Barnes listened at the door until he heard the waiter clattering down the stairs, and then went swiftly down the hall to No. 80. Mr. Prosser was sleeping just as soundly and as resoundingly as at midnight!

"By gad!" he muttered, half-aloud. "Everything was as clear as day to him now. Boiling into his own room, he closed the door and stood stockstill for many minutes, trying to picture the scene in the cottage.

He found a letter in his box when he went downstairs, after stuffing the tin box deep into his pocket. Before he slit the envelope he knew that Sprouse was the writer. The message was brief:

"After due consideration, I feel that it would be a mistake for you to abandon your present duties at this time. It might be misunderstood. Stick to the company until something better turns up. With this thought in view I withdraw the two days' limit mentioned recently to you, and extend the time to one week. Yours very truly,
"J. H. WILSON."

"Gad, the fellow thinks of everything," said Barnes to himself. "He is positively uncanny."

He read between the lines, and saw there a distinct warning. It had not occurred to him that his plan to leave for New York that day with Miss Cameron might be attended by disastrous results.

But the jewels? What of them? He could not go gallivanting about the country with a half million dollars' worth of precious stones in his possession.

He spent the early part of the forenoon in wandering nervously about the hotel—upstairs and down. The jewels were locked in his pack upstairs. He went up to his room half a dozen times and almost instantly walked down again, after satisfying himself that the pack had not been rifled.

For the next three days and nights rehearsals were in full swing, with scarcely a moment's let-up. And so the time crept by, up to the night of the performance. Miss Cameron remained in ignorance of the close proximity of the jewels, and the police of Crowndale remained in even denser ignorance as to the whereabouts of the man who robbed Mr. Hasselwein of all his spare cash and an excellent gold watch.

No time was lost by the countess in getting word to her compatriots in New York. Barnes posted a dozen letters for her; each contained the tidings of her safety and the assurance that she would soon follow in person.

Those three days and nights were full of joy and enchantment for Barnes. He actually debased himself by wishing that the Rushcroft company might find it imperative to go on rehearsing for weeks in that dim, enchanted temple.

He sat for hours in one of the most uncomfortable seats he had ever known, devouring with hungry eyes the shadowy, interested face so close to his own—and never tired.

On the afternoon of the dress rehearsal he led her, after an hour of almost insupportable repression, to the rear of the auditorium. Dropping into the seat beside her he blurted out, almost in anguish:

"I can't stand it any longer. I cannot be near you without—why, I—I—well, it is more than I can struggle against, that's all. You've either got to send me away altogether or—let me love you without restraint. I tell you I can't go on as I am now. You know I love you, don't you? You know I worship you. Don't be frightened. I just had to tell you today. I should have gone mad if I had tried to keep it up any longer." He waited breathlessly for her to speak. She sat silent and rigid, looking straight before her. "Is it hopeless?" he went on at last, huskily. "Must I ask your forgiveness for my presumption and—go away from you?"

She turned to him and laid her hand upon his arm.

"Am I not like other women? Why should I forgive you for loving me? Doesn't every woman want to be loved? No, no, my friend! Wait! A moment ago I was so weak and trembled that I thought I—oh, I was afraid for myself. Now I am quite calm and sensible. See how well I love myself in hand? I do not tremble, I am strong. We may now discuss ourselves calmly, sensibly. Oh! What are you doing?"

"I too am strong," he whispered. "I am sure of my ground now, and I am not afraid."

He had clasped the hand that rested on his sleeve and, as he pressed it to his heart, his other arm stole over her shoulders and drew her close to his triumphant body. For an instant she resisted, and then relaxed into complete submission. Her head sank upon his shoulder.

"Oh!" she sighed, and there was wonder, joy—even perplexity, in the tremulous sigh of capitulation. "Oh," came softly from her parted lips again at the end of the first long, passionate kiss.

CHAPTER XXI.

The End in Sight.

Barnes, soaring beyond all previous heights of exaltation, ranged dizzily between "front" and "back" at the Grand opera house that evening. He was in the "wings" with her, whispering in her delighted ear; in the dressing-room, listening to her soft words of encouragement to the excited leading lady; on the narrow stairs leading up to the stage, assisting her to mount them; and all the time he was dreading the moment when he would awake and find it all a dream.

There was an annoying fly in his ointment, however. "I love you," she had said simply. "I want more than anything else in all the world to be your wife. But I cannot promise now. I must have time to think, time to—"

"Why should you require more time than I?" he persisted. "What is time to us? Why make wanton waste of it?"

"I know that I cannot find happiness except with you," she replied. "No matter what happens to me, I shall always love you, I shall never forget the joy of this. But—I cannot promise now," she finished gently and kissed him.

Between the second and third acts Tommy Gray rushed back with the box-office statement. The gross was $850. The instant that fact became known to Mr. Rushcroft he informed Barnes that they had a "knockout," a gold mine, and that never in all his career had he known a season to start off so auspiciously as this one.

Three days later Barnes and "Miss Jones" said farewell to the strollers and boarded a day train for New York city. They left the company in a condition of prosperity. The show was averaging two hundred dollars nightly and Mr. Rushcroft was already booking return engagements for the early fall. He was looking forward to a tour of Europe at the close of the war.

Barnes' sister, Mrs. Courtney, met them at the Grand Central terminal. "It's now a quarter to five," said Barnes after the greeting and presentation. "Drop me at the Fifth Avenue bank, Edith. I want to leave something in my safety box downstairs. Shan't be more than five minutes."

He got down from the automobile at Forty-fourth street and shot across the sidewalk into the bank, casting quick, apprehensive glances through the five o'clock crowd on the avenue as he sprinted. In his hand he lugged the heavy, weather-beaten pack. His sister and the countess stared after him in amazement.

Presently he emerged from the bank, still carrying the bag. He was beaming. A certain worried, haggard expression had vanished from his face, and for the first time in eight hours he treated his traveling wardrobe with scorn and indifference.

