NOGALES, Ariz., Oct. 12th (Special) The president of one republic, a governor of that republic, a senator and major general from another republic and the mayors of two international cities were represented in the receiving line at the military and civil reception given in honor of President-elect Alvaro Obregon yesterday at Camp Stephen D. Little following a review of the military command at the post by Mr. Obregon and Major Joseph L. Dickman, commanding officer of the Eighth Corps area of the U. S. army.

FREE BURBECUE PICNIC AS SONOITA FAIR FOR 1920

At a meeting of the board of directors of the County Fair association at the Sonoita fairgrounds, it was decided to limit the county fair the year to one day and hold it on the Sonoita fairgrounds, Saturday, October 23. The fair will be a combination picnic and agricultural display. A free barbecue, with bread and coffee furnished to everyone—in addition to the meat, will be one of the features of the day. There will be a number of races and in the evening a dance.

Obregon Comes Home He was met at the line by Gen. Francisco Manzo, chief of military operations in Sonora, with a military escort and bands. Civil authorities from various parts of the West Coast were on hand to welcome the returned president-elect of Mexico. An address of welcome was read by Dr. Priego, in behalf of the Nogales, Son., chamber-of-commerce.

After acknowledging his welcome, the newly elected president repaired to his home. Four bands were on hand to welcome him. A serenade was held in the plaza and a big dance given. At 10 o'clock yesterday morning Mr. Obregon was met at the line by a party including Bracey Curtis for the chamber-of-commerce, Senator Henry Ashurst and Major General J. T. Dickman. Entering cars the Mexican president and reception committee were driven to the 25th Infantry parade grounds where he reviewed the post troops. The 25th Infantry band and a long parade of motor cars accompanied Mr. Obregon on his triumphant tour from the line to the camp.

Reception at Post After the review a reception was held at the Officers' club. In the receiving line were President and Mrs. Obregon, Maj. Gen. Dickman, Senator Henry Ashurst, Gov. Flavio Gomez of Sonora, A. C. Villaseor, president municipal of Nogales, Son., Mayor and Mrs. J. A. Harrison of Nogales, Ariz., and Mrs. Henry Levin and Major Fairfax, acting commanding officer of Camp Stephen D. Little.

A luncheon impromptu was given by Mr. Curtis to the party afterward. Hundreds of citizens from both sides of the line attended the reception to pay their respects to Mexico's new president. Returning to Mexico, the general spent the afternoon with his family. In the evening, a grand fiesta in Nogales, Son., was staged with much music and vast crowds in holiday attire making merry over the great honor bestowed on their fellow townsman.

Band Concert Opens Day Sunday was opened in Nogales, Son., by a band concert in the plaza by a military band, provided by order of Gen. Francisco R. Manzo. Music was in full play throughout the day in the home city of the honor guest.

This morning the members of the Arizona Merchants association visited the home of Mr. Obregon and paid their respects to the national hero of Mexico. He replied in an address which was much commented upon by the merchants as a masterly pronouncement of the new policy in Mexico from the lips of the man in whose hands lie the brilliant destinies of his wonderful country. Moving pictures were made of the event.

At noon today, the Nogales, Son., chamber-of-commerce gave a luncheon in honor of General Manzo.

Carnival Today Late this afternoon a grand motor and confetti carnival was held in Nogales, Son., with a brilliant parade and four bands playing spirited music.

A grand reception was given by the civil authorities of Nogales, Son., this morning in honor of Mr. Obregon.

That city was never more brilliantly decorated nor lighted that Saturday and Sunday nights. Gala bunting, streamers and a profusion of flags were much in evidence, while strings of varicolored lights made the city gleam at night in a carnival scene of dazzlingly rare glitter.

Never have the citizens of the two Nogales staged a more comprehensive

ONE GOOD WAY James Foley celebrated Fire Preventative Day by placing new flues in his home. This was the very best way possible to celebrate this day, and it is hoped that many others will do likewise if they have not already done so. Fires, like automobile accidents, are usually the result of carelessness or indifference. Mr. Foley is the oldest citizen in Patagonia, having celebrated his 84th birthday several months ago, and we are confident the example he has set in this "safety first" measure will do to follow. Examine your flues today and make sure they are in first class condition.

FOUR TEACHERS The public school of Patagonia now has four teachers and the work of teaching "the young idea how to shoot" is progressing in a very satisfactory way. Many of the pupils have expressed themselves as being more than pleased with their teachers and soon to be manifesting a deep interest in their studies.

EXCESS PROFITS REFUND ON WOOL FOR PRODUCERS FROM DEALERS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 14—Distribution of excess profits made by dealers who handled the wool clip in 1918 under regulations of the War Industries Board is being made by the United States Department of Agriculture to some 100,000 wool growers, it is announced today. It is estimated by the Bureau of Markets, which has charge of making the refund from the dealers to the growers the total amount of such excess profits is more than $5,000,000, of which approximately $460,000 has been turned over to the bureau for distribution. Some dealers who accumulated excess profits failed or refused so far to refund the entire amount. The bureau is at work auditing the books to bring about final settlements.

EVERYBODY BOOST

Now that the great political campaign is drawing near to an end let us forget it as much as possible and go to work to boost Patagonia and make it the best town in this end of the state. Let's plant more trees and flowers this fall than ever before, and let's beautify the cemetery and school grounds. Let's do a lot of things this winter that will add to the appearance of the town.

MAY LOSE SIGHT

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Bender of Harshaw returned Monday from Phoenix where they had taken their son Frank to an eye specialist. It will be remembered that Frank Bender was blown up in a mine explosion some time ago which almost completely destroyed the sight of his eyes. He will remain in Phoenix for a short time under the care of Dr. Martin, an eye specialist, but the doctor gave the parents small hope of being able to restore sight to the eyes of their son.

LAUNDRY TO CLOSE

We very much regret to learn that the Patagonia laundry is to be closed down in a few days, but Mrs. Isenhead, the enterprising proprietress, says that the state of her health will not admit of her continuing the business through the winter months. She states, however, that she will continue in the cleaning and pressing business and keep her rooming house in operation.

FIRST FROST

Patagonia was visited by quite a heavy frost Wednesday night and ice formed in vessels out in the open. It was the first frost of the season in this immediate neighborhood, but Elgin, twenty-two miles east of here, had a frost Sunday night. It is not thought that the frost Wednesday night injured crops or grass. The corn and feed crops are most all well matured and the grass on the range is nicely cured. It may be that tender vegetables were slightly damaged.

SON OF PATAGONIAN EDITOR GETS MARRIED

The Toyah Valley Herald, published at Balcones Texas, gives the following account of a wedding recently celebrated in that town: "Sunday afternoon Mr. George C. Edgell and Miss Gaudie O'dell were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. O'dell, of this place. The ceremony was performed by Judge Meier. Only the immediate relatives were present. "Mrs. Edgell is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. O'dell, and she has grown to womanhood in this town and is a mighty fine young lady. 'Goldie,' as we all know her, has a host of friends among the young and old. "Mr. Edgell is just 'George' every day in the week, a boy whom we all like, and a fine fellow in every respect. He has a position with the Balcones Mercantile Co. We wish these young people the best of all good things in life, and we predict that the future holds in store for them much happiness and prosperity, for they are both of sterling quality."

MOEUR'S SUIT ASKS $30,000 DAMAGES OF GOV. CAMPBELL

PHOENIX, Oct. 14—Following the occasional disclosure of threats against the life of Gov. Campbell which the governor at Prescott charged were made by J. H. Moeur, the latter has filed a $30,000 damage action against the governor, charging libel.

J. H. Moeur is the son of W. A. Moeur, State Land commissioner. He also is a land attorney practicing with Attorney Fen Hildreth.

The suit was filed in the superior court of Maricopa county late yesterday, the complaint makes two allegations:

The first pertains to the famous Flagstaff speech by the governor in which he referred to the operation of the Land code under the Democrat Land office administration. He is quoted as follows: "You men know how the law is being voided. You men know that it is to cover certain lawyers and to get that certain lawyer, before you can secure leases from the State Land board."

You know the man of Flagstaff who paid the son of the Land commissioner $3,000 before he could secure the leases he wanted."

In this statement young Moeur is charged with unlawfully and corruptly receiving money for the purpose of a bribe and of conspiring with his father unlawfully to favor certain ones, all of which he figures damages his reputation to the extent of $15,000.

The second cause for complaint is based on a letter given to the press by Governor Campbell in which he stated that he had been correctly quoted in his Flagstaff address except as to the amount which should have been $1,000 and giving the name of C. E. Burton as the man who had given him this information.

The issuance of the letter, says Moeur, has damaged him to the extent of another $15,000.

Burton came out with a partial denial, admitting, however, according to the Northern Arizona Leader of October 12, the payment of an annual fee of $1,000 to Land Attorney Fen Hildreth and J. H. Moeur.

DON'T FORGET PICNIC

Do not forget the date of the Sonoita picnic—Saturday, October 23rd. Aside from the agricultural and other exhibits there will be a lively and entertaining program, music and lunch. The invitation to attend is extended to everyone desiring to do so. To insure plenty of dinner for all it will not be out of place to carry with you a light lunch. A good time is assured. A dance is announced for Saturday night for those who delight in "shaking the light fantastic toe."

NOGALES DAILY HERALD TO BOOST PATAGONIA

The Nogales Herald will give Patagonia a real boost in its Sixth Anniversary and Industrial Edition which will be issued in magazine form in November.

