The Arizona State Bureau of Mines has received many requests from the East from people desiring to purchase or lease tale and soapstone properties within the state. Although there are undoubtedly deposits of the same in the state, there are no records of any.

To be commercial a deposit of talc must be close to a railroad, although tale in extra pure form, such as may be worked for crayons, pencils, etc., brings as high as $100 per ton. Soapstone is usually quarried, and while it does not bring a high price, it is easily Sonoita and on to Tucson over the old mined and handled.

The Bureau of Mines would be pleased to learn of deposits of this character. Further information may be obtained by writing Charles F. Willis, director, Arizona State Bureau of Mines, Tucson, Arizona.

Where Aristocrats Shine. Your aristocrat is doubtless often a to all proper principles of natural to give a good account of himself when In the French revolution the old nothey knew how to die if they did not know how to live. And the casualty lists which are being published in when it comes to courage and patriotin the rear. At the rate at which the aristocrats are being killed at the front in France and Belgium there will be no "lords and gentlemen" left in Great Britain if the war lasts much longer. If all the "common" people in England were doing as well, there would be no criticism of English patriotism. In spite of their leanings to democracy, American sympathizers with the allies, in view of the prominence of titled names on the honor roll of the dead, might almost be inclined to wish that the entire British nation was composed of aristocrats today. Can it be true after all that there is a real significance in the old phrase-"blood will tell" and "noblesse oblige?"-Baltimore Sun.

Such questions as these the young American asked, and he received replies that revenled to him, London now prove once more that again for the first time, a different view of the state and of government ism the "aristocrat" is seldom found to any that he had come in contact with at home.

New and interesting experiences awaited him at every turn, writes President Nicholas Butler of Columbla in Scribner's. Emperor William I, der alte kaiser, as he was affectionately called by the populace, was to be seen every morning in the window of his working room at the palace, at the corner of what was then called the Opera Platz. It was the custom of his majesty to return by a gracious gesture every greeting from one who might pass his window, and to rise in his place and formally salute whenever a body of troops, however small, passed by. The crown prince, who was, after nearly a decade, to come to the throne for a few short weeks as Emperor Friedrich III, was the very ideal of manly dignity and Not only are the pickerel biting beauty, and seemed to incarnate in his own person the attributes and tradiand for more than a quarter of a cenlows have formed a bad habit calling tury past the German emperor, was an officer of the garrison. An Item going the rounds to the effect that a yellow rambler rose has been discovered by an explorer in China, and that its seed will shortly be introduced into the United States, where the species is now unknown, has aroused, it would seem, the indignation of half the gardeners in the latter country. The item says, among other things, "Those who take delight in the crimson rambler will be glad to welcome the new flower to this country." If one will look over the seed and plant catalogues received this spring it will be discovered that they contain very pretty pictures of a yellow rambler rose that has long been an early summer bloomer over a wide area of the United States.

Safe Anesthesia.

Now that surgeons are in the habit of removing the tonsils entirely, the methods of anesthesia in vogue when they were merely clipped have become inadequate. For the operation takes time, and the gas and oxygen anesthesia does not last long enough to permit of complete dissection of both tonsils.

Dr. J. Blomfield, senior anesthetist of St. George's hospital, London, writes in the Lancet that he has found the best general method, both for children and adults, consists in giving a preliminary dose of atropine, gradually producing a deep degree of unconsciousness by a mixture of chloroform and ether, supplemented in some cases by a few minutes of open ether. This generally suffices, he says, and when it does not, he reapplies chloroform from a junker's inhaler or an open mask.

Back Yards Show Character

By SAMUEL G. DIXON, M. D. Commissioner of Health of Pennsylvania

Bret Harte once wrote a story in | hood? You have work ahead for you sight into the occupant's true charac-

This brings us again to the question of back yards. Is yours as clean and keep children off the streets. well kept as you can make it, or is it fly-breeding center for the neighbor- and profit.

OTHER PLANETS IN FUTURE

Interstellar Wireless Communication Not an Impossibility, in the Opinion of Astronomers.

That interstellar wireless communication may be a possibility of the future is a belief now held by not a few scientists.

M. Guzman has promised to pay $20,-000 to the astronomer who first establishes communication with any planet or star other than Mars.

M. Guzman's elimination of Mars as a wireless station in the competition he is promoting is based upon his belief that experiments made by American astronomers in Arizona prove that a wireless expert who talked with the Martians would be overpaid if he received 100,000 francs. This performance, to his mind, is too easy, too lacking in romantic and sensational features to be worthy of the modest fortune he has dedicated to science.

But, if the Martians have learned how to build canals without inviting landslides, have made of irrigation processes an exact science, and have, as various authorities contend, learned how to fly by their own motive power, there are numberless specialists in this country who would be pleased to call them up by long distance at once.

Famous War Horses of Old

One probable result of the introduction of mechanical vehicles into warfare will be the abolition of the old custom of cherishing the memory of famous war horses. When generals fruit very, very fine and then add to conducted campaigns on horseback, before the advent of the field motor car, their favorite chargers used to re- corn is also very good if used in the ceive many honors.