"Thank God, they're off my mind at last," he cried. "That is the first good, long breath I've had in a week. No, not now. It's a long story and I can't tell it in Fifth Avenue. It would be extremely annoying to have both of you die of heart failure with all these people looking on."

He felt her hand on his arm, and knew that she was looking at him with wide, incredulous eyes, but he faced straight ahead. He was terribly afraid that the girl beside him was preparing to shed tears of joy and relief. He could feel her searching in her jacket pocket for a handkerchief.

Mrs. Courtney was not only curious but apprehensive. She hadn't the faintest idea who Miss Cameron was, nor where her brother had picked her up. But she saw at a glance that she was lovely, and her soul was filled with strange misgivings. She was like all sisters who have pet bachelor brothers. She hoped that poor Tom hadn't gone and made a fool of himself.

The few minutes' conversation she had with the stranger only served to increase her alarm. Miss Cameron's voice and smile—and her eyes!—were positively alluring.

She had had a night letter from Tom that morning in which he said that he was bringing a young lady friend down from the north—and would she meet them at the station and put her up for a couple of days? That was all she knew of the dazzling stranger up to the moment she saw her. Immediately after that she knew by intuition a great deal more about her than Tom could have told in volumes of correspondence. She knew, also, that Tom was lost forever!

"Now tell me," said the countess the instant they entered the Courtney apartment. She gripped both of his arms with her firm little hands and looked straight into his eyes, eagerly, hopefully. She had forgotten Mrs. Courtney's presence, she had not taken the time to remove her hat or jacket.

"Let's all sit down," said he. "My knees are unaccountably weak. Come along, Ede. Listen to the romance of my life."

And when the story was finished the countess took his hand in hers and held it to her cool cheek. The tears were still drowning her eyes.

"Oh, you poor dear! Was that why you grew so haggard and pale and hollow-eyed?"

"Partly," said he with great significance.

"And you had them in your pack all the time? You—"

"I had Sprouse's most solemn word not to touch them for a week. He is the only man I feared. He is the only one who could have—"

"May I use your telephone, Mrs. Courtney?" cried she suddenly. She sprang to her feet, quivering with excitement. "Pray forgive me for being so ill-mannered, but I—must call up one or two people at once. They are my friends. You will understand, I am sure."

Barnes was pacing the floor nervously when his sister returned after conducting her new guest to the room prepared for her. The countess was at the telephone before the door closed behind her hostess.

"I wish you had been a little more explicit in your telegram, Tom," she said peevishly. "If I had known who she is I wouldn't have put her in that room. Now I shall have to move Aunt Kate back into it tomorrow and give Miss Cameron the big one at the end of the hall." Which goes to prove that Tom's sister was a bit of a snob in her way. "Stop walking like that and come here." She faced him accusingly. "Have you told all there is to tell, sir?"

"Can't you see for yourself, Ede, that I'm in love with her? Desperately, horribly, madly in love with her."

"Yes," She Breathed.

Don't giggle like that! I couldn't have told you while she was present, could I?"

"That isn't what I want to know. Is she in love with you? That's what I'm after."

"Yes," said he, but frowned anxiously.

"She is perfectly adorable," said she, and was at once aware of a guilty, nagging impression that she would not have said it to him half an hour earlier for anything in the world.

She was strangely white and subdued when she rejoined them later on. She had removed her hat. The other woman saw nothing but the wealth of sun-kissed hair that rippled. Barnes went forward to meet her, filled with a sudden apprehension.

"What is it? You are pale and—what have you heard?"

She stopped and looked searchingly into his eyes. A warm flush rose to her cheeks; her own eyes grew soft and tender and wistful.

"They all believe that the war will last two or three years longer," she said huskily. "I cannot go back to my own country till it is all over. They implore me to remain here with them until—until my fortunes are mended." She turned to Mrs. Courtney and went on without the slightest trace of indecision or embarrassment in her manner. "You see, Mrs. Courtney, I am very, very poor. They have taken everything. I—I fear I shall have to accept this kind, generous proffer of a—" her voice shook slightly—"of a home with my friends until the Huns are driven out."

Barnes' silence was more eloquent than words. Her eyes fell. Not until Mrs. Courtney expressed the hope that Miss Cameron would condescend to accept the hospitality of her home until plans for the future were definitely fixed was there a sign that the object of her concern had given a thought to what she was saying.

"You are so very kind," stammered the countess. "But I cannot think of imposing upon—"

"Leave it to me, Ede," said Barnes gently, and, laying his hand upon his sister's arm, he led her from the room. Then he came swiftly back to the outstretched arms of the exile.

"A very brief New York engagement," he whispered in her ear, he knew not how long afterward. Her head was pressed against his shoulder, her eyes were closed, her lips parted in the ecstasy of passion.

"Yes," she breathed, so faintly that he barely heard the strongest word ever put into the language of man.

Half an hour later he was speeding down the avenue in a taxi. His blood was singing, his heart was bursting with joy—his head was light, for the feel of her was still in his arms, the voice of her in his enraptured ears.

He was hurrying homeward to the "diggings" he was soon to desert forever. He was to spend the night at his sister's apartment. When he issued forth from his "diggings" at half-past seven he was attired in evening clothes, and there was not a woman in all New York, young or old, who would have denied him a second glance.

Later on in the evening three of the countess' friends arrived at the Courtney home to pay their respects to their fair compatriot and to discuss the crown jewels. They came and brought with them the consoling information that arrangements were practically completed for the delivery of the jewels into the custody of the French embassy at Washington, through whose intervention they were to be allowed to leave the United States without the formalities usually observed in cases of suspected smuggling. Upon the arrival in America of trusted messengers from Paris, headed by no less a personage than the ambassador himself, the imperial treasure was to pass into hands that would carry it safely to France. Prince Sebastian, still in Halifax, had been apprised by telegraph of the recovery of the jewels, and was expected to sail for England by the earliest steamer.

