Geo. F. Weiland is still getting out ore and sacking it from his property at Jefferson Camp, in Harshaw district. He believes the smelters will some day again be in the market for the purchase of ore, and that he will be able to dispose of it then.

Refusal of smelters to accept more ore, on account of congestion of plants, has caused quite a little hardship to the small shippers of Patagonia. An ore small shippers of Patagonia. Publicity is one of the essentials of business success, whether it be running a peanut stand or marketing the product of a mine, and operating it, too, for that matter. There are many ways of advertising-in the newspapers, or otherwise-the one object sought to get the attention of the interested public, says the Mining World. One of the reasons that mining has been prosperous is that sufficient publicity has been

NEWS IN BRIEF

A detachement of soldiers from Nogales were promised citizens of Patagonia this week but so far have failed to put in apperance.

The moving picture show Sunday night will present a special three-reel feature, "Crime's Triangle," a very exciting melo-drama, and a splendid comedy, "On His Wedding Day,"

County Recorder Arcus Reddoch is expected to appoint Geo. T. Coughlin registration clerk for this precinct within a few days. Every citizen must register again this year in order to vote at the coming election.

Last Sunday a small pienic was enjoyed by a number of Patagonians at the Ash Grove, a few miles below town. The grove is one of the prettiest places in the state now, and during the summer months people of this community will no doubt have many enjoyable picnics

The board of trustees of the Patagonia school this week selected teachers for the next term. Besides Mr. Carr, three women teachers, as follows, were chosen: Mrs. Chas. Carmen, Miss Miller, and Miss Bradford.

Patagonia lots, both residence and business lots, are in fairly good demand these days. If churn drills are put down on Red Mountain, or if the present satisfactory showing at the Andes continues with depth, real estate in Patagonia will probably greatly increase in value within the next few months.

LIP READERS TO BE DREADED

Don't Tell Your Secret in Any Public Place, for a Very Good and Sufficient Reason.

"Don't tell your secrets on the street car or in the theater between acts or in any other public place, not even to your most trusted friend," said the

"I never do tell my secrets in pubtio," she returned. "But why this advice?" asked the woman opposite. "Because somebody is likely to see them."

"See them?" "Yes. Don't you remember a newspaper story a few months ago to the effect that deaf-mutes who attend moving picture shows complained that the people on the screen did not follow the text of the play, but used coarse, vulgar and often indecent and profane language? These deaf-mutes had learned lip language and knew what those photographed players were saying. "Well, since then, I hear the film companies have shut down on the had language, but the story caught the attention of a good many readers and habitual movie patrons have fallen into the way of watching the lip movements and some of them have developed astonishing skill in reading what is said by the silent actors. Of course, they can read the lips of real people just as well, hence my warning." "Oh, I can't believe there are many such persons."

"Don't take any chances. You'd probably be surprised to know how many people not deaf-mutes have that little accomplishment more or less developed. It seems with some to be a natural gift. I heard a woman tell the other day of a conversation she 'saw' between two friends sitting at the other end of a street car. Now just suppose those friends had been indulging in uncomplimentary remarks about

I read somewhere the other day that a man is working on a machine that will catch our thought emanations even when we don't speak. Isn't it awful! And yet if messages can be sent across the world by wireless, is such an invention impossible? You know, one of the objections I have to heaven is that we can't have our thoughts to ourselves up there."

My stenographer was also present; she was one of those young ladies that know all-from whose decisions there is no appeal.

I had cleared off a long bench and arranged on it a large number of cups. milk, sugar, cream, much coffee, and plenty of apparatus for making coffee. I got from the army and navy stores various kinds of coffee that were supposed to be the very best in the world. such as Mocha, Java, and so forth, and I also got from a dealer in coffee some of the sweepings and siftings of his shop-small, imperfect, and broken kernels. These I freed from dust and dirt, roasted and ground, and mixed with three times their weight of chicory. I was ready for the test.

My shorthand writer came in, tasted the Mocha, the Java, the Costa Rica, care of their citizens than the counand pronounced them all very bad. She then tried some of my wheat coffee, which she said, was also bad, but not so bad as the others. But when she reached the mixture of siftings and chicory she was delighted. Unusual "Wooden" Legs.

In consequence of the war, the artificial limb manufacturers in France are finding themselves hard pressed at the present time to keep supplied with the requisites of their business, since all the hospitals are making such demands on the supply. Artificial legs, patch to Philadelphia North American, for instance, are made in some instances of a sort of compressed cardboard. And the raw material for this is now being obtained from-the Bank of France! All the old notes are periodically destroyed and converted into a pulp, which is then disposed of to the "orthopedistes." And so the gallant pioupiou's "wooden" leg will rep resent a fortune!