This edition will be scattered throughout the East and will also accompany the Inaugural Trade Excursion to Mexico City. A large staff of artists are now at work on the edition which will comprise about 100 pages.

Several pages will be devoted to Patagonia and the upper end of the county. The Herald is to be complimented on its continual boosting of Santa Cruz county, not slighting any community.

G. O. P. RALLY

A Republican rally is scheduled to be held at the Gardner opera house tonight, at which there will be many prominent speakers. Everybody is invited and a big crowd is expected to be present. The rally will be followed by a dance.

Tuesday was Columbus Day but it was not observed in Patagonia with any kind of speaking or fireworks and there was no excitement whatever. Perhaps there are too many holidays anyway.

RUSSIAN SUBS ON WAY TO DANZIG

BRITAIN THREATENS TO TAKE CERTAIN ACTION UNLESS PRISONERS ARE RELEASED.

IS HOSTILE MISSION

REDS WILL THROW ARMY AGAINST GENERAL WRANGLER IN SOUTHERN RUSSIA.

Washington, Oct. 9.—Two Bolshevik submarines, supposed to be on intercepting munitions shipments to Poland, have been reported off the Estonian coast, presumably bound for Danzig, according to an announcement by the State Department. The information came to the Navy Department and also to the State Department from its own agents along the Baltic.

"Instructions have been sent by the Navy Department," the announcement said, "to Vice Admiral Huse, commanding the American naval forces now in the Baltic, that the United States is not at war with Russia and that the submarines in question are not to be treated as hostile vessels."

Admiral Huse has his flagship, the cruiser Pittsburg, and several destroyers in Baltic waters. Apparently the warning not to treat the Russian submarines as hostile craft was intended as a precautionary measure in case they should appear in the vicinity of American naval vessels.

Since the signing of the armistice between the soviet forces and Poland, hostilities have supposedly ceased, but it was apparent that the reports received here left no doubt that the mission of the undersea craft was a hostile one.

The Russian soviet executive council has determined upon an early peace with Poland, in order to concentrate its army against General Wrangel in South Russia, in an effort to retain control of the rich coal and oil lands in that section, according to an official dispatch received by the American government.

London.—Great Britain has threatened to take "certain action" against soviet Russia if steps are not taken at once for the release of British prisoners held by the Bolsheviks, says the Herald, organ of labor, which prints what purports to be the text of notes exchanged by the British and soviet governments.

Leonid Krassin, head of the Russian Bolshevik trade mission here, has replied on behalf of the Bolshevik regime that it will promise to fulfill the conditions required by Great Britain when the latter carries out her part of the bargain made last July for the mutual release of all prisoners and cessation of hostile action.

Japs to Battle Bandits. Tokyo.—Japan's intention to forward additional troops to Manchuria towns near Korea is announced in official communiques, on account of bandit raids that are terrorizing the populations. 20 Killed in Train Wreck. The three rear cars of the express were smashed in the collision.

Oakland Can Build Docks. Washington.—On motion of the appellant the Supreme Court dismissed the suit brought against the city of Oakland, Cal., by the Samuel Merritt hospital to prevent condemnation of extensive waterfront properties for use in construction of a system of city docks. Anarchist Is Captured. Ashland, Wis.—The wrecking of a logging train with the destruction of $50,000 worth of property and loss of life was narrowly avoided on Bad River reservation, when Herman Nelson was captured as he was placing an obstruction on a 70-foot bridge. Nelson, who says he is a Western miner, working in copper mines recently near Salt Lake, obtained employment at Oshkosh three weeks ago. Since his arrival a number of incendiary forest fires have been discovered.

No Buyers for Wooden Ships. Washington.—Only four of the government's war-built fleet of 205 wooden ships were wanted by buyers when the shipping board opened bids on its advertised sale. As a result, Admiral Benson, chairman of the board, said that 200 of the vessels, now tied up in the James river, would stay there indefinitely. Bidders today offered $110,500 for four of the wooden ships, and the board took the proposals under advisement.

Relations With Japan Becoming Badly Strained Though There Is No Danger of War.

TOKYO LEARNS U. S. STAND

Disclosures of Crookedness in Organized Baseball Arouse Indignation and Grief—Poles and Baron Wrangel Still Driving the Reds—Moscow Eager for Peace.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Despite the undoubted fact that the governments of the United States and Japan are earnestly striving to arrive at an amicable settlement of their differences, the relations between the two nations are becoming more strained daily. This does not mean that hostilities will ensue—such an eventuality is almost out of the question—but the situation is giving undesirable opportunity to the alarmists and the jingoes of both countries and is really worrying the statesmen and those directly interested in international commerce.

The administration at Washington has sent to Tokyo a communication stating just how far it is willing to go to meet the desires of the Japanese, and this proposition was taken under consideration by the Japanese cabinet. At neither capital was any information given out as to the contents of the American note, but it was reported in Washington that one of the fundamental considerations insisted upon by the administration is that Japan shall give a new guarantee against immigration, in the form of an amendment either to the existing treaty or to the "gentlemen's agreement" under which since 1907 Japan has undertaken to prevent the emigration of laborers to America.

If Japan agreed to accept any such amendment, it probably would be to the gentlemen's agreement, for the Japanese people would scarcely stand for a formal treaty by which they, almost alone, would be set apart as undesirable immigrants into America. If Japan cannot bring about a definite settlement of the trouble at this time, she desires at least to reach an understanding that will quiet the talk of Japanese domination in California and induce the people of that state to reject, at the coming election, the proposed new alien land law which is the cause of most of Japan's protests. The adoption of that law was prevented last year by the administration, but whether this could be done again is problematical.

We have thought in America that the Japanese people were considerably wrought up over this question, but according to Marquis Okuma, former premier, they are not sufficiently aroused. It is now announced in Tokyo that Okuma is going to devote himself to awakening the Japanese people against "the unlawful attitude of California Americans," and that he will call a meeting of 100 leading statesmen and other prominent citizens to exchange views on the subject. The marquis says his fellow countrymen are becoming weak and cowardly, like the Chinese, are indifferent to grave questions affecting the nation's interests, and that a strong, unified national opinion must defend the interests of the Japanese in California. He predicts that unless something is done to check the Californians, there will arise a similar state of affairs in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and other British dominions.

That the Japanese already are retaliating in such ways as are open to them is indicated by correspondence between Secretary of Commerce Alexander and Chairman Benson of the shipping board. Mr. Benson called to the attention of Mr. Alexander instances of Japanese procedure at Kobe amounting to discrimination against American shipments to the Far East. In reply Secretary Alexander der wrote: "The nature of the discrimination is in almost every case so subtle, notwithstanding its effectiveness, that it is almost impossible to take formal action. The best solution of the matter seems to be direct transportation of American goods in American ships wherever possible."

The proposed California law, it is held by its proponents, would deny to the Japanese in this country no rights or privileges not denied to Americans in Japan by Japanese law. It may be as well to give here the following summary of the chief features of the proposed law. It says:

That aliens, ineligible to citizenship in the United States, companies, corporations and associations, the majority of whose stock is owned by such aliens, are authorized to own and convey land only as provided by treaty and not otherwise.

That such persons, companies, corporations and associations shall not be appointed guardians for estates consisting wholly or in part of realty, but that the public administrator or other "competent person" shall act for the minor heirs of such estates.

That ownership or leases, acquired in violation of the law, shall become and remain the property of the state of California.

That evasions of the law governing conveyance of property shall be punishable by fine, not exceeding $5,000 nor more than two years in jail or both.

Governor Stephens says of it: "The bill does not and will not, because the state legally cannot, prevent Japanese control of our soil nor can it stop further immigration. The full solution of this question cannot be had short of an exclusion act passed by congress."

Hot indignation and genuine grief have been aroused all over the land by the revelations of crookedness in organized baseball in the grand jury investigation in Chicago. That here and there might be found one or two players who would sell out would not be surprising, but that eight members on one club should be guilty of such shameful if not criminal conduct would be unbelievable were it not attested by the confessions of some of the accused. These men not only sold their honor and the respect and admiration of the American people, but they sold out for petty sums and to cheap gamblers, who "double-crossed" them, and now they have nothing left but bitter reflections and the remnants of their bribes.

The grand jury voted true bills against eight men, seven of whom are still members of the Chicago White Sox club, the eighth having been suspended last spring. They are accused of "conspiracy to do an unlawful act."

State's Attorney Hoyle was doubtful whether any crime as legally defined had been committed within the jurisdiction of the courts of Cook county, but the attorney for Charles Comiskey, the broken-hearted owner of the White Sox, says there are at least two counts on which each of the players named in the true bills may be prosecuted. He says the public paid admissions to see honest baseball played, and the conspiracy to throw the games thereby cheated the public. Also he asserts the men conspired to injure the property of Comiskey, consisting of contracts worth more than $200,000 and the drawing power of the team and other good will estimated at $300,000.

It is believed that if the state does not take definite action against the players the government will prosecute those who received bribes for their failure to schedule the same on their income tax reports. Official word to this effect has been received in Chicago from the internal revenue department in Washington.

The White Sox, which were only half a game behind the Cleveland team in the race for the American league pennant, were of course badly wrecked when the seven players were suspended, and the chances were small indeed that they could win the honor of playing for the world's championship against Brooklyn, which already has captured first place in the National league.

Cheers for the League of Nations council on the ground that it had stopped or averted hostilities involved in the Italian-Soviet dispute.

SAYS ENEMIES ARE TRAITORS

Lenine Makes Bitter Accusation Against the Italian Deputies Who Refused Aid.

