It was little Miss Louise's fourth birthday.

Tetrahedrite at Exposed Reef

The strike last Friday at the Exposed Reef Mines means a high grade shipping ore in primary deposit, showing that in favorable localities our primary ores are not only good grade mill ing ores, but can be high grade shipping ores, and as primary are usually uniform in values for great depths. It can be seen what such strikes mean to the camps. This ore is tetrahedrite.

Long Motor Tour

F. A. Metcalf and family, and Mrs. E. I. Stirman, mother of Mrs. Gowen Pierce, all of Steamboat Springs, Colo., will make a tour the latter part of October in Mr. Metcalf's big palatial seven passenger Buick, to Patagonia to visit the family of Gowen Pierce. Mr. Metcalf is a banker, railroad director and general agent for the big Buick. These visitors wish to look into our seductive Southern Arizona climate.

Sonora Capitalists Visit Oil Fields

Senor Cubillas, of the Sonora Bank and Trust Co., Nogales, and Senores Fierste and Bringas of Sonora, Mex. were up last Sunday on a tour of inspection of the San Pedro oil fields. These gentlemen were much impressed with what they saw and learned, and went away with unshaken faith in the strong oil indications found, and with no misgivings as to the final success of this latest and greatest new enterprise of the Southwest. It is said Sonora capitalists are to become heavy investors in the stock of the new company.

Sunnyside Bonded

The Sunnyside Mines, which adjoin and lie near the Three R. World's Fair Chief, Trench and Blue Nose, have been bonded, we are informed, by Hon. COST HIM MORE THAN FIFTY

Mr. Travers Had Not Properly Estimated His Losses on That Little Fistic Encounter.

"I can't afford to lose $50 on a prize fight," mourned Gelatine Travers an hour or so after the shock he received over the wires that fatal Friday afternoon. "But you have lost it, haven't you?" we asked, and he nodded disconsolately as he climbed aboard a homebound car. He must have felt a premonition as he mourned, for it is unlike Mr. Travers to regret his losses; and when he arrived home he broke the news to Mrs. Travers, along with the implied suggestion that a little economy for the next few weeks would not come in amiss. Mrs. Travers said nothing in her most sympathetic manner, and the evening's conversation covered topics wholly foreign to prize fights. At the breakfast table next morning Mr. Travers had no taste for anything the morning paper might have to say, and Mrs. Travers gained possession of it without the usual contest. Glancing through the paper rapidly Mrs. Travers tore out a square section from page 2, and another from page 11. Then at one of those unexpected moments every woman knows breakfast is replete with, said: "So you could lose $50 on a prize fight. Well, well. Here is a male I have been awaiting for a long time. And strange to say, here is another just across the street—one is on suits and the other on gowns. And the strangest of all, we happen to have accounts at both those stores. Fifty dollars, you say, you lost? Was it an even fifty?" And so it was that the breakfast dishes at the Travers' home went unwashed Saturday morning because Mrs. Travers was obliged to catch an early jitney downtown and commence operations.—Kansas City Star.

WILLING TO BE PUT WISE

Private Ready to Absorb Any Information Brigadier General Was Able to Impart.

In all the armies in the war discipline was lax in the air service. Army men are at a loss to account for it, but without exception laxity was evident in all the air camps. The San Francisco Chronicle tells the following experience told by Brig. Gen. Benjamin Alvord when the latter was adjutant general of the A. E. F. The general had been sent by General Pershing to make an inspection about Colombey-les-Belles.

He walked around without getting the attention the doughboys would show an officer of his rank. No one saluted him and no one noticed him. Once in a while a captain or a major would snap a salute, but not the enlisted men. It rather riled the general, who always scrupulously followed army regulations himself. Finally when a private passed him with a cigar in his mouth, and although looking right at him, failed to salute, the general thought it was time to call a halt.

"Come here, young fellow," he called. "Say, what do you do in this camp when a general officer shows up?" "All right, I'll bite, what is it, old top?" parried the private.

But None Came.

Late the other night on a street car a soldier was going home for the first time. He was happy and proud. And his reason for being proud: there was a wound stripe on his right arm. One man said to him: "Where were you wounded?" The soldier replied: "I was hit in the back with a piece of shell." The man gave a short laugh and said: "A funny place to get hit; which way were you going?"

It is needless to say that the soldier hit the man and here is what the soldier said: "If there are any more of you fellows thinks that a Yank ever ran, I can change your mind for you." —Indianapolis News.

COST HIM MORE THAN FIFTY

Mr. Travers Had Not Properly Estimated His Losses on That Little Fistic Encounter.

"I can't afford to lose $50 on a prize fight," mourned Gelatine Travers an hour or so after the shock he received over the wires that fatal Friday afternoon. "But you have lost it, haven't you?" we asked, and he nodded disconsolately as he climbed aboard a homebound car. He must have felt a premonition as he mourned, for it is unlike Mr. Travers to regret his losses; and when he arrived home he broke the news to Mrs. Travers, along with the implied suggestion that a little economy for the next few weeks would not come in amiss. Mrs. Travers said nothing in her most sympathetic manner, and the evening's conversation covered topics wholly foreign to prize fights. At the breakfast table next morning Mr. Travers had no taste for anything the morning paper might have to say, and Mrs. Travers gained possession of it without the usual contest. Glancing through the paper rapidly Mrs. Travers tore out a square section from page 2, and another from page 11. Then at one of those unexpected moments every woman knows breakfast is replete with, said: "So you could lose $50 on a prize fight. Well, well. Here is a sale I have been awaiting for a long time. And strange to say, here is another just across the street—one is on suits and the other on gowns. And the strangest of all, we happen to have accounts at both those stores. Fifty dollars, you say, you lost? Was it an even fifty?" And so it was that the breakfast dishes at the Travers' home went unwashed Saturday morning because Mrs. Travers was obliged to catch an early jitney downtown and commence operations.—Kansas City Star.

WILLING TO BE PUT WISE

Private Ready to Absorb Any Information Brigadier General Was Able to Impart.

In all the armies in the war discipline was lax in the air service. Army men are at a loss to account for it, but without exception laxity was evident in all the air camps.

The San Francisco Chronicle tells the following experience told by Brig. Gen. Benjamin Alvord when the latter was adjutant general of the A. E. F. The general had been sent by General Pershing to make an inspection about Colomby-les-Belles.

He walked around without getting the attention the doughboys would show an officer of his rank. No one saluted him and no one noticed him. Once in a while a captain or a major would snap a salute, but not the enlisted men. It rather riled the general, who always scrupulously followed army regulations himself. Finally when a private passed him with a cigar in his mouth, and, although looking right at him, failed to salute, the general thought it was time to call a halt.

"Come here, young fellow," he called. "Say, what do you do in this camp when a general officer shows up?" "All right, I'll bite, what is it, old top?" parried the private.

But None Came.

Late the other night on a street car a soldier was going home for the first time. He was happy and proud. And his reason for being proud, there was a wound stripe on his right arm.

One man said to him: "Where were you wounded?" The soldier replied: "I was hit in the back with a piece of shell." The man gave a short laugh and said: "A funny place to get hit; which way were you going?"

It is needless to say that the soldier hit the man and here is what the soldier said: "If there are any more of you fellows thinks that a Yank ever ran, I can change your mind for you." —Indianapolis News.

COMING EVENTS. Arizona State Fair—Nov. 3 to 8, 1919. The Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows and the Grand Lodge of Rebekahs of New Mexico will meet in Albuquerque, N. M., on Oct. 13, 14 and 15.

The death rate in August at Douglas, Ariz., was the lowest in two years, according to the report of Dr. Z. Causey, city health officer. There were nineteen deaths and eighteen births in incorporated Douglas during the month.

While slaking a well near Hot Springs, N. M., for the purpose of finding water, a flow of hot artesian water was struck at the depth of about 100 feet. It is estimated that the flow is about fifteen gallons per minute and the temperature as it comes from the well registers 115 degrees.

