Nearly every man is a firm believer in heredity until his son makes a fool of himself.

OLIVER ROTHROCK, 19, HAS LEG CRUSHED; AMPUTATED

Reckless Driving by George Beebe Is Said to Have Caused Accident; Injured Boy Doing Nicely

Oliver Rothrock, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Rothrock of Elgin, had his leg crushed so badly Sunday afternoon about 5 o'clock that it was necessary to amputate it just below the knee.

Louis Arado of Nogales, Sonora, was painfully bruised at the same time, but the driver, George Beebe, who was said to have been driving in a reckless manner in excess of the speed limit prescribed by law, escaped injury.

The three were en route to Elgin at the time of the accident. Beebe picked up Oliver Rothrock in Patagonia on his return from Nogales, having gotten the Mexican in the border city to work on his ranch.

As the car reached the gate of the J. F. Little ranch, 14 miles from Patagonia, going down grade, it is said Beebe lost control and it turned two complete somersaults, landing upright and facing in the opposite direction from that which it had been traveling. The top, windshield and two wheels were smashed.

Young Rothrock was the greatest sufferer, having his right leg crushed below the knee. Arado landed 20 feet from the car. Beebe walked to the Little home, about 200 feet distant, for help, and Little brought Rothrock and the Mexican to Patagonia, where first aid was given by Dr. A. V. Harstmaier. They were brought to the hospital here by R. C. Blabon, the doctor, C. J. Trask, Chester Brodine and others, and placed in a hospital.

Dr. Sfelker and Wallace, at 11 o'clock Sunday night, found it necessary to amputate Oliver's right leg just below the knee.

The remarkable display of nerve by the injured boy is a feature of the case that is being commented on freely by those who saw him after the accident. Throughout the entire trying and painful ordeal he carried a smile, although he must have been suffering great agony.

Oliver Rothrock is one of the most popular young men in this district and heartfelt expressions of sorrow are heard on every hand over his misfortune.

SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT AND CANDY CALB

The entertainment given Saturday night at the Opera House by the local school was well attended, and the sale of candy after the performance netted quite a tidy sum. The entertainment was well patronized and those present enjoyed the evening's program, which follows:

The primary grade children sang several school songs.

Piano solos were rendered by both Purtone, Gladys Doyle, Sarah Louise Pierce, and Ruth Gattin.

Two choruses, by upper grade children.

A playlet by the upper grade children which we name "Spotless Town" and comment on another page.

Indian dance by upper grade girls.

The children did remarkably well, and their efforts to please were appreciated by the large audience. The scholars are a credit to their teachers.

We think the present teachers' staff is producing splendid results, and their labor is reflected in the scholars' advancement.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Arthur Patton has passed test card number 44 in the arithmetic tests. This is the last test card of the series, and Arthur is the first to pass it.

The sixth and eighth grades are having a contest to see which gets the more stars in spelling. The star is earned when every one in the grade has a perfect lesson. The sixth grade, with 30 stars, is two stars ahead of the eighth grade.

The results of the intelligence tests which were given by the teachers in the upper grades have been tabulated. They show the following comparisons with averages of other schools, obtained from the same tests given to some 55,000 children:

Table with columns: Grade, Intelligence, Mental Age, Quotient. Rows for Grade Four, Five, Six, Seven, Eight, Nine.

The tests have been arranged to show the native ability of the child, not his achievement in school. The results are valuable in checking up the estimates of the pupil's work by the teacher.

J. Allen Dunn

Here is an author with a punch in both fists; his career has developed it. He left his native England to serve as a correspondent in the Spanish-American war. Later he was syndicate correspondent in California, Hawaii and the Orient. In 1907 he was editor of the Sunset Magazine. He is the author of "Yosemite Legends," "California for the Tourist," "California for the Sportsman," "Care-Free San Francisco" and in fiction, "Rotorua Rex," "The Petals of Lao Tsze," "Jim Morse, South Sea Trader," "Turquoise Canyon," "Dead Man's Gold," "Sandy Rourke" and "Salt of the Sea." His latest and most popular story, "A Man to His Mate," we have secured as a serial for this publication. As a tale of the sea, it will rank along with the best of Jack London's in that line. Everyone should read it.

SUDAN GRASS FOR DAIRY COWS

The dairy husbandry department of the University of Arizona has conducted an experiment to determine the value of Sudan grass hay as compared to alfalfa hay in the ration of the dairy cow.

The rations were computed so that the cows would each receive at least the minimum amount of digestible nutrients required by the Wolff Lehmann feeding standard.

Ration No. 1 was composed of silage, alfalfa hay and grain.

Ration No. 2 was composed of silage, Sudan grass hay and grain.

The grain used was a mixture of cottonseed meal, three parts; barley, two parts, and mill run bran, one part.

The grain mixture was fed at the rate of one pound of grain to each four pounds of milk produced by the Holsteins and one pound of grain to each three pounds of milk produced by the Jerseys.

The cows were divided into two lots and the rations were reversed so that each lot received each ration during half of the experiment.

The ration containing alfalfa hay produced 9 per cent more milk and 10 per cent more fat than the ration containing Sudan grass hay. The alfalfa hay ration produced milk and butter fat 8 per cent and 5.5 per cent cheaper, respectively, than the ration containing the Sudan grass hay.

Following is the cost of the different feeds:

Alfalfa hay, $20 per ton. Sudan grass hay, $15 per ton. Silage, $6 per ton. Grain, $40 per ton.

This experiment would indicate that Sudan grass hay is worth less than three-fourths as much as alfalfa hay in the ration of dairy cows.

TENNIS CLUB ORGANIZED

The Patagonia Tennis Club was organized at the home of C. A. Pierce on Monday night.

W. P. Capehart was elected president and A. R. Van Zandt secretary treasurer.

It was decided that a straight membership fee of $5 be charged, or that a member might pay as much more as he or she sees fit, with the understanding that any amount exceeding $5 would apply on future assessments.

Tennis is an excellent game for outdoor exercise, and we wish every lover of the game to come in as a member.

Match games are to be arranged with the clubs of nearby towns, and it can readily be seen that the club will be of great benefit to Patagonia. There are many tourists passing through the town, and they probably would heed the temptation to stay over for two or three days if there are made to feel welcome to the use of an up-to-date tennis court.

Whether you will be able to take an active part in the game or not, do not pass up this opportunity of helping the town. Your influence, advice, and the price of a membership is absolutely necessary for the success of this movement.

Do not wait for the committee to visit you, but at your earliest convenience bring your membership fee, or any larger amount, to Mr. Van Zandt at the First State Bank.

It's about time for birds to start watching to see who has gotten ahead.

Blue Lead Makes Promising Strike This Week; Silver-Lead

BLUE LEAD

Carl Scheler and Dan Dawson, who recently took a bond and lease on the Blue Lead mine, in the Wrightson district, from the Washington Trading Company, report making a strike of high grade silver-lead ore, and specimens brought into Patagonia this week indicate that the gentlemen are going to put another property on the producing list. Experienced miners who have seen the samples displayed declare they show high values. If the two 12 to 18 inch streaks come together, as Mr. Dawson thinks they will within a few feet of where they now are working, the Blue Lead will make money for the lessees.

SALERO-ALTO DISTRICT

One continues to come in from several of the properties in the Salero-Alto district. Messrs. Henderson, J. J. Farley, Lopez, P. Parviz and others are operating there.

J. McILHANY TO SHIP ORE

GOOD ORE DISCOVERED

Didn't Get the Job.

A get-rich-quick lunap of physical energy in the form of an out-of-work commercial traveler applied to the manager of a firm, explaining that, once on the job, he could guarantee such a flow of orders that the staff would be unable to cope with them.

The manager knew his business, and said: "Well, young fellow, I'd like to see if you could do something. I can't. Industry is in a topsy-turvy muddle, and you can't get order out of chaos."

The applicant squared his shoulders and declared as he looked up a telephone directory: "Let me do it. I haven't the pleasure of knowing Mr. Kayoss, but I'll get an order out of him somehow."

He didn't get the job, though.—London Answers.

British Courts of Ancient Origin.

Among the courts of ancient origin in Great Britain, a most interesting one still exists at Bristol, the last one remaining of the Pied Poudre courts which were established more than 700 years ago at places where large fairs were held, and attended by foreigners. The courts were provided, especially if the fair was at a seaport town, to deal with differences of opinion which were likely to arise between people who could not understand each other's speech. They were called Courts of Pied Poudre or Dusty Feet, from the dusty feet of the traveling hagen and peddlers whom it was intended to help.

In time the Pied Poudre became Eye Powder court.

The Size of the Bill. "I thought you told me it was to be a minor operation!" "So it was, my dear sir." "But I could have had a major operation for the sum you've charged me."

Old Kook.

Kook is the name of a rather prominent but most incoherent character in Dickens' novel, "Bleak House," which has much to do with the then ditatory procedure of the Court of Chancery. The system Dickens describes ceased to exist many years.

Kook is the proprietor of a rag and bone warehouse, where everything seems to be bought and nothing sold. He is a grating drinkard, who eventually dies of spontaneous combustion, but he takes fire and is consumed. In a note to this chapter of "Bleak House" Dickens cites a case of spontaneous combustion that took place in Paris, France, and which, he said, was well verified by medical authority. It was probably from that case that Dickens obtained the idea which he made use of in describing Kook's wonderful death.

CANTALOUPE FROM MEXICO

Consist shipments of cantaloupes are beginning to arrive in Nogales for shipment to eastern markets. The fruit is coming from the west coast of Mexico.

BLACK EAGLE

McCutcheon & Hogan have been idle at the Black Eagle mine for several days awaiting repairs for their hoist, which broke down last week. Owing to the fact that the ore being shipped from the mine is being taken from the shaft and there isn't room to break ore, the work will not resume until the new part arrives for the hoist, which is expected daily.

HARDSHELL

The winze being sunk from the lower tunnel level of the Farley & Hall less on the Hardshell is getting into better ore with each round of shots. This property already has developed a large tonnage of milling grade ore and some high grade.

FRENCH VISITS DRAGA-Z

Harry L. French, who is interested financially with Frank Reichert in the Draga-Z mine, in the Wrightson district, visited the property last Wednesday. Mr. French has been spending the winter in Tucson with his family. They left Wednesday of this week for their home in Madison, Wis.

MISFORTUNES MULTIPLY

B. H. McCutcheon is proving the old "saw" that "misfortunes never come singly." Last week his well-cased in, cracking a corner of his new cement reservoir, and the same day the hoist at the Black Eagle mine, in which he is interested, decided to cease operating by way of a broken wheel.

R. D. HALL VERY SICK

R. D. Hall was brought in from the Hardshell mine Tuesday morning very sick. He is under the care of Dr. A. V. Harstmaier at the Commercial Hotel.

Baseball Game Sunday, 10 A. M.

Sunday morning, at 10 o'clock, there will be a ball game, at Valencuela park, between the local team and the rail-roads and Newt Mercer's mechanics of Nogales. Captain "Buck" says the game will be played under big-league regulations. Everybody invited.

Col. R. R. Richardson Returns Home

Col. R. R. Richardson, who has been in Nogales under the care of Dr. W. F. Chenoweth for several days, has returned to Patagonia in better health. He spent some time recently on the west coast of Mexico, where the climate is somewhat milder than it is here, owing to the lower altitude.