Berlin.—Charges by Nikolai Lenine, Russian bolshevik premier, that the "Italian proletariat was betrayed by Deputies Dargona, Turati and Modigliani," which are printed in the Freiheit of this city, have produced a stir among Socialists here. The newspaper also prints an article written by Lenine which was published in the newspaper Pravda of Moscow, which says:

"Events in Italy must open the eyes of even the most obstinate. Turati, Modigliani and Dargona are guilty of sabotage against the revolution in Italy at the moment when it begins to ripen."

A ukase has been issued in Moscow, accusing the Italian Socialist leaders of treason. It bears the signature of members of the executive committee of the third international.

ing four nations may have been premature or over-enthusiastic. Lithuania and Poland, which were actually fighting, have not ceased yet, though they probably will before long. As for the dispute between Sweden and Finland over the Aland Islands, the former nation protests that there never was any danger of hostilities, as she always settles international disputes peacefully. Swedish officials said the quarrel with Finland would be amicably ended, though they added that Sweden never would give up the Aland Islands.

Both the Poles and General Wrangel continued their successful warfare on the Russian soviet forces. The former at last reports had captured the important cities of Lida and Pinsk, and were steadily advancing northward toward Vilna, whose fall was expected soon. Lida is the place where Trotsky was said recently to have established the headquarters of a new bolshevik army of 40,000 for a fall campaign against the Poles. The Ukrainians, who are operating on that front, have recovered Kamenez-Podolsk from the bolsheviks and are said to be planning a drive to form a junction with Wrangel's forces and to sever the soviet line of communication between Kiev and Odessa. Wrangel, who is now well to the north of Alexandrovsk, is being aided by Makno, the independent Ukrainian leader, and is taking large numbers of prisoners.

The soviet government has had more than enough war with Poland, and at the Riga conference is seemingly making every effort to arrange an armistice that shall lead to peace. According to a dispatch from Warsaw, Adolph Joffe, head of the Russian delegation, received instructions from Moscow to accept all the conditions laid down by Poland, however hard they may be, except those compelling Russia to partly or wholly disband her Red army. So far the chief matter in dispute has been the line of demarcation between Poland, White Russia and Ukraine.

There has been no cessation of the guerrilla warfare in Ireland. Nearly every day one or more members of the British police or army are murdered by Sinn Feiners, and in almost every instance reprisal is swift and bloody. Towns and villages are raided and the homes of well-known Sinn Feiners are burned, and often they are taken out and shot to death. The British government, though it has started an inquiry into the killings, seems rather helpless in the matter. Mayor MacSwiney of Cork is still alive, and a London paper says it has learned he is being given food in concentrated form.

Though the effort to communize the industrial plants of Italy is admittedly a failure, the disturbances there are increasing. The workers and owners in the metal plants are approaching some measure of agreement, with the aid of the government, but the employees in other lines and the peasants in Sicily and other districts are yielding to the efforts of radical trouble-makers. Seizure of lands by armed peasants, beginning in Sicily, spread to the north during the week and threatened to become nation-wide.

The best development of the week was the way in which prices in the United States began to decline. In most cases manufacturers and dealers who offered the reductions tried to make it clear that they were based on expectations of future conditions, in order to free themselves from the suspicion of having profiteered at the former prices. Economists called attention to two things: First, that safety demanded that prices decline gradually instead of tumbling; second, that the people must not let the lower prices lead them into another orgy of buying, lest the result be another rise.

America met with defeat in the airplane race for the James Gordon Bennett trophy in France. One of her entries was thrown out by an accident and the two others did not get far, owing to defects of construction in their engines. The race was won by a Frenchman, Sudt Leconte, and the trophy now remains permanently in France.

Rome.—Commenting on the publication in Berlin of charges by Nikolai Lenine, that leaders of Italian Socialists "betrayed the Italian proletariat," the Giornale d'Italia says:

"Lenine and bolshevism are serving German reactionaries, who wish to restore the monarchy in Germany and obtain revenge over their enemies by integrating countries of western Europe through revolution."

AT 108, WOMAN TO CAST BALLOT

Mrs. Sophia Orr of Syracuse Looks Forward Eagerly to Next Election Day.

OLDEST VOTER OF HER SEX

Native of Vermont and Has Lived in Wisconsin and Mississippi—She Recently Prosecuted Her Grandson for Theft.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Mrs. Sophia Orr, 108 years old, is eagerly looking forward to casting her first vote for president in November. She probably will be the oldest woman in the country to cast her ballot. She voted for the first time in the majority election last year.

"I voted the Republican ticket," she stated proudly, "and that's why they won."

The aged woman was the daughter of a lawyer, and was born in St. Albans, Vt., 108 years ago, according to her story. From there she moved to Muscoda, Wis., and later to Highgate, Miss., where she was married to Robert W. Orr. She remembers clearly the events of the war, in which her husband served, and has a vivid memory of her entire life down to the present.

Husband in Civil War.

The little old lady likes to talk about her dead husband, who fought for his country back in the sixties.

"He did his duty," she said resignedly, "and now he's up in Oakwood cemetery. He gave two arms, two legs and his eyes for his country."

Although in her long lifetime Mrs. Orr never before had to resort to the law for protection, she recently appeared against her grandson, Harvey D. Mullett, whom she charged with stealing $145 from under her pillow.

Mrs. Orr is the oldest woman to figure in court proceedings in the state, probably in the United States. As sprightly as if only half her age, the aged woman mounted the Lisbon, Portugal.—Gambling, which flourished here to an extraordinary degree after the armistice, has suffered a severe check at the hands of the new government headed by Premier Baptista. Up to two months ago the gambling houses remained undisturbed, but since Baptista's government took office the law has been rigorously enforced and today there are few visible signs of the prosperity the gamblers have enjoyed for a year.

The gambling mania began to manifest itself as soon as the war ended. Magnificent clubs on which big fortunes must have been spent suddenly

She married Prince Goltzine in Boston in 1910. The prince then went to Japan and China with his bride and they were in Omsk when Kolchak was in power. They then went to Vladivostok, but were compelled to flee by the approaching bolshevik army. They managed to reach a Russian vessel and escaped to Japan.

stand and gave her evidence against her grandson, when Mullett, who has appeared in police court before and is included in the rogues' gallery, demanded an examination.

"Grandma, you know I've always been true to you," said the accused grandson.

"Harvey, you took my money, I saw you," insisted the little old lady, "and what's more you took my copper wash boiler a long time ago."

"I've never forgotten that about Harvey," she stated gravely to the judge. "He took that and $5, and a rug which belonged to my dead husband. I know it was Harvey," she insisted.

Mrs. Orr owns the house in which she occupies one apartment alone. "I was standing on my back porch telling my daughter-in-law how to hang up a blanket to get it dry," she declared to the judge.

"I heard a noise and saw Harvey coming out of my bedroom. When I went in the money was gone."

"He took my copper wash boiler, too," she reiterated, showing that the loss of the utensil was a hard thing to forgive.

The grandson was arraigned after "grandma" had already told her story once, and demanded that she be put on the stand.

"Grandma" had been waiting. She told her story in a clear voice and showed excellent hearing. The only difficulty with her as a witness was her desire to plead with her grandson to return the money.

"Why don't you give it to me, Harvey?" the little old lady pleaded again and again.

This condition existed for well over a year. Then well-known firms were robbed by trusted employees.

An officer, who wore the cross of war, shot himself after losing large sums of money which were not his. Young men belonging to the best families fell into disgrace.

Press Starts Campaign.

A campaign was then begun by part of the Portuguese press, headed by the Seculo and the Situacao. Columns of letters from parents and well-known Lisbonites were printed daily, disclosing demoralizing facts and exhorting the government to close the clubs.

The governments, however, rapidly succeeding each other, had other things to attend to. And the gambling continued; but when the Baptista government came into office strenuous measures were taken.

The magnificent clubs, the glittering restaurants, the smart foreign women all disappeared as suddenly as they had burst upon the scene a year ago. For a week carts and camions conveying roulette tables and other gambling paraphernalia to the police stations formed the chief attraction of the Lisbon streets.

Frequent attempts have since been made to reopen resorts. Recently the Palais Royal club was re-established, ostensibly as a restaurant. Three days later it was closed by the police, after nobody knows from where were a

UNIONS IMPOSE "TAX"

Exporters of Argentina Are Compelled to Pay.

Dock Laborers Demand Contributions to Maintain Boycott, and Shipping Is Delayed.

Buenos Aires.—Unions of laborers connected with port activities in Buenos Aires and other ports of Argentina have imposed an export tax as a means of maintaining expensive boycotts now in force against exporters and shipping companies.

This is a complaint made by parking house establishments here to Minister of Finance Salaberry. At present more than 100 exporting firms are under boycott, in addition to the powerful Mihanovich company, owner of most of the river and coastwise shipping of the country.

more than 220,000,000 pounds of unsold wool in the country and more than 1,000,000 hides, most of the leading exporters of these products, whose services are needed in relieving the congestion, are not allowed to do business on account of boycotts.

The boycott of the Mihanovich company has held more than 200 vessels in port for six months.

Efforts of the government to settle the differences between the company and the workers have not met with success. Meantime the losses to domestic commerce have been enormous.

Season's Rarest Fish Story.

Port Royal, Pa.—J. N. Diesinger and S. L. Malloy, Harrisburg railroad telegraph operators, produce the "true" fish story that holds first rank for the Juniata county prize this season. Both had been fishing in a Juniata county stream, and during an entire day a solitary bass was landed. Just at dusk both had strikes and reeled their lines. When the fish was landed it proved to be a 14-inch plike that had swallowed both hooks.