Work on the paving began at Las Cruces when a large force of men started putting in the sewer connections on all the property which faces the main street. Contracts have been let for the concrete paving on the main street and on the side streets for one block each way from the main street.

All water holes throughout Santa Cruz county are filled and the grass is receding in soft earth as the result of the heavy rainfalls, according to reports brought to Nogales, Ariz. Forty-eight hours of steady rainfall are reported from various parts of the county and even the water holes that have been parched for years are filled.

The valley farmers of Fort Sumner, N. M., are now considering the installation of a large hydro-electric plant at the same time the new dam is built, both for light and power purposes. The plant would furnish both light and power for the entire valley as well as for the town. The estimated cost of the plant will be $35,000 to $40,000.

Gen. Santiago F. Rivera, formerly of the Mexican army, recently was killed at Escuintla, Guatemala, according to word received from Ezra Lawton, formerly American consul at Nogales, Sonora, now stationed in Guatemala. General Rivera, before going to Guatemala, was under arrest at Tucson, Ariz., on a Mann act charge and, by his departure forfeited $7,000 bond.

From the first 140 bales of cotton, ginned by the Yuma gin of the Somerton Cotton and Commercial Company the average is 36 per cent. This is an exceptionally high average, as at this season of the year the seed weighs heavy because of the large amount of moisture it contains. Both the Yuma and Somerton gins of the Somerton Cotton and Commercial Company are running steadily and the Gadsden gin will be in operation shortly.

That Roy, N. M., is one of the greatest dairy centers in the Southwest is shown by reports of cream shipments this year. Tom Strong reports the shipment of 1,030 cans of cream from the station at Roy since last February. The cans weighed 80 pounds each and represented $2,400 pounds of cream valued at $35,000. Besides this there are several other buyers and several independent shippers on the mesa who are also doing a fine business.

An industry and a building that Tempe, Ariz., is proud of, and justly so, is the big five-story flour mill of the Tempe Milling Company, of Monolithic concrete construction, clean, light and airy, it is an ideal plant of its kind. Fitted with the latest type of milling machinery, even down to an electric air purifier, it is able to turn out a superior product. One of the most interesting features of the big mill is the fact that it is run entirely by water power.

Building in Albuquerque took a decided jump during the month of August according to the report of the building inspector. Permits for the construction of business houses and residences totaled to the amount of $110,000 for the quarter ending Aug. 30, which is much larger than that of the same period in the previous year.

An all-Arizona automobile show under the direction of Claude E. Wilson will be staged as the outstanding night feature of the state fair week, Nov. 3-8 inclusive, at Phoenix. An agreement has been signed by the fair commission permitting Wilson exclusive concession for the exhibition, which gives promise of exceeding any show of the kind ever held in the Southwest.

Walter Daniels, a farmer living twelve miles west of Clayton, was bitten on the finger by a rattlesnake recently while working in his bean field. The snake was coiled up under a vine and when Mr. Daniels started to pull the vine the reptile sank his fangs in his finger. Outside of the wash left by the fangs and the infection made by the doctor, Mr. Daniels shows no effect of the injury.

Standing on the body of a rattler while it was sinking its fangs into her leg, was the experience of Mrs. Ada Chapman at her home on the Big Sandy, near Kingman, Ariz. She and her husband had gone into the back yard in the dusk of the evening and while moving around she stepped on a rattlesnake. The reptile struck her several times on the leg. Her husband immediately cut open the wound and sucked the poisoned blood from it. Dr. Ferry was hurriedly called from Kingman and the woman suffered no ill effects of her experience.

RECOGNIZED THAT ART WORK Profiteer Picked Out Wrong Man to Boast About Picture He Had "Picked Up."

A Kansas City profiteer moved into his gaudy new home last week, and last night was piloting a salaried friend around through the new rugs and furniture. As they entered the "library," the profiteer pointed with great pride to a lurid picture 6 by 9, on the wall, and said:

"How d'ye like that for art? I'm ashamed to tell you how cheap I got that down at the art shop the other day. See that torn place in the corner? That was made, the dealer said, by one of them German looters in the Thirty-Year war."

"The dealer was mistaken," observed the salaried friend. "It was another war. It was made by a beer bottle I threw myself. I never could stand that picture, especially when I was lit up. Grogan's bartender kicked me clear across the sidewalk the night I heaved that bottle. So Grogan's selling off his pictures, is he?"—Kansas City Star.

"You take this one," said Barnes, "and I will manage the other." He was in a hurry to get away from the house. There was no telling when the government agents would descend upon the place.

Barnes helped Peter to lift the trunks into the car and then ordered him to start at once for Hart's Tavern.

"You can return later on for your things," he said.

"I got 'em tied up in a bundle in the garage, Mr. Burns," he said. "Won't take a second to get 'em out." He hurried around the corner of the house.

A dry, quiet chuckle fell upon Barnes' ears. He glanced about in surprise and alarm. No one was in sight. "Look up, young man," and the startled young man obeyed. His gaze halted at a window on the second story, almost directly over his head.

Mr. Sprouse was looking down upon him, his sharp features fixed in a sardonic grin.

"Well, I'll be d—!" burst from Barnes' lips.

"Surprised to see me, eh? If you're not in a hurry, I'd certainly appreciate a lift as far as the Tavern, old man. I'll be down in a jiffy. Stand aside! I'm going to drop." A moment later he swung over the sill, and dropped lightly to the ground eight feet below.

"See, here, Sprouse or whatever your name is—"

"Better hear me out," broke in Sprouse calmly. "I could drill a hole through you so quickly you'd never know what did it," he went on. His hand was in his coat pocket, and a quick glance revealed to Barnes a singularly impressive angle in the cloth, the point of which seemed to be directed squarely at his chest. "But I'm not going to do it. I just want to set myself straight with you. In a word, I never got anywhere near the room in which the jewels were hidden. This is God's truth, Barnes. I wasn't the only one who was trying to get the baubles, my friend. It was a game in which only the best man could win."

"I know the truth now about Roon and Paul," said Barnes significantly.

"You do?" sneered Sprouse. "I'll bet you a thousand to one you do not. The girl was led to believe that they were a couple of crooks and that they fixed me in that tavern down there. Isn't that what she told you? Well, that story was cooked up for her special benefit. Roon was the Baron Hedlund. Hedlund came up here a week or so ago to keep a lookout for his wife. The baroness is supposed to be deeply enamored of Prince Ugo. He found letters which seemed to indicate that she was planning to join the prince up here. When he heard of the arrival of a lady at Green Fancy the other afternoon, he got busy. I admit that I am the gentleman who telephoned the warning up to the prince. They tried to head the baron and his man off at the cross-roads, but he

"Nicholas butted in at this unfortunate juncture. He made the mistake of his life. Ugo jumped back into his room. In less than a second he was out again. He landed squarely on Nicholas' back as the fellow turned to escape. I saw the steel flash. Poor old Nick went down in a heap, letting out a horrible yell. Ugo dragged him into the room and dashed back into his own. A moment later he came out again, yelling for help. There was only one thing left for me to do and that was to get out on the roof if possible, and wait for things to quiet down. I got out through a trap door and stayed there for an hour or so.

"Well, to shorten the story, I finally took a chance and slid down to the eaves where I managed to find the limb of a tree big enough to support me—just as if the Lord had ordered it put there for my special benefit. It was soon on the ground, and that meant safety for me. I had heard Ugo tell the others that Nicholas said the man who stabbed him was yours truly. Can you beat it?"

"And now comes the maddening part of the whole business. He said that the crown jewels were gone! The thief was running downstairs when he staggered to the door. If we are to find the crown jewels, my friend, we will first have to find Prince Ugo. He has them."

"I don't believe a word of this yarn," said Barnes flatly. "You have the jewels and—"

"Look here, Mr. Barnes, I'm not going to double-cross you again. That's all over. I want to get that scurvy dog who knifed poor old Nick. If you can give me a lead, I'll try to run Prince Ugo down. And if I do, we'll get the jewels."