Wellington's famous charger, Cop hagen, when he died was buried with full military honors. The Iron Duke's horse was a magnificent chestnut, and of miles in Spain, and at the battle of Toulouse.

The remains of Napoleon's white stallion. Marengo, are preserved at the Royal United Service institution, while another of Bonaparte's steeds, which he purchased at St. Helena, and bore the name of King George, figures in many famous paintings.

The horse which Lord Ronald rode in the Balakiava charge was cherished by his family until its death, when a tombstone was erected over its grave.

Traveler, which gained fame in the Civil war as the favorite charger of Gen. Robert E. Lee, is now a popular exhibit in a museum at Virginia, its skeleton having been carefully preserved in a glass case.

Some Things That Are New.

DRINKS FOR SUMMER DAYS TRUE AT THE LAST

Wolf-Dog Deserted Master, But Still Loved Him.

Answered "Call of His Fathers," Though He Proved Loyal When Loyalty Meant Death by the Fangs of His Pack.

He had been called Wolf since puppyhood. He stood nearly forty inches, with a small ragged, rail-like body, and unusually long legs that ended in great, soft, padlike feet. Jack Stern, Steve Wormell's pariner, used to say that the dog could not turn round in their "two-by four" cabin without knocking over the table and chairs and seriously endangering the stove and other furni-

One evening, as Steve and Jack sat playing a game of cribbage in their ranger cabin, a wolf howled ingubriously from the mountain side. After a ment came the answer; then another caught up the call, and another, until the lonesome wall echoed from mountain top to mountain top.

Suddenly there came a howl, nearer and more deep-throated.

Stern opened the door. "Come here, Steve!" he said, and the ranger stepped to his side.

On a small, treeless mound, not far from the cabin, sat Wolf. He was squatting on his haunches, with his nose pointed toward the sky, while from his throat came a cry quite un-

"It's the call of his fathers, Steve," said Jack. "Some day you'll have no dog; he'll be gone with the pack."

Steve laughed at the idea. He had brought Wolf, an awkward, bench-legtwo-thirds full of milk; sweeten it to ged puppy, out to the ranger cabin in a sack; the dog had always been faith-

But one morning in the spring Wolf was missing.

At first Steve clung to the hope that Wolf would return when the "running" season was over. He had heard of dogs doing that. But spring merged into summer, and summer into fall, yet the dog did not come back.

Then they began to hear that Wolf had been seen running at the head of a small band of wolves, although they never found a man who had actually seen him.

About Christmas time, when the snow was deeper than for many winters past, prowling bands of wolves began to come down near the camp. One day Steve found that a large bull elk had been killed within a mile of camp. Signs of the struggle were to be seen for a hundred yards round. Near the scattered bones of the elk vere the disembowled remains of two wolves. A little farther along a young cow elk had fallen beneath the fangs of the mountain bandits. And at each kill Steve found a large track, twicethe size of that made by a common

When the snow had crusted so that it would bear up the weight of a man, Steve threw his rifle across his arm and walked over to the breaks of the Grande Ronde. He was nearing the broken lands when the sound of a running pack came to his ears. A moment later a small band of wolves, perhaps fifteen in number, burst from the timber, running toward him. And at their head ran Wolf. The ranger forgot his danger. He ried, "Wolf, don't you know me?

The sound of his voice brought the great dog to a standstill, and the pack stopped with him. Nose in the air, sides aguiver, he stood a moment: then, with a low bay of recognition, hesprang toward his one-time master. The pack, evidently mistaking their lender's intention. likewise rushed at Steve. And the next instant, with his gun clubbed, he was in the midst of a snarling, snapping mass of faminecrazed wolves.

When Jack arrived on the scene hefound Steve sitting in the snow, with the shaggy head of Wolf pillowed in his lap. Around him, with their mangy pelts torn and bloody, lay haif a dozen lead wolves.

The ranger's clothing was torn toshreds and one arm and leg were a mass of cuts and gashes; but there were tears in his eyes,

"He fought for me, Jack," he said, pressing the stiffening lids over the glazed eyes of the dead hound. "He gave his life for me. How he fought! And against his own blood, too. Youder lies one of his own pups. Why shouldn't I love him?"-Youth's Companion.

What, Indeed!

It was a very serious conversation that was overheard by a number of passengers of a street car the other night. Two young girls of the "giddy" type were conversing about the possibilities of the United States getting into trouble with Mexico.

"Well, I certainly would hate to see all the American soldiers go down into Mexico," one girl said. "Why?" her companion inquired.

"Because, while the soldiers were down in Mexico what would prevent the Europeans from coming over here and getting us girls?"-Columbus (O.) Dispatch.

FOR STREET CAR DRIVERS

Device That Enables Motorman to Tell at a Glance If He is Running on Time.

A time-schedule indicator particularly useful for motormen, is being employed on an English street car line. The central portion of the device consists of an ordinary clock. About the face of the clock is a large circular frame into which is fitted a cardboard ring. This is divided by radiating lines into 60 equal segments corresponding to the minutes of the hour. The names of the stops on the motorman's trip are written in clockwise order on this ring. The number of spaces separating the names corresponds to the number of minutes apart these points are on the schedule. The cardboard is then placed in journey can be indicated on the other triumph. side of the cardboard. In case the trip is of more than an hour's duration a second ring can be inserted at the butler. the end of the first hour.-Popular Mechanics Magazine.