And while the visitors at the Courtney house were lifting their glasses to toast the prince they loved, and, in turn, the beautiful cousin who had braved so much and fared so luckily, and the tall wayfarer who had come into her life, a small man was stooping over a rifle snapper in a room far downtown, glumly regarding the result of an unusually hazardous undertaking, even for one who could perform such miracles as he. Scratching his chin, he grumbled—for he was the kind who bears disappointment with a grin—and sat himself down at the big library table in the center of the room. Carefully selecting a pen-point he wrote:

"It will be quite obvious to you that I called unexpectedly tonight. The week was up, you see. I take the liberty of leaving under the paperweight at my elbow a two-dollar bill. It ought to be ample payment for the damage done to your faithful traveling companion. Have the necessary stitches taken in the gash and you will find the kit as good as new. I was more or less certain not to find what I was after, but as I have done no irreparable injury I am sure you will forgive my love of adventure and excitement. It was really quite difficult to get from the fire escape to your window, but it was a delightful experience. Try crawling along that ten-inch ledge yourself some day and see if it isn't productive of a pleasant thrill. I shall not forget your promise to return good for evil some day. God knows I hope I may never be in a position to test your sincerity. We may meet again, and I hope under agreeable circumstances. Kindly pay my deepest respects to the Countess Ted, and believe me to be,

"Yours very respectfully,
"SPROUSE.

"P. S.—I saw O'Dowd today. He left a message for you and the countess. Tell them, said he, that I ask God's blessing for them forever. He is off tomorrow for Brazil. He was very much relieved when he heard that I did not get the jewels the first time I went after them, and immense-ly entertained by my jolly description of how I went after them the second. By the way, you will be interested to learn that he has cut loose from the crowd he was trailing with. Mostly nuts, he says. Dynamiting munition plants in Canada was a grand project, says he, and it would have come to something if the d—d women had only left the d—d men alone. The explosives are O'Dowd's."

Ten hours before Barnes found this illuminating message on his library table he stood at the window of a lofty Park avenue apartment building, his arm about the slender, yielding figure of the only other occupant of the room. Pointing out over the black rooftops, he directed her attention to the myriad lights in the upper floors of a great hostelry to the south and west and said:

"That is where you are going to live, darling."

Crees Wonderful Canoeists.

The KITCHEN CABINET

When I cannot get a dinner to suit my taste, I get a taste to suit my dinner.—Washington Irving.

RESERVING SMALL AMOUNTS OF MEAT.

A cupful or two of any kind of well-cooked meat may make a most tasty dish if carefully prepared.

Chicken Goulish.—Cut into dice two medium-sized uncooked potatoes. Put into a frying pan two tablespoonfuls of olive oil, and when hot add the potato dice. Stir, to keep from burning, and cook five minutes. Then add a dash of paprika, a cupful of boiling water, a crushed clove of garlic, a cupful of cold cooked chicken chopped fine, and salt to taste. Cover and cook until the potatoes are done, stirring frequently.

Spanish Chicken.—Make a sauce of one tablespoonful of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour and two cupfuls of water in which a little beef extract has been dissolved. Add one cupful of cooked chicken cut fine, one small onion cut in slices and parboiled, one potato cut in bits and two tablespoonfuls of cooked peas. Heat thoroughly and serve on toast.

Beef Fricadelles.—Take two cupfuls of cold cooked beef minced fine, season with salt and pepper, sage, thyme, lemon juice and grated onion. Add half a cupful of cold boiled rice, or dry bread crumbs and one egg well beaten. Add a little water if needed, to make a paste. Form into flat cakes and fry in hot fat.

French Beef Hash.—Prepare as usual, and fill a buttered baking dish or individual dishes two-thirds full. Cover the top with seasoned mashed potato made very light with the white of an egg beaten to a stiff froth. Bake in a hot oven until the potato is puffed and brown.

Deviled Chicken.—Make a sauce of salt, pepper, dry mustard, paprika, grated lemon peel, lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce and a few drops of tabasco. When very hot, add some cubes of cold cooked chicken and cook until heated through. Add a tablespoonful of butter and serve. Pork, veal or beef may be served in the same way.

Frankfurts sliced very thin and heated until hot may be used in place of other meat in an emergency. Serve with creamed or lyonnaise potatoes.

Is it rainy, little flower?
Be glad of rain;
Too much sun would wither thee,
'Twill shine again;
The clouds are very thick, 'tis true;
But just behind them smiles the blue.

SOME SIMPLE SALADS.

An ear of corn and a potato or two, with French dressing, makes a tasty small salad. If this does not make enough to serve, cut a small tomato for each salad into the form of a flower and sprinkle the salad over this; add a bit of boiled dressing and place the whole on a crisp lettuce leaf. Behold, a salad!

Egg and Cabbage Salad.—Cook six eggs hard; when cold, cut in two lengthwise and take out the yolks. Rub the yolks through a sieve, season with salt and pepper and grated onion and mix to a paste with mayonnaise. Mold into small balls and set aside. Shred the whites of the eggs with a sharp knife and add twice as much shredded cabbage. Mix with mayonnaise; arrange on a bed of lettuce and drop the egg balls on the salad.

Cabbage Salad.—Chop a firm head of cabbage very fine, with one good-sized onion. Brown a thick slice of salt pork, cut in small dice, until crisp and brown. Pour the smoking hot fat over the cabbage; stir and mix well, adding salt and cayenne; taste to be sure it is well seasoned, then pour a third of a cupful of boiling hot vinegar over all and garnish the top with the bits of brown cubes. Serve at once.

Shredded Cabbage With Cream.—Shred crisp, firm cabbage as fine as possible; let it stand in ice water to chill, then drain; add sweet cream, sugar and enough vinegar to give it a snappy flavor and serve as a salad. Sour cream, if not too highly flavored, may be used, omitting the vinegar.