"We? You amuse me, Sprouse."

"Well, I can't do any more than give my promise, my solemn oath, or something like that. I can't give a bond, you know. I swear to you that if I lay hands on that stuff, I will deliver it to you. Might just as well trust me as Ugo."

"Get in the car," said Barnes suddenly. He had decided to take a chance with the resourceful, indefatigable rascal. There was something convincing about Sprouse's version of the affair at Green Fancy.

Barnes told him that he knew of Prince Ugo's flight. Sprouse looked thoughtful for a long time.

"So O'Dowd knows that I really was after the swag, eh? He believes I got it?"

"I suppose so."

"The only one who thinks I'm absolutely innocent is Ugo, of course—and Mrs. Van Dyke. That's good," Sprouse remarked. "I've got a pretty fair idea where I can find Mr. Loeb. It will take a little time—a couple of days, perhaps—but sooner or later he'll turn up in close proximity to the beautiful baroness."

CHAPTER XIX.

A Trip by Night and a Late Arrival.

Shortly after sundown that evening, the Rushcroft company evacuated Hart's Tavern. They were delayed by the irritating and, to Mr. Rushcroft, unpardonable behavior of two officious gentlemen, lately arrived, who insisted politely but firmly on prying into the past, present and future history of the several members of the organization, including the new "backer."

Barnes had devised a very clever plan for getting Miss Cameron away from the tavern without attracting undue attention. She was to leave in one of the automobiles that he had engaged to convey the players to Crowndale, where they were to "show." In case of detention or inquiry, she was to pose as a stage-struck young woman who had obtained a place with the company at the last moment through his influence.

When the hour came for the departure from Hart's Tavern he deliberately engaged the two secret service men in conversation in the taproom. Miss Cameron left the house by the rear door and was safely ensconced in Peter's automobile long before he shook hands with the "rat-catchers" and dashed out to join her. Tommy Gray's car, occupied by the four players, was moving away from the door as he sprang in beside her and slammed the door.

Peter's efforts to stay behind Tommy's venerable but surprisingly energetic car were the cause of many a gasp and shudder from the couple who sat behind him in the bounding car. He had orders to keep back of Tommy but never to lose sight of Lis tall light.

"Are you there?" he whispered.

"Yes. Isn't it jolly, running away like this? It must be wonderfully exciting to be a criminal, always dodging and—"

"Sh! Even a limousine may have ears!"

But if the limousine had possessed a thousand ears they would have been rendered useless in the stormy racket made by Peter's muffler and the thunderous roar of the exhaust as the car got under way.

Sixty miles lay between them and Crowndale. Tommy Gray guaranteed that the distance could be covered in three hours, even over the vile mountain roads. Ten o'clock would find them at the Grand Palace hotel, none the worse for wear, provided (he always put it parenthetically) they lived to tell the tale! The luggage had gone on ahead of them earlier in the day.

Soon after ten o'clock they entered the town of Crowndale and drew up before the unattractive portals of the Grand Palace hotel. An arc lamp swinging above the entrance shed a pitiless light upon the dreary, Godforsaken hostelry with the ironic name.

Miss Cameron was warmly conscious of the thrill that had come into her blood when he carried her up the stairs in his powerful arms, disdainful of the offer of assistance from the suddenly infatuated Tommy Gray.

"Rehearsal at eleven sharp," announced Rushcroft. "Letter-perfect, every one of you. No guessing. By the way, Miss—er—upon my soul, I don't believe I got your name?"

"Jones," said the new member, shamelessly.

Barnes went down to the dimly lit lobby. A single, half-hearted electric bulb shed its feeble light on the desk, in front of which stood a man registering under the sleepy eye of the night clerk.

Barnes was turning away when a familiar voice assailed him.

Whirling, he looked into the face of a man who stood almost at his elbow—the sharp, impassive face of Mr. Sprouse.

CHAPTER XX.

The First Wayfarer Has One Treasure Thrust Upon Him—And Forthwith Claims Another.

"What are you doing here?" demanded Barnes, staring. He seized the man's arm and inquired eagerly: "Have you got the jewels?"

"No; but I will have them before morning," replied Sprouse coolly.

"Would you be surprised if I were to tell you that his royal nibs is hiding in this town? Well, he certainly is. The Baroness Hedlund has been here for a week or ten days. She goes by the name of Mrs. Hasselwein. I popped down here this afternoon and found out that she is at the sanatorium, but that she expects to leave tomorrow morning. I made another trip out there this evening and waited. About eight o'clock Mr. Hasselwein strolled up. He sat on the veranda with her for half an hour or so and then left. I followed him. He went to one of the little cottages that belong to the sanatorium. I couldn't get close enough to hear what they said, but I believe he expects to take her away in an automobile early in the morning. It is a seventy-mile ride from here to the junction where they catch the train for the West. I'm going up now to make a call on Mr. Hasselwein. By the way, what is the number of your room?"

"Twenty-two—on the next floor."

"Good. Go upstairs now and I'll join you in about ten minutes. I will tap three times on your door."

"Why should you come to my room, Sprouse? We can say all that is to be said—"

"If you will look on the register you will discover that Mr. J. H. Prosser registered here about half an hour ago. He is in room 30. He left a call for five o'clock. Well, Prosser is another name for Ugo. He left the cottage an hour ago. Came in a jitney or I could have got to him on the way over."

Barnes, regardless of consequences, dashed over to inspect the register. Sprouse followed leisurely.

"See!" cried Barnes, excitedly, putting his finger on the name "Miss Jones." "She's in room 32—next to his. By god, Sprouse, do you suppose he knows that she is here? Would the dog undertake anything—"

"You may be sure he doesn't know she's here, or you either, for that matter. The country's full of Joneses and Barneses. Go on upstairs. Leave everything to me."

Barnes had been in his room for twenty minutes before he heard the tapping on his door. He opened it and Sprouse slid into the room. The instant the door closed behind him, he threw open his coat and coolly produced a long, shallow metal box, such as one finds in safes vaults.

"With my compliments," he said dryly, thrusting the box into Barnes' hands. "You'd better have the countess check them up and see if they're all there. I am not well enough acquainted with the collection to be positive."

Barnes was speechless. He could only stare, open-mouthed, at this amazing man.

"My God, Sprouse, have you been in that man's room since I saw you down—"

"All you have to do is to keep quiet and look innocent. Stay out of the hall tonight. Don't go near the door of

No. 30. Act like a man with brains. I said I would square myself with you and with him, too. Well, I've done both. Maybe you think it is easy to give up this stuff. There is a half-million dollars' worth of nice little things in that box, small as it is."

"I cannot begin to thank you enough," said Barnes. "See here, you must allow me to reward you in some way commensurate with your—"

"Cut that out," said Sprouse darkly. "I'm not so virtuous that I have to be rewarded. I like the game. It's the breath of life to me."

"The time will surely come when I can do you a good turn, Sprouse, and you will not find me reluctant," said Barnes, lamely.

"That's different. If I ever need a friendly hand I'll call on you. It's only fair that I should give you a tip, Barnes, just to put you on your guard. From now on, I'm a free agent. I want to advise you to put that stuff in a safe place. I'll give you two days' start. After that, if I can get 'em away from you, or whoever may have them, I'm going to do it. They will be fair plunder from then on. Good night—and good-by for the present. Stick close to your room till morning and then beat it with her for New York. I give you two days' start, remember."

He switched off the light suddenly. There was no sound for many seconds, save the deep breathing of the two men. Then, with infinite caution, Sprouse turned the knob and opened the door a half inch or so. He left the room so abruptly that Barnes never quite got over the weird impression that he squeezed through that slender crack, and pulled it after him!

"Isn't it jolly, running away like this?"

