic Cleaner for the Phonograph That Will Save Much Time and Labor.

An automatic cleaner for phonograph records, invented by Joseph W. Pitcher of Washington, D. C., has just been patented. It consists of a ring that fits around the sound box, an arm extending downward therefrom behind the needle, and a brush made of alternate layers of bristles and felt. The bristles engage the surface of the record first, removing dust from the lines, and the felt sweeps small particles out of the needle's way.

SHOOK PEARLS FROM GOWN

One Woman at Least Who Believes That Tight Styles Are Strictly All Right.

Persons in the rose room of the Astor, one night recently, were interested when they heard a pretty woman with diamonds glistening on dainty hands say:

"The pearls have gone—the string snapped in two."

She wore a coat with a moleskin collar, the New York Herald states. Her husband suggested that she take off her coat. She then tugged on the end of a string and brought forth a sad looking affair—six pearls left at the end of the necklace. After standing up once or twice and engaging the attention of a waiter she brought forth a handful of pearls by the time her husband returned from a telephone call.

"Good thing this dress was tight," she laughed.

They proceeded to count the pearls before they ate soup and it was the consensus that three pearls had strayed from the string.

Again the pretty woman stood up, shrugged her shoulders. Result, one more pearl. Two were missing. They ate their dinner, not forgetting the mishap, and started out of the dining room in Indian order, the woman first, then the husband, then the waiter who had aided in picking up pearls, and finally a head waiter. The waiters had orders to keep their eyes open for pearls.

Would the woman tell her name? No.

TO PROLONG LIFE OF GLASS

Simple Arrangement Which Requires Only a Quantity of Stout But Pliable Wire.

Cups are often hung in china closets or in cupboards by hooks, thus prolonging their lives by keeping them out of harm's way. A device for securing the same safety for glasses should, it would seem, also meet with popular approval.

A device has been placed on the market which will meet with much favor. It is very simple and can be made at home if one will but secure some stout though pliable wire. The wire is fastened to the wall with a screw or staple and then twisted to the shape shown in the sketch.

Vain Hope.
"Everybody says I'm light on my feet, father," said the glided youth.
"Umph," replied the disappointed parent, who didn't raise his boy to be a dancer. "I wouldn't go so far as to wish you had been born clubfooted, son, but I do wish your head was heavy enough to act as a sort of drag to your feet."

Nothing Too Hot.
Chabert, the fire king, who was a popular favorite in London many years ago, claimed to be able to swallow arsenic and other poisons with impunity. Visitors to his entertainment were requested to come provided with phosphorus, prussic acid, arsenic and oxalic acid, which he proceeded to consume before their eyes, taking an antidote afterward which was supposed to neutralize their effects.

Then, to show that he was as impervious to heat as to poison, he would take a raw leg of lamb into an oven heated to 220 degrees and remain inside until the joint was cooked, when it was carved and handed around to the audience. The performance concluded by Chabert rubbing a red-hot shovel on his head and face and allowing anyone who wished to drop molten sealing wax on his tongue and hands.

"I didn't say that," replied Senator Sorghum. "I said I thought he could be elected. It isn't a question of what kind of an official a man would make. It's what kind of a candidate."

Quite an Effort.

"No. He's a hard thinker."
"What's the difference?"
"There's a great deal. Any sort of thinking is hard to Dubson."

Women Once Invalids

Now in Good Health Through Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Say it is Household Necessity. Doctor Called it a Miracle.

All women ought to know the wonderful effects of taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound even on those who seem hopelessly ill. Here are three actual cases:

Harrisburg, Penn.—"When I was single I suffered a great deal from female weakness because my work compelled me to stand all day. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for that and was made stronger by its use. After I was married I took the Compound again for a female trouble and after three months I passed what the doctor called a growth. He said it was a miracle that it came away as one generally goes under the knife to have them removed. I never want to be without your Compound in the house."—Mrs. FRANK KNOBL, 1642 Fulton St., Harrisburg, Penn.

Hardly Able to Move.
Albert Lea, Minn.—"For about a year I had sharp pains across my back and hips and was hardly able to move around the house. My head would ache and I was dizzy and had no appetite. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, I am feeling stronger than for years. I have a little boy eight months old and am doing my work all alone. I would not be without your remedies in the house as there are none like them."—Mrs. F. E. Yost, 611 Water St., Albert Lea, Minn.

Three Doctors Gave Her Up.
Pittsburg, Penn.—"Your medicine has helped me wonderfully. When I was a girl 18 years old I was always sickly and delicate and suffered from irregularities. Three doctors gave me up and said I would go into consumption. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and with the third bottle began to feel better. I soon became regular and I got strong and shortly after I was married. Now I have two nice stout healthy children and am able to work hard every day."—Mrs. CLEMENTINA DUERRING, 34 Gardner St., Troy Hill, Pittsburg, Penn.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it will be confidential.

SAN RAFAEL

John Lawless and son, Ed., are digging a well on the latter's homestead. Arthur and Perry Wilson have just completed plowing the Bagley place, which they took by contract.

Jeff Rountree will move his well-drilling rig to Sonoita in a few days, where he has two or three wells to bore. He expects to return here after this, and will do some more well work for valley folks, and probably establish residence permanently in the San Rafael.

Geo. N. Bagley, who has been visiting old friends at Buckeye, Maricopa county, for some weeks, expects to start overland for his home here in a short time.

The grass is still good on the range, even though we did have some pretty hard freezes lately, and stock generally is looking fine.

Mr. Ringwald, a new homesteader in the valley, will have charge of the Crawley place the present season. He reports having about 60 acres plowed, on the Crawley place and his own. Mr. Ringwald knows how to farm right.

The adobe residence on Miss Van Osdale's place, which was wrecked last winter by the big snow storm, is being torn down, and in its stead a splendid structure will soon be erected.

Walter Curtis is farming A. S. Way's place on a share basis this season.

Bud Baldwin has just moved onto his second homestead in the Canillas, and Mrs. Baldwin and son, Clyde, will hold down the home place. Mr. Baldwin originally located on but 80 acres, and his new place of 80 acres is his additional allowance.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL

Don't forget the horse races in Patagonia on May 5.

Two caterpillar trucks arrived in Patagonia Thursday, one for use by the county on road work, and the other to haul ore on a contract from the Duquesne mine.

Jeff Rountree, the newly-married well borer, who is now working in the San Rafael, expects to make a trip to Douglas Sunday in his car, taking Mrs. H. T. Wilson and son Rodney, who will remain in the Smelter City with Mr. Wilson, employed on the Douglas Dispatch.

The moving picture show Sunday night will consist of four reels, and if the gas-making machine works, the program should be interesting. The pictures are: "The Weird Nemesis" in two reels; "The Animated Weekly" and a roasting comedy, "Counting Out the Count."

The board of trustee of the Patagonia school have not as yet selected teachers for the coming term, but are expected to do so within the next few days. It is probable that four teachers will be chosen for next term, as the growth of the district has been such within the last few months that four teachers will be required to handle the increasing number of children.