THE GIRL, A HORSE AND A DOG

By FRANCIS LYNDE

"Would you have believed him?" I asked, grinning across the table at Bessley.

"I'd a-been a question of veracity, as the court says; with maybe you and Hi Twombly too dead to testify."

"At this, Daddy, who had been eating like a man half-starved, put in his word.

"I reckon you can't get at them gnoots higher up, Stannie, but if you don't shove Charley Bullerton just about as far as the law'll allow, I'm goin' to call ye a quitter."

"At that moment Jennie had just brought in another heaping plate of the luscious corn cakes, and I was looking at her when I replied.

"Well, see about this shoving a bit later, Daddy. The first thing to do is to put the old Cinnabar in shape to shell us out some money. I'm broke, you know."

"When I made this admission, Bessley, the last man in the world from whom help could come, I should have said, looked me squarely in the eyes.

"Stannie Broughton—if that's your name—you ain't so dad-blamed crazy as you look and act," he remarked. "Money's what talks. Are you aintin' to swing into this thing with your own hands—for keeps, I mean; not to sell it out for the first set o' minin' sharps that comes along?"

"Sure!—you said it; I'm going to keep it and work it—after I get out of the jail where you're going to land me for pinching that inspection car and getting it smashed. Why else did I start out blindfolded to hunt for a girl, a horse and a dog?"

"He let the latter half of my reply go without comment; charging it up to some last lingering remains of the craziness, perhaps.

"Well, let's see about where you'd crack your whip first," he invited.

"That part of it is easy," I laughed. "What I don't know about the practical end of the mining job would lend a wagon. I'll pitch out and hunt me up a real, for-sure minner, of course."

"Noblin' so awfully crazy about that?" he granted. Then, "What's the matter with Hi Twombly, here, for your boss minner?"

"Not a thing in the wide world—except that he can't be because he is going to be my partner in the deal."

"Now you're talkin' a whole heap like a white man," said the desperado-like one. "Dog-goned if I don't b'lieve you are white! What do you say to givin' me a whack at the bossin' job?"

"I took just one little glance at Daddy, and the mild blue eyes said "yes."

"But you've got me under arrest, Mr. Bessley," I pointed out, just to see what he'd say. "You can't very well close a business deal with your prisoner, can you?"

"Kill two 'r three birds with the one rock," he mumbled, examining the striped half of his breakfast-finisher corn cake into his capacious mouth.

"I'll chase you down to Angels and turn you over to the majesty o' the law—the same here," by name old Squire Dubbin. Then I'll jump my job o' sortin' out the bad angels from amongst the good angels and go out and rustle your ball. Time old Bill Dubbin's chewin' over the law in such cases made and provided—like he's

"I may pass lightly over the events of the three days following; days in which Mr. William Starbuck, who seemed to be known to all the old-timers in Brewster as "Billy," and to the younger generation as "Uncle Billy," labored untiringly in my behalf; procured me the necessary working credit at the Brewster National, helped me in the telegraphic ordering of new machinery, helped Bessley to rustle up a small army of mechanics to go ahead of us to the Cinnabar, and last, but not least, made my peace with the railroad company in the matter of the stolen and smashed inspection car; this being a thing which he was easily able to do because he was the brother-in-law, once removed, of the railroad company's vice president and general manager.

On our last day in Brewster, and as a parting favor, I asked Starbuck how I should proceed in regard to quashing the indictment against Bullerton, and when I did so, he gave me a strewed look out of the cool gray eyes, with a gentle uplifting of the shaggy brows. "If you are determined to let Bullerton go, all you have to do is to do nothing. If you don't appear in Copah to prosecute him and his would-be mine tumpers, the case against them will be dismissed, as a matter of course. But really, you know, you ought to make an example of them."

"In the circumstances, I can't," I returned, so we let it go at that; and an hour later Bessley and I were on our way back to Atropia and Cinnabar mountains.

"That's about the easiest thing this side o' Hades—with a mine like the old Cinnabar—with no more water in it than what can be pumped out—to back you. I reckon your title to the property's all right, ain't it?"

"It is; I have a deed from my grand-father," so much I said, but I didn't go on to explain how the quick wit of a girl who now hated me had saved that deed from being a mere scrap of waste paper. Not that I knew how she had done it—but the tangible fact was safely in my pocket.

"Fifteen minutes after this breakfast table talk I was bidding a temporary good-by to the wreck on the Cinnabar ledge, and was about to take the road to Atropia with Bessley; both of us intent upon catching a way-freight to Angels. Daddy had lent me the plebeian pony for the ride to the railroad station—this either with or without Jennie's consent; I didn't know and forbore to ask—and the burlesque-faced dog was ready to trot at the pony's heels. But the blue-eyed maiden had shut herself up in her room, and I thought she wasn't going to come out and see me off.

"At the final moment, however, after Bessley had already steeled his nag across the dump head, and I was about to climb into my saddle, she came to the cabin door, and was both curiously embarrassed and a bit breathless.

"Please!—one minute!" she begged; and as I took my foot out of the stirrup: "Do you know what they have done with—with—"

"With Bullerton?" I helped out. "No, I don't know; but I suppose they've taken him on to the county seat at Copah with the others."

"Then—then—please let him go! If you refuse to prosecute—"

"Make yourself entirely easy," I broke in, a bit sourly, maybe. "I'll agree not to play the part of the dog in the manger."

"Thank you—so much!" she murmured; and then she backed away quickly and went in and on through to the kitchen, leaving me to follow Bessley, which I did, with the sour humor telling me that of all the puzzling, unaccountable things in a world of ailments, a woman's vagaries were the least understandable. For, after all was said and done, and after all that had happened and been made to happen, it seemed to be palpably apparent that Jennie Twombly was still in love with the feet.

CHAPTER XIX.

Angels, Desert and Urban.

Our stop-over in Angels, Friend Bessley and mine, was of the shortest. Our business with Father William Dubbin was the merest travesty upon a trial at law, and was speedily concluded.

Since there would be no passenger train until afternoon, Bessley and I resumed our places in the freight's caboose, and in due time were set down in Brewster, the breezy little metropolis of Tinianoy Park.

Here my captor—and friend—appeared to be very much at home. He took me to the best hotel, where he was greeted with affectionate camaraderie by a clerk who wore a diamond big enough to serve for a locomotive headlight, shook hands with, and introduced me to, a number of gentlemen in the lobby, and presently gave me orders to go up to our rooms and "take a wash," preparatory to meeting a certain friend of his at luncheon; the meeting contingent upon his being able to "round up" the friend in time for the feast.

It still wanted a half-hour of the appointed luncheon time when I descended to the lobby. A little before one o'clock Bessley came in with a middle-aged man who looked as if he might have been the retired manager of a Wild West show; not long-haired, or anything like that, but with the cool eye and bronzed, weather-beaten face of one who lived under house roofs only when circumstances forced him to. A moment later I was shaking hands with Mr. William Starbuck, mine owner, ranchman, a director in the Brewster National bank, president of the Brewster Commercial club and the prime mover in a lot of other civic activities too numerous to mention.

I may pass lightly over the events of the three days following; days in which Mr. William Starbuck, who seemed to be known to all the old-timers in Brewster as "Billy," and to the younger generation as "Uncle Billy," labored untiringly in my behalf; procured me the necessary working credit at the Brewster National, helped me in the telegraphic ordering of new machinery, helped Bessley to rustle up a small army of mechanics to go ahead of us to the Cinnabar, and last, but not least, made my peace with the railroad company in the matter of the stolen and smashed inspection car; this being a thing which he was easily able to do because he was the brother-in-law, once removed, of the railroad company's vice president and general manager.

On our last day in Brewster, and as a parting favor, I asked Starbuck how I should proceed in regard to quashing the indictment against Bullerton, and when I did so, he gave me a strewed look out of the cool gray eyes, with a gentle uplifting of the shaggy brows. "If you are determined to let Bullerton go, all you have to do is to do nothing. If you don't appear in Copah to prosecute him and his would-be mine tumpers, the case against them will be dismissed, as a matter of course. But really, you know, you ought to make an example of them."

"In the circumstances, I can't," I returned, so we let it go at that; and an hour later Bessley and I were on our way back to Atropia and Cinnabar mountains.

"That's about the easiest thing this side o' Hades—with a mine like the old Cinnabar—with no more water in it than what can be pumped out—to back you. I reckon your title to the property's all right, ain't it?"

"It is; I have a deed from my grand-father," so much I said, but I didn't go on to explain how the quick wit of a girl who now hated me had saved that deed from being a mere scrap of waste paper. Not that I knew how she had done it—but the tangible fact was safely in my pocket.

"Fifteen minutes after this breakroad station Buddy Fuller, the operator, ran out to hand me a telegram. Since it was too dark to see to read it, and I supposed, naturally, that it was nothing more important than a bid from some machinery firm anxious to supply our needs, I thought it might wait, stuck it into my pocket—and promptly forgot it.

"Our talk, as we rode together up the now familiar trail, was chiefly of business; the business of reopening the mine; and it was not until we were nearing our destination that the ex-marshaled said:

"Still stickin' in your craw that you ain't a-goin' to pop the whip at Charley Bullerton?"

"It is," I answered.

"Well, now, why not?"

"Principally because I have promised somebody that I wouldn't prosecute."

"Not Hi Twombly; he'd never ast you to do anything like that."

"No; not Daddy Hiram."

He didn't press the matter any further, and we rode on in silence. As we approached the neighborhood of the mine, evidences of the forthputting activities began to manifest themselves.

Daddy Hiram met us at the door of his newly repaired cabin across the dump head and insisted upon taking care of the horses. Bessley and I washed up at the outdoor, bench-and-basin lavatory; and when we went in, Jennie had supper ready for us.

She didn't sit at table with us—from which I argued that she and her father had already eaten—and I thought she purposely avoided me; avoided meeting my eye, at least. I didn't wonder at it. Her position, as I had it figured out, was rather awkwardly anomalous. By this time, I had fully convinced myself that she was in love with Bullerton, and she was probably engaged to be married to him; and that it was only her native honesty that had driven her to take sides against him in the struggle for the Cinnabar, prompting her to do the one thing which had knocked his nefarious scheme on the head—namely, the recording of my deed.

Knowing nothing but hard work, Daddy Hiram was running the deep-well pumps himself, or rather, taking the night shift on them; and about ten o'clock, just as I had made up my mind to go to bed and let the repairing activities take care of themselves, I saw Jennie going over to the boiler shed with a pot of freshly made coffee for her father. Here was my chance, I thought; so I waited and cornered her as she came back.

"Let's have it out, Jennie," I said; which, I confess, was a sort of brutal way to begin on the woman I loved, and yet the only way if I was to go on remembering that she belonged to another man. "We can at least be good friends, can't we?"

"No," she returned, with a queer little twist of her pretty lips and a flash of the blue eyes. "I'm afraid we can't even be that—or those—any more, Mr. Broughton."

It was awkward for both of us, standing there before the open cabin door, and I pointed to the bench where Daddy Hiram was wont to smoke his evening pipe in good weather.

"Won't you sit down until we can sort of flail it out?" I begged.

"It's no use, whatever," she objected; nevertheless, she did sit down and let me sit beside her.

"I know just how distressed you must be," I began, "and perhaps I can lift a bit of the load from your shoulders. There will be no legal steps taken against your—against Charles Bullerton."

"Thank you," she said; just as short as that.