Cabbage and Green Pepper Salad.—Shred finely a crisp, hard head of cabbage and mix with half as much or less of green pepper. Serve on lettuce with a highly seasoned boiled dressing and garnish with minced red pepper.

Cabbage and Potato Salad.—Cut a large, perfect head of cabbage into a bowl-shaped receptacle. Chop the cabbage, add equal parts of cold boiled potato, a good, well-seasoned dressing and a finely minced cucumber and onion. Fill the cabbage bowl, place in a nest of lettuce, chill and serve.

Mr. Reuter Was Almost Helpless From Kidney Trouble, But Doan's Made Him Well.

"I was in terrible shape from kidney trouble," says Dr. Reuter, North St., West Chicago, Ill. "I couldn't stoop because of the awful pains in my back and the steady, dull misery almost drove me frantic. My kidneys were so bad that I was unable to get up in the morning, the pains across my kidneys were so bad and nobody knows the agony I went through. I couldn't do anything and was almost helpless; it seemed I would never get well. At times everything in front of me grew dark and I wouldn't see for several minutes. I perspired profusely and I was thirsty all the time. The urine passed far too often and burned like scalding water. The passages were scanty and I had no control over them."

"For two years I suffered, trying medicine after medicine without relief. I was just about discouraged and didn't think I would ever be able to work again. Hearing about Doan's Kidney Pills I used them and four boxes cured me. My kidneys became normal, my back got well and strong and all the other troubles disappeared."

COULD NOT FINISH TOUR

PRESIDENT BREAKS DOWN IN KANSAS AND FORCED TO CANCEL TRIP.

NERVOUS EXHAUSTION

OVEREXERCITION AND LONG TRIP MAKES WILSON RETURN HOME.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Washington, Sept. 27.—Ill from over-exertion on his long tour for the peace treaty, President Wilson cancelled the speaking dates remaining on his schedule and returned to Washington. The President acted under orders from his physician, Dr. Cary T. Grayson, who said in a formal statement that Mr. Wilson was suffering from "nervous exhaustion" and that, while his condition was not alarming, a considerable period of rest would be "necessary for his recovery."

After a few days at the capital, at the end of a fast run half way across the continent, the President may go to some secluded rest resort for a complete vacation from the official cares which have occupied his attention continuously for many months.

A plan for Mr. Wilson to go to New York late next week to welcome King Albert of Belgium, virtually has been abandoned, but the President expects to receive the king later at the White House. All other engagements for the immediate future have been cancelled.

After a night of illness, during which Dr. Grayson and Mrs. Wilson were in almost constant attendance upon him, the President decided to abandon his trip while his train was at Wichita, Kan. He did not leave his private car there and during most of the day he was in bed. In the afternoon and evening he got some sleep and was able to take some nourishment.

In a formal statement, Dr. Cary T. Grayson, the President's personal physician, said Mr. Wilson's condition was "not alarming, but would require rest for a considerable time." Dr. Grayson's statement follows:

"President Wilson's condition is due to overwork. The trouble dates back to an attack of influenza last April in Paris, from which he has never entirely recovered. The President's activities on this trip have overtaxed his strength and he is suffering from nervous exhaustion. His condition is not alarming, but it will be necessary for his recovery that he have rest and quiet for a considerable time. (Signed) Grayson."

I can say we are firmly counting on the adoption of the treaty over there."

Beware of so-called sorghum mixtures offered you at about corn syrup prices. You can't buy the best at the cheapest price. We establish quality first and then price.

Better than ever and better than any.

The Reason for Farmer Jones Delicious Flavor

Its goodness begins in the cane field. The cane from which it is made is grown under our supervision from seed chosen under direction of our own agricultural experts. In fact, we are the largest sorghum growers in the world. "FARMER JONES" brand has a large percentage of Sorghum in the mixture—when you are offered a mixture claimed to be a sorghum mixture at a price about equal to the cheapest syrup, in most cases you are buying a cheap molasses mixture with but little sorghum in it, or with just enough to be able to print the word "Sorghum" on the label. When you buy "FARMER JONES" brand you pay a higher price, because it contains a good percentage of sorghum and no molasses. We include sugar syrup with an addition of corn syrup to prevent fermentation.

WAR HAD WROUGHT CHANGE

Doughboy Found It Hard to Realize the Difference Two Years of War Had Made.

A new story of the Red Cross bag comes from Harvey D. Gibson, former Red Cross commissioner for Europe and president of the Liberty National bank of New York. He got the story from one of the workers in a hospital hut in Dijon. Everybody who has even seen a wounded soldier knows the bag of gauzy cretonne with the little Red Cross in the corner, in which each boy keeps the bit of shrapnel the doctor dug out of his knee, the last letter from home, the picture of his girl, his toothbrush and all his most cherished possessions. One of the boys in the Dijon hospital had just been presented with his bag, a pink-and-white one. He accepted it gracefully, then he began to laugh. "Say," he declared, "if someone had told me two years ago that I'd be a-goin' to war with a wrist watch on one wrist and a bracelet"—he held out his identification disk—"on the other and a cretonne bag in my hand! Say, I'd have patted him one!"

Looking for a Telephone.

I was looking for a public telephone and thought I would find one in a large office building. I walked through and at last saw a public telephone sign, and as I was in a hurry I rushed through the doors and found myself in the middle of a saloon. The bartender looked up and said: "What'll you have, miss?" I was so surprised that I could not speak for a few minutes, but finally said I was looking for a public telephone. As I was backing out the elevator starter saw me and, as he knew me, asked if I was in for an eye-opener. I then decided my telephoning could wait and rushed out of the building.—Exchange.

Cuticura for Pimply Faces.

To remove pimples and blackheads smear them with Cuticura Ointment. Wash off in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Once clear keep your skin clear by using them for daily toilet purposes. Don't fail to include Cuticura Talcum.—Adv.

In Vain.

He had fairly puzzled the good village folk, had that clever ventriloquist, and now he was going to perform his last and greatest feat.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he announced, with a grand bow, "I will proceed to sing that famous ballad, 'Good-by,' in a lady's voice, which will appear to proceed from the empty air above your heads."