Baseball is the most fortunate of professions for the reason that all the crooked men in it are to be hunted down and driven out. In this respect baseball is entitled to the envy of other business and professions. It would be a great social benefit if every business and profession could as easily as organized baseball rid itself of black sheep. If the lawyers could get together and drive all the shysters out of their midst; and if the doctors could throw the quacks and mal-practitioners out of their ranks; and if the business men could ostracize the sharpers, and if editors could cast dishonest men out of their honorable profession—then some one might have a better right than any one now has to throw the first stone at baseball as an institution. Baseball is not crooked because there are some crooks in it. Nor is any other profession or business crooked because it may harbor some crooked men. Rather it is to the credit of baseball that it honors a code that does not brook for long the dishonest player. The clean-up will not hurt baseball, but help it. The public's great interest in the present revelations reflects the wholesome American ideal, "to play the game square," in all relations of life. The crooked man and the trickster in business and the professions may be flourishing as of yore, but he is having a harder time getting by with his trade.

Once we were less than ten years old and now we are quite a bit over twenty, but never yet have we been satisfied with the weather more than two weeks at a time.

As a general rule the kind of a man who always insists on getting his money's worth doesn't spend much.

VERSE TO EDISON

The following verses were composed by Master Edward Rountree, the twelve-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Rountree, who reside in San Rafael valley. They were sent to Mr. Edison, the great inventor, and his prompt reply is herewith appended. Master Edward evidently has visions of future greatness for himself and we trust his fondest hopes may be fully realized.

Dear Mr. Edison:
I am just a little lad
But big enough to read,
I think you are a wonderful man—
A wonderful man, indeed.

Of all the inventions you have—
Big and great and small—
I think some of yours
The greatest of them all.

I think of you so much
Up here in this little camp,
For without the electric light
We'd have to use the lamp.

All through these dark, winding tunnels
What would our workmen do?
And our efforts to find copper
Had it not been for you?

This being a typical mining camp and no place to go,
We all have Victrolas for then we know
We can hear the world's greatest singers
And 'twas you who made it so.

Since reading a book of your inventions
I sit and think each day
And find my interest almost Entirely lost in play.

For three long weeks I've worked so hard
To make this little rhyme,
So now I'll close and not take any
More of your time.

But Mr. Edison, if you have time
To write me a line or two,
It would please me more
Than any one else could do.

I am only twelve years old—
My mother's youngest boy,
I am going to study hard
And be her pride and joy.

It is my greatest ambition
To be great like you,
Then all my boyhood dreams
Will have come true.

Sincerely,
EDWARD ROUNTREE,
Metzalf, Arizona.

Catarrahal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrahal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrahal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrahal, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surface. Hall's Catarrahal Medicine acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrahal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrahal Medicine. Circulars free. All Druggists. 75c.

GOV. DARES MOEUR'S SON TO FIGHT ON DEATH ISSUE BEFORE PRESCOTT CROWD

PRESCOTT, Oct. 13.—In one of the most dramatic moments developed in his campaign for re-election, Governor Campbell here last night, before an audience that packed the Elks' theater in this, his home town, hurled answering defiance to threats against his life made here and dared the son of Land Commissioner W. A. Moeur, charged with having voiced those threats, to stand forth and meet the issue man to man.

Young Moeur who had previously been in the theater left the building hurriedly, but not until after Dr. E. B. Perrin, rising in the body of the audience declared:

"Charley Burton told me he had to pay young Moeur $1,000 before he could get a land lease from the land commissioner."

The dramatic instruction and consequent challenge came after Governor Campbell, in explaining the Moeur-Burton matter, said Dr. Perrin was the man who had given him the information that Burton had paid Young Moeur this sum.

Rising to his feet Dr. Perrin repeated the declaration in the presence of the assembly.

"And now they are resorting to threats against my very life," shouted the governor, "made here today in the presence of witnesses by this Moeur. If he is here, let him stand forth and make that threat to me and I will put him where he belongs in 30 minutes."

Turning once more to his audience, Governor Campbell said:

"Many of you here have seen me grow from boyhood, with milk pails in my hand, to the present moment. In all that time, in all my public life, have you ever heard of me being mixed up in any shady deal or making untrue accusations?"

A veritable storm of "nos" came from all over the house.

Continuing the governor said: "I don't charge the land commissioner with being crooked, but I do say he has one son as a land attorney operating before the department of which his father is the head, and another son in the department as a selector and classifier of these state lands, and that this is significant. And to any one else should prove embarrassing."

"I do charge these state lands are being administered in the almost exclusive interest of the cattle oligarchy, which is not only trying to control all the state lands, but the state government as well, and who are now resorting to threats against my life if I continue the fight to have these lands administered in behalf of all the people.

"And once more, let me make my position clear. I maintain these lands should be reclassified as to grazing and agricultural worth and leased or sold for exactly what they are worth, whether that be 1 cent or $1 an acre."

Governor Campbell then went into the history of the state lands and their administration, showing how by a system of cancelling and consolidating leases and re-leasing to the same individuals again (thus preventing competition in bidding for the leases) these lands are being held practically in perpetuity by a few big cattle outfits.

He also charged that of the supposedly numerous leases showing on the land department books, the vast majority of them were merely dummies, as is well known.

Other Republican state candidates present and making brief addresses were W. J. Galbraith, John W. Estill and Miss Elsie Toles.

PROMINENT LAWYERS ACCUSED OF ABDUCTING REFERENDUM BEARER WHO REFUSES $10,000 BRIBE OFFER

PHOENIX, Oct. 12.—Charges of a $10,000 bribery offer and a kidnapping are contained in felony complaints filed here today by E. O'Brien Mann of Cochise county.

Elmer Coker, prominent land attorney of Florence, and James Murphy have been arrested and arraigned in justice court and it is expected that J. G. McCall of Cochise county will be arraigned late today, he having been notified at Globe of the complaint. A John Doe warrant is out for a fourth man.

According to Mann's complaints which were first laid before James E. Nelson, assistant city attorney, Coker, Murphy and McCall conspired in a game against Mann offering the $10,000 bribe if he would neglect to file a certain referendum petition against the state law passed by the last ex-governor and known as Sub. 60.

He was approached, he says, on June 11, 1919, the last day on which petitions were to be filed. Refusing these offers, he claims, he was kidnapped by Coker and McCall and the driver of an automobile. He made his escape from the same by leaping from the machine while it was in motion and rushing to the office of the secretary of state, filed what petitions he had managed to retain, but, which, it transpired, contained fewer names than necessary to secure a referendum.

Mann says he was confined to his bed for two weeks after and is still

Tucson Gasless As Flames Wreck City Plant

TUCSON, Oct. 12.—Long abandoned stoves of all vintages, makes and models, were resurrected here late yesterday and early today after fire destroyed the gas plant of the Tucson Gas, Electric Light & Power Co.

Eggs were at a premium by housewives in preparing the evening meal yesterday and breakfast today over electric hotplates, improvised fires and cooking arrangements of one kind and another.

Restaurants and eating places of the city were flooded by folks who sought food there in lieu of the home cooking made impossible because the gas supply was shut off.

The fire originated from unknown cause in the generating room of the gas plant. The entire plant except the storage tank was in flames on the arrival of the firemen. By heroic work the department prevented destruction of the electrical plant nearby.

suffering from injuries received in his fall from the machine.

The three principal defendants to the felony charges are all well known here and throughout the state.

For a number of years Coker has been prominent with land and cattle interests in the Casa Grande valley, with W. H. Mauer, state land commissioner. He was a delegate to the Democratic national convention at San Francisco, and is considered one of the most influential land attorneys practicing before the State Land department.

Jim Murphy served a number of years as deputy under Sheriff Jeff Adams and later entered private detective work and gained considerable notoriety as an objector to the sale of the Central school property in an attempt, alleged at the time, to be for the purpose of blocking the building of $1,000,000 hotel here.

George Purdy Bullard, private counsel for Mauer, was acting as Murphy's attorney at the time.

McCall is well known for his connection with the pari-mutual bill, which would have permitted betting on horse races.

Mann is a dry farmer of Buckner Canyon, Cochise county, and became secretary of the Farmers' league there. As such he lobbied against the passage of the land bill because of features which he considered unfair and pernicious, especially to the homesteader.

After the bill was passed he instituted the circulation of petitions to have it referred to the people and was up to the hour of filing confident of securing sufficient names to hold up the operation of the bill until the next election.

Mann promises to tell the full story of how he was first approached by Murphy with an offer of $10,000 which the latter told him, he says, would be split fifty-fifty and how immediately he divulged the circumstances to two well-known officials and a third man equally well-known who advised him to head Murphy on and get the men back of him as they figured that he was merely a tool. Also how after many attempts he finally met a big fat man and a heavyset man with Murphy at a sequestered rendezvous in the country and now there an agreement was entered into whereby Mann was to receive $500 cash to bind the bargain. This with the understanding that the balance of the $10,000 would be placed in escrow to be paid over in the event that there were insufficient names filed against the petition. Every point of this story Mann says will be corroborated by witnesses.

The case will come up Saturday.

The taxicab was stopped by a convenient lamppost passenger in front. At a police station he found the excited chauffeur telling the police he had been shot from behind by his fare. So many chauffeurs have been shot by their fares lately Parisian drivers are nervous.

CHAPTER VIII. —14—

A Touch of the Third Degree.