FRIENDSHIP THAT RINGS TRUE

Always a Condition That Requires Thorough Understanding and Complete Sympathy.

Some acquaintances will never ripen into true friendship because the common bond of union, the thorough understanding and the complete sympathy are lacking.

An acquaintance begun in childhood will ripen into friendship if the children develop mutual interest in a common cause of study or pleasure. If dissimilar tastes and unlike impulses develop the children will grow apart, since each of us tends toward certain centers of association.

Money cannot buy us friends. It often purchases apparent friendship, but when the wealth goes that which posed as friendship vanishes also,

Friendship must be distinguished from that sentimental feeling which is so common among young girls. This ridiculous fascination, which expresses itself in extravagant terms of endearment, is very fickle,

As soon as it finds faults in one idol it transfers its affection to another. Youth has yet to learn that perfection in human nature does not exist. The sensible man or woman does not set up an ideal of friendship so high that it must be shattered.

Friends influence us for good or evil. Unfortunately we can guide the formation of our friendships only to a very limited extent, either for ourselves or for our children.

Friendship springs up and grows naturally; it cannot be planted at will, Foolish friendships are often formed in youth. It is useless to talk against them, since young people always resent criticism of their friends. We must simply tolerate them and trust to the awakening of common sense to prove all frivolous friendships false and unworthy.-Philadelphia Inquirer.

Odd Mall Service. A novel mail service is to be put into operation on the Magdalena river, in the Republic of Colombia, seasleds having been planned to ply between Bogota and the coast. By the water route the distance between the two points is more than 800 miles. It is expected that it will be covered at an average speed of nearly forty miles an hour. Tests were recently made on the Hudson river, near New York, with an oddly designed craft which has been built especially for this service. It is a broad-beamed glider, equipped with a high-power motor, and driven by two aerial propellers mounted at the stern. It is capable of carrying a number of passengers, and when loaded draws only five inches of water. While traveling at its maximum speed, however, the sled requires only one inch of water, for it skims along barely cutting the surface. Its slight draft is made necessary by the shallowness of the river on which it is to operate.

"The sanitary conditions in the farmers' homes of Massachusetts and New York state are not what they should be," Dr. Harvey W. Wiley declared in an address before several hundred farmers from all over the state in Horticultural hall, assembled for the Massachusetts state board of agricultural's annual meeting.

"In New York and Massachusetts particularly, the city is a healthier place to live than the country," Doctor Wiley said. "The cities of New York and Massachusetts are taking better try is, and I am inclined to believe that the unfavorable situation in the rural sections is due more to lack of sanitary conveniences and appliances than it is to the effect of the climate or of a deficient diet."

Thieves Leave Sacred Records.

All but three of the 75 talking-machine records of the Birdsboro High school were stolen by a thief, who forced an entrance into the building, turned on a light and tried out all the records, it is believed. Thumb marks on the three left behind showed they were tested too.

SYNOPSIS.

Cazalet, on the steamer Kaiser Fritz, homeward bound from Australia, cries out in his sleep that Henry Craven, who ten years before had ruined his father and himself, is dead and finds that Hilton Toye, who shares the stateroom with him, knows Craven and also Bianche Macnair, a former neighbor and playmate. When the daily papers come aboard at Southampton Toye reads that Craven has been murdered and calls Cazalet's dream second sight. He thinks of doing a little amateur detective work on the case himself. In the train to town they discuss the murder, which was committed at Cazalet's old home. Toye hears from Cazalet friend and the scapegoat for Craven's dishonesty, has been released from prison. Cazalet goes down the river and meets Blanche.

"I wonder who can have done it!" "So do the police, and they don't look much like finding out!" "It must have been for his watch and money, don't you think? And yet they say he had so many enemies!" Cazalet kept silence; but she thought he winced. "Of course it must have been the man who ran out of the drive," she concluded hastily. "Where were you when it happened, Sweep?"

Somewhat hoarsely he was recalling the Mediterranean movements of the Kaiser Fritz, when at the first mention of the vessel's name he was firmly heckled.

"Sweep, you don't mean to say you came by a German steamer?"

"I do. It was the first going, and why should I waste a week? Besides, you can generally get a cabin to your self on the German line."

"So that's why you're here before the end of the month," said Blanche. "Well, I call it most unpatriotic; but the cabin to yourself was certainly some excuse."

"That reminds me!" he exclaimed. "I hadn't it to myself all the way; there was another fellow in with me from Genoa; and the last night on board it came out that he knew you!" "Who can it have been?"