Many minutes passed before he turned on the light. The key of the box was tied to the wire grip. With trembling fingers he inserted it in the lock and opened the lid. . . . "A half-million dollars' worth of nice little things," Sprouse had said!

He did not close his eyes that night. Daybreak found him lying in bed, with the box under his pillow, a pistol at hand, and his eyes wide open. He was in a graver quandary than ever. Now that he had the treasure in his possession, what was he to do with it?

He solved the breakfast problem by calling downstairs for a waiter and ordering coffee and rolls and eggs sent up to his room. Singularly enough the waiter solved the other and more disturbing problem for him.

"Some robbery last night," said that worthy. "Feller up in one of the cottages at the sanatorium. All beat up, something fierce they say."

"Up in—where?" almost shouted Barnes, starting up.

The man explained where the cottages were situated.

"Seems he was to leave by auto early this mornin', and they didn't know anything was wrong till Joe Keep—his driving a car Mr. Norton has for rent—till Joe'd been settin' up in front for nearly half an hour. The man's wife was waitin' fer him up at the main buildin' and she got so tired waitin' that she sent one of the clerks down to see what was keeping her husband. Well, sir, him and Joe couldn't wake the feller, so they climb in an open winder, an' by gosh, Joe says it was terrible. The feller was layin' on the bed, feet an' hands tied and gagged, and blood from head to foot. He was unconscious, Joe says, an'—my God, how his wife took on! Joe says he couldn't stand it, so he snook out, shakin' like a leaf."

"Is—the man dead?" cried Barnes, aghast.

"Nope! Seems like it's nothing serious: just beat up, that's all. Terrible cuts on his head and—"

"What time did all this happen?"

"Doc Smith figures it was long about midnight, Judgin' by the way the blood coagulated."

"Did they get away with much?"

"Haven't heard. Seems as though the burglar—must ha' been more'n one of 'em. I say—wasn't satisfied with crackin' him over the head. He stuck the point of a knife or something into him—just a little way. Joe says—in more'n a dozen places. What say?"

"I didn't say anything."

"I thought you did. Well, if I hear anything more I'll let you know."

WASHINGTON CITY SIDELIGHTS

Mexican Bandits Raise Nice Question of Ethics

WASHINGTON.—President Wilson's cabinet split wide open on the following question: Was Captain Matlack justified in beating the Mexican bandits out of $6,500 of the ransom for the two army aviators? With the professors of ethics who supervised military morals during the war demobilized, there have been no authorities to turn to for a ruling, and it looks as if President Wilson, who instructed the senate committee on the difference between a moral and a legal obligation, would be called upon to decide this moral issue for the cabinet.

One group of cabinet members condemns the cheating of the bandits as dishonorable, declaring it reprehensible to break a promise made even to a criminal. Another group contends that the breaking of a promise made under duress is justifiable.

Then there is a utilitarian school of thought maintaining that the bargain ought to have been carried out implicitly because the impairment of our reputation with the bandits for good faith may embarrass future negotiations to ransom our citizens.

The Mexican border's contribution to the controversy was that General Dickman was seeking ways and means to pay the remainder of the ransom to the bandits.

The sportsman, who has a nice sense of honor in disputed questions of this kind, will unhesitatingly say that General Dickman is right.

The average American will probably say: "Pay the bandits the money and then shoot 'em."

Yankee Saleswomen to Sell Goods to Harem Women

THE American women's chamber of commerce, the first organization of its kind having national and international scope, is trying to do these things: Prevent compulsory physical examination of American school teachers by man surgeons; extend through the Southwest and middle West a truck delivery of fresh vegetables, eggs, milk and other farm products, with girl drivers in charge of the trucks; popularize American lingerie and toilet articles among the sultan's daughters, and popularize American shoes among the women of China.

Mrs. Katherine Clemmons Gould, a founder and past president of the organization, who recently returned from a business trip to China, tells all about it. First attention is to be paid to the Smith-Towner senate bill for physical examination of women teachers. The chamber will insist that the examiners be women. And, while they are on the subject of teachers, the women of the chamber of commerce will fight to obtain for them a higher rate of pay.

"We first had to educate the women of China," said Mrs. Gould, "who formerly believed that it was sinful to permit their feet to develop naturally. In many Chinese cities we have persuaded merchants to handle American-made shoes for women, and as the Chinese women gradually adopt the western custom a great field for the American shoe industry will be opened."

Saleswomen have been sent to Turkey with a line of toilet articles and apparel and have had tremendous success. Mere men, she explained, cannot even approach the feminine Turkish customer.

Navy Aviators Fight Unifying of Air Service

NAVY aviators are against the proposal to concentrate the air service of the army, navy, postoffice and coast and forest fire patrols under a single executive, probably a new cabinet member. Differing kinds of service, with special qualifications for each, make it necessary to keep the branches separate, they believe.

Capt. G. W. Steele, Jr., of the U. S. S. Shawmut shows the attitude of the navy flyers in the form of some manuscript prepared by him as commander of the work of the air fleet of the Atlantic squadron, department of navy aeronautics.

Captain Steele and the Shawmut are now at Newport, R. I. Previous to its assignment there the boat was a mine sweeper on the Irish sea, but returned to American waters in time to handle the testing of the navy ships prior to their transatlantic flights, and later in Lisbon, where they landed.

"There are reports," says Captain Steele, "that the proposed congressional legislation to consolidate the air services will provide for a separate cabinet officer as head of the department of aviation, and others that say the head of the aviation department will merely be a chief, such as the various bureaus of the army and navy have."

"Either of these plans, or any other plans which take aviation for the navy out of complete control of the navy department will mean the service will suffer, and such legislation should be opposed."

"A navy flyer has to know how to navigate, either from the flimsy cockpit of an airship or from the bridge of a vessel. He has to know how to do navy scouting, bombing and torpedoing, coast patrol work, and finally the spotting of shots and regulation of navy fire."

Captain Steele's conclusion is that the army aviator cannot know the difficulties of the navy flying game and it takes him years to learn his own.

Uncle Sam Wants a Purchaser for a Model Town

IF ANY one is in the market to buy a town the war department has one for sale. In advertising this fact to the public the government said in an official announcement, among other things: "The war department is offering for sale the town of Nitro, W. Va., a complete industrial community embracing 137 manufacturing buildings, housing accommodations for 20,000 persons, and the utilities and civic improvements that constitute the conveniences of a modern city."

"Nitro, built by the government at a cost of approximately $70,000,000, is the site of the second largest smokeless powder plant in the world. The bids must cover not only the powder plant and the other industrial units which were erected to prepare the ingredients essential to powder making, but the civic community as well."

"The industrial community of Nitro stretches for more than four miles along the east bank of the Kanawha river. Here are to be found a sulphuric acid plant in seven units, the capacity of which is 700 tons per day of 24 hours; a nitric acid plant of four units, the capacity of which is 300 tons per day; a cotton purification plant of standard pulp mill design in four units, the capacity of which is 225 tons per day; a nitrating, colloidizing, and drying plant; 16 shipping houses, or magazines, segregated for the storage of powder; etc."

"Set upon the foothills, overlooking the industrial area with its bristling smokestacks, stands the civic community—more than 1,500 furnished portable houses, homes for the workmen who will make the manufacturing units production institutions; 75 permanently constructed executive residences, hotels, boarding houses, dormitories, clubhouse, general and special stores, cafeterias, and moving pictures houses, etc., etc., etc."

"Step up, ladies and gentlemen. How much are we offered?"

EQUAL TO THE EMERGENCY

American Genius Quickly Produced Precision Blocks Accurate to Millionth Part of Inch

One of America's little-known war romances is revealed by John H. Van Deventer in his story of precision gauges, which appears in Everybody's. Virtually all of our munitions had to be made to limit gauges which had to be corrected by means of precision blocks to within a few millionths of an inch. "Twenty years ago," writes Mr. Van Deventer, "a Swedish tool-maker named Johansson made up his mind that the millionth of an inch was the coming thing—hunted during nine years for a practical way to get it and got it. How? Nobody knows except Johansson, and he won't tell. For over nine years he kept everybody guessing. Our best shops imported his blocks and used them for checking the gauges.