It was Bucky that caught the convict. The two men met at the top of a mountain pass. Blackwell, headed south, was slipping down toward Stone's horse ranch when they came face to face. Before the bad man had his revolver out, he found himself looking down the barrel of the ranger's leveled rifle.

"I wouldn't," Bucky murmured gently.

"What you want me for?" Blackwell demanded suddenly.

"For the W. & S. robbery."

"I'm not the man you want, My name's Johnson."

"I'll put up with you till I find the man I do want, Mr. Johnson," Bucky told him cheerfully. "Climb down from that horse. No, I wouldn't try. Keep your hands up."

Bucky took his prisoner straight to the ranger's office and telephoned to Cullison.

The lieutenant did not know anything about look psychology, but he had observed that hunger and weariness try out the stuff that is in a man. Under the sag of them many a will snaps that would have held fast if sustained by a good dinner and a sound night's sleep. This is why so many "bad men" gun fighters with a reputation for toughness, wilt on occasion like whipped curs. In the old days this came to nearly every terror of the border. Some day when he had a jumping toothache, or when his nerves were frayed from a debauch, a silent stranger walked into his presence, looked long and steadily into his eyes and ended forever his reign of lawlessness. Sometimes the two-gun man was "planted," sometimes he subsided into innocuous peace beneficent.

The ranger had a shrewd instinct that the hour had come to batter down this fellow's dogged resistance. Therefore he sent for Cullison, the man whom the convict most feared.

The very look of the gentleman, with that grim, hard, capable aspect, shook Blackwell's nerve.

"So you've got him, Bucky?"

Luck looked the man over as he sat handcuffed beside the table and read to his face both terror and a sly, dogged cunning. Once before the fellow had been put through the third degree. Something of the sort he fearfully expected now. This hulking bully should have been a hardy ruffian. Instead, he struck like a schoolgirl from the thought of physical pain.

"Stand up," ordered Cullison, quietly.

Blackwell got to his feet at once. "Don't hit me," he whined.

Luck knew the man sweated under the punishment his imagination called up, and he understood human nature too well to end the suspense by making real the vision. For then the worst would be past, since the actual is never equal to what is expected.

"Well!" Luck watched him with the look of tempered steel in his hard eyes.

"I—Mr. Cullison, I want to explain. Every man is liable to make a mistake—go off half-cocked. I didn't do right. That's all. I can explain all that, but I'm sick now—awful sick."

Cullison laughed harshly. "You'll be sicker soon."

"You promised you wouldn't do anything if we turned you loose," the man plucked up courage to remind him.

"I promised the law wouldn't do anything. You'll understand the distinction presently."

"Mr. Cullison, please—I admit I done wrong. I hadn't ought to have gone in with Cass Fenrick. He wanted me to kill you, but I wouldn't."

Bucky had led Cullison into the center of the stage. He had observed a growing distrust mount and ride the electric. Now he stepped in to save the man with an alternative at which Blackwell might be expected not to snatch eagerly perhaps, but at least to be driven toward.

"This man is my prisoner, Mr. Cullison. From what I can make out you ought to step his hide off and hang it out to dry. But I've got first call on him. If he comes through with the truth about the W. & S. robbery I've got to protect him."

Luck understood the ranger. They were both working toward the same end. The immediate punishment of this criminal was not the important issue. It was merely a club with which to beat him into submission, and at that a normal father and a physical one. But the owner of the Circle C knew better than to yield to Bucky too easily. He fought the point out with him at length, and finally yielded reluctantly, in such a way as to aggravate rather than relieve the anxiety of the convict.

"All right. You take him first," he finally conceded harshly.

Bucky kept up the comedy. "I'll take him, Mr. Cullison. But if he tells me the truth—and if I find out it's the whole truth—there'll be nothing doing on your part. He's my prisoner. Understand that."

Metaphorically Blackwell licked the hand of his protector. "I ain't to do what's right, Captain O'Connor. Whatever's right. You ask me any questions."

"I want to know all about the W. & S. robbery, everything, from start to finish."

"Honest, I wish I could tell you. But I don't know a thing about it. Cross my heart, I don't."

"No use, Blackwell. If I'm going to stand by you against Mr. Cullison, you'll have to tell the truth. Why, man, I've even got the mask you wore and the cloth you cut it from."

"I reckon it must a-been some one else, major. Wish I could help you, but I can't."

Bucky rose. "All right. If you can't help me, I can't help you. Mr. Cullison, I reckon I'll run out and have some supper. Do you mind staying here with this man till I get back?"

"No. That's all right, Bucky. Don't hurry. I'll keep him entertained." Perhaps it was not by chance that his eye wandered to a blacksnake whip leaning on the wall.

O'Connor snatched to the door. The frightened gaze of the prisoner clung to him as if for safety.

"Major—Colonel—you ain't a-going," he pleaded.

"Only for an hour or two. I'll be back. I wouldn't think of saying goodbye—not till we reach Yuma."

With that the door closed behind him. Blackwell cried out, hurriedly, angrily: "Mister O'Connor! I—I'll tell you everything—everything last thing. Mr. Cullison—he's aiming to kill me soon as you've gone."

"I've got no time to fool away, Blackwell. I'm hungry. If you mean business get to it. But remember that whatever you say will be used against you."

"I'll tell you any dog-goned thing you want to know. You've got me beat. I'm plumb wore out—sick. A man can't stand everything."

"Sit down. There's a good dinner waiting for you at Clune's when you get through."

His story was that he had found on the street a letter that had inadvertently been dropped. It was to Jordan of the Cattleman's National bank, and it notified him that $20,000 was to be shipped to him by the W. & S. Express company on the night of the robbery. Blackwell resolved to have a try for it. He hung around the office until the manager and the guard arrived from the train, made his raid upon them, locked the door, and threw away his mask. He divined with the satchel into the nearest alley, and came face to face with the stranger whom he later learned to be Fenrick.

Fenrick, who had heard the shouting of the men locked in the express office, stopped the robber, but Blackwell broke away and ran down the alley. The sheepman followed and caught him. After another scuffle the convict again hammered himself free, but left behind the hand satchel containing the spoils. Fenrick (so he later explained to Blackwell) tied a cord to the handle of the bag and dropped it down the chute of a laundry in such a way that it could later be drawn up. Then he hurried back to the express office and released the prisoners. After the excitement had subsided, he had returned for the money and hid it. The original robber did not know where.

Blackwell's second meeting with the sheepman had been almost as startling as the first. Cass had run into the Jack of Hearts in time to save the life of his enemy. The two men recognized each other and entered into a compact to abduct Cullison, for his share in which the older man was paid one thousand dollars.

Both men asked the same question as soon as he had finished.

"Where is the money you got from the rail on the W. & S. office?"

"Don't know. I've been at Fenrick ever since to tell me. He's got it safe" face the charge now as any time. Move over, he had reasons for wanting to visit the Circle C. They had to do with a tall, slim girl who never looked at him without scorn in her dark, flashing eyes.

"All right. I'll go back with you, but not under a gun. I won't stand for any gun-play capture."

"You'll have to stand for it."

Fenrick's face set. "Will it? It's up to you, then. Let's see you make me."

Sitting there with his gaze steadily on the boy, Cass had a disadvantage. If the sheep owner had tried to break away into the chaparral, Bob could not shoot a man looking at him with cynical, amused eyes. He could understand the point of view of his adversary. If Fenrick rode into the Circle C under compulsion of a gun in the hands of a boy he would never hear the end of the laugh on him.

Bob put up his big blue gun reluctantly. Never before had it been trained on a human being, and it was a wrench to give up the thought of bringing in the enemy as a prisoner. But he saw he could not pull it off.

They turned toward the Circle C.

Kate was seated on the porch sewing. She rose in surprise when her cousin and the sheepman appeared. They came with jangling spurs across the plaza toward her.

"Where's Uncle Luck, sis? I've brought this fellow back with me. Caught him on the mesa," explained the boy sulkily.

Fenrick bowed rather extravagantly. "He's qualifying for a moving-picture show actor, Miss Cullison. I hadn't the heart to disappoint him when he got that cannon trained on me. So here I am."

Kate looked at him and then let her gaze travel to her cousin. She somehow gave the effect of judging him of negligible value.

"I think he's in his office, Bob. I'll go see."

She went swiftly and presently her father came out. Kate did not return.

Luck looked strange at Cass with the uncompromising hostility so characteristic of him. Neither of the men spoke. It was Bob who made the necessary explanations.

"I've been looking for you," Luck said bluntly, after his nephew had finished.

"So I gathered from young Jesse James. Anything particular, or just a pleasant social call?"

"You're in bad on this W. & S. robbery. I reckoned you would be safer in jail till it's cleared up."

"You still sheriff, Mr. Cullison? Somehow I had got a notion that you had quit the job."

"In an interested party. We'll take the stage into town and see what O'Connor says—that is, if you've got time to go." Luck could be as formal in his sarcasm as his neighbor.

"With such good company on the way I'll have to make time."

The stage did not usually leave till about half past one. Presently Kate announced dinner. A little awkwardly Luck invited the sheepman to join them, Fenrick declined.

His host hung in the doorway. Seldom at a loss to express himself, he did not quite know how to put into words what he was thinking. His enemy understood.

"That's all right. You've satisfied the demands of hospitality. Go out your dinner. I'll be right here on the porch when you get through."

Kate, who was standing beside her father, spoke quietly.

"There's a place for you, Mr. Fenrick. We should be very pleased to have you join us. People who happen to be at the Circle C at dinner time are expected to eat here."

Fenrick looked at the young mistress of the ranch. He meant to decline once more, but unconsciously found himself accepting instead. Something in her face told him she would rather have it so.