"Toye, his name was. Hilton Toye." "An American man! Oh, but 1 know him very well," said Blanche in a tone both strained and cordial. "He's great fun, Mr. Toye, with his delightful Americanisms, and the perfectly delightful way he says them!"

Cazalet puckered like the primitive man he was, when taken at all by surprise; and that anybody, much less Blanche, should think Toye, of all people, either "delightful" or "great fun" was certainly a surprise to him, if it high potential currents the steel- was nothing else. But there was no more to see; there never had been much, but now Blanche was standing up and gazing out of the balcony into the belt of singing sunshine between the opposite side of the road and the invisible river acres away. "Why shouldn't we go down to Littleford and get out the boat if you're really going to make an afternoon of it?" she said. "But you simply must see Martha first; and while she's making herself fit to be seen, you must take something for the good of the house. I'll bring it to you on a lordly tray."

She brought him siphon, stoppered bottle, a silver biscuit-box of ancient memories, and left him alone with them some little time; for the young mistress, like her old retainer in another minute, was simply dying to make herself more presentable. Yet when she had done so, and came back broken plant-pot, might have been like snow, in a shirt and skirt just grinning a toothless welcome to two home from the laundry, she saw that once leading spirits of the place. he did not see the difference. His devouring eyes shone neither more nor less; but he had also devoured every bimself on the sill, his long legs in-blecuit in the box, though he had begun by vowing that he had lunched in town, and stuck to the fable still.

Old Martha had known him all his life, but best at the period when he used to come to nursery tea at Littleford. She declared she would have known him anywhere as he was, but she simply hadn't recognized him in that photograph with his beard.

"I can see where it's been," said Martha, looking him in the lower temperate zone. "But I'm so glad you've had it off, Mr. Cazalet."

"There you are, Blanchie!" crowed Cazalet. "You said she'd be disappointed, but Martha's got better taste."

"It isn't that, sir," said Martha earnestly. "It's because the dreadful drive, at your old home, he had a beard! It's in all the notices about him, and that's what's put me against them, and makes me glad you've had yours off."

Blanche turned to him with too ready a smile; but then she was really not such a great age as she pretended, and she had never been in better spirits in her life.

"You hear, Sweep! I call it rather lucky for you that you were-

But just then she saw his face, and remembered the things that had been said about Henry Craven by the Cazalets' friends, even ten years ago, when she really had been a girl.

CHAPTER V.

An Untimely Visitor.

She really was one still, for in these days it is an elastic term, and in Blanche's case there was no apparent reason why it should ever cease to apply, or to be applied by every decent tongue except her own. Much the best tennis-player among the ladies of the neighborhood, she drove an almost unbecomingly long hall at golf, and never looked better than when paddling her old cance, or punting in the old punt. And yet, this wonderful September afternoon, she did somehow look even better than at either or any of those congenial pursuits, and that long before they reached the river; in the empty house, which had known her as baby, child and grown-up girl, to the companion of some part of all three stages, she looked a more lustrous and a loveller Blanche than he remembered even of old.

But she was not really lovely in the least; that also must be put beyond the pale of misconception. Her hair was beautiful, and perhaps her skin, and, in some lights, her eyes; the rest was not. It was yellow hair, not golden, and Cazalet would have given all he had about him to see it down again the following summer, and found he'd as in the oldest of old days; but there was more gold in her skin, for so the sun had treated it; and there was even hint or glint (in certain lights, be it repeated) of gold mingling with the pure hazel of her eyes. But in the dusty shadows of the empty house, moving like a sunbeam across its bare boards, standing out against the discolored walls in the place of remembered pictures not to be compared with her, it was there that she was all golden and still girl.

They poked their noses into, and they had a laugh in every corner and so out upon the leafy lawn, shelving abruptly to the river. Last of all there was the summer schoolroom over the boat-house, quite apart from the house itself; scene of such safe yet reckless revels; in its very aura late Victorian!

It lay hidden in ivy at the end of a now neglected path; the bow-windows overlooking the river were framed in ivy, like three matted, whiskered, dirty, happy faces; one, with its lower sash propped open by a

"You simply have it put down to the man's account in the station books. Nobody keeps ready money up at the bush, not even the price of a plug like this; but the chap I'm telling you about (I can see him now, with his great red beard and freckled fists) hs swore I was charging him for half a pound more than he'd ever had. We fought for twenty minutes behind the wood-heap; then he gave me best, but I had to turn in till I could see again."