The minutes passed. Looks of strain and agony, doubt and anger chased one another across the performer's face; but there was no song.

Then a voice suddenly broke the silence.

"Tain't no good, guv-nor," it said. "I've bin an' lost the gramophone needle."—Answers.

Always Hopeful.

"Your real fisherman is a true optimist."

"Well?"

MOST FRAGRANT OF FLOWERS

Baltimore Admirer Declares the Breath of the Lilac Stands Unmatched for Sweetness.

When the lilacs breathe, odors of Araby become fetid and astringent in comparison. When the lilacs breathe, their odorous breath carries the fragrance of the distillation of a generation of life and love that they have gathered to themselves, where they have bloomed by the garden wall or against the porch pillar.

The panicles of bloom are in full flower and the blooms will be hailed with joy by the multitudes who have in their feelings the sentiments to which lilacs appeal.

The lilacs are the softest and most persuasive of all tints, those of lavender and purple, with some of driven whiteness. How wonderful their beauty, the assembling of the blossoms and their disposition upon the branch!

INTRODUCES DRUG IN LUNGS

French Physician's Method of Administering Chloroform Said to Be Pronounced Success.

A new method of administering chloroform, brought out in France by Dr. Guisez, is described in the Scientific American. The doctor no longer applies the drug by the usual compress or mask placed over the mouth, but introduces the chloroform vapor directly into the lungs through a tube running into the windpipe.

The effects of the new method will serve to explain the reasons why chloroform operations always produced nausea when operating by the former method, for it appears evident that the nausea was caused by a part of the chloroform vapors being absorbed by the oesophagus and the stomach.

Average Intelligence.

There have been a number of reports about the results of the psychologic tests in the army which are not particularly encouraging. Of course it is all very well to find that more than half of those taken in the draft were of an average or of a higher intelligence and that four out of every 100 were of a "very superior" intelligence and eight to ten out of every 100 of "superior" intelligence.

GOAT MEAT GOOD AS MUTTON

It is Said Only Experts Are Able to Tell the Difference Between the Two.

There is a growing disposition to give the goat his due. Hitherto this rubbish-eating animal has been regarded pretty much as a joke, but he has continued to eat his cans and thrive until now his race has required considerable propitiation and a market has been established in a middle-western city where surplus goats will be converted into "spring lamb" for the benefit of our non-vegetarians.

Goat meat tastes much the same as mutton, it is claimed, and that the difference cannot be told save by an expert. Perhaps that is just as well. Our imagination has much to do with our taste. Many people are eating horse meat in this country under the impression that it is beef, for horses are slaughtered, but almost nowhere is their meat exposed for sale under its true name.

But, as we are assured by the experts that it is wholesome, a name will not make much difference in the end. Mutton, the world over, has been the poor man's meat. If goat meat can add to the supply, so much the better. The meat of goats was a favorite in the days of the patriarchs. It is still highly prized in the East. There seems to be no reason why it should not ultimately hold a respectable place on our menus.

SHE UTTERED NO CRITICISM

But Many Will See Deep Significance in That Kiss Bestowed by Minister's Wife.

Now, everyone knows that the minister's wife must not say harsh things about anyone, no matter how she thinks. Also that though she be forced to listen to criticism she herself must not give any. The other evening an Indianapolis parsonage woman was sitting on her front porch, when one of the young girls of her husband's congregation came to call. Hardly had she settled herself comfortably before the young miss began to condemn vigorously a very paragonous member of the church.

"He wouldn't give a cent to supporting the parsonage," stormed the visitor, "yet he had plenty of money to buy himself a new seven-passenger touring car. I just hope that every time he starts out in it he'll have a puncture." The minister's wife had only that morning spent three hard hours mending the old carpet. She didn't say a word of reproach—merely looked at the young girl a minute and then went across the veranda and kissed her cheek.—Indianapolis News.

Ticklish Bit of Tunneling.

A very interesting bit of tunneling was recently done on the Fourteenth street tube under the East River, New York. The heading was being run in rock and at one point test holes showed a thickness of only eight inches of solid dry rock above the line along which the top of the tunnel was to run. As the tunnel was being driven without the use of compressed air it was decided to drop the upper heading four feet until this thin cover of rock was passed. The cast iron lining was set in place at each side of this section and then the rock was removed very carefully by using a great many holes each loaded with about one-eighth of a stick of dynamite. As each bit of rock was removed the arch of the tunnel lining was set in place. By this means the dangerous section was tunneled without breaking through the thin shell.—Scientific American.

His Desire.

Last autumn Roland was much in love with his new teacher, and tried to prove his affection by doing many errands for her. One of them was the hauling of the fertilizer from his father's barn to her flower garden. This spring Roland became interested in a victory garden and started one. One day he journeyed to the home of his last term teacher, told her of his garden and then ended the conversation with: "Do you remember that fertilizer I gave you last fall? Well, I'd like to have it back now for my own garden."

Ingenious Automobile Thief.

An automobile owner at Hallowell, leaving his car, hitched it to a tree by winding a chain around one of the wheels of the machine and fastening the end of the chain around a tree. An automobile thief jacked up the car, loosened the wheel which was chained to the tree, took it off, and then removing the extra wheel from the rear of the car put it on in the place of the wheel which had been dropped off and drove away, leaving the single wheel chained to the tree.

Big Game Hunters Protest.

A proposal that Canada increase its meat supply by using airplanes to drive the great herds of caribou from the barrens of the northern provinces into forays on the shore of Hudson bay for slaughter has called forth loud protests from the big game hunters of Africa. They foresee an extension of the practice to the wholesale slaughter of elephants, lions, zebras, giraffes, and various kinds of deer which abound in the no-longer dark continent.—Oregonian.

"S. O. S." CALL FOR DENTIST

Residents of Alaskan Island Need Services of Man Skilled with Drills and Forceps.