"And that isn't all," I went on. "After we get into the ore and have some rent money to show for it, I'm going to make over a share in the Cinnabar to your father and put him in a position to do the right thing by you when you marry. And he'll do it; you know he'll do it."

"How kind!" she murmured, looking straight out in front of her.

"It isn't kindness; it's bare justice. Between you, you two have saved my leggy for me."

"I wish, now, it hadn't been saved," she exclaimed, as vindictively as you please.

Truly, I thought, the ways of women are fast finding out; or at least the way of a maid with a man is.

"Can't I say anything at all without putting my foot into it?" I asked in despair. "You break a man's back with a load of obligation one day, and toss him lightly out of your young life the next! I haven't done anything to earn your love, or to earn the back of your hand, Jennie; or if I have, I don't know what it is."

"You have committed the unpardonable sin," she accused coolly. "I don't wonder that Miss Randle took your ring off."

"I wasn't going to let the talk shift to Lisette; not if I knew it, and could help it."

"What is the unpardonable sin?" I asked.

"To misunderstand; to think a person capable of a thing when a person is not; to—just take it for granted that a person is guilty—oh—with a little stamp of her foot—" can't bear to talk about it!"

I guess it's a part of a man's equipment to be dense and sort of stupid—in his dealings with women, I mean. Slowly, so slowly that I thought the catch would never snap and hold, my foot mind crept back along the line, searching blindly for the point at which all this fiery indignation toward me had begun; back and still back to that moment of our deliverance—Daddy's and mine—at the shaft-house door, with this dear girl untwisting her arms from her father's neck, and with me saying, "I'm not hurt, either. Welcome home, Miss Twombly—or should I say, Mrs. Bullerton?"

"Jennie!" I gasped; "do you mean that you're not going to marry Charles Bullerton—that you never meant to?"

"Of course, I'm not!" she retorted, with a savage little out-thrust of the adorable chin. "But you thought so small of me that you simply took it for granted!"

I wagged my head in deepest humility.

"I'm as the dust under your pretty feet, Jennie; please don't trample me too hard. Bullerton—that is—er—we had a scrap the next morning after you went away, you know, and I—well, he rather got the worst of it. And when I had him down and was trying to make him tell us where you were—even your father thought you'd gone off with him—he said you'd planned to go with him to get married; but that you had failed to show up at Atropia in time for the train."

"He told a lie, because that is the way he is made and he couldn't help it," she said simply, still as cool as a cucumber. "He said we were going to Angels to get married, and I—I didn't say we weren't; I just let him talk and didn't say anything at all."

"Won't you tell me a bit more?" I begged.

"You don't deserve it the least bit, but I will. It began with the deed; your deed to the mine. One day, when you were over at the shaft-house, and had left your coat here in the cabin, I saw him take the deed from your pocket when he didn't know I was looking. He read it and put it back quickly when he heard me stirring in the other room. I knew it hadn't been recorded; you and Daddy had both spoken of that. I felt sure he'd take it again, and perhaps destroy it. At first, I thought I'd tell you or Daddy, or both of you. But I knew that would mean trouble."

"We were never very far from the lightning edge in those days," I admitted. "Bullerton had shown me the gun he always carried under his arm, and had told me what to expect in case I were foolish enough to lose my temper."

"I know," she nodded. "He killed a man once; it was when I was a little girl and we were living in Cripple Creek. He was acquitted on the plea of self-defense. So I didn't dare say anything to you or to Daddy. What I did was to steal your deed myself, when I had a chance. Daddy has some blank forms just like it, and I sat up one night in my room and made a copy. It wasn't a very good copy—your grandfather's handwriting was awfully hard to imitate. Besides, I didn't have my notarial seal. But I thought it went do for—some thing to be stolen. Then I hid the real deed and put the copy back in the envelope in your pocket."

"And Bullerton finally stole it, just as you thought he would," I put in.

"He did. You are dreadfully careless with your things; you are always leaving your coat around, just where you happen to take it off. I knew then that the next thing to be done was to get your deed recorded quickly. He—he was urging me every day to run away with him, and I was afraid to tell him how much I despised him; afraid he'd take it out on you and Daddy. So I just let him go on and talk and believe what he pleased. Of course, he wanted to ride with me the morning we went away, but after we got down the road a piece, I made an excuse to go on ahead by another trail."

"That much of what he told your father and me—when we were having the scrap—was true. He said you went on ahead."

"I didn't go to Atropia, as he expected me to," she continued calmly. "I took the old Haversack trail across the mountain to Greaser siding. I knew that the Copah trail would stop there on the side-track. When I got as far as the Haversack I thought I heard somebody following me. I was scared and didn't know what to do. I was afraid my copying of the deed had been discovered and that the original would be taken away from me, so I hurried to hide the real deed. The old Haversack tunnel seemed to be a good place, but while I was in there Barney began to bark, and I looked out and saw that the noise I had heard had been made by a stray cow from one of the foothill ranches. So I remounted and rode on to catch the train to Copah. At Greaser siding I tried to make Barney lead the pony home, and Barney tried his best to do it. But Winkle wanted to graze, and I had to go off and leave them when the train came. That's all, I think; except that I had to wait two days at my cousin's in Copah before I could get the deed back from the recorder's office. They were awfully slow about it."

"It isn't quite all," I amended. "You haven't told me how you happened to come back with Bessley and his posse."

"That was just a coincidence. I reached Atropia on the early morning train and met Mr. Bessley and his men just as they were starting up the mountain. Cousin Buddy Fuller had told me how he had telegraphed to Angels for Mr. Bessley, and I was scared to death, of course, because I knew what it meant. So I borrowed the Hoggarty's pony and came along with the posse."

"There was silence for a little time; such silence as the clattering and hammering of the carpenters and steam-fitters permitted. Then I said:

"And when you got here, the first thing I did was to call you 'Mrs. Bullerton.' I don't blame you for not being able to forgive me, Jennie, girl; honestly, I don't."

"It was worse than a crime," she averred solemnly; "it was a blunder. What made you do it?"

"Partly because I was a jealous fool; but mostly because I was sore and sorry and disappointed. I thought Bullerton had beaten me to it."

"No," she said quite soberly; "it was Miss Randle who beat you to it." I gasped. There were tremendous possibilities in that cool answer of hers; prodigious possibilities.

"But say," I burst out; "didn't I tell you that Lisette had pushed me overboard long ago?"

"I know. She was sensible enough to see that you and she couldn't live on nothing a year. But now that you are rich, or are going to be, I'm sure you are not going to be less generous than she was. What if she did take your ring off in a moment of discouragement, and knowing that you couldn't buy her hair? You can be very sure she put it on again as soon as your back was turned."

"There we were; no sooner over size handle before another and a higher one must jump up; I groaned and thrust my hands into my pockets. A paper rustled and I drew it out. It was the telegram Buddy Fuller had handed me, still unopened. I opened it half absent, holding it down so that the glow of the nearest flare fell upon the writing. Then I gave a little yelp, swallowed hard two or three times and nearly choked doing it, and read the thing again. After all of which I said, as calmly as I could:

"But, in spite of all that I had told you about Lisette, you asked me once to kiss you."

"Is—is it quite nice of you to remind me of it?" she inquired, reproachfully.

"It wouldn't be—in ordinary circumstances; it would be beastly. But, listen, Jennie; haven't you been mad clear through, sometimes, in reading a story, to have a coincidence rung in on you when you knew perfectly well that the thing couldn't possibly have happened so put in the nick of time?"

"I suppose I have; yes."

"Well, don't ever let it disturb you again. Because the real thing is a lot more wonderful and unbelievable, you know. Listen to this: It's a wire from my cousin, Percy; the one who sent me out into the wide, wide world to look for a girl, a horse and a dog, and who is the only human being outside of Colorado who knows where I am. He is in Boston, and this is what he says:

"Recalled home when we reached Honolulu, out-bound, Lisette and I were married today. Congratulate us."

For a minute there was a breathless sort of pause, and I broke it.

"Jennie, dear, was it just common honesty and good faith that made you take all these chances, with the deed, and with Bullerton?"

"Yes, I'm commonly honest," said the small voice at my shoulder.

"Bullerton is a shrewd, smart fellow," I went on. "I'll venture to say that he never made such a headstrong break as I did the morning you came back. You must think something of him or you wouldn't have asked me not to prosecute him for trying to murder your father and me."

"She looked down at her pretty feet, which were crossed.

"I think—a little something—of myself," she said, with small breath-catching between the words. "I owed myself that much, don't you think? If I didn't deceive him outright, I'm afraid I did let him deceive himself. So that made me responsible, in a way, and I couldn't let you send him to jail, could I?"

"But what about me? Are you going to send me to a worse place than Wallace Denies Toll Road Permit.

Denver.—The petition of the citizens of the state for permission to build a toll road up Mount Evans, near Denver, will be held in abeyance by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, should the state desire to construct the scenic highway with the taxpayers' money, according to a telegram received here by C. J. Stahl, assistant forester of the Colorado district, from W. B. Greeley, chief forester. According to the message, Secretary Wallace believes the offer made by several public-spirited citizens of the state—to build the road and operate it as a toll road until they collected the amount of their investment plus a small amount of interest, and then to turn it over to the state—to be an unusually fair and attractive offer, but that he will defer action on the petition until he is assured that the people of the state do not wish to build the road with money from their own pockets.

She Is Oldest British Colony

Newfoundland's Pride in Seniority Permanent Bar to Union With Canada.

DATES BACK TO 17TH CENTURY

Was a Full-Fledged British Colony With a Governor When Canada Was New France—Position is Important Geographically.

Washington.—Renewed discussion by the neighbors of the United States to the north of the desirability of Newfoundland's becoming a part of the Dominion of Canada raises a point upon which probably many Americans are hazy—that there are two distinct British realms, not one, in the portion of North America above the Canadian border. Newfoundland and its relation to Canada are brought out in the following bulletins from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Sentiment plays its part in history and historic geography," says the bulletin, "and the fact that Newfoundland has insisted on standing alone while all the other British possessions of North America have united to form the Dominion of Canada is probably partly due to the pride that Newfoundlanders have always had in being able to boast that theirs is 'the senior British colony'—the first of the children of the motherland to make its home beyond the seas.

Dates Back to 17th Century.
"Newfoundland had its settlements as early as the Seventeenth century and was a full-fledged British colony with a governor when Canada was New France, South Africa was in the hands of the Dutch, and not a single white settler had landed in Australia."
"Newfoundland has a geographical position of great importance, for it largely blocks the broad gulf into which the St. Lawrence river widens, and which forms Canada's front door, from Europe. Moreover, Newfoundland is the closest part of North America to the British Isles, being only 1,640 miles from Ireland. It is natural that the first trans-Atlantic cable should have been laid to the shores of Newfoundland in 1858 and that out of the 17 cables now crossing the North Atlantic 11 first touch American soil either on Newfoundland or its neighboring islets. And when in 1919 airplanes finally conquered the Atlantic it was from Newfoundland that both the American and the British machines took off.

"Newfoundland has an area of more than 42,000 square miles and is therefore practically half the size of Great Britain. Excepting only Cuba, which barely exceeds it in size, it is the largest island of the western hemisphere outside polar waters. With its cliffs of brown stone rising 200 to 300 feet, broken here and there by deep fjords and bays, Newfoundland has a bleak and barren appearance which belies conditions in many parts of the rolling, timbered interior. Along a number of the streams are fertile valleys in which agriculture and stock-raising flourish.