"You don't mean that he-" Blanche had looked rather disgusted the moment before; now she was all truculent suspense and indigna-

Poor Blanche had almost of men and animals. They filtered a to hold her nose over the primary cause of battle; but the dialogue was delightful, and Cazalet himself made a most gallant and engaging figure as and a film of nitrosodimethylanilin, he sat on the sill and reeled it out thus cutting off all the visible rays-Twenty minutes later, and old Venus and allowing none but the invisible Potts was still on the magic tapls. though Cazalet had dropped his boasting for a curiously humble, eager and yet ineffectual vein.

"Old Venus Potts!" he kept ejaculating. "You couldn't help liking him. And he'd like you, my word!"

"Is his wife nice?" Blanche wanted to know; but she was looking so intently out her window, at the opposite end of the bow to Cazalet's, that a man of the wider world might have thought of something else to talk about.

Out her window she looked rast a willow that had been part of the old life, in the direction of an equally typical silhouette of patient anglers anchored in a punt; they had not raised a rod between them during all this time that Blanche had been out in Australia; but as a matter of fact she never saw them, since, vastly to the credit of Cazalet's descriptive powers, she was out in Australia still.

"Nelly Potts?" he said. "Oh, a jolly good sort; you'd be awful pals." "Should we?" said Blanche, just smiling at her invisible anglers. "I know you would," he assured her with immense conviction. "Of course she can't do the things you do; but to, when she's lived there all her life. The rooms aren't much, but the verandas are what count most; they're better than any rooms." She was still out there, cultivating

Nelly Potts on a very deep verands, though her straw hat and straw hair remained in contradictory evidence against a very dirty window on the Middlesex bank of the Thames. It was a shame of the September sun to show the dirt as it was doing; not only was there a great steady pool of sunshine on the unspeakable floor, but a doddering reflection from the river on the disreputable ceiling. Cazalet looked rather desperately from one to the other, and both the calm pool and the rough were broken by shadows, one more impressionistic than the other, of a straw hat over a stack of straw hair, that had not gone out to Australia-yet.

And of course just then a step sounded outside somewhere on some gravel. Confound those caretakers! What were they doing, prowling about?

"I say, Blanchie!" he blurted out, "I do believe you'd like it out there, a sportswoman like you! I believe you'd take to it like a duck to water." (TO BE CONTINUED.)

"Pope's Size,"

A curious item in the trade slang or hosiers is the term "pope's size," applied to vests. They classify the scale of chest measurements for these as: Small men's, 32 inches; slender men's, 34 inches; men's, 36 inches; pope's, 39 inches; out size, 42 inches

The origin of this term, which has been current for nearly a century, was discussed some years ago in Notes and Queries, when it was stated on good authority that it had no connection with the successors of St. Peter.

It appears that the head of an old firm of West end hosiers, Measrs. Pope & Plante, ordered this size to be made specially for his own personal use, and the manufacturer called it after him for want of a better name .-London Chronicle.

New Ears for New Music.

Few laymen appreciate to what an extent musical esthetics is a matter of psychology. We ordinarily assume that music "expresses" by some divine charm, that the composer who sighs of love has "discovered" the proper musical statement of love's emotion. But musical materials are not discovered; they are manufactured. It is by habit and repetition, not by intuition, that we come to accept chords of dissonance. The major and minor third of the old music is very sweet because it is very familiar. The new bald colors of futurist music are ugly because they are strange. Our ears contain little formulas, so to speak, for the chords and scales 'that have been ground into our consciousness by frequent hearings. When we hear a new piece of music it must agree with them to some degree, else we feel uncomthough they thrive on variation, hate negation. So if the new music negates them entirely, as futurist music does, there is no entente possible. Our ears will not serve our purpose. We must become familiar with the new style.-The New Republic.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calcmel when 56 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as aurely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not sallyate. Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerose drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated to morrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more billousness, constipa-tion, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your drug-gist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you. -(Advt.)

The Work of Wilson

Nearly all the nations of Europe have been drawn into the vortex of war. Even several nations remote from the scene of the original conflict, nations which have not been able to participate actively on the western front or even use their battleships in the conflict have been drawn in through treaties and agreements or through mistakes of

The greatest statesmen of the world have realized that in these days of world upheaval there has been a danger far greater than the actual loss of life and property that is now shocking all civilized nations. The danger has been that the entire world instead of half of it might become involved; that international law might be wiped out in a day and that civilization itself might be uprooted, no great nation remaining at peace to voice the protest against war-

For nearly two years the people of the United States have lived in peace and prosperity with the war surrounding them and yet with the conscious knowledge that there has been in the White, House a man who while protecting the nation's honor and upholding its dignity, nevertheless retained for the country its peaceful leverage upon warridden Europe.