Is any dentist hunting for a location? Here's one. It is on Afognak, an island lying east of the entrance of Cook's inlet, on the Alaskan coast.

While the icebergs float around occasionally and bump one another in the sea like giant monsters in a game of water polo, yet it is comparatively warm up there now, as the summer is coming on with its flowers and mosquitoes. But whether an Arctic winter or a brief summer is on, people will have the toothache up there near the Arctic circle the same as do the sweltering residents these days along the thirty-sixth parallel of latitude.

Miss Virginia Clark, an accomplished young woman who was born and reared on the island of Afognak, and is now teaching the youth of her native land and village, sends out this cry for a dentist. The information is given in a bulletin of the Alaska Bureau of Publicity:

"A dentist located here would have a snap." Is the only information given out by Miss Clark. She gives no clue as to the financial standing of the patients, but the lucky dentist could no doubt flight off the H. C. L. nightmare by doing a piece of dental work for an Eskimo and taking his pay in walrus meat. Miss Clark does say that potatoes and garden truck thrive there, the fishing is good, and there are plenty of clams and wild ducks. Copper also is found in paying quantities, and placer gold mining is being successfully carried on along the beaches.

"THE KID'S A CUTTIN' ANOTHER TOOTH"

Who can measure the bounds of maternal pride at the cutting of the first and second "toofies" of her first born? Would you permit the editor of this paper to say that the pride he takes in the growth of the town he is identified with is second only to that of that fond mother?

Every stone removed from the street; every nail driven into a plank; every brick laid in a wall; every new light placed; every telephone installed; every new pupil entered in the school; every baby born, even, is with him a matter of personal pride.

A little thing happened last week in Patagonia. It has happened many times before. There was nothing out of the ordinary about it. Yet, to this paper it was not a small thing. It was a mile post in history. It was and is a punctuation in a succession of events which have been coming and which are coming.

Well, what strange thing was it, which happened, pray tell? Why, Evans Mercantile Company put down a cement sidewalk in front of their place of business. That's all.

The first symptom we noticed, on arrival, of a coming city air to Patagonia, was electric lights. That little event marked an epoch in our history. It made the passing of the old and the coming of the new plainly noticeable. There will be more lights, and yet more lights, until every residence in Patagonia will have them. You may think now that you will not. Just as well get ready for a change of heart, for its coming. It's the law of psychology. You are no exception to the human mold.

Now, Evans Company have a sidewalk, and there'll be more sidewalks, and more sidewalks, until the man who has none will feel so lonely,—well, he'll just get up and come across, that's what he'll do.

These two small events may be mere markers. But that which they mark is the very thing which enables them to serve as markers. Were there nothing to mark, there could be no markers. We are on the way, fellers,—we're on the way. Don't mean to boost,—but the editor of this little sheet has handled whole townsites, and knows a few common things. This town is going to grow. The evidence is here. The markers are in evidence. But the growth of a town without guidance is like an ingrowing nail. The growth cannot be stopped,—even by effort,—but it may become painful to our finer feelings. Just a little care in the form of guidance will not only direct the growth in the right direction, but will greatly accelerate that growth. And now, with all these empty words we have arrived at the point. Evans' sidewalk is marker No. 2,—unmistakable evidence that something is passing. It's the second tooth the kid's a-cuttin', and the kid is in the growing period. Now, as to guidance; while it may have been undertaken before, the Patagonian is going to undertake the organization of a commercial club. A town, not incorporated, can no more be expected to grow aright without some sort of a business men's club than an automobile can be expected to keep the road with no hand on the steering wheel. There is too much at stake at Patagonia not to have guiding hands behind your town. There are good business heads here a plenty. All they need to do is to give a little thought to the interests of the town,—the same kind of thought they give to their own business. The Patagonian has some definite steps in mind for a business organization to take, which may or may not be wise, but, so far, consultation with certain interests has indicated that they are not unwise.

So, forget yourself; think of yourself as "somebody come;" and one fine evening soon we will all be company to each other, have a jolly good meeting, organize a business men's club, harness our latent town pride, press the button and turn off the juice, for, don't forget that the kid's already a cuttin' another tooth.

Peace Conference Devises Plan for Settling the Problem of the Adriatic.

D'ANNUNZIO'S FIUME RAID

Baltic States and Russian Bolsheviks Talking Peace—President Wilson Explains Application of League Covenant to Shantung and Irish Questions.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

While D'Annunzio held possession of Fiume after his spectacular raid on that disputed city, the peace conference in Paris got busy and announced its solution of the entire Adriatic problem. It is a compromise plan designed to satisfy both Italy and Jugoslavia, and it was cabled to America to be submitted to President Wilson.

This compromise settlement provides that Fiume shall be a free state and that its harbor shall be a free port; that the Jugo-Slavs shall have all of the Dalmatian mainland except the city of Zara, which shall be a free port and most of the Dalmatian islands; that Avlona and the surrounding territory shall be under Italian sovereignty, and that Italy shall receive a mandate for all of Albania except the Epirus, in the extreme south, which shall go to Greece. Both Italy and Jugo-Slavia make concessions under this plan, and it is believed that it will enable Fiume ultimately to become a part of Italy—a consummation which the American peace delegation was able to prevent during the treaty negotiations.

D'Annunzio's seizure of Fiume was decidedly embarrassing to the Italian government. To use force against him was plainly out of the question, for the sympathies of the nation were with him, despite the fact that he and his troops were technically mutineers. However, the government did take steps looking toward a blockade of Fiume by land and sea in the expectation that the poet-soldier's army would be soon starved into submission, and in this measure the Jugo-Slavs co-operated by cutting off all supplies by land. D'Annunzio had about 10,000 regulars and four battalions of volunteers under his command, and occupied a fortified line around the city. It was reported that he was prepared to raze Fiume if he could not hold out, and that in this he was supported by the citizens.