Presently a young man came into the dining room and sat down beside Kate. He looked the least in the world surprised at sight of the sheepman.

"Morning, Cass," he nodded.

"Morning, Cuck," answered Fenrick. "Didn't know you were riding for the Circle C."

"He's my foreman," Luck explained. Cass observed that he was quite one of the family. Bob admired him openly and without shame, because he was the best rider in Arizona; Kate seemed to be on the best of terms with him and Luck treated him with the off-hand bluntness he might have used toward a grown son.

The stage brought the two men to town shortly after sundown. Luck called up O'Connor and made an appointment to meet him after supper.

"There's a matter that needs explaining, Cass. According to Blackwell's story, you caught him with the goods at the time of the robbery, and in making his get-away he left the loot with you. What have you done with it?"

"Blackwell told you that, did he?"

"Yes."

"Don't doubt your word for a moment, Bucky, but before I go any talking I'd like to hear him say so. I'll not round on him until I know he's given himself away."

The convict was sent for. He substituted the ranger reluctantly. He was so humbled in that he did not know how to play his cards so as to make the most of them.

Cass heard him out with a lifted upper lip and his most scornful threat, expression. After Blackwell had finished and been withdrawn from circulation he rolled and lit a cigarette.

"By Mr. Blackwell's say-so I'm the goat. By the way, has it ever occurred to you gentlemen that one can't be convicted on the testimony of a single accomplice?"

"We've got a little circumstantial evidence to add, Cass," Bucky suggested pleasantly.

"Not enough—not nearly enough."

"That will be for a jury to decide," Cullison chipped in.

Fenrick shrugged. "I've a notion to let it go to that. But what's the use? Understand this. I wasn't going to give Blackwell away, but since he has talked, I may tell what I know. It's true enough what he says. I did relieve him of the plunder."

"Sorry to hear that, Cass," Bucky commented gravely. "What did you do with it?"

The sheep owner flicked his cigarette ash into the tray and looked at the lieutenant out of half-shuttered, intelligent eyes.

"Gave it to you, Bucky. Got that letter I handed you the other day?"

The officer produced it from his safe.

"Open it."

With a paper knife Bucky ripped the flap and took out a sheet of paper.

"There's something else in there," Fenrick suggested.

"That something else proved to be a piece of paper folded tightly, which, being opened, disclosed a key."

O'Connor read aloud the letter:

"To Nicholas Bolt, Sheriff, or Bucky O'Connor, Lieutenant of Rangers: "Having come into possession of a little valise which is not mine, I am getting rid of it in the following manner. I have rented a large safety-deposit box at the Cattleman's National bank and have put into it the valise with the lock still unbroken. The key is enclosed herewith. Shaw, the cashier, will tell you that when this box was rented I gave explicit orders it should be opened only by the men whose names are given in an envelope left with him, not even excepting myself. The valise was deposited at exactly 10:30 a. m. the morning after the robbery, as Mr. Shaw will also testify. I am writing this the evening of the same day."

"Don't believe a word of it," Cullison exploded.

"Sewing is believing," the sheepman murmured. He was enjoying greatly the disfigurement of his foe.

"Makes a likely fairy tale. What for would you keep the money and not turn it back?"

"That's an easy one, Luck. He wanted to throw the burden of the robbery on you," Bucky explained.

"Well, I've got to be shown."

In the morning he was shown. Shaw continued exactly what Fenrick had said. He produced a sealed envelope. Within this was a sheet of paper, upon which were written two lines:

"Box 2143 is to be opened only by Sheriff Bolt or Lieutenant Bucky O'Connor of the Rangers, and before witnesses."

"CASS FENRICK."

From the safety-deposit bank Bucky drew a large package wrapped in yellow paper. He cut the string, tore away the covering and disclosed a leather satchel. Perry Hawley, the lead manager of the Western & Southern Express company, fitted to this a key and took out a sealed bundle. This he ripped open before them all. Inside was found the sum of twenty thousand dollars in crisp new bills.

VEXATION OF SPIRIT

"WHEN I was in business," said the retired merchant, "I never had time to read much, and I used to look forward to the glad day when I could revel in literature. I felt sure I'd be entirely happy. I used to jot down the titles of books I intended to read, and when I retired from business I had a list as long as the Russian battle line."

"And now that I can read all I want to, I don't get any enjoyment out of books. They bore me to the very soul. I get sleepy as soon as I begin to read, and my wife comes and tells me my snoring is disturbing the neighbors."

"It's that way with everything we look forward to," observed the hotel-keeper, slyly. "Max always will be, but is never bled, as some half-baked poet remarked. Young Gooseworthy was in here last evening, bubbling over with happiness. There wasn't anybody around, so he took me into his confidence. He's going to marry Gwendolin Jmalong, next month, and he's perfectly satisfied that his married life will be one long stretch of sunshine. He seems to have the idea that he's going to do something original when he gets married, but the idea isn't new. Men have been getting married ever since Christopher discovered Columbus, Ohio, and every doggone man Jack of them had the idea that everlasting bliss was going to be inaugurated on the wedding day."

"I listened to Gooseworthy for three hours, and hadn't the heart to say anything that would dampen his enthusiasm. His twittering recalled the long vanished days when I was getting ready to be married. I felt about it then just as he does now. I thought the parson opened the gates of paradise when he joined two loving hearts. My wife lived up to all the plans and specifications, and was and is one of the best women in the United States, but I hadn't been married three months before I had a sneaking conviction that the man who gets married is a chump."

"A good many optimists say that a married man doesn't need any more money than a single one, if he marries the right sort of woman, but they might as well go to the blackboard and demonstrate that two and two make two, instead of four. I fell for that cheerful theory when I was married. I was earning enough to keep myself comfortably, and never had any financial worries. I could have been buried for less money than it took to be married, and the expenses that time forward were double what they used to be, although my wife was so economical she used to make valises and such things for herself out of my superannuated shirts."

"Oh, doggone it, there isn't any unadulterated happiness in matrimony. I wonder that young fellows like Gooseworthy don't look around them, and contemplate the dejected appearance of the majority of husbands. But even if they did, it wouldn't do them any good. I suppose, for they are full of pipe dreams, and they think the girls they are going to marry are different from all other girls, and that they will prove exceptions to the general rule."

"I had a wise old uncle in those halcyon days, and about a week before the wedding day, he backed me into a corner and handed me a dust-proof package of wisdom. He tried to lead me into taking a sensible view of the future. He talked about the cares and responsibilities that would be mine after the wedding, and wanted to marry an angel, but a human being like myself, with a human being's faults and frailties."

"I let him get that far, and then I told him that his gray hairs alone saved him from having his head re-moiled, and said I never wanted him to darken my door, and he never did. I had to darken it myself, with woe and pain. But many a time afterward, I recalled his wise words and wept over his grave."

Well Off.

"After all a man never knows when he's well off."

"What's happened now?"

"I was just thinking what a fool I was for trading off my Liberty bonds for oil stock."

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says: "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

From this they could not shake him.

Fenrick, riding on Mesa Verde, met young Bob Cullison, and before he knew what had happened found a gun thrown on him.

"Don't you move," the boy warned. "What does this tommyrot mean?"

"The sheepman demanded angrily. 'It means that you are coming back with me to the ranch. That's what it means.'"

"What for?"

"Never you mind what for."

"Oh, go to Mexico," Cass flung back impatiently. "Think we're in some fool moving-picture play, you blamed young idiot? Put up that gun."

Shrilly Bob retorted. He was excited enough to be dangerous. "Don't you get the wrong idea. I'm going to make this stick. You'll turn and go back with me to the Circle C. You're wanted for the W. & S. express robbery. Blackwell has confessed."

Cass sat immovable as the sphinx. He was thinking that he might as well

Russia's Small Museums.

The study of natural history is encouraged in some Russian cities by means of miniature museums. They are nothing more than large glass showcases, located in public squares, vacant storehouses and other places where people in large numbers congregate or pass. These are filled with specimens taken from the larger exhibition places. Pedestrians with a few moments to spare find it profitable to loiter in front of the convenient displays to study the stuffed birds and animals under the glass. The contents of the cases are changed weekly, thus providing new and interesting exhibits at frequent intervals. Lectures are given at the small museums at noon hours and on holidays.

GRAPE GROWER MAY BE HAPPY

Products of the Vineyards Are in Big Demand, Says the Federal Government.

FRUIT FINDS NEW OUTLETS

Makers of Unfermented Juice, Jams and Jellies Are Utilizing an Increasing Tonnage Each Year—Co-operate Handling Crop.

Washington.—Aside from California, the grape-growing industry in the United States promises soon to become of even greater importance than in the days before the making of wine was prohibited, according to an announcement just made by the United States department of agriculture. A big demand has developed for grape products and the shipments of grapes last year were the largest for the last four seasons under review. It is even predicted that within a few years annual production of grapes will not adequately supply the table stock and the unfermented juice, jam and jelly trade.

"While grapes may be produced almost anywhere," says a bulletin from the department, "there are, it seems, only a few districts where all the factors of soil and climate favor successful commercial production."

It is pointed out that the extensive grape-growing industry of central and southern California is not included in the article, which is limited to sections producing the eastern or American type of grapes.

Michigan Growers Wile.—The surplus production in the years between 1902 and 1908 stimulated the grape-pressing industry, including unfermented and fermented grape juice or wine," the bulletin says. "It is interesting to note that while the tendency up to that time had been from wine-grape production to table-stock production, the tendency changed between 1904 and 1918, and more and more of the tonnage was used for wine and unfermented grape juice."