"Then came the war, with its wonderful stimulation of American genius. With it came also the need of being independent of the old world in the matter of gauges.

"The war took E. C. Peck away from his job of running a great factory in Cleveland and brought him to Washington to take charge of the gauging of ordnance products. It brought William E. Hoke of St. Louis to the bureau of standards, with an idea of how to produce precision blocks. Colonel Peck and Major Hoke got together, and in six months were turning out precision blocks accurate to the millionth part of an inch."

ABOUT OIL STOCK

Why is it people so often refer to an oil proposition as "more or less a gamble"? A homesteader enters upon a piece of land, staking all he has and is, along with sacrifices by the family, on possibility of success. How can he KNOW he will succeed? How can any man know he will succeed at anything? Intelligent calculating on probabilities is all the wisest can do. A prospector toils along year after year, in hope of a "show", then puts money, brawn, and brain into his "claim", all the while merely BELIEVING he has found a fortune. And what would the great mineral Southwest be today, but for the prospector? What would the great copper centers he today had not the prospector been followed by the man with money, who BELIEVED, with the prospector, strong enough to take a chance? Chance? Life—the whole of it.—is but chance. but the spirit of the West knows no rebuff. The pioneer cattleman braved the West,—taking chance on losing his very scalp, but made his fortune, and incidentally paved the way for that civilization he represented, farmers, schools, churches, society.

Often when one is approached to buy oil stock he remarks, "oh, if I just knew they'd strike oil," "KNEW", the dickens! If the promoters knew they were going to strike oil YOU would never get a chance to touch a share of stock with a ten foot pole. The mind of the West is commercial. The spirit of enterprise is stronger in the West than elsewhere. The true Westerner is ever ready for a game of chance. His long experience in surmounting seemingly insurmountable obstacles has hardened him into invincibility. What Westerner is not inspired by the pooling of local capital, looking toward an enterprise of such proportions as to affect every line of business and every individual? If oil be not found, how much poorer are we? Precious little. Should oil be found, how much richer are we? Every possessor of property may mark up his holdings a hundred per cent. Every farmer is justified in enlarging his farm. Every business man is justified in laying in a larger stock of goods and enlarging his business. Every landlord is justified in making heavier investments in tenant houses. Every wage earner is justified in hoping for better wages and greater certainty of employment. At Wichita Falls, Texas, you pay $90 a month for a four room cottage, yet a laborer informed the writer that any ablebodied man could turn $200 a month, net. Oil did it. There was more than $20,000, 000.00 in the local banks. Oil did it. A $100 stock certificate in more than one company was selling for $15,000.00. Oil promoters in the first place, and stock purchasers in the second place made it all possible.

In the case of the San Pedro Company, stock, it occurs to us, should possess a value double that of the ordinary company in unproven fields. The reason is that there is a clause in their lease contract, not found in all contracts, which gives the company control of any and all minerals discovered,—not oil only.

This is not paid matter. We have consulted with no one as to its propriety. The Patagonian simply believes in putting its shoulder to wheel and doing its little bit toward putting over an enterprise of such proportions as is now undertaken by the San Pedro Oil & Gas Co., when it means so much to all of us. We'll get ours later in the form of increased business. It is like betting one dollar against a hundred thousand. No Westerner will overlook a bet like that. If that's gambling, the Patagonian pleads guilty.

IN DEFENSE OF LOCAL MERCHANTS

It is quite natural for any animal, when experiencing physical pain, to suspect the thing, whatever it may be, nearest.

In the matter of high cost of living, one is prone to charge everything up to the local merchant, simply because he happens to be the one who quotes prices to the consumer. The Government is augmenting the growth of this prejudice by establishing Government stores.

To charge that retail merchants are responsible for high prices is to charge recent development, upon their part, of a new sort of greed, something they were never charged with before. It also credits them with a new business faculty with which they have scarcely been credited heretofore, for if they alone have put present prices over it indicates a business sagacity scarcely exceeded by curbstone securities gamblers. Indeed, so far from this being true, many cases of recent date are on record wherein retail merchants have refused longer to handle certain articles, their conscientiousness absolutely forbidding them from charging such exorbitant prices.

A recent letter from a paper supply house says: "Sorry, etc., but good paper is up, so and so, and still advancing."

If the reports in the daily papers are to be credited, in spite of Government prosecutions and Government stores, etc., food prices reached, last week, the highest point in our history.

Another thing noticeable is the fact that remarkably few retail merchants have ever been convicted of profiteering.

Retail merchants have about as much power to regulate prices as a jackrabbit has to regulate the appetite of the coyote. His profits are fixed and goods practically marked long before they arrive.

It is too bad that the retail merchants, the only people in a position to grant a thirty-day accommodation (so often asked) has to face the expression on the face of his customer which plainly enough reads, "you are a profiteer."

What the causes of high prices are has not been determined. The Government guarantee of wheat prices, which product,—wheat,—controls the price of every other article in the bread and feed line, (and because everything in the feed line, also every thing in the meat line) may be one cause. The high cost of transportation, which affects the price of every article used by the family, may be another. But certain it is that if the consumer depend upon the local merchant to control prices, he may expect him to go out of business, for he simply cannot remain in business and sell goods at and below cost.

WEALTHY FILL SARATOGA SPAS

Cheapest Thing at the Most Famous of American Resorts Is Money.

SOCIAL BARRIERS LOWERED

Newly-Made Millionaires Strut About the Place to Display the Wealth They Acquired During the War—Gambling Is Heavy.

Saratoga, N. Y.—The cheapest thing in Saratoga is money. Everybody has it in abundance off and on and spends it with the abandon of the drunken sailor in the old song.

Clerks bet $1,000 on a horse at the race tracks. Newly made rich pile up checks and counters on cards and the elusive roulette ball. Men throw dollars around as they used to toss dimes.

Women accustomed to ginkhams and rhinestones gladden the eye and stimulate the sense of humor in their efforts to carry with grace silks and diamonds. The most suitable is discarded for the most expensive.

Extravagance and a contempt for money values intrudes itself at every turn on the picturesque streets of the most famous of American resorts, and oldest of the cures, in the corridors of the great barn-like hotels, at the race track, in the dining places and in the lake sections and flits by in the bewildering parade of flashy motorcars.

Natives Reaping Harvest.

And anybody who knows the ruling passion of Saratoga doesn't need to be told that the prudent native is getting his.

What escapes him falls to the hotel keepers, the bookmakers, the sleek and rat-faced gentry that cap for sequestered resorts of chance where the green cloth, the dealing box and the other implements of their craft are to be found without much difficulty.

The crowds that flock to the race courses are greater by thousands than ever before.

All the old social barriers have been broken down and trampled under foot by the crowd that comes from the financial marts of Wall street, the resorts of upper Broadway, the bench and forge, and forest and mine and farm, upon which the fortunes of war have smiled.

The number of resorts where women are admitted to the gaming tables is probably less than four. In the other small places where the wagers range from $5 to $50 at roulette, hazard and one or two other contrivances for getting the money women are not admitted. It is not considered chibby to advertise the location or names of the owners of the gaming establishment because it might stir the local officials to interpret too literally the legal inhibition against such enterprises.

There has already been more or less trouble—for the gaming purveyors—as it is. During the first week of the racing season all games were closed up for three days, due to a misunderstanding as to the number that were to be privileged—and the failure of certain other negotiations that are of interest to politicians.

Display of Gowns and Gems.

The greater part of the women are of the middle class type. The display of gowns and gems is, if anything, more striking than in the other days when Saratoga had "atmosphere." Almost every woman that passes in review seems to have prospered from the war, if diamonds be accepted as convincing evidence.