400 Years of Fishing.
In late years mining, stock raising, the manufacture of wood-pulp and newspaper paper, and a number of other industries have been developed in Newfoundland, but throughout its more than 400 years of history the central story of the island might be told in one word—fish. Boston and Massachusetts have felt deeply indebted to their 'sacred cod,' but after all, that important creature came from the Newfoundland banks; and however valuable it has been to New England, it has meant much more to Newfoundland and through Newfoundland to Great Britain.

Is Broke at 65; Now Rich Again

"Borax" Smith's Courage Helps Him in Winning a Second Fortune.

"DON'T WEAKEN," HIS MOTTO

Now, at Age of Seventy-Three, He Is Master of Another Fortune of Several Millions—Fighting Philosophy Adopted in Youth.

San Francisco.—His life slogan had been: "Don't weaken! What is age? Courage is the thing! Refuse to be beaten!"

So when, at the age of sixty-five, Francis M. ("Borax") Smith found that his $20,000,000 fortune was gone and that he was not only "broke" but in debt to the tune of several millions, he didn't contemplate suicide. Nor did he quit.

Today, at the age of seventy-three, he is master of another fortune of several millions and fighting with both fists to regain his lost title of "Borax King." And if he runs true to form he's likely to get it.

An accident, occurring when he was twenty-eight, caused "Borax" Smith to adopt his fighting philosophy. He had purchased a small timber claim in Nevada and taken contract to supply with fuel a Nevada mine. One day he returned to find four Mexicans and an Indian, all armed, cutting down his wood. Smith had but four cartridges and a rifle. But, thought he, the intruders did not know that. Did he dare tackle five of them?

"Don't weaken!" said his courage. He fired two shots. The trespassers fled.

It was from his timber claim that he first saw upon the adjacent desert the broad white streaks that later were to make his first fortune. His borax discovery meant little if "you weakened." There was but little demand for it and the price was high. About 600 tons a year was used, he recalls.

News of his discovery caused a terrific slump in value. His associates quit.

"Don't weaken!" said his courage. Smith stuck. He accumulated a fortune of some $25,000,000, but only after he had lone-handedly packed borax out of the desert and created a big market for it.

Then, with a large income to invest, Smith became interested in a fast ferry system between San Francisco and Oakland which, it is held, practically made the city of Oakland. Huge expenditures were involved and the railroad competition came. At the age of sixty-five he had developed cities, but lost his fortune and plunged into debt.

"Don't weaken!" said his courage. He saw his borax holdings sold to pay loans. But also he recalled that many years back he had been one of the company interested in a silver claim that, to all appearances, would not produce. Smith had thought differently and put in $100,000, taking stock in payment. This he had turned over to his wife just before the crash came. And now in his extremity, the mine was coming to his rescue.

Stakes All—Wins.
He at once went after borax deposits in the Searles lake region, secured leases after a hard fight in Washington, and made the mine pay for his initial equipment. If it failed the mine was lost—and there was some reason to believe that it might. Just then came word that three prospectors had found a borax mine in Nevada, near the Grand Canyon. He rode 80 miles on horseback into the desert to get there. He didn't have time to appraise the property, for competitors were in the field. He had to act at once and only upon his judgment.

"Don't weaken!" said his courage. He closed the deal for a quarter of a million. And he was seventy-three. If he judged wrong his last card was gone. He took the mine while astonished rivals looked on.

Today the firm announces that there is $24,000,000 worth of borax in sight there.

So he has no cause to regret his slogan: "Courage is the thing! What is age? Don't weaken."

ROYALTY NOW MUST WORK

Princesses Must Obey Labor Law in Bulgaria.

King's Sisters Are Not Immune, Says the Peasant Premier Stamboulsky—All Women Up to 30 Must Work Ten Days a Year.

Sofia.—Even King Boris' two sisters, the Princesses Eudoxia and Nadejda, will be obliged to contribute their share of work to the Bulgarian state under the new compulsory labor law, which requires all women up to thirty years of age to give at least ten days of their time every year in useful work to the community.

This ruling has been made by the stern peasant premier, Alexander Stamboulsky, the most powerful man in Bulgaria and maker and breaker of kings.

Bulgarian women, said the premier, will be compelled to make garments and bed linen for hospitals, contribute useful labor to orphanages and asylums, help to care for the poor and so on. Girls under twenty years old will be obliged for a period of three months in each year to study domestic science and the useful arts so that they may become more productive to society and contribute to the common good.

Premier Stamboulsky says that one of the causes of Bulgaria's rapid recovery from the war is the work done for the state by what is called here the volunteer labor army. He estimates the value of this work at 380,000,000 leva (nominally worth about 19 cents each).

"The volunteer army has been an entire success," said M. Stamboulsky. "It has built roads, streets, waterways, bridges, canals, warehouses, schools, hospitals and sanitary systems. It has drained swamps, tilled the land and planted trees."

The premier pointed out that Bulgaria now has a law prohibiting the sale of liquor at bars, unless the voters decide they want it. "You see," he said, "we are following somewhat in the path of you Americans in regard to prohibition. Some day Bulgaria may be completely dry."

Both lumber mills at Flagstaff, Ariz., have been opened with orders sufficient to keep them in operation for a long period.

Several Douglas, Ariz., men are planning to organize a county fair association with an capitalization of several thousand dollars.

Mrs. H. A. Gould, chairman of the Arizona State Child Welfare Board, will withdraw from all official duties in connection with the state and general federation of women's clubs.

A measure directed against the Ku Klux Klan which is believed to have an Arizona organization, has been introduced in the House by Representative T. A. Matthews of Graham county, Arizona.

The bond issue for $45,000 voted on at the election held in Roswell, carried by a vote of 9 to 1, there being practically no opposition. This is the first issue for public improvements in Roswell since 1908.

The Salt River Valley Water Users' Association will be a self-supporting organization during the 1922-23 year for the first time since the construction of the Roosevelt dam, according to tentative operating budget.

Two Maricopa county motorcycle officers were injured, one fatally, when their machines collided recently while they were chasing an automobile speeder. The accident occurred on the Tempe road one mile east of Phoenix.

Five justice of the peace precincts in Pima county, Arizona, were abolished by the board of supervisors. The elimination of the precincts will be effective Jan. 1, 1923, and will, it is expected, result in the saving of $25,000 a year to the county.

Secretary Weeks declined to send federal troops into New Mexico in response to a telegram from Governor M. C. Sheehan, who said he might need them to preserve order in the Gallup coal fields, where martial law has been declared, as a result of disorders incident to the coal strike.

After a conference in Nogales between the sheriff and members of the board of supervisors, wages of four deputy sheriffs of Santa Cruz county, Arizona, were ordered cut from $150 to $125 a month. This action was taken due to the fact that the salary account of the sheriff is said to be overdrawn.

Arizona is morally obligated to its employees injured or killed while in the discharge of their duties, and can legally extend relief to such injured persons or their beneficiaries. That, in effect, is the opinion of the State Supreme Court, contained in a decision in the case of Gordon Huntington, one of the four state highway employees injured in a delayed blast on the Tempe road about two years ago.

Owing to the long dry spell in the Lincoln national forest, plans are now being made for the fire guard for the 1922 season, and it is likely that the force will be the largest ever put in the forest.

C. C. Stinson, secretary to Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, has been in Santa Fe to arrange for the final meeting of the Colorado river basin commission which, he said, will be held in Santa Fe in July or August. Gov. M. C. Mechem of New Mexico said that in addition to the members of the commission representing the seven interested states, several of the governors of those states are expected to be in attendance.

Evacuation of homes on company lands by striking miners and their families at Gallup, N. M., started following the military order issued for the entire mining district now under martial law. Unmarried striking miners were given three hours to move off the lands. Married miners were allowed a reasonable time to move their families. The evacuation was carried out in a peaceful manner, none of the men offering resistance to the order.

The regular meeting of the Portales Brownroot Association was held in Portales, when the question of seed for the coming season was discussed. It was voted to secure 500 pounds of seed from Oklahoma and distribute this to the farmers in time for the planting of the crop.

MADE POOR RENT COLLECTOR

Indianapolis Man Evidently Too Good-Natured to Succeed in That Line of Business.

Bachelor Joe Stokes, the druggist, never gets peace from his story-telling friends.

Joe owns some rental property in one of the industrial districts. Things have been a bit slow in industry lately and Joe has had trouble collecting his rents. His real estate broker constantly was returning word that he could not collect.

"I'll go out and collect it myself," Mr. Stokes said, a bit peevishly—that is, if Joe ever gets that way.

Anyhow, a day or two later Joe started out on a rental collection tour. Late that afternoon he returned to his drug store. An unusual little smile was working at the corners of Joe's mouth.

"Any luck?" one of the clerks inquired.

"Any luck? Boy, you're crazy! Instead of paying me, they borrowed money from me everywhere I went."—Indianapolis News.

Neutral. A prisoner in court was asked the usual question—"Guilty or not guilty?" "Yes," responded the man at the bar.

"What's that?" asked the judge. "I was asked whether I was guilty or not guilty, and of course I am! Of the two conditions I could not well escape both."

HAD TO HAVE CONSERVATORY

Most Parents of Six Marriageable Daughters Will Sympathize With This Home Seeker.

Charles M. Schwab said at a reception in New York:

"The world is bunkering after disarmament and universal peace as the househunter bunkered after a conservatory."

"A househunter was looking for a cheap, smallish home with a large conservatory. The agent showed him a number of homes, but as they all lacked conservatories the hunter turned them down. Finally the agent said in a disgusted tone:

"Of course I thought your conservatory idea was just a whim. A cheap nine-room house with a conservatory! Why man, it ain't to be found. What's the reason you're so crazy after a conservatory, anyhow?"

"Well, confidentially," said the househunter, "it's like this. Wife and I have got six daughters, and all six have had young fellows kind of spunk in round 'em for a long time; so what we need, you see, is a conservatory. The girls want somewhere to do the ripenin' off in."

PARKER'S HAIR BALM

HAIR NETS AND ARMENIANS

Interesting Comparison Between Cost of the Former and the Clothing of the Latter.

The hair net industry wears would clothe several orphan children in Armenia for more than six months. That is, the cost of them would. Even Armenian orphans are sometimes more modest than milady.

Experts have figured that $1.80 will completely attire in unbleached muslin garments a child of the Far East relief orphanages of the Transcaucasian famine zones for six months. And experts also figure that milady's bill for hair nets during a like period would be in considerable excess of that amount, depending upon—well, upon several things. Hair nets are of uncertain durability under any circumstances. And milady is not always over cautious. Even an expert testifies to hazard some guesses.

The Near East relief has just purchased 300,000 yards of unbleached muslin for summer garments for its wards in Transcaucasia. Where is there a bill-madness household head ungrateful enough to remark that a country full of orphans is not the greatest liability in the world?—Chicago Evening Post.

When Will There Be A Disarmament of Dining Tables?

Suppose everybody would recognize the fact that there's no gain but much loss in keeping up hostilities with the stomach!

Suppose the ancient aggravation of improper food on indignant digestive organs should be settled with guarantees of sensible diet and tranquil digestion!

The saving would be beyond all possibility of counting.

Yet millions go on declaring war on the stomach and accepting war in return—loading up on starchy, heavy, unbalanced and highly-seasoned food at breakfast or lunch—and wondering why comfort, happiness and efficiency are out of reach.