"The requirements of stock for pressing are so much lower than those for table stock that a gradual letting down in the quality of the pack and in the efficiency of distribution was noticeable in New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio during these years. Michigan, however, built up an extensive trade for table stock packed in four-quart baskets. At the present time, when prohibition legislation has cut off the old-time wine outlets, that section is in much better marketing position than certain grape producing regions in New York and Ohio.

"In those regions which specialize in grape culture, certain well-defined channels of trade have become established. It is the usual custom in such localities for vineyardists to sell their grapes in wagonload lots to local dealers, or carlot assemblers at their loading stations, at the current market price, the contract system being very uncommon. These local dealers load the cars and sell to carlot receivers in city markets, who in turn sell to jobbers. Then the fruit passes to the retail trade and finally reaches the consumers.

Co-operative Associations.—"Because of the firm market position occupied by this commodity in the leading producing sections of New York, Michigan and Pennsylvania during the past few years, local dealers have been able to dispose of practically all offerings on a f. o. b. basis by wire orders, so that consignment has been the exception rather than the rule.

"Co-operative shipping associations have been found to be most successful when handling crops of which a few standard varieties ripen about the same time. Thus they have proved of great value in the grape industry in Michigan and also in the leading grape-producing sections of New York, Pennsylvania and the Missouri valley. The co-operative association takes the place of the local dealer, the association receiving the grapes direct from the producer on wire orders, to city carlot receivers. An additional factor, a national distributing agency, sometimes comes between the local buyer or the co-operative association and the city carlot receiver."

Relative to the future of the grape industry, the government bulletin says: "The production of unfermented grape juice and of jams and jellies is utilizing an increasing tonnage each year and will do much toward using the surplus left by the cessation of wine production. These factories usually buy their supplies direct from the producer on advance contracts, agreeing to pay the current market price on the day of delivery. This method of sale is satisfactory from the standpoint of the producer, and, as the demand for manufactured grape products at present exceeds the supply, it is not unreasonable to suppose that in the not very distant future the annual production of grapes may not adequately supply the table stock, and the juice, jam and jelly trade."

TREASURE HUNT VAIN

Searchers for Buried Silver Are Sure to Fail.

So Says Galveston Expert of Efforts to Find Wrecked Bullion Ship.

Galveston, Tex.—Searchers after buried silver on the mainland opposite Pate Island, 18 miles southeast of Corpus Christi, Tex., probably are doomed to disappointment, in the opinion of Dr. J. O. Dyer, a local writer on historical and scientific subjects. The rush of treasure seekers began with the discovery recently of 25 skeletons, popularly believed by many to be those of members of the crew of a Spanish treasure ship which foundered off the Texas coast early in the eighteenth century. No record is available of any such wreck.

The "life" of a skeleton buried in the sands of the beaches of the coastal country, Dr. Dyer points out, is not over 40 years. He also says treasure ships from Mexico to Spain were discontinued after 1820, partly because of the activities of Jean Lafitte's fleet of buccaniers. Even before that time the Spaniards tried to avoid excessive losses from storms and Lafitte's fleet of buccaniering vessels and 50 Spaniards transported less than 20 tons of silver bullion to the vessel.

Then, the current rate in Mexico was approximately $10 a Troy pound. The most valuable of all Lafitte's prizes, the Sevilla, carried only $150,000 in specie.

Lafitte's captured treasure, according to the records extant, was buried in three caches. Two of these were located on Galveston island and the third on a small island to the east, which was completely washed away during a storm in 1820.

There have been many reports of the discovery on this coast of caches of coin or chests from trading ships containing from $3,000 to $15,000.

Dog Dies Fighting Eagle.—Lancaster, O.—Nellie, a shepherd dog, known to many tourists throughout the Hocking River valley and belonging to James Selfert, an innkeeper, was killed by plunging over the Cantwell cliffs as she battled with a large American eagle. The dog was herding sheep on the rocks when they were attacked by the eagle.

COSTS BLOCK TRAVEL

Extortions Practiced at the Frontiers of Countries in Central Europe.

Price of Passport Visas Has Been Greatly Increased, Especially for Americans.

Budapest.—The cost of travel for Americans in central Europe and Balkan countries is reaching extortionate proportions through the tendency to charge Americans the same price for passport visas as that of the American government for foreigners, which recently was increased from $1 to $10. If this tendency is continued, an American in the course of a few days' journey, passing several frontiers, may have to pay $30 to $50 in visas.

For travelers of all nationalities however, the charge has been rapidly months to get permission to travel 150 miles.

The office of American High Commissioner Grant Smith at Budapest is daily besieged by hundreds of people who wish to go to America or to secure help to reach their homes in Czecho-Slovakia or other countries.

NEW JAP CULT IS RADICAL

"Omoto Kyo," Mysterious Religion, Proves to Be an Extreme Form of Socialism.

Tokyo.—"Omoto Kyo," the new mysterious religion of Japan, is merely an extreme form of socialism aimed at the destruction of the existing social order, according to Kakiji Kato, a merchant who made a secret pilgrimage in Ayode, the village headquarters of the sect. The leading adherents of the cult, Kato reported, were retired and discontented middle-aged men. He said the cult of the sect's founder bore a striking resemblance to the imperial mausoleum at Modyama.

Mistook Monster Snake for an Automobile Tire

Paris, Ky.—When Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ross were returning from an automobile trip, they saw what resembled a black and white automobile tire lying in the road. Mr. Ross got out to pick up the "tire" when it moved, and glided away into the bushes. The "tire" was a boa constrictor, the property of a carnival company that met disaster in a cloudburst near here. Employees of the carnival company later captured the snake.

Ohio Is Toy Balloon State.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Ohio leads the country in the making of toy balloons, making from about 50 to 75 per cent of the output of the United States, according to Ohio manufacturers. Close to 1,500,000 are made daily. It is reported. Many are shipped abroad.

Their Juicy Meats Gone

Londoners Find That the Cooking in Their Restaurants Has Degenerated Sadly.

London.—A reporter for a London newspaper who considers himself an epicure has just finished an extensive study of London restaurants and reached the conclusion that English restaurant cooking has degenerated to an extent almost unbelievable.

He complained that he could not find a good, old-fashioned English steak; that a juicy mutton chop with a piece of kidney attached was difficult to obtain; that the pastry of the meat pies the Englishman loves so well no longer is light and fluffy, and that the omnipresent jellies lacked their old-time taste.

The famous Soho eating places, too, have lost much of their old-time charm. Soho, says one writer, "is that district famous for its league of smells, for its children—sloe-eyed, swarthy bambinos—its little, shawled madonnas and its little restaurants." It is the Latin quarter of London. Soho is reaping a harvest, because so many people are "eating out" owing to the high cost of maintaining a kitchen, but it is doing it at the cost of losing the atmosphere of the real habitue enjoyed.

And many of the "regulars" have had to give up their favorite places owing to increase in price and because they disliked to dine near people who do not appreciate perfectly prepared food and who never seem to assimilate the atmosphere of these quiet places.

The writer desired information as to the process of feeding "patrol" (petrol) into an engine. A personal reply from Jefferson was requested.

WASHINGTON SIDELIGHTS

Once More the Nicaragua Canal Project

WASHINGTON.—Recently the United States government, by a payment of $3,000,000, has acquired the exclusive right to dig a canal across Nicaragua—a step prompted by a report that Great Britain and Japan contemplated the project as a joint enterprise on their own account, anyway, so says report.

This is interesting because the Nicaragua canal may yet be dug to supplement for commercial purposes the facilities of the Panama canal. The route would be 234 miles shorter from New York to San Francisco than by way of the isthmus; and the canal would not cost more than one-third as much as that of Panama—barring, however, the risen price of labor and materials.

Looking at the map, one sees that Nicaragua is wide compared with the Isthmus of Panama. But also one observes that much of its narrowest part is occupied by an immense lake, 100 miles long and 45 miles broad, out of which a large river, called the San Juan, runs eastward all the way to the Caribbean sea. A strip only 12 miles wide separates the lake from the Pacific ocean; three-fourths of the river's length is navigable, and thus, as it might be said, most of the digging has already been done by nature.

There would be, as a matter of fact, about 48 miles of ditch to be dug; but nearly all of this is through lowlands, and the job would be correspondingly easy.

The distance across the Tehuantepec neck is 125 miles as the crow flies.

First Wireless Heard Round the World

THE first message from the United States naval radio station, known as the Lafayette radio station, at Bordeaux, France, which is undergoing official acceptance tests, has been received here. The message follows: "This is the first wireless message to be heard around the world and marks a milestone on the road of scientific achievement."

Secretary Daniels sent the following message in reply: "My sincere congratulations upon the successful completion of the gigantic radio station named for that distinguished Frenchman whom all Americans honor. Designed to serve a military purpose, it will now serve to bind closer the cordial relations which have always existed between France and the United States. On behalf of the United States navy, I desire to express my pleasure upon the achievement of the Lafayette radio station in transmitting the first message to be heard around the world. We are happy to recognize in this powerful signal a symbol of that force and sympathetic understanding with which the voice of France shall be heard by its sister republic."

The Lafayette radio station was built by the United States navy department, under the direction of the bureau of engineering and its engineering features, while in general modeled on those of our naval stations at Arlington and Annapolis, are unique both in their magnitude and in some features of their design.

The station now completed is the largest in the world. It has eight 820-foot towers, and its engineering features, while in general modeled on those of our naval stations at Arlington and Annapolis, are unique both in their magnitude and in some features of their design.