Naturally, the Germans were watching this affair with great interest, and the news that the allies had decided it was to be handled by Italy alone was looked on by them as significant, for some of them were contemplating the possibility of a similar raid on Danzig. They figured that if the expressed will of the allied peace conference could be defied in one place, it might be defied in another.

In Hungary the allies are gradually bringing the situation around to their own way, for the Roumanians, it is announced, are withdrawing their troops and have promised to restore the materials that had confiscated. Prime Minister Friedrich of Hungary, it is expected, will quit, and a coalition cabinet will be recognized by the allies.

The representatives of the Baltic states are holding, or about to hold, conferences with the Russian bolsheviks, with the prospect that peace between them will be arranged. Whether this is with the tacit consent of the allied nations is not clear. At any rate, the White Russians are desperately fighting against such an outcome, for it would mean their destruction by the Reds. The German troops in the Baltic states, commanded by General von der Goltz, are increasing in numbers and are very active. The Berlin government, in response to the demand of the peace conference that they be withdrawn, said they were not under German control, but this plea the conference refused to allow. The Russian soviet government asserts that, despite its recent victories on the Baltic front, it desires peace and friendly relations with the new states formed in that region. Of course it would then be able to turn most of its attention to the East, where Admiral Kolchak is reported to have had several notable successes recently.

Japan, according to report, has been asked by the United States to pledge formally the return of Shantung to China, and to set a date for the restoration. At the time of writing no reply had been received from Tokyo, and the Japanese foreign office denied that any such note had been received from Washington. In statements issued in California, in reply to lists of questions asked him, President Wilson asserted that the League of Nations would have a powerful effect in forwarding the final restoration of Shantung to China, and that no other instrumentality or action could be substituted which could bring about that result. In one of his San Francisco addresses he said the great powers had Japan's promise to return Shantung to China, and intended to see that it was fulfilled under the league. His colleagues at Versailles, he said, told him they meant under the league to inaugurate a new policy toward China.

Another subject taken up by the president in his answers to questions and in his speeches was the Irish question. This, he asserted, could properly be brought up in the council of the league under article XI, "which makes it the right of every member of the league to draw attention to anything anywhere that is likely to disturb the peace of the world or the good understanding between nations, upon which the peace of the world depends." The covenant would not bind the United States to assist in putting down rebellion in any foreign country, he said, nor would it limit the power of this country to recognize the independence of any people who seek to secure freedom. He explained that Ireland was not given a hearing at the peace conference because the conference had no jurisdiction over questions of that sort that affected territories that did not belong to the defeated empires.

The Irish-American opponents of the league were far from satisfied with this reply, and especially did they dislike what they termed the president's ambiguity. They asked him to answer point-blank the question: "Are you in favor of self-determination for Ireland?" and requested a reply by September 25, when the Irish executive committee meets in New York. It does not seem possible that they expect a "yes-or-no" answer to such a question.

Some one must have whispered a warning to Mr. Wilson concerning the resentment caused by his general attacks on all senators who do not favor ratification of the treaty as it stands, for last week his speeches were much more conciliatory, and he even had good words to say concerning the "mild reservationists." But his expressed opinion of the Borah-Johnson group had not changed. Throughout the country there is evident a determination to learn definitely what the treaty and covenant mean, and the crowds that flock to hear the president and the opposition senators are not actuated solely by curiosity to see and hear notables. Each in his own way, and from his own standpoint, the speakers are trying to enlighten the people, and it is especially gratifying to note that Mr. Wilson is more explicit in his explanations of the articles over which the main contests have arisen.

The national committee for organizing iron and steel workers announced that the great steel strike would begin Monday, September 22, according to schedule, since every effort to hold a conference with Chairman Gary of the United States Steel corporation had failed. Mr. Gary issued a statement explaining his refusal on two grounds: First, that he did not believe the committee was authorized to speak for large numbers of the employees; second, that a conference with the committee would have been treated by it as a recognition of the closed shop method of employment, which method the corporation is determined not to countenance, since it destroys the worker's personal independence and ambition to succeed and prosper. The organizing committee replied that these two reasons are false, and that the employees of the corporation are now compelled to resort to a strike in order to prove to Judge Gary the authority of their selected representatives to present their grievances. In the Chicago district, at least, strike-breakers will not be employed, according to the company officials. The strikers will be paid off and discharged permanently, and if the walkout is general, the mills will shut down.

Disorders in Boston, due to the strike of policemen, were largely suppressed by the military, but the situation otherwise was little improved. The firemen, however, decided not to quit, and the threatened general strike was at least postponed. The attitude of the American Federation of Labor toward the Boston case is peculiar. President Gompers, while defending the strike, admitted the police were given a charter on the express understanding that they would not strike. Then Mr. Gompers's secretary visited Boston to study the situation, and on leaving announced that the federation stood solidly behind the striking policemen. He intimated that he did not favor a general strike at this time.

Chiefly because the police force of Washington also was unionized in the face of orders to the contrary, President Wilson took a hand in the matter of police unions. He sent a telegram to Commissioner Brownlow of the District of Columbia in which he said: "I think that any association of the police force of the capital city, or of any great city, whose object is to bring pressure upon the public or the community, such as will endanger the public peace or embarrass the maintenance of order, should in no case be countenanced or permitted."

Announcement that the carpenters' strike and consequent building industry tie-up in the Chicago district had ended was not only premature, but seemingly false. The carpenters were ostensibly given a chance to vote on the question, but instead of a secret ballot, the voting was open, and the contractors assert that the labor bosses were able to intimidate the men and obtain a majority for rejection of the compromise offered.

Two big meetings of general interest were held in Chicago last week. The first was the annual convention of the Zionists of America, at which plans were laid for the industrial invasion of Palestine by the Jews. The first of the invaders will be members of the Jewish legion that fought in the Holy Land under General Allenby. Steps were taken to raise the immense sums needed to develop Palestine. The executive committee expects to get as much as $7,000,000 in America during the coming year.