Grape-Nuts makes a friend of the taste and an ally of the stomach.

There's a charm and satisfaction to this delicious food which prompts appetite to say, "There's a meal!" and digestion to answer, "Thank goodness, here's peace at last!"

Grape-Nuts is the perfected nutriment of wheat and malted barley—sweet, crisp, and wonderfully nourishing. It digests quickly, and provides the necessary elements, including the vital mineral salts, for body, nerve and brain.

Order Grape-Nuts from your grocer today, and let a delighted taste pass a treaty of peace along to an enthusiastic digestion and assimilation.

LET'S CLEAN UP

Come on, let's put things in order. Our whole town can and should be made as clean and orderly as its cleanest home. Then we will have a safer, happier, healthier place in which to live.

Audition in its highest conception is to dress big dreams and make them come true. The splendid ambition to have a city clean and beautiful is soon realized when a community co-operates in that direction.

Away with the rubbish piles! Banish the plague spots! Clean up streets and alleys! Cut the weeds! Repair and paint every building that needs it.

We need this thorough cleaning and renovation. It is the sensible thing to do—for the health, safety, thrift, pride and happiness of our people.

It is everybody's job. Every man, woman and child will be expected to help. There should be no slackers.

The playlet, "Spotless Town," given by the school children last Saturday night prompts this article, although we have been contemplating taking up the matter of cleaning up the town for the last several issues.

It is a good time for smecting of the local chamber of commerce and unions, for the express purpose of laying plans for the clean-up work.

The Patagonian will donate its share of the money necessary to carry the campaign through to a successful conclusion.

PROSPECTS IN DEMAND

A gradually increasing demand for prospects of merit is noted in almost every section devoted to mining, says the Silverton Standard. Men who are financially able to give a property the required development are behind the increasing inquiry. They are willing to meet the owners of a prospect more than half way. They are willing to spend good money to prove to a degree of certainty the merit of a prospect, and are ready to buy a property that will stand a reasonable test. Owners of likely prospects should realize their inability to give an average property the work necessary to indicate its producing ability and should co-operate in all ways possible with men who are thus prepared. It will be a matter of holding on for a longer time, or making the development and sale of a property a possibility.

HIGH PRICES FOR FUEL OILS

Higher prices are anticipated for fuel oils as a result of the coal strike situation.

Public service corporations and railroads that must continue operating will consume large quantities of oil, and in addition the resumption of mining operations in the copper districts will further bring about increased consumption. Favor to the shut down of the copper mines in the mining districts of Arizona and New Mexico was announced in exchange for a 10-cent rebate on the price of oil, which was dropped to 70 cents a barrel when the mines closed.

Further demand for fuel oils for motor will materially increase during the spring and summer months and this demand has already started, and the outlook for the refinery interests is decidedly encouraging.

MINING LAW REVISION

The hearing before the house committee on mining and mining on proposed revision of the mining laws is scheduled to commence on April 27, when anyone wishing to appear will be heard by the committee. Sentiment expressed to date in the metal mining districts of the United States is practically unanimous in opposition to revision. The old laws have been tried out, while new laws and regulations are in the interim quantity.

STORIES TOLD OF WEBSTER

Interesting to Learn That Marvelous Orator Was, After All, Much Like the Ordinary Man.

We hear so much about the learning and the "godlike eloquence" of Daniel Webster that it is refreshing to read an anecdote that presents the man in a more human and less imposing light.

Once, says a chapter of life in old Washington, Webster arrived late at a concert that the famous Jenny Lind was giving and entered just as she was to sing "Hail Columbia" as an encore. When she sang the first note Webster jumped to his feet, and when she reached the chorus he joined his powerful bass voice with hers. In vain Mrs. Webster tried to drag him back into his seat. He supported the singer in every chorus, and each time when the song was ended he made a deep bow to her and waved his hat. Miss Lind curtsied to him in return, and he bowed again. To the delight of the audience they continued the little comedy of etiquette for some time.

One day when Webster was going to make an address his wife brought their little son to hear his father. The orator began in the thunderous tone for which he was famous. "Will my little son dare to say—" he demanded and then paused to sweep his breathless audience with a javelin glance.

But the climax of this awe-inspiring sentence was lost in a gale of laughter, for a wee voice promptly piped from the gallery: "oh, no, papa, no, no!"—Youth's Companion.

TAKES HIGH RANK AS CRITIC

Friend Paid Tribute to James Huneker's Virtues as a Writer—Fearless and Stimulating.

If one were to choose one word that was to sum up all of Huneker's virtues, one would say that he was refreshing, writes Norman T. Byrne in Scribner's. He was an inextinguishable breath of fresh air that denigrated the starchy rooms of a critic's grown didactic and lifeless. Life and vigor were typified by his style—a stream of sparkling phrases set in a rhythmic prose that borrowed much from his musical training.

He was well versed in the seven arts, and if his knowledge of some of them was not always profound, his love of them was sincere, and the manner in which he criticized each one in terms of the other is a continuing delight to his reader. His taste, entirely European in character, was rarely at fault. He was asked in by some things that were ephemeral, yet he rarely failed to notice each rising star of genius. His defense was fearless and his article always stimulating. Never didactic, never pedantic, if he was found wanting in philosophical ballast he did possess that sense of esthetic value that the scholar too often lacks and that the critic must have. That was Huneker's forte—his taste and his verve.

Trees' Slow Development.

The slow development of the trunks of certain trees at once calls up images of immobility and eternity. The dragon's blood tree of the Canaries awakens such thoughts. Three feet across at its base, its trunk, its vast size and its antiquity, this dragon's blood tree is equally so for the stationary condition of its growth. In the legend of Tenerife we are told that this singular tree was worshipped by the Guanches, its original inhabitants; and it is related that in the fifteenth century a man was celebrated in the interior of its trunk, a fact even lately attested by the vestiges which were seen of a little altar.

This tree grows so slowly that after a tolerably long interval of time it was not possible to verify any change in its circumference.

Indian's Mystery Carving.

A wonderful bit of wood carving in the museum of the Minnesota Historical society was done by a deaf and dumb Chippewa Indian at White Earth reservation.

Inside a small whisky bottle are the figures of a boy and a dog standing beside a large wheel. Every bit of the construction is of wood, which is brightly colored. How the Indian got all his figures through the narrow neck of the bottle, and how he got his grouping arranged and stuck together is a mystery. Even the neck of the bottle is curved with a big wooden plug on the inside as well as on the outside.

Nobody knows how the Indian got the wood inside the bottle, and the Indian, being dumb, never told.

"Original Packages."

In American constitutional law the news the package in which goods are shipped from one state to another. The United States courts held that where an article is imported into one state from another, it does not lose the protection of the interstate commerce clause, while the original package remains unbroken out to the property of the importer. Interpretation of these decisions made it possible to evade state laws by selling direct to the customers in "original packages." The importance of this is in its bearing on the sale of cigarettes and other commodities about which state laws differ.

Guilty Suffer Doubly.

Guilt has always its horrors and solidities; and to make it yet more shameful and detestable, it is doomed often to stand in awe of those to whom nothing could give influence or weight but their power of betraying—Johnston.

Earth's Quiet Spots.

Arid deserts occur in all of the great land divisions and reach on enormous extent in Africa, Asia and Australia. The most pronounced desert conditions of South America are found on the western slopes and benches of the Andes. One locality, that of Copalim, has an average precipitation of 0.4 inches a year, and so far as known is the driest spot on the earth's surface.—New York Herald.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Breakfast and Its Relation to Health

(By HELEN BARR)

Some Food Factors

Fruits add a great deal to the attractiveness of the diet. They are also laxative—a good reason for having fruit every morning for breakfast, if it can be afforded. Some of the fruits (especially oranges and lemons), like some of the vegetables, prevent scurvy. Babies should have orange juice, tomato juice, or some other scurvy preventing food (antiscorbutic) as soon as they are placed on cow's milk.

Fruits should be regarded as food and taken with meals. Stewed fruit makes an excellent dessert for one meal a day, preferably a noon meal. Little children should have only the strained juice or pulp of oranges or stewed prunes for the first three years, then well-cooked fruit mashed soft. Raw fruit should not be given to children under six unless mashed, and no raw fruit should be allowed which is not perfectly ripe. Dried fruits are more economical than fresh, and where fresh vegetables are used may largely take the place of fresh fruits.

Sweets are apt to injure children's appetites and cause under-feeding. They should come at the end of a meal, after the more important foods have been eaten. Foods requiring sugar for flavoring should be lightly sweetened. Sweet fruits are preferable to confectionery, easier to digest and adding more building material for the growing child. Preserves should not be given to little children at all and bread and jam should be regarded as a kind of dessert for older children. Some bread in every meal should be eaten without sweets of any kind.

Candy should be sparingly eaten, and only after meals. All told, a child's daily sugar supply should not exceed one tablespoon up to 7 years—and two tablespoons up to 12 years.

Molasses is more desirable than cane sugar, as it contains lime and other mineral salts absent from sugar.

Water is an important part of a child's diet and should be taken systematically, a glass or rising and one between each two meals being a regular part of the day's program. A drink just before each meal allays thirst and puts the child in better condition to eat his meal. During the meal of a child no water is needed, as a glass of milk, a cup of cocoa or a corresponding amount of soup generally supplies enough fluid.

PAID TRIBUTE TO VIOLINIST

Nashville Woman's Graceful Act Met With Equal Courtesy From Famous Ole Bull.

Ole Bull, the famous Norwegian violinist, on a visit to Nashville, Tenn., sometime in the forties, was invited to play in a rude hall, where but a rudely constructed platform had been erected, and the rough boards had not even been carpeted.

A lady who was known as an accomplished musician and one of the most elegant women in Nashville, noticed this. In order to convey her admiration for the artist and her regret for the commonness of the surroundings, she took off her large costly black velvet mantle and spread it out smoothly on the rough floor near the edge of the stage where he would be expected to stand.

A few moments later the great master appeared on the stage and the audience eagerly watched to see what he would do. He advanced bowing and smiling and as he reached the handsome mantle lying there he made another courtesy bow.

Then he stepped to one side, drew his bow across the strings of the violin and began to play.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Chinese Idea of Assassination.

The Chinese have peculiar notions concerning assassination. The man who killed the German minister, von Kettler, during the Boxer outbreak, is looked on by the Chinese as a national hero. The commemorative arch which the Germans forced on the Chinese as a monument for their disgrace for murdering the representative of a foreign power, was understood by the people at large to be a lasting memorial to the man who had committed the deed.

When the arch was removed by the Chinese after they declared war on Germany, the people were of the opinion that either he or one of his family had committed some crime of such a nature that the honor that had been conferred on him had been withdrawn by the government.

Good Whistler Story.

"One of Whistler's stories was of Burne-Jones and himself going to a country fair and wandering into a sideshow to see a tattooed lady—and he was afraid to say how many subjects were tattooed on her—on one knee the American Eagle, on the other, the Union Jack, and on her back Leonardo's Last Supper. And she really was amazing, and they enjoyed it hugely. Some four or five years afterward, in London, Burne-Jones burst in upon Whistler, and told him the same tattooed lady was at the Aquarium, and they must go and see her again. And they went and she had grown very stout in the meanwhile and when they looked at the Last Supper, all the apostles wore a broad grin."—From "The Whistler Journal" by E. H. and J. P. Barr.