One woman was at the Union whose maid—she had one—had displayed great ingenuity in finding vacant spaces on her mistress' frock on which to pin a stupendous assortment of brilliants. Her husband made a fortune out of scrap iron in Chicago. Another woman, whose costume no sane man would attempt to describe, seemed to run to pearls. She wore more than any two women has any right to possess. The combination of dazzling colors and gems provoked one of the new voters to comment, "Dressing that woman up is like putting gold harness on a mule."

But for all the vanities and jealousies the women seem to be having as good a time as the men and to be as well supplied as they with all the money necessary to pay for it. Be-

Each Beauty in Harem Demanded a Gold Tooth.

Trials of a toothpuller in a harem were described by Dr. A. S. Hungerford of Teheran, Persia, who visited Toledo on his way back to the Pacific coast.

Fourteen years as the royal dentist for his majesty, the Shah of Persia, who has a nifty harem in his palace, has convinced the dentist that life with a surplus of beautiful spouses does not have all the traditional joys.

One of the doctor's first duties in the Shah's palace was to pull a tooth for a member of the harem. When the dentist finished her beauty had been enhanced by a brilliantly flashing gold bleuspid. Such jealousy did this addition to her beauty strike in the hearts of the harem that forthwith they all went salivating and sobbing to the Shah, charging his majesty with partiality. His majesty got out of the difficulty by ordering a gold tooth for each of them, but to even matters up ordered three United States molars for himself.

cause the statement made at the beginning of this chronicle holds good to the end. The cheapest thing in Saratoga is money.

ERUPTIONS FOR THE SCIENTISTS

Volcanoes in the Southwestern Part of Alaska Are Accommodating.

GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY THERE

Members Who Went to Study Mount Katmai and Its "Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes" Are Favored With Fine Performance.

Juneau, Alaska.—Volcanic peaks in the far southwestern corner of Alaska are in eruption this summer, evidently for the benefit of a party of scientists sent by the National Geographic society to study Mount Katmai, the greatest of Alaska's smoking mountains, and its "Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes."

Persons who have returned recently from the volcanic country to the westward said Shishaldin peak, on Unimak Island, in the Aleutian chain, was in eruption recently. They also reported it was believed Mount Barroff on the southwestern Alaskan mainland, also had spouted, as the snow about the summit was coal black.

the Katmai country, they said they believed there was little likelihood of an eruption this summer and declared they were certain there was absolutely no danger attached to the investigation. Katmai's last big "blowoff" was in June, 1912.

The party of twenty-six scientists is headed by Professor Robert A. Griggs of the University of Ohio, and some are from Carnegie institute. They were planning to make observations of the botanical, biological and geological effects of the 1912 eruption.

In 1913 Professor Griggs headed a party of scientists to Katmai and returned with the announcement that the crater was the largest on the globe and that near Katmai lay a great valley whose floor was dotted with thousands of mouths vomiting gray vapory gas and smoke. This valley Prof. Griggs named "The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes." Instead of 10,000, it is said there are literally millions of smoking vents.

Congress recently set aside "The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes" as national property, and it is believed that some day it will be a second Yellowstone geyser field. "Steaming springs, it is said, will eventually take the place of the present smoking vents.

Professor Griggs and his party expected to remain in the Katmai district until the middle of September. Until they return nothing probably will be heard from them, as there is no direct means of communication. Mrs. Griggs and her children accompanied the professor to Kodiak, an island near Katmai, and will remain there during the summer waiting for him to return.

Moving pictures of the smoking mountain and valley are to be brought back by the party.

WANTED HER DOG UNWITCHED

Pennsylvania Woman Asked the Federal District Attorney for Help, but Got None.

Harrisburg.—"My dog is bewitched; what can you do to help me?" pleaded a woman at the district attorney's office.

"Its name is Lady. The woman that did it is a witch. My poor dog didn't eat for two weeks. Whenever I go away from home Lady keeps house for me, but this woman bewitched it, and I want the dog to get well again."

No one in the district attorney's office knew of any magic word that could unwitch the dog.

necklace, and since no man is rich enough to own such a treasure the best ones are loaned out for such a period as the wearer may choose to be dressed in the height of fashion. As there are no button holes, the man may wear two bouquets in each ear, a sort of corsage bunch in a large hole in the lower lobe and a small boutonniere in a smaller hole in the ear higher up. Shell cuffs made of conch add the finishing touch to the correct attire.

Yap women do not wear the veil. Their only dress is a voluminous skirt made of leaves of fiber and composed of four or five thicknesses. Although one month is the average life of a woman's dress, the style does not change.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Peace Treaty Reported to the Senate for Ratification With Alterations.

MINORITY REPORT ALSO MADE

President Wilson's Harsh Words Against Opponents Call Forth Replies—Treaty With Austria Is Signed—Fatal Strike Riots in Hammond and Boston.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Whether or not it wins to the cause of the treaty my supporters, President Wilson's tour already has had one important result. It has induced the senate committee on foreign relations to release its grip on the pact and report it to the senate for action. So the fight over the treaty is now transferred to the floor of the upper house. How long final action there will be delayed no man can tell.

The majority report of the committee, representing the views of Chairman Lodge and the other radical opponents of the treaty and League of Nations—the latter especially—recommends the ratification of the treaty with four important reservations, as set forth in these columns a week ago, and also it recommends the amendments then mentioned. These amendments and reservations alike, says the report, "are governed by a single purpose, and that is to guard American rights and American sovereignty, the invasion of which would stimulate breaches of faith, encourage conflicts, and generate wars."

That the adoption of amendments would necessitate the reassembling of the peace conference is denied in the report, since the conference probably will be in session for six months more, and it is also asserted that the German delegates could easily be brought back to Paris, and that, as Germany is not a member of the league, she need not be consulted about changes in the covenant. Blame for delay is shifted from the committee to the peace conference itself, and the statement often made by the advocates of unreserved ratification, that trade cannot be resumed until such action is taken, is characterized as a "mere delusion." The report sarcastically calls attention to the fact that Premier Lloyd George in recent important speeches failed to point out that acceptance of the league covenant by Great Britain had relieved the social, political and economic troubles of that country and had not suggested that prompt action on the treaty by the American senate would immediately lower the price of beef. As for the fears that other nations may not accept American amendments, the report says: "That is one thing that certainly will not happen. . . . The other nations will take us on our own terms, for without us their league is a wreck and all their gains from a victorious peace are imperiled."

Senator Hitchcock presented the report of the minority of the committee, signed by the Democratic members with the exception of Senator Shields of Tennessee, who had declared himself in favor of the Lodge reservations. This report was no whit behind that of the majority in forcefulness of language and argument, and declared that refusal to ratify the treaty as it stands would mean the sacrifice by the United States of all concessions obtained from Germany under a dictated peace, would leave the industrial world in ferment, the financial world in doubt and commerce halted. Concerning the proposed amendments the report said: "We see no reason to discuss their character at length. In our opinion they have no merit, but whether they be good, bad or indifferent their adoption by the senate can have no possible effect except to defeat the participation of the United States in the treaty. None of them could by any possibility be accepted by even the great nations associated with the United States in the war, and none of them could by any possibility be dictated to Germany. To adopt any one of them, therefore, is equivalent to rejecting the treaty."

The report sets forth some of the concessions from Germany which, it says, America would sacrifice. Most of these are acceptances by Germany of action already taken by the United States and which the most ardent advocate of the treaty would not suggest that the United States would reconsider even if Germany withheld its assent. The really important point brought out in this connection was that unless we are a party to the treaty we will have no membership on the reparations commission, which for years to come will have enormous control over the trade and commerce of Germany with other nations.

President Wilson, moving steadily toward the Pacific coast, is striking telling blows in behalf of the treaty and is meeting with enthusiastic receptions everywhere. His admirers, however, cannot fail to regret that he is descending to rather undignified abuse of those who oppose his policies, and that he resorts to specious argument in appealing to special interests, as when he told the farmers of North Dakota that if the treaty were not ratified Europe would not buy their wheat.