The other meeting was of some 300 leaders of the Anti-Saloon League of America, who were completing their program for a campaign designed to make the whole world dry. They decided they must raise at least $5,000,000 for the work and that prohibition must be enforced in American cities as proof to the world that the sale of liquor can be stopped.

The gulf coast of Texas suffered severely from the tropical hurricane that swept up from the Caribbean sea. Scores of persons were drowned and immense property damage was done, especially in Corpus Christi and the region roundabout.

Prosecution of the packers by the government proceeded apace with the presentation of evidence to the grand jury in Chicago. Notwithstanding the outcry of Chicago organizations in defense of the "big five," this evidence and what is yet to come is declared by Attorney General Palmer to be ample to sustain the indictment of the combination of packers, and he added that when the collected data "is laid before a jury the wrath of the American people will compel a verdict of conviction. The story will amaze America."

Patriotic Americans were gratified by the sentence imposed by Judge Dean at Jackson, Minn., on President E. C. Townsend of the Nonpartisan League and Joseph Guilbert, former manager, who had been convicted of conspiring to teach sedition. They were given 90 days in jail—the limit under the statute.

Up-to-Date Smuggling by Airplane and Submarine

WASHINGTON.—Smuggling and run-running on a large scale by airplane and submarine is looked for in the very near future by Daniel C. Roper, commissioner of internal revenue, and by other government officials unless preparations are made in advance to defeat the twentieth century smugglers.

The attention of the treasury department was particularly directed to this new danger of employing modern methods in smuggling by the accidental capture of an airplane that came across the Canadian border into northern New York with several cases of contraband liquor. It was entirely owing to an accident, however, that this capture was made, and the officials of the government have no doubt that large quantities of contraband liquor have reached this country already over the same air route.

There is reason to believe that some venturesome pioneers of this new mode of smuggling through the air have already landed several thousands of dollars' worth of semiprecious stones from the topaz mines in Mexico, somewhere in the interior of the United States.

At any rate, the menace to the national revenues has become so immediate that Secretary Glass has decided that he will ask congress for transfer of 600 airplanes and hydro-airplanes from the army and navy to his department and funds enough to create an effective air patrol.

Later on he will ask also for the transfer from the navy of a large fleet of boats specially designed for chasing submarines, in order to protect the seacoasts and estuaries from the danger of smuggling by submarines.

Extra! All About the Wonderful Island of Yap

WHAT about the island of Yap, in the far-away Pacific, which may become a possession of the United States as reparation for the sinking of the Lusitania, and is wanted by the American navy for a cable and wireless station? "Yap," the National Geographic society says, "the westernmost of the western Caroline islands, is situated about 500 miles southwest of Guam and 800 miles east of the island of Mindanao of the Philippine group. It has a population of about 7,000, and was the administrative center for the western Carolines, the Pelew and the Ladrone islands. The Germans had made plans to locate a wireless station there, but were prevented when Australian troops captured the island in October, 1914. Yap is strangely old and strangely up to date. Its inhabitants are still in the stone age of progress. The natives are strict prohibitionists. Bachelor clubs closed to the women dot the islands. Food and drink and clothes all grow on trees.

The chief decoration of the male is a string of pink shells made into a necklace, and since no man is rich enough to own such a treasure the best ones are loaned out for such a period as the wearer may choose to be dressed in the height of fashion. As there are no button holes, the man may wear two bouquets in each ear, a sort of corsage bunch in a large hole in the lower lobe and a small boutonniere in a smaller hole in the ear higher up. Shell cuffs made of conches add the finishing touch to the correct attire."

Other details given are that "large money" of the island consists of millstone disks of limestone from Babelthap, 400 miles to the south, and one of these disks is four feet in diameter. Such a piece of currency may be worth 10,000 coconuts.

Slept on Outpost Duty and Pardoned; Made Good

ONE of the two American soldiers sentenced to death for sleeping on outpost duty in France and subsequently pardoned by President Wilson, was killed in the great Aisne offensive in July, 1918, and the other was twice wounded and finally honorably discharged. This was disclosed by an exchange of correspondence between Secretary Baker and President Wilson.

Private Forest D. Sebastian of El Dorado, Ill., twenty years old, was killed in the Aisne battle. Private Jeff Cook of Lutia, Okla., aged nineteen, was wounded in the same battle, but recovered to again fight gallantly in the Argonne offensive, where he received his second wound.

In writing the president of the gallant conduct of the boys after the president had pardoned them, Secretary Baker said:

"You will recall that early in 1918 four death sentences were presented to you from France; two for disobedience of orders you remitted to terms of imprisonment, and two young boys, Sebastian and Cook, who were convicted of sleeping on outpost duty, you fully pardoned.

"It will interest you to know that upon restoration to duty both made good soldiers. Sebastian died in battle in the Aisne offensive in July, 1918. Cook was wounded in that battle and restored to health in time to fight in the Meuse-Argonne battle, when he again fought gallantly and was for the second time wounded. He has been now restored to health through medical attention and has been honorably discharged from the service."

"Kismet"—it is fated—says the Turk. And the great war seems to give weight to the saying.

"The farmer, by this means of rapid transit, can get perishable goods to market in time to prevent loss from spoilage and to realize their fullest value. This encourages the profitable production of otherwise impractical merchandise."
"His truck also enables the producer to take prompt advantage of special market prices. Instead of delay in realizing on the labor and investment his product represents—instead of being dependent on outside means to get his goods on sale, he can make a quick turnover at his own discretion. He can convert his goods into cash just as much sooner—cash that can start at once to earn interest and be ready for capitalizing further production."
"In every case where commercial cars bring the producer and his market closer together, they get his product off his hands at his own convenience, thereby saving time, energy and brains that can be devoted to the more profitable matters of production."
"Records prove that a single truck will do the work of several additional men about the farm, and by displacing teams it makes available for more valuable crops those acres formerly devoted to raising feed."