HOW SOUND IS TRANSMITTED

Vibration of the Air Brings It to the Ear—Travels Faster in Summer Than in Winter.

Sound is transmitted to the ear by the vibration of the air. When one particle of air is made to vibrate it sets the adjacent particles to vibrating, and so a sound wave, if not obstructed, passes in all directions from the sounding body. The calculated velocity of sound in the air when the temperature is at freezing point is 915.00 feet per second. When the temperature increases, sound travels faster, and the rate has been calculated at a little more than one foot per second for each degree of rise in Fahrenheit's thermometer. Contrary to popular belief, sound travels faster in summer than in winter, and in warm than in cold climates. It might be thought that sound would travel more slowly through a dense atmosphere, but the elasticity increases as rapidly as the density, and, therefore, the velocity of sound is not affected by varying density. The velocity of sound in water, when at the greatest density, is 4,707.4 feet per second. The experiments by which this velocity was determined were made by M. Colladon, in 1826, across the Lake of Geneva, from Rolle to Thonon, a distance of about nine miles. Water, therefore, transmits sound four times as fast as air does.

LIVE THOUSANDS OF YEARS

Idea That Some Trees Are Immortal Has Been Gravely Asserred by Many Naturalists.

The idea of immortality in trees is often met with in the works of the ancient, observes a writer in the New York Sun. The historian, Josephus, in his "Jewish War," relates that in his day there was near the city of Elbona a tamarisk tree which was as old as the days of Adam.

It was reserved for modern naturalists to show that these assertions, however extraordinary they may appear, are still correct, and that many of our trees in some sort indestructible may have seen the final scene of creation itself, after leaving the action of so many ages, are still upright and living to this day.

It is now over a hundred years since Adanson, by ingenious calculations, showed the learned that such trees, though extraordinary, are yet facts of the most scrupulous exactitude. This naturalist, in his "Vegetation," found in the interior of the trunk of the baobab in one of the Cape Verde Islands an inscription which had been traced on it by the English 300 years previously. Starting from this point and comparing the diameters of the stems of many of these bulky trees, the French savant succeeded in proving that the most vigorous of these primitive inhabitants of the African forests might be at least 5,000 years old.

TRULY WERE GOLDEN CHIMES

Cells Cut in Ancient Mexican Village Composed in Large Part of Precious Metals.

In the Mexican state of Sonora, at the headwaters of the Rio Mayo, is the ancient mining village of Tzupa, which in early days was famous for the sweet-toned bells cast there from copper procured in the neighborhood.

It was from Tzupa that chimas of bells were obtained for many missions on the Pacific coast, and from the same source came bells that were hunted by ox teams across the desert to mission settlements in Arizona and New Mexico. There was one such settlement at Sibila, Arizona, established by Franciscan monks, which got its chime of bells from Tzupa.

Some of these bells are still in existence, their tones as sweet as ever. Many of them have been melted in latter days for the gold and silver they contained. The sweetness of their music, in fact, was due to the circumstance that about 25 per cent of the crudely refined copper from which they were cast was silver and gold—Millwaukeé Sentinel.

SHUT OUT WATER AND DUST

Nature Has Provided for the Hermetic Closing of Nostrils of Seal and Camel.

Most of us when we go in for diving have the very unpleasant experience of getting our nostrils full of water. Nature did not design man to be a diving animal, otherwise she would have been as clever with his nose as she has been with his ears, London Tit-Bits says.

The seal is, without doubt, the cleverest diver in the animal world, and his nose is a very ingenious contrivance indeed. Each nostril is provided with a valve which closes it hermetically at the diver's will. And the shape of the nose is such that when the nostrils are closed not a drop of water can enter.

STABLE BOY TO STATESMAN

Engl-hman Born in Humble Circumstances Made Place for Himself Among the Great.

Perhaps no man of modern times has passed a more varied and romantic life than Thomas Ward, who commenced life as a stable boy and who later became famous as a statesman, the intimate of kings and the player of a prominent role at the court of Parma.

Ward, who was born at York-shire, Eng., in 1810, entered the service of Prince Liechtenstein of Hungary at an early age, and soon made a name for himself as a jockey in Vienna. In 1836 he was made master of the horse at the court of the duke of Lucca, proving his efficiency by reducing expenses more than 50 per cent—achievement of which proof of his ability he was sent to Florence on a confidential mission of the highest importance in 1848. But shortly afterward the duke's rule was terminated by a revolution, and Ward became an active agent of Austria, recovering the hereditary estates of Parma and Piacenza. As a reward, he was made prime minister and sent as an envoy, first to Vienna and later to St. Petersburg.

After the assassination of the youthful Charles III, when the throne had placed upon the throne of Parma, Ward retired from public life and took to agricultural pursuits in Austria.

When he died, carrying with him many secrets connected with the leading families of Europe, this man who started as a stable boy bore no less than nineteen distinguished titles, among them several conferred by the reigning houses of Austria, Germany and Russia.

NOT VERY FAR FROM CORRECT

Marjorie's "Theme" Short and to the Point—Had at Least the Merit of Conciseness.

The teacher had assigned a task to the children that was causing them considerable trouble. They were to write a short theme on "What Makes Great Cities," having 15 minutes to devote to the subject. Marjorie sat chewing the end of her pencil, her mind apparently a blank. Five minutes passed and still she had not written a word. Then minutes went by and Marjorie's paper was still a blank, 15 minutes minutes. Fourteen.

"Only one minute more, children," the teacher announced. "Fold your papers lengthwise and write your name and the subject on the outside."

All at once Marjorie came to action. She wrote frantically and when the final minute was up she handed her paper in with the rest, correctly folded and labeled.

Curiosity got the better of the teacher, and at the first opportunity she slipped Marjorie's paper out of the pile on her desk.

"Marjorie Jones," was written boldly on the outside. "Subject—What Makes Great Cities."

The teacher opened the paper and found therein one written word—covering the subject more or less adequately. That word was: "People!"

Trees of Great Age.

The time tree at Merat, planted at Erlbourg on the day of the celebrated battle, is one of the oldest trees in Europe. This glorious event in the history of Switzerland, having occurred in 1175, the venerated tree, which is encircled by a colonnade and of which the aged branches are upheld by a framework of wood, must be almost 550 years old.

The fir attains a still greater age. In some of the most ancient forests of Germany, situated on the summit of the Wurzelburg in Thuringia, as many as 700 annual layers have been counted on some of the trees cut down there.

The olive tree, so revered in ancient Greece and which inspired such beautiful verses in the tragedy of Medea by Sophocles, reached a much greater age, according to the ancient myth. Pliny even asserts that in his time this celebrated olive tree which Minerva caused to spring from the ground at the time of the foundation of the city of Capri was still to be seen in the "Isle of Athens."

MANY LEGENDS OF THE OAK

Tree's Grandeur and Beauty Seem to Have Inspired Each Ancient Race in Turn.

The ancient races, struck with the noble aspect of the oak, have in all ages bestowed it in the legends of their legends and carried it back to the remotest antiquity. It is the oak that was the holy oak, which in the days of King will and near Rome on the banks of which was an Etruscan inscription in letters of brass stating that before the extinction of the Etruscan city it was already the object of popular veneration. The Roman naturalist also asserts that in the environs of Hercules, in the kingdom of Pontus, there was a tradition that two oaks which overtopped the altar of Jupiter straggled had been planted by Heracles. The origin of certain trees is lost in even more antiquity.

The imposing tower of the Hop-cypress forest has deeply impressed all those who have described Germany, and Piny and Tacitus especially. The aged oaks of its border sales, where wandered the oak and the apostles, especially aroused the admiration of the Roman historian. "The majestic grandeur of the oak in this forest," he says, "surpasses all imaginable belief; this tree has never been touched with the ax; it is contemporary with the eruption of the world and appears to be the symbol of immortality."

Fresh oaks removed regularly to erect a monument to the City Market.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

British and French Premiers Given Votes of Confidence on Genoa Policies.

FORMER MAKES GREAT SPEECH

Russians Warned Partial Recognition Depends on Good Behavior—De Valera Trying to Upset Irish Free State—Progress of the Coal Miners' Strike.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

HAVING triumphed over his enemies with a vote of confidence—872 to 94—in the house of commons, Premier Lloyd George, instead of resigning, has gone to Genoa to lay before the economic conference his plans for the regeneration of Europe. On the same day as the British test Premier Poincaré laid his foreign policies before the French chamber of deputies, and they were approved by a vote of 484 to 78. Whereupon he also decided to attend the conference as soon as his official duties at home would permit. Both the British and the French have been growing more hopeful daily that good and definite results will come from the Genoa meeting.

Probably Lloyd George never made a more effective speech than that which preceded the vote of the commons. He spoke for an hour and a half, setting forth eloquently the conditions that his country and Europe generally face, and replying with humor and keen satire to the attacks of his opponents, who frequently joined in the applause. Defending the limitations placed on the scope of the conference, harking the discussion of revision of boundaries and reparations, he argued that no one of his hearers would wish to go back on the clauses of the treaty of Versailles by which Alsace-Lorraine was restored to France, Poland resurrected and the independence of the Slavonic populations of Austria-Hungary recognized. Nor, said he, was there any use criticizing the reparations, since to alter these would simply transfer the burden from Germany to France, England and Belgium, but mainly to France. He asserted France should not be asked or expected to forego the right she won at such cost, or to submit to the judgment of a conference in which not only her former enemies but also neutrals are represented. Germany's ultimate capacity to pay, he added, must not be judged by her capacity at this moment. Discussing the main theme of the conference, the establishment of peace, credits, currency, exchange, transports and the machinery of international trade, the premier dealt largely with Russia and he believed his present rulers had brought into a new frame of mind by the famine and would now recognize the conditions imposed and accepted by civilized communities, acknowledging Russia's debts and promising to cease their attacks on the institutions of other countries. He pledged that there would be no full diplomatic recognition of the soviet government until the powers should be entirely satisfied that Russia was really endeavoring to carry out the terms of such an undertaking.

Mr. Lloyd George may have been over-optimistic about the repentance of the Russians. The soviet delegates became more and more cocky as they made their way toward Genoa, and in Berlin they arranged for close co-operation with the German delegation, reached an economic understanding with Chancellor Wirth and Foreign Minister Rathenau and made agreements with the representatives of German industry and finance. Rathenau explains that his accord with the Russians is due to the position taken by the allies on the reparations. Among the recent demands made on Germany by the reparations commission is the payment of 60,000,000,000 marks in increased taxation. This demand, it is said, the German government has rejected, claiming it is an invasion of Germany's sovereign rights. Great Britain last week gave a full to her debtor nations in Europe by notifying them that they must begin paying interest on their debts to her next October, or make some new arrangement then, so that Britain can pay the interest on what she owes the United States. The French believes this will cause the whole matter of inter-allied debts to be brought up in the Genoa conference.

MICHAEL COLLINS and his provisional government of the Irish Free State are facing a critical situation and it is a debatable question whether they will survive officially. This despite the fact that the British government is assembling large bodies of troops to go to their support in case of necessity. It is believed De Valera and the radical republicans are planning the establishment of a military dictatorship, and continuous raids and outrages by republican bands lend support to this belief. Murders, ambushes and seizures of arms are of daily occurrence, and in northwest Ireland it is said large districts which had supported the Free State have gone over to the republican camp. As was intimated in these columns last week, the peace pact between the Free State and Ulster is quite ineffective in restoring peace to the island. Catholics and Protestants, Free States and republicans, are in never ceasing conflict, and when they cannot do better the Irish get up "private fights."