Mr. Wilson's harsh words against his opponents called forth instant response from Senator Kenyon in the senate and from Senators Borah, Johnson and McCormick, who opened the speaking tour of the reservationists in Chicago. The president had called the senators who demand reservations in the treaty "contemptible quitters," and Kenyon heatedly declared the "most contemptible quitters in the history of the world were those who assembled with high ideals at the Paris conference and permitted Japan to take over Shantung."

Johnson also took this as his text and to the noisy delight of a huge Chicago audience undertook to show that it was President Wilson who was the quitter, in that he had gone across the sea with high ideals of open covenants, freedom of the seas, removal of economic barriers, reduction of armaments and self-determination for all peoples, and had come home with just what was handed to him.

Senator Norris of Nebraska took a whack at the president in a speech in the senate, bitterly attacking the expenditures of the peace delegation. He said Mr. Wilson "spent money in Paris like a drunken sailor," called attention to the payment of $150,000 to Bernard Baruch as a special advisor, and added: "Besides engaging an expensive retinue of 7,500 people as advisers whose advice he did not take, the president had a glass roof put over the George Washington and took luncheons from the Hotel Biltmore in New York to play for him while he was going over to Europe."

Dr. Karl Renner, on behalf of Austria, signed the peace treaty with that now petty country, but the signatures of Rumania and Czechoslovakia were withheld for the present. Rumania objects to the clauses guaranteeing equal civil rights to Jews and other religious and racial minorities, and the Serbians were waiting for the formation of a new cabinet at Belgrade. There was no indication of hard feelings between the allied representatives and Doctor Renner at the ceremony, and the latter accepted the treaty with the hope that before long Austria would be given easier terms and perhaps the right of self-determination and permission to unite with the German republic.

Germany, in reply to the peace conference's objection to the article in the new German constitution providing for Austrian representation in the reichsrath, said the article would remain ineffective. The conference answered that this was not enough, that the article must be expunged; but this second warning was not expressed so forcibly as had been intended, owing to the objection of Mr. Polk. However, Germany in Berlin evidently expects a new Spartacist uprising in the near future, for the Nostke guards have been making secret preparations, and guns have been placed at bridges and other strategic points. This "revolution" had been scheduled for October but probably the date has been advanced.

The latest news from Russia, which, however, comes from bolshevist sources, is that 12,000 of Admiral Kolchak's men have been captured by the reds and the surrender of the remainder of his southern army is expected. In northern Russia the situation of the anti-bolshevists is desperate. The Americans have left and the British are rapidly completing their evacuation of the Archangel region. A delegation from the municipal and zemstvo organizations of that district has reached London and made a pathetic appeal against the withdrawal of allied help.

The Romanians, at last reports, had not yet withdrawn their troops from Hungary and their actions and language continue to be defiant of the allies. They claim to be acting as a barrier to the waves of bolshevism that threaten to flow over Hungary from the east. The Serbians, it is reported, are growing very bitter against Rumania and are talking war and moving up their artillery to the frontier. An interesting story comes from Vienna of the arrest in Prague of the leaders in a monarchist plot that is believed to include Austria and Hungary and with which the Archduke Joseph party is said to be allied. It is rumored the intention was to put former Emperor Charles back on the throne.

General Pershing's return to the United States was the occasion of a tremendous demonstration in New York, lasting over three days and culminating in an impressive parade of the First division. "First to enter the war and last to leave," led by the gallant commander in chief, when Pershing landed at Hoboken he was presented by Secretary Baker with his commission as general, and on Thursday, September 18, he will be received by both houses of congress in joint session and will be told formally how much the country appreciates his distinguished services in accomplishing a great task with all credit to the American nation.

The industrial sky was pretty dark last week, and indeed storms broke at several points. In Hammond, Ind., the striking employees of the Pressed Steel Car works engaged in rioting and three of them were killed by the state troops and police. Then the members of the police force of Boston, who had joined a labor union in defiance of regulations went on strike, and immediately the disorderly elements of the city began pillaging stores, attacking women and indulging in other riotous demonstrations. The loyal police were unequal to the emergency and the mayor called for the assistance of the state militia. Several regiments were mobilized and went into action against the mobs, seven persons being killed in the fights. All other labor unions in the city threatened to go on strike in sympathy with the police. The firemen also said they would quit if the police were asked to.

As Chairman Gary of the United States Steel corporation directed was adequate in his refusal to meet with the advisory committee of the steel workers, despite the efforts of President Wilson and others, the committee called a strike of all union employees of the corporation for Monday, September 22. The strike order will go into effect unless concessions satisfactory to the unions shall be made before that time by the corporation or President Wilson shall succeed in persuading the workers to postpone it. Through Secretary Tammly, the president urged on Samuel Gompers the wisdom of putting off the strike until after the industrial conference that is to meet in Washington early next month. Mr. Gompers was in Dorchester, Mass., where he was called by the death of his father, and at the time of writing it was not known what would be his attitude in the matter.

There was a big in Chicago over the ending of the long tie-up in the building industry. The carpenters, whose refusal to work for less than $1 an hour caused the trouble, agreed to return to their jobs for the 92½ cents an hour offered by the contractors, until next May, when there will be a readjustment. The settlement permitted the resumption of building projects involving many millions of dollars.

YAP AND ITS PEOPLE

Interesting Facts About the Little Pacific Island.

Food, Drink and Clothes All Obtained From Trees—Men Have Bachelor Clubs.

Washington.—Since the little island of Yap was mentioned the other day at the White House conference between the president and senate foreign relations committee, there has been a general demand for information about this former German possession, which the American navy wants for a cable and wireless station.

According to the National Geographic society it is the westernmost of the western Caroline Islands, is situated about 500 miles southwest of Guam and 800 miles east of the island of Mindanao of the Philippine group. It has a population of about 7,000.

Yap is strangely old and strangely up to date. Its inhabitants are still in the stone age of progress. The natives are strict prohibitionists. Bachelor clubs closed to the women dot the islands. Food and drink and clothes all grow on trees. In Yap wealth is truly a burden. A single coin of their stone money sometimes weighs hundreds of pounds. Yap, or Yap, when translated, means the land, and is the only land that many of the islanders know.

Married and unmarried men alike belong to the club, which maintains a fine fallu, or bachelor house, the hostess of which must be secured by force or cunning from some distant tribe. There she lives under a polyandrous system where no man becomes jealous and the wives of the village never object to their husbands' evenings at the club.

VALBANERA WAS SUNK

LINER SUPPOSED TO BE LOST IS FOUND BY SUBMARINE CHASER.

450 LIVES ARE LOST

SUNK IN FORTY FEET OF WATER OFF COAST FROM KEY WEST.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Key West, Fla., Sept. 20.—That the Spanish steamer Valbanera, carrying 300 passengers and a crew of 150, went down in the hurricane that swept Key West ten days ago, has been made certain by the statement of Ensign L. B. Roberts, commanding officer of the U. S. Sub Chaser 203, who stated he plainly saw the nameplate of that steamer on the vessel found sunk in forty feet of water near here. The statement of Ensign Roberts corroborated that of divers who made an investigation of the sunken vessel. The wreck was seen by the sub chaser near Rebecca Shoals lighthouse, about forty miles from Key West.

Key West, Fla.—Imbedded in quicksand under forty feet of water off Rebecca Shoals lighthouse, divers found the bulk of a vessel believed to be the Spanish passenger liner Valbanera, which has been missing since the eastern portion of the gulf of Mexico was swept by a hurricane ten days ago. The divers, employed by the Cuban consul here after the sunken wreck was discovered by a United States coast guard vessel, reported that the name, "Valbanera," could be made out clearly, but no trace was found of the 300 passengers and 150 members of the crew reported aboard the Spanish liner when she left Spain for Havana.