Milk With a Delicious Sawdust Flavor

ISN'T there a hoary old yarn about a man who equipped his donkey with green spectacles and tried to educate it to eat shavings? Well, anyway, he wasn't a circumstance to Uncle Sam. He's going to fatten up our cows and make 'em give more milk on a diet of sawdust.

By chemical treatment sawdust may be converted into a nourishing cattle food. This fact was made public at a sectional meeting of industrial and engineering chemists, American Chemical society, at the University of Chicago.

White sawdust, finely ground, is treated with diluted sulphuric acid to a large boiler known as a digester, under steam pressure. This breaks up the fiber and extracts the sugar. To prevent injurious effects, the acid is neutralized by adding lime to produce chemical reaction.

The liquid thus obtained, when boiled down, is rich in sugar, and when mixed with the fiber produces a moist feed containing about 15 per cent of water, in which form it is fed to dairy cows.

At the forest products laboratory, United States department of agriculture, Madison, Wis., experiments proved that three cows thrived on this sawdust ration and not only gave more milk, but increased in weight. So says Uncle Sam.

The result was so satisfactory that the government has decided to take the matter up on a larger scale at the experiment stations throughout the country and furnish a detailed report on the value of hydrolyzed sawdust as cattle food. So says Uncle Sam. So there you are. Probably milk, cream and butter, with a delicious sawdust flavor will soon be added to the U. C. L.

A Possible Election Hitch—Other Items

POSSIBILITIES growing out of the Tennessee suffrage tangle are being officially considered, notwithstanding the fact that Connelley has since made a renunciation of sorts.

The possibilities arise out of constitutional provisions that a candidate must have a majority in the electoral college to secure his election. If courts should declare, after the election has occurred, that the Tennessee renunciation of suffrage was illegal all women's votes cast under authority of the nineteenth amendment also would be illegal, and there would be nothing to do but throw out the whole vote of states where such illegal voting had occurred. This, no candidate would have a majority of the electors and the house of representatives would elect the president.

DISTRIBUTION of President Wilson's flock of sheep, which have roamed the White House lawns for several years, began when a score were shipped to "somewhere in Virginia."

BUYERS of suits, beware, or the government will get you. All buyers must swear that they will use suits only for water, and records of all sales and resales will be kept.

New Marine Act May Abrogate Treaties

EXAMINATION by the state department of commercial treaties to which the United States is a signatory has revealed that between 24 and 27 of such pacts have to be abrogated under the new merchant marine act. It is said by department officials.

Section 34 of the merchant marine act requires the president to give formal notice to foreign governments having commercial treaties with the United States that the American government intends to revoke any claims of the conventions which prevent the giving of preferential treatment to Americans or American ships. Officially express the belief that entire abrogation of the treaties would result from the notice of the president, as it is not thought that other nations will consent to the amendment of treaties in order to enable the United States to discriminate against their own commerce and shipping.

Although considerable doubt exists as to the precise interest of congress as expressed in the merchant marine act on account of the radical consequences which must result in the strict carrying out of section 34, there are ten treaties which are considered as specifically falling within the purview of the statute which probably will have to be abrogated.

Although the state department has not made public the list of affected treaties, the ten conventions expected to be terminated are known to include those with Belgium, Bolivia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Great Britain, Honduras, Italy, Netherlands, Norway, Paraguay, Serbia and Spain. In the case of all, however, 12 months' notice must be given of the intention to abrogate.

WAYSIDE NOTES

(By E. B. Edgell)

The editor of The Patagonian motored up to Elgin late Saturday afternoon and remained until Monday morning with Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Beaty about one mile north of Elgin. The cattle on this ranch are all fat and sleek and going into the winter in fine condition. The grass is exceptionally fine, having cured up in the very best manner and is rich and nutritious. Mr. Beaty is the owner of three ranches, and on his home ranch, which consists of more than ten sections, he raises thoroughbred Hereford cattle. He has some as fine specimens of this popular breed as can be found anywhere in the State. He makes a specialty of raising thoroughbred bulls and sells them as fast as he can raise them at fancy prices.

Bright and early Monday morning, accompanied by Mrs. Beaty, we motored over into the Canillo country, about fourteen miles south of Elgin. At Elgin we had the pleasure of meeting our old friends, F. Neil, Henry Woods and M. T. Lavelle, all of them oldtimers in that section and all fine men.

The roads are mostly in very good condition, but over in the Canillo country they are simply fine. Arriving at the home of William Parker we were immediately invited to take a look at his fine apple orchard. Many of the large trees are literally loaded with big red apples and they presented a scene of rare beauty and loveliness. Most of his apples are of the Geniten and Winesap varieties but there are a few very beautiful yellow apples which very much resemble the Jonathan. Mr. Parker's apple crop is particularly heavy this year but he has no trouble in disposing of his fruit right at the orchard. A visit to this orchard is worth all it costs to make the trip, and we feel we were well repaid for the little time it required to run over there. We did bring back with us quite a car full of apples, but, we did not return empty handed.

Mr. Parker informed us that he is also succeeding quite well with alfalfa. He does not irrigate his alfalfa but he has some very fine sub-irrigated land where this best of all hay grows successfully.

On the trip we passed quite a good many fine farms and small ranches everywhere prosperity and contentment seemed to abound. Surely there can be no nicer and no better country in Arizona than that which we passed over going from Elgin to Canillo.

OLLIE PARKER, SECTION FOREMAN, TAKES PRIZE IN BRONCHO RIDING

Last Sunday while A. Baker and six cowboys were mounting a bunch of bronchos six miles east of Nogales Ollie Parker, S. P. section foreman at Crittenden, accompanied by a friend, happened along in a car and crawled upon the corral fence to watch the excitement. Very soon Mr. Baker observed that Mr. Parker was getting "life" in him and he invited the latter to join in the sport, and the invitation was accepted. He was asked if he had ever before indulged in this kind of a stunt, and his reply was "Some, but it was a long time ago when I last slipped into a saddle." The boys concluded they had a bite, and so they brought out a nice black horse—one that had "spilt" them of "their." Of course Mr. Parker didn't know they were framing up on him, and didn't seem to care, and so they put the tree on the horse while Parker was changing clothes and getting ready for his. They offered to hold the horse for him but he said "Boys, I will handle him myself for I do not believe in snubbing one; give him a fair break with you." After tussling a few moments with the pony he flopped into the saddle, and it was then that the dirty work began. Parker raked him from his shoulders back to the thighs, touching him with his hat over the head. Mr. Baker declared it was the best riding he had seen in several years, but it grew more exciting when Parker pulled a stunt on them. Drawing a white handkerchief from his knee, then the boys had to hand it to

800,000 MEN IN ENGLAND'S MINES STRIKE ON SATURDAY

LONDON, Oct. 14—Coal miners today declared a strike effective Saturday night unless the government or mine owners concede their demands or make fresh offers, 800,000 men will not go to work, beginning Monday. The strike would compel all steel works to close.

BISBER, Oct. 14—More than one half of the town of Lowell, everything on the north side of Main street and up to the public market in Naco road, was destroyed last night by fire, the most stupefying disaster which has overtaken the Warren district since the great Bisbee fire of 1909.

The total loss is roughly estimated at $750,000.

The fire started somewhere back of Town's market, in the smoke-house. The flames rapidly gathered force until they swept with a terrific roar from the lower end of Main street to the yards of the Bisbee Lumber Co. at the other end.

After the flames gained full headway the paramount issue was to prevent them from crossing to the south side of the street. An overwhelming battle, at heavy odds, was fought to prevent this. At the outset the firemen were handicapped by lack of water and hose. Fate was with them in the fact that there was practically no wind. Had there been even a light wind blowing from the north the fight to prevent the loss of all of Lowell would have been hopeless. As it was the result of the battle to prevent the flames from crossing the street was uncertain until after the destruction of the Lowell hotel and the Bonanza Rooming house.

The scene of confusion on the Main street of Lowell as the flames swept from one end to the other was tragical beyond description. Merchants hastily threw their stocks out into the street; billiard tables, show-cases, countless boxes of shoes and men's and women's wearing apparel, jewelry, hardware, bedding, were jumbled together, piled on top of one another, in a hopeless mass.

This confusion provided an opportunity for ghouls and vandals, an opportunity not overlooked. Miserable, sneaking forms were seen gliding out of the lighted area carrying in their arms piles of loot picked up where valuables had been hastily thrown out to salvage from the flames. A number of these were arrested with the goods on them.

For all the rapidity with which the flames spread, there was not a single serious accident reported last night.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Sixteen Years Experience

For sixteen years, a corps of metallurgists have been studying and perfecting the steel that goes into every part of the Ford car and the Ford One Ton Truck. Each separate part has been studied to learn the type of steel best fitted for it. Parts receiving constant surface-wear are made of hard, flint-like metal; parts subjected to great vibration or resilience are made of softer, springy steel. Every part is made according to its use—that is, every Genuine Ford part is.

But there are also counterfeits "Ford" parts. These imitations are made by concerns in no way connected with the Ford Motor Company and retailed as side lines by mail-order houses, downtown stores, and many garages. The unsuspecting customer accepts them because they are called "Ford" parts. To make sure of getting the genuine Ford-made parts, buy them only from Authorized Ford Dealers. Likewise bring or take your Ford car to our garage for repairs, replacements, and general "tuning up."

We are Authorized Ford Dealers. We can supply you with all Ford parts for either passenger car or truck. And our shop is equipped to give real Ford service in all repair work.