CHARLES, ex-emperor of Austria-Hungary, who died of pneumonia at Funchal, Madeira, may have left a legacy of trouble for some of his former subjects. On the receipt of the news of his death, the royalists of Hungary got busy and started a movement to declare his son Otto, nine years old, king of that country. The legitimists in the parliament planned to introduce a measure for Otto's immediate return to Hungary and his education under Hungarian teachers. There is no likelihood that a majority of the Hungarian people would favor restoration of the Hapsburg dynasty, but that the allies would permit it.

OPPOSITION to the allied plans for reviving the Turkish empire is growing in Greece, Thrace and Smyrna, especially protest against being restored to the sultan, the former demanding the status quo and the latter autonomy. The Thracian deputies in the Greek chamber have wired to President Harding, Secretary Hughes and the chancellors of other nations that "the Greeks in Thrace would sooner die than return to Turk slavery." London hears that the Greeks of Smyrna are ready to revolt and set up an independent state rather than have the land turned over to Turkey. They have an active committee in London and are raising money among Greeks everywhere. It is believed the leaders in this movement may use Smyrna as an excuse for a coup to return Venizelos to power in Greece.

ALTHOUGH efforts to bring about agreements that will end the coal miners' strike are continuous, it cannot be said that they are meeting with any conspicuous success. The league committee on labor is taking the lead in these efforts and through its chairman, Representative Nolan, invited the miners and the bituminous operators of the central competitive field to a joint conference. The operators of western Pennsylvania and southern Ohio already had refused to take part in such a conference, but President Lewis of the mine workers said the men would accept the invitation if sufficient tonnage was represented. Then declarations were received by Mr. Nolan from practically all the other groups of operators, chiefly because they felt a conference of fragments of the central field would be unavailing. Besides, they asserted they had been and still were willing to meet the miners of their own states or districts for separate wage settlements.

In the anthracite field the conditions were more promising, for the miners' and operators' subcommittee was in continuous session in New York and both sides were submitting their cases. In non-unionized regions a good many mines were in operation, but the union organizers were busy and claimed to have made large gains there. This the operators disputed. The great majority of the strikers are enough. The question whether 600,000 skilled engineers will be forced into idleness hangs on negotiations between the employers and the union, brought about by the intervention of Prime Minister George.

enjoying their period of leisure and making plans for extensive fishing and camping trips. In Kansas the industrial court ordered that the present wage agreement be continued for thirty days, and the Southwestern Coal Operators' association agreed to this. The operators declare that the ultimate goal of the union miners is the nationalization of the coal industry, and of course they oppose this, though they are not able to confute the assertion that the industry is, as Secretary Hoover says, one of the worst functioning industries in the country. It is always in a chaotic condition, as regards both production and distribution. When President Lewis went before the house committee to present the case of the strikers, he said the miners could see no permanent solution of their difficulties without nationalization of the coal mines. But questions brought out that while he would favor the establishment of a governing board to bring about stabilization of the industry, controlling the production, distribution and price of coal, he would oppose the proposal of a tribunal with power to fix wages. Naturally he did not get far with such a one-sided proposition.

ONE THOUSAND AND SIXTY-FOUR bodies, last of America's dead to be brought from the cemeteries of France, were landed last week at Brooklyn and the heroes were honored with a solemn parade and impressive funeral ceremonies at the army base there. Prominent army and navy officers, high representatives of the government, governors of several states and many other distinguished persons took part, and President Harding sent a message and a wreath.

IN THE presence of President and Mrs. Harding, cabinet members, high government officials and Arctic explorers, a handsome memorial was placed Thursday on the grave of Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary in Arlington national cemetery. Following a suggestion made by Peary during his last illness, it is in the form of a huge spheroid of granite, representing the earth, with the North pole, which he discovered, marked by a gold star. The memorial was unveiled by Admiral Peary's daughter, Mrs. Edward Stafford, who has been in the Arctic regions and was long known as the "Snow Baby."

PRESIDENT HARDING has not yet specified the demand that he give the reason for the sudden dismissal of Director Wilmoth and all division superintendents of the bureau of printing and engraving, merely stating that it was for the good of the service. Louis A. Hill was made director and a committee began checking up the stock of the bureau. Reports that there had been a wholesale duplication of Liberty bonds were at first denied, but later Mr. Hill admitted there might be basis for the rumor. This bureau cleanup started talk of impending wholesale dismissals in other departments.

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY DENNY has taken official notice of the activities of certain reasonable societies "having their origin in foreign countries" and has warned the officers and men of the navy to be wary of their "sinister propaganda to undermine the morale of the navy and to insinuate into its personnel elements of dissoluteness and disorder."

REPRESENTATIVE TINKHAM of Massachusetts, a consistent opponent of the Anti-Saloon League, made a hot attack on that organization on the floor of the house, denouncing its political activities and charging it and its subsidaries have frequently violated the federal statutes by making false returns. He admitted it would be useless to ask a congressional inquiry because the league controls congress completely, and therefore he made a public request that the Department of Justice investigate the facts he had submitted.

The latest display of the power of the Anti-Saloon League was the passage by the house of a bill for the deportation of aliens who violate the prohibition and narcotic laws. Several members protested that the bill merely made the United States safe for Alphonse Legros, but it went through by a vote of 222 to 73.

The effect on unemployment returns will be serious. Registered unemployed persons on March 23 numbered 1,792,975, which figure, although large, was a reduction of 172,000 from that of ten weeks before.

The February foreign trade returns were not encouraging as compared with January, both imports and exports substantially declining. Exports dropped off nearly 5,000,000 and imports more than 7,000,000, some of the decrease being due to the short month.

Disregarding the demands and insistent appeals of President Harding and Secretary of the Navy Denby, the House appropriations committee in a bill laid before the House recommended a slash of nearly $200,000,000 in the Navy Department's estimates for the coming fiscal year and provided for a reduction in the navy's enlisted personnel from 101,000 to 67,000.

Mexican river guards, after commanding him to halt, shot Capt. W. W. Whyte of the Eighty-second Field Artillery, Fort Bliss, to death while he was trying to cross the river on horseback, according to a report made by the commander of the guards at El Paso.

$525 IN PRIZES FOR THE BEST RHYMES

A new contest is just being started which will interest every woman and girl who reads this paper. Any woman or girl can enter this Contest—anyone can win! All it is necessary to do is to write a 4-line rhyme on Dr. Price's Phosphate Baking Powder, using only the words which appear either on the label of the Dr. Price can (front and back) or on the printed slip which is found in each Dr. Price can. Isn't that easy? Everyone likes to make rhymes and here is a chance to spend a fascinating hour or two writing rhymes on this popular Baking Powder and perhaps winning a substantial prize for your efforts.

59 CASH PRIZES

For the rhyme selected as best a prize of $100 will be given; for the second, third and fourth best rhymes prizes of $75, $50 and $25, respectively, will be given. And besides these prizes there will be 55 prizes of $5 each for the next 55 best rhymes. With such a long list of prizes as these, it would be a pity not to try your hand at it!

Here is a 4-line rhyme as an example:

Two teaspoons of this powder make biscuits, muffins, pie or cake, The Price's Co., guarantee No alum in the cans to be.

As Dr. Price's Phosphate Baking Powder sells for only 25 cents a 12 oz. can at grocery stores, some rhymes could play up the remarkable economy of this pure and wholesome baking powder which contains no alum.

All rhymes must be received by May 1, 1922. Only words appearing either on the label of the Dr. Price can (front and back) or on the printed slip contained inside the can may be used. These words may be used as often as desired, but no other words will be allowed. If you haven't a can of Dr. Price's, a copy of the label and the printed slip will be sent to you free upon request.

Any woman or girl may enter the Contest, but only one rhyme from each person will be considered. In case of ties, the full amount of the prize will be given to each tying contestant. Write plainly on only one side of a sheet of paper and be sure to give your name and address.

Send your rhyme before May 1st to Price Baking Powder Factory, 1007 Independence Blvd., Chicago, Ill.—Advertisement.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcels post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents, also return this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores. Advertisement.

Happy Results in Both Cases

St. Joseph, Missouri.—"Both of my sides swelled and hurt me so that I could not move or do any of my work. There was heavy pressure and pains through my lower organs and the doctor told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for these troubles. He said I had this one chance, and if I used the Compound I did not lose anything, but an operation would. After taking several bottles I felt it was helping me and now I am able to do my own work. If my testimonial will help others I shall be glad for them to read it and hope your Vegetable Compound will do them as much good as it did me."—Mrs. Wm. Lockman, 513 N. 4th St., St. Joseph, Mo.

White Plains, N. Y.—"I had such a pain that I could hardly walk and the doctor said that I needed an operation. I was sick for a year before I started taking your medicine and I could not work. I saw your advertisement in a little book and that is how I came to take Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine. I have been taking the Vegetable Compound and Lydia E.

Mrs. Ruth Williamson

Birmingham, Ala.—"After becoming a mother my health gave away. I suffered severely with a pain far down in my right side. My sister-in-law, having been cured of a bad case of feminine trouble by taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, advised me to take it, which I did. I am now starting on my third bottle and the pain has all left me. My husband said to me the other day: 'That Favorite Prescription must be a wonderful medicine. I don't hear you complaining any more.'—Mrs. Ruth Williamson, 4016 First Avenue.

You should obtain this famous Prescription now at your nearest drug store, in tablets or liquid, or write Dr. Pierce, President Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for free medical advice.

---and we are a healthy, happy family now

Louis Gingras

TINGLING with abundant energy, appetites hearty, nerves strong and steady and their faces radiant with the glow of perfect health...

I've put Tanlac to the test four times right in my own family and it hasn't failed me once...

Representative of New York is the case of Chas. E. Van Colt's family, residing at 129 Fourth Ave., Albany...

And on through the list, men, women and children from every state in the Union and every province of Canada...

Take, for instance, the case of John Widner, 1571 Roosevelt Ave., Los Angeles, Calif., who says: "My wife, myself and little boy are now as healthy, happy family as you will ever see..."

Or that of Mrs. John Marquits and her family of sixteen living in Manchester, N. H., at 292 Belmont St. She says: "Tanlac has been the only medicine used in our house for two years and it has kept every one of the sixteen here in the best of health..."

In Chicago, Frank R. Richards, of 441 South Wood St., writes: "We will never be without Tanlac in our house after the remarkable way it has built up my wife, my son and myself to where we are the very picture of health..."

Cucumber's History. A strange recipe was once given for the use of cucumbers. It stated, peel off the cucumber, slice it, pepper it, put vinegar to it, and then throw it out of the window. It is, of course, difficult to account for tastes; but this rather suggests advice prompted by an enfeebled digestion.

Cuticura Comforts Baby's Skin. When red, rough and itching, by hot baths of Cuticura Soap and touches of Cuticura Ointment. Also make use now and then of that exquisitely scented dusting powder, Cuticura Talcum, one of the indispensable Cuticura Toilet Trio.

Not a Debatable Point. The woman was calling on her next-door neighbor, and while seated in the living room the front doorbell gave a sharp ring. As it happened to be the maid's day out, the small daughter of the house answered the ring.

A penetrating voice reached u from the open door: "Is your mother engaged?"