The steamer found off the Rebecca shoal lighthouse, which is forty miles from here, the divers said, appeared to be of about 6,000 tons. The missing Valbanera was of 3,200 tons net. Further investigation, however, is expected to clear beyond all doubt the identity of the wreck, and if it is proven to be the Spanish liner will throw some light on the fate of the 450 persons aboard her.

The Valbanera appeared off Morro Castle, Havana, Sept. 9, but was unable to put into port on account of the storm. Within the last few days faint wireless calls supposed to be from the Valbanera have been picked up here and at Havana.

The signals as received here, however, have been so weak as to prevent any attempt to locate their source. Two Cuban gunboats are engaged in searching along the northern shore of the island of Cuba and in the Bahamas for some trace of her. In marine circles here it was considered probable that some of the Valbanera's survivors have sent the calls using improvised apparatus taken from the vessel.

Want American Husbands.

New York.—Five thousand well-to-do British women determined to obtain American husbands soon will arrive in the United States, according to a warning issued to husbands today by Mrs. S. C. Seymour of Camden, N. J. Mrs. Seymour was employed by the military authorities to supervise the transportation of the war brides of American soldiers. She announced the matrimonial army of invasion had already applied for passports and would arrive as soon as the present restrictions are lifted.

Baker Gives Pershing Reception.

Washington.—More than 2,000 commissioned officers, ranging all the way from veterans whose service records date back to Indian uprisings to the newest lieutenants, shook hands with General Pershing at a reception in Secretary Baker's office. As each man passed he was introduced, saluted and received a hearty handshake.

Honor for Crowder.

Washington.—In recognition of his administration of the selective service act, the Senate military committee ordered a favorable report on the bill by Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, authorizing the elevation of Maj. Gen. Enoch H. Crowder, judge advocate general of the army, to the rank of lieutenant general on his retirement.

Both Dead in Duel.

Memphis, Tenn.—Deputy United States Marshal O. W. Webster and William Snidley, restaurant proprietor, are both dead following a pistol duel here in the business section of the city. Snidley was formerly a police detective.

Wheat May Spoil.

Lincoln, Neb.—Hundreds of thousands of bushels of wheat are on the ground in danger of rotting in western Nebraska because elevators are already filled and because there is a shortage of railroad cars together with an embargo on wheat shipments to Omaha and Kansas City, according to information reaching Governor Samuel R. McKelvie, who announced he would appeal to the railroad administration to take steps to relieve the situation.

BAD BREATH Often Caused by Acid-Stomach

How can anyone with a sour, queasy stomach, who is constantly belching, has heartburn and suffers from indigestion have anything but a bad breath? All of these stomach disorders mean just one thing—Acid-Stomach. EATONIC, the wonderful new stomach remedy in pleasant tasting tablet form that you eat like a bit of candy, brings quick relief from these stomach miseries. EATONIC sweetens the breath because it soothes the stomach, sweet, cool and comfortable. Try it for that nasty taste, congested throat and "head" feeling after too much smoking. If neglected, Acid-Stomach may cause you a lot of serious trouble. It leads to nervousness, headaches, insomnia, melancholia, rheumatism, sciatica, heart trouble, ulcer and cancer of the stomach. It makes the stomach sweet, cool and comfortable. Try it for that nasty taste, congested throat and "head" feeling after too much smoking. ## OLD AGE STARTS WITH YOUR KIDNEYS

Science says that old age begins with weakened kidneys and digestive organs. This being true, it is easy to believe that by keeping the kidneys and digestive organs cleansed and in proper working order old age can be deferred and life prolonged far beyond that enjoyed by the average person. For over 200 years GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil has been relieving the weakness and disability due to advanced years. It is a standard old-time home remedy and needs no introduction. GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil is enclosed in odorless, tasteless capsules containing about 5 drops each. Take them as you would a pill, with a swallow of water. The oil stimulates the kidney action and enables the organs to throw off the poisons which cause premature old age. New life and strength increase as you continue the treatment. When completely restored continue taking a capsule or two each day. GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules will keep you in health and vigor and prevent a return of the disease. Do not wait until old age or disease have settled down for good. At the first sign that your kidneys are not working properly, go to your druggist and get a box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. Money refunded if they do not help you. Three sizes. But remember to ask for the original imported GOLD MEDAL brand. In sealed packages.

School Notes

Both teachers and pupils are showing an admirable spirit of earnest endeavor in the beginning of the new school year. The enrollment is larger than generally expected and efforts are being made to relieve the congested conditions. The enrollment in the first primary is 41; the second primary, 61; the intermediate, 27; the grammar, 22.

A few exhibits for the County Fair are being prepared by pupils in the grammar department.

Supt. Josephine Saxon visited our schools Tuesday.

Third and Fourth Grades wrote some good stories about the aeroplane that passed over the school house last week.

The Third Grade have taken their first lessons in the use of pen and ink.

Third and Fourth Grades have taken up the study of music.

The A and B Second have begun book 1 in Arithmetic, and are doing excellent work.

Both classes are improving in free hand drawings.

The A First are working with number combinations and have started their first book in reading.

The Primary pupils delight in singing their primary melodies.

The B First Grade has done some good work in paper cutting.

The Primary pupils are working earnestly at their phonics and have begun reading in the Beacon Primer.

WILL BE WONDERFUL ROAD

Highway of Solid Granite in the Rocky Mountains a Rival of the Applan Way.

Taking example from the famous Applan way, which has the name of being the first great road undertaken by the Romans as a public work, the state of Colorado, with the help of an appropriation by the United States government, is building a highway of solid granite in the Rocky mountains. No other highway in the world, it is predicted, will provide travelers with so magnificent a scenic setting, close to a sheer fall of 3,000 feet on the other side of the great concrete posts and cables that will safeguard vehicular traffic. One gets an idea of the road from the practical statement that it is costing $25,000 a mile to build. Like the Applan way, on which long stretches of pavement first traveled over 300-odd years before the Christian era, still remain practically perfect, the chairman of the Colorado highway commission believes that Colorado is creating a work which will defy the centuries and stand, on completion, as the most wonderful road in the modern world.

Quite Comfortable, Thank You.

A comfortable widow is Mrs. Amanda Jackson, colored. She is drawing three $57.50 pensions, or $172.50 a month, for the loss of three husbands during the war, and will draw that amount for 20 years. Mrs. Jones' husband died of spinal meningitis soon after entering the service and taking out a $10,000 insurance policy. The widow married one Smith. He took a maximum life insurance policy in her favor and was killed in action. Then Mrs. Jones-Smith married Private Jackson, a returned soldier, who also named her in a $10,000 policy. Influenza made her a widow a third time in less than two years. The war risk bureau declines to make known her address, doubtless fearing that she would be inundated with offers of marriage.

Appearance Has Kept Pace With Mechanical Development of Automobiles.

"The appearance of the automobile has kept pace with its mechanical development," says the American Garage, local dealer in Chevrolet passenger cars and trucks.

"This fact is more clearly emphasized by contrasting the trim, light, well proportioned cars of today with the bulky, pretentious affairs that only a few years ago were usually to be seen laid up for repairs by the wayside.

"Those old cars were loaded down with wholly unnecessary weight and their towering tonneaus only emphasized their snub-nosed hoods where one or two cylinder engines labored and gasped under burdens way out of proportion to their power.

"It is no wonder that motors and parts continually gave out. Such is the penalty of weight; and even today a car that remotely resembles those heavy old relics immediately suggests trouble, inconvenience and expense to the motorists' mind.

"The beauty of up-to-date light cars suggests their triumph over all these handicaps. Their clean low lines, their perfect finish, the neat one man tops and tilted windshields, the absence of every unnecessary detail and the presence of every item of equipment that makes for greater comfort and convenience, are all signs of the great care that has been taken throughout in their mechanical construction.

"It is these things that have lifted the automobile from the plane of a sporting experiment to an indispensable part in modern transportation, and its ability to play that part is reflected in the general appearance of the Chevrolet car."