War Raises Drug Prices. The big war in Europe is helping to make it costly, if not criminal, to be ill these days. The proverbial ounce of prevention is not only better than a pound of cure, but it is a hundred times cheaper. The war has added from 25 to 300 per cent to the consumer's cost of these drugs, and many of thementirely disappeared from the market-cannot be obtained at any price. In many instances no sign of lower prices appears. In others there is certainty that diminishing supply must result in the most outlandish price figures. MARKATA KAMAMAKAKA (Copyright, 1916, by W. G. Chapman)

"Who do you think is coming to our dinner party tomorrow night, Henry?" asked little Mrs. Emory of her husband. "The Countess Karolyi."

"Well, let her carol all she wants to," said Henry Emory heartlessly. "Never heard of her anyway. Who is

"Don't be flippant, Henry! You know the Countess Karolyi is the famous Hungarian woman writer who has come to America to study our ways. Well, I met her as president of our ladies' club, and I got her to promise to come to dinner. There." "I wonder if John's acquainted with her," murmured Henry Emory, looking after the Hungarian butler, who was at that moment leaving the dining room.

> John looked at her strangely. "Madame, I must ask for tomorrow off," he said.

Mrs. Emory was horrified. "But, John, what shall we do?" she wailed. "I have a friend who will take my place. Madame, I cannot serve my own people. I was in-in a higher station.'

"Yes. Madame, I pledge my word shall not shame you."

Mrs. Emory could say no more, though she half regretted her impulsiveness. It seemed uncanny to her, and more so the following evening. when, standing to receive the countess, she was staggered at the appearance of John Lisz, dressed in a well-cut evening suit, which was certainly not that which he had worn as a butler, with a carnation in his buttonhole.

The guests, she could see, were no less impressed than she was,

"Countess Karolyi," said Mrs. Emory, "I want to present a countryman of yours-Mr. Lisz, who is visiting

The countess, a tall, stately woman, looked at him, and a slow flush crept up beneath her cheeks.

"Is it Jan Lisz of Buda?" she asked. 'Yes, I know you now, my friend." John Lisz's hand was steady as a rock as he took the trembling hand which the countess extended toward him and raised it to his lips. That action was remembered afterward. Then, before the scene had fully impressed itself upon those present, dinner was announced.

And somehow, in spite of Mr. Emory's dutiful attempts to take the phia Ledger. countess as his partner, she went in on the ex-butler's arm.

Mrs. Emory heard their conversation with increasing astonishment during the meal. "Have you been long in this coun-sad when one is estranged." "My father is dead?" asked the exbutler quietly.

"You did not know?" "No, madame. Yes, we were estranged. But I am sorry he died when I was here. And the count, your husband, is well, I trust?"

The countess looked at him very strangely. "I thought you knew. He died last year," she said.

Then, as if each had said too much, they joined in the general conversation of the table. But Mrs. Emory's eyes grew wider every moment. "Cavalry regiment!" Who was he?

It was at the moment of their parting, when, after a low talk in the corner, John bowed again over the countess' hand, that the look in their eyes told her everything.

Half an hour later she found John in the kitchen putting away the wine. The old butler had gone; John was in his accustomed suit once more. "What does it mean?" she asked.

"Madame! How can I ever thank you that she did not know? We were friends-lovers-once, in our country, in youth. My family was higher than hers. My father would not consent to away to save my prospects. That is all, madame."

"And now? You are leaving us, I suppose?" said Mrs. Emory sadly, Service is honorable in this country.

If there is any one thing that the Primary Law stands for above that of any other, it is the specific purpose that any citizen desiring an office, can make his or her appeal to the entire electorate, instead of a stultified bunch of ringsters in convention assembled. As it is now, true, personal bickerings occur now and then among friends of opposing candidates, but there is nothing to it after the whole people have spoken and the returns counted. A welcher undecidedly, is that individual who having been defeated at the Primary, tries by subterfuge to force the placing of his name upon the Official Ballot. A man who does not recognize the equity of our Primary will have another guess coming. Far different was it in the old convention days when as a rule, the robbed minority would leave the hall swearing vengeance and would too often go after and get the nominee's goat.

It was Democratic Arizona which gave female suffrage to Arizona. In the territorial days the Democrats passed a measure for female suffrage, but it was vetoed by a Republican governor. The Democratic resident of the United States, Woodrow Wilson, voted for votes for women; his opponent on the Republican ticket did not, Actions are more convincing than words, and the women know this, and that is one reason why they are almost all of them for Woodrow Wilson, and another reason is that women, the greatest sufferers by war, are thankful to Woodrow Wilson for keeping this great country out of war.

Cigarette papers have increased alof the war, or the epidemic of high prices now prevailing. For some time past printers and publishers have been acres more or less, appraised at $1920.00. complaining of the almost prohibitive Improvements, claimed by William Banning Vail, at $181.00.

As most printers are rich they can valuations will be considered. Rental