Mary Ellen's shrill treble was a mingling of astonishment and indignation. "My mother engaged! No, ma'am; she's been married for years."

LUKE FOUGHT HIS OWN WAR

Young Lieutenant's Devotion Lives on in Sister Now Cheering Ex-Soldiers in Hospitals.

Frank Luke's devotion to duty lives on in the character of his sister. The American ace who so gallantly gave his life one day in the early autumn of 1918 found the same joy in service to his country that Anna Marie Luke now finds in serving ex-soldiers in the hospitals of Phoenix, Ariz. Her songs are known wherever veterans are quartered, and her popularity at the American Legion post, which bears her brother's name, is often remarked.

Further honor was recently paid the memory of Lieutenant Luke when the Italian Croce di Guerre was awarded him posthumously. The cross, with a certificate of award signed by General Diaz, is now in possession of the late officer's family, together with a Congressional Medal of Honor, a Distinguished Service Cross with oak leaf cluster, and several minor decorations.

The lieutenant was one of the best known and most picturesque flyers in any army. Working for the most part without orders, he practically fought his own war. He would load up with bombs, fly far back into German territory, take on any odds that happened to fall to him, and work destruction wherever he went.

Known by reputation to every man in the A. E. F., he represented all that was romantic in modern warfare. He fell in action with enemy airmen near Murvaux, after a forced landing of his plane. He had previously shot down three German balloons while under terrific fire from ground batteries.

HARRY WONG TI, LEGION MAN

One of China's Most Active Sons in New York, Worker for His Organization.

The long-tailed queues and honorable garb of the celestials, the dangerous dives and the ornate joss-houses are pointed out to sight-seers aboard New York's rubber-neck buses rumbling through Chinatown. But perspicacious persons realize that "China in America" is represented as often by clean-cut young men as by long-haired ancients.

Harry Wong Ti, who served in the Seventy-seventh division, is one of China's most active sons in New York. One of three American-born Chinese ex-service men of the John Purroy Mitchell post of the American Legion, Ti is busily occupied in raising funds for a loan-to-at-the-veterans' mountain camp in the Adirondacks. He also serves on the executive committee of his post.

In a recent round-up of stinkers in Chinatown several Chinese ex-soldiers assisted the Legion "detectives" in the work of tracking their quarry, and in many other ways Chinese service men have proved to the Legion, by their progressiveness and their initiative, how worthy they are as patriotic citizens.

Astride the Canadian border at Blaine, Wash., is a great peace arch, celebrating a hundred years of friendly relations between Canada and the United States. Side by side float the Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack—a symbol of our international good will.

The vista of peace which American Legionnaires saw in their mind's eye through this portal gave them the name of their "Peace Arch post" at Blaine. At the time of the unveiling of the monument the Legion took an active part in the ceremonies, and represented with their uniformed ranks the strengthening of the bonds of brotherly feeling with Canada which came as a result of the recent alliance against a common enemy for common ideals.

On the architrave of the monument are carved the words, "Children of a Common Mother," to perpetuate the idea of the triangular relationship between England and her two American offspring.

A plea that all students at Nebraska university join the Legion "for the honor of the institution and the perpetuity of our country" has been made by Chancellor Avery.

The "Society of Military and Naval Officers of the World War" has come into existence in New York state. Plans are under way to make it a nationwide organization, with hereditary membership.

Ex-service men who ask for aid at Racine, Wis., receive no hearing unless they hold a letter of endorsement from the American Legion. "Impostors in bought uniforms" have brought on the move.

Influx of Japanese on newly opened farm land is opposed by the American Legion of central Oregon. George Shima, so-called Japanese potato king, has shares in a company which owns 17,000 acres of this land.

"To aid and to aid quickly" is the object of the Washington State association in New York City, which is checking up on Washington state soldiers in need. The Legion is asking other states to "do likewise."

"Wait two years until the gas gets working good," was no idle jest on the part of the Germans. Almost one-third of the 30,000 hospital cases in America are suffering from mental disorders, the Legion reports.

One thousand ex-service men are out of employment in Portland, Ore. The Legion's nationwide drive for jobs is being organized intensively there.

Fertilized with ex-college and would-be stars, the American Legion at Seattle, Wash., intends to enter a baseball team in the city league.

Many savings accounts have been opened with bonuses paid to ex-soldiers according to bankers in South Dakota, who deny charges of extravagant spending.

The horse is painting. No real interest is taken in the legs until Van Dyck's time, he and Titian did very little for it than all the previous painters put together. Rubens was a good rider, and rode nearly every day—Raskin.

Praise of the Pitiful. There is no sadder sight of stunted years in this world than the active exercise of pity; no happier tongue of mind and work than the busy searching to see if we can lessen any misery that is around us.—Francis Paquet.

The Kitchen Cabinet

"My candle burns at both ends; it will not last the night; But, oh, my love, oh, my friend—it gives a lovely light."

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

A good dish of beans may be prepared in a short time if the following is used:

Baked Beans.—Wash and soak a pound of lima beans over night. In the morning put them on in plenty of water and simmer until tender; then drain and put into a bean pot or baking dish with salt, pepper, and one-fourth of a pound of bacon which has been put through the meat grinder, a tablespoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of molasses and one tablespoonful of grated onion. Add enough water to come to the top of the beans and bake until a golden brown.

Lemon Butter for Tarts.—Put over one cupful of water in a saucepan; when boiling hot add one tablespoonful of flour mixed with a little cold water to pour, cook until smooth, then boil ten minutes. Add an egg which has been beaten with one-half cupful of sugar and a little salt. Bring to the boiling point, add the oil from a lemon finely grated and three tablespoonfuls of juice. Remove at once from the heat and beat two minutes. When cold it is ready to fill tart shells.

Crinkle Cakes.—Work one-half cupful of almond paste until smooth, and add to it one cupful of washed butter and when creamy add slowly three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, one egg, one tablespoonful of mixed flavoring, using one teaspoonful of lemon, one-half teaspoonful of almond and the rest of vanilla. Add two and one-half cupfuls of flour and mix well; force this mixture through a pastry bag and a rose tube and bake in a moderate oven.

Corn Bread.—Take one cupful each of yellow cornmeal, white flour and sour cream, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of soda and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Mix all the dry ingredients, add the cream in which the soda has been stirred. Mix all together, adding one tablespoonful of sugar. Beat well and spread in a sheet iron baking pan and bake in a slow oven for an hour.

Minc'd Lamb Sandwiches.—Take two cupfuls of lean cooked lamb chopped, add two tablespoonfuls of capers ground with the meat, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of paprika, one-half teaspoonful of dry mustard and one teaspoonful of salt. Mix well and spread on slices of bran or whole wheat bread which has been buttered.

Raisin Drop Cakes.—Take one-third of a cupful of shortening, two eggs, one cupful of raisins, one cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla, one cupful of milk, two and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two cupfuls of corn flour and a little salt. Mix and chill, drop by spoonfuls on baking sheet and bake in hot oven.

Frosting.—Take three cupfuls of confectioner's sugar, one whole egg, three tablespoonfuls of cream. Add the sugar to the other ingredients a little at a time. Spread on the cookies when nearly cold.

POTATO COOKERY

Potatoes are a common food upon our tables but in the average home are not prepared in enough ways to lend variety to the food.

Potato Soup.—Boil four medium sized potatoes in salted water until soft, then put them through a ricer. Slice one small onion and put it into a quart of milk to scald. Remove the onion and add the milk to the mashed potato. Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, cook for two minutes, add to the milk with salt and pepper to taste, boil up one minute and serve sprinkled with parsley.

Stuffed Potatoes.—Take six medium-sized long potatoes, bake until done. Cut a slice from the side of each, scoop out the potato, season it with cream, salt, butter; beat well and blended, then add the whites of two eggs beaten until stiff. Refill the skins and bake five to ten minutes in a hot oven. The potato may be sprinkled with cheese, paprika, or parsley before serving.

Franconia Potatoes.—Peel potatoes and cut into quarters, parboil ten minutes, drain and place around the roast an hour before serving time. Baste often to give the potatoes a rich brown color.

Main boiled potatoes if sliced and carefully fried in butter, keeping the slices whole, is a most attractive manner of serving them.

Potatoes, common in the South and Middle states, may be served cooked in bunches as one does in persons, or a soup prepared as any cream soup, will make a most delicate dish.

Fire Sweeps Norfolk Suburb.

Norfolk, Va.—Berkeley, a suburb of Norfolk, was swept by fire recently, which destroyed more than 100 houses, covering an area some miles in length and averaging from five to four blocks in width. The hundred families are estimated to have been much homeless and the damage will run to nearly $1,000,000. The blaze originated in the Tamm lumber yard on the southern branch of the Elizabeth river and three stations in the street were burned, starting from sparks.

A Story Which Smacks of the Rolling Waves and Salt Air

A Man to His Mate

By J. ALLEN DUNN

Practically all the action—and there is a world of it—takes place at sea. The adventures will appear personal to you. So—

If you don't mind being shanghaied with a young San Francisco newspaperman; if you'd enjoy a gold-hunting expedition to the Arctic in a stout sealing ship manned by a Bolshevik crew of sailors and seal hunters, captained by the girl's father, and financed by the smoothest villain you ever met—then you'll have a wonderful time with "A Man to His Mate."

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

FOR SHERIFF
 I hereby announce myself a candidate for the nomination for the office of Sheriff of Santa Cruz County, subject to the will of the voters at the September primaries.
 HAROLD J. BROWN, Nogales.

FOR SUPERVISOR
 I hereby announce myself a candidate for the office of Supervisor in the Third Supervisorial District, subject to the will of the voters at the September primaries.
 BUD BALDWIN, San Rafael.

ANNOUNCEMENT

A. Dumbauld, in announcing himself as a candidate for nomination for Sheriff on the Democratic ticket at the coming Primary Election, comes before the voters as a taxpayer of the county, as well as in the town of Nogales, and has always been affiliated with the Democratic party.

He came to Nogales about 14 years ago as manager of the Boston Store. After severing his connection with this business house he worked in several other mercantile establishments in Nogales as salesman and as bookkeeper.

For a few months Mr. Dumbauld acted as deputy county recorder. While in this position he was appointed enforcer and bookkeeper for the Nogales Water Department, and was promoted from this position to Superintendent of the Water Department, and served two years as Town Marshal and Tax Collector of Nogales.

He later became an employee of the First National Bank of Nogales, resigning this position to take up stock raising and ranching in the northern part of Santa Cruz County, where he is now located.—Advertisement.

Virgin of Pompeii Credited by Devout Catholics in Italy With Miraculous Powers.

The Virgin of Pompeii, to whose protection Pope Benedict asked to be commended by Cardinal Silli, is the patron of a modern shrine which has become one of the most famous in Italy. About 1875 Bartolo Longo, a wealthy Catholic layman living in the region of the buried city of Pompeii, near Naples, found in an ancient castle, among a number of other articles of antique furniture, a painting of the Madonna. The painting did not show its authorship, but its beauty attracted Longo, and he placed it on display in his home. An infirm woman, visiting the house, knelt before the picture and prayed for relief and she at once declared that she was cured of her sickness. The news of this cure caused others to seek healing, and after more cures were reported, Longo placed the picture in a small chapel. The number of visitors and the reports of cures increased, and the picture is now displayed in a large church in care of the Dominican fathers, about two miles from the Pompeii excavations usually visited by tourists.
