Tuesday morning the many folks who took part in the Memorial Day parade, in Nogales were out getting ready for the procession and by the time that it began to move at 9:30 o'clock, everything was in readiness and there was nothing to delay the program.

The parade, which was headed one of the best ever witnessed in Nogales was led by the Twenty-fifth Infantry Band and in the procession were representatives of lodges, the Grand Army of the Republic, Spanish American and World War veterans, Army and Navy Union, and other organizations.

Among those in the first division were 1200 Twenty-fifth Infantry troops, and Henry Allen Post of the American Legion, and in the second division came Civil War Veterans, Spanish American War veterans, Army and Navy Union and Ridge Igo Post of the American Legion.

Boy Scouts and Elks were in the third division, while the Knights of Pythias and Knights of Columbus lodges made up the Fourth division.

If You Want Success On the Farm You Must Cultivate Crops

A century ago four families on farms supported one "in town." Now each farming family in the United States supports four in town. Increase in population calls for increased yields and these go hand in hand with better cultivation. The Hopi Indian, master dry-farmer, grows his desert corn where white men would despair. A commission sent to him with advanced dry-farming methods went away wiser than it came. His corn is planted in a hole punched with a sharp stick deep down to damp sand. Then begins the endless round of "soil-stirring." He cultivates up and molesters his earth with wind and warm sun by evil spirits until his field reveals him. An old adage declares that "cultivation is nature." We once believed that more cultivation paid by saving moisture. Now we know its benefits are manifold, some are not yet fully measured or understood, but careful experiments are bringing cultivation to a science.

Air is approximately 79% nitrogen, over 20% oxygen, 1-25 of 1% carbon dioxide gas and the balance water vapor and impurities. To secure this nitrogen valuable cover-crops are now used as soil builders, for the bacteria living in the root tissue of the legume family of plants and the soil about them deposit on the roots watery knots which often contain as much as 5% combined nitrogen.

Two varieties of soil bacteria assist plant root growth. These are the life or yeast in land. One collects nitrogen from air as mentioned above, the other by the fermentation it produces forms acids which act on soil material and changes it into forms that can be taken up by roots as food. In most soils they thrive best in the top 8 inches, especially if it is well aired warm and damp.

This accounts for the fact that land is often held back for a year or more by plowing too deep. Many of its bacteria are buried too deep to live, have insufficient air and those turned up on top of plow furrows are killed by sunlight. These deep cultivation does not have these defects. The dry loose top remains where it is and serves as a mulch, while the deeper soil is given proper air circulation and moisture capacity.

In the process of fermentation, soil bacteria produce carbonic gas. This is of importance to plant life since carbon makes up a great proportion of all plant tissue, starch and sugar. It has been demonstrated that three times as much of this gas escapes from well cultivated soil as from soil that becomes crusted. As it rises it is breathed into the leaf organs which combine it with the elements contained in water in the over circulation and forms starch and sugar. This carbon is coming to be recognized as a very important fertilizer.

As is of great importance in soil, aside from its value to bacteria, for it supplies oxygen to decompose or rust the damp particles of soil and humus. The useful part of this carbonic matter can then be taken up by roots as plant food.

Proper cultivation saves moisture by breaking the larger air passages or channels which permit the rapid escape of moist air. By shaking or the property of cementing itself, years of the same treatment will produce a means of gravity and water settling, pan or "sole" that must be broken at proper intervals by the subsoiler, especially if cultivation has been shallow. Cultivation also helps in raising a bucket of pebbles the fine stones and dust settle to the bottom leaving the coarse material on top. In the same manner cultivation assists fine soil particles to work down to roots by the benefits of sulphur, ground lime, gypsum, nitrate fertilizers, etc., are hastened by a deep stirring process, their distribution is more thoro and deep and water is assisted to carry in the process while coarse top material prevents moisture loss from sun and wind.

This "settling" improves root contact with soil but in land which has the temperature of land by keeping it darker in color. Drainage is improved and there is less tendency to sour for sufficient air enters the soil to aid bacteria which help to keep it sweet.

Frequent stirring of soil with a deep cultivator keeps it loose enough for proper air circulation but unlike the plow, does not leave cavities so large that air currents rapidly dry it out.

THE SHAME OF FOREST FIRES More forest fires occurred in 1921 than during any previous year of record, but, owing to improved methods of detection and extinguishing, the area burned over was below the average in extent. Notwithstanding abnormal drought, public carelessness was chiefly to blame.

Clearly the American public still lacks appreciation of its great natural heritage. As a people priding ourselves upon our practical outlook, the market value of our timberlands is yielding lumber for building and other purposes must be apparent.

There is, however, another side to be considered. What would American be like shorn of the great beauty of wide stretches of woodland? How barren shriveled, utterly desolate and, finally, uninhabitable it would become!

Yet to our shame we continue negligently to burn faster than we can reforest. Since an ordinary sapling requires from forty to eighty years to attain mature growth, it does not require genius to determine where such persistent thoughtlessness will bring us.

Totally to eliminate forest fires is scarcely possible; lightning will always cause a limited number. But the blame that results from human agency can be prevented.

Some improvement in the situation is reported by individual states. Most of this improvement, however, is traceable to the rigid enforcement of police powers and to more effective fire-fighting methods, rather than to public cooperation. How much more encouraging it will be when improvement from year to year can be directly ascribed to an awakened public conscience determined to end this criminal waste.

TAMADA.

Synopsis—Lettering on the San Francisco water front, John Rainey, newspaper reporter, is accosted by a giant blind man, who asks Rainey to lead him aboard the sailing schooner Karlik. In the cabin they find Captain Simms and a man named Carlsen. Simms recognizes the blind man, calling him Jim Lund. Lund accuses Simms of abandoning him, blind, on an ice floe, and denounces him. Simms denies the charge, but Lund declares he will be satisfied. He declares his intention of accompanying the Karlik on its expedition north, where he is going in quest of a gold field which Lund has discovered. Peggy, Simms' daughter, is aboard, and defends her father, Carlsen, who is a physician as well as first mate, drags Rainey. Awakening from his stupor, Rainey finds himself at sea. Carlsen informs him he has been kidnapped. He offers Rainey a share of the gold, and Rainey is forced to declare himself satisfied. Lund gives him a brief account of a former expedition of the Karlik, which he distrusts Carlsen, and suggests a "partnership." Rainey to get an "American" name. Rainey is made second mate. Captain Simms is ill and the navigation is entirely in the hands of Carlsen. At the latter's suggestion a shooting match is staged and the seal hunters exhaust their ammunition. Carlsen shows his skill with the pistol and Lund does some astonishing shooting, "by sound."

He talked in a low voice, but it rumbled like the distant roar of a bull. Rainey looked at the indomitable jaw that the heard could not bide, at the great barrel of his chest, the bough-like arms, the swelling thighs and calves, and responded to the suggestion that Lund could rise in Berserker rage and sweep aside all opposition.

"Carlsen says that the skipper's life is in his hands," he said. "What do you make of that?"

"I don't know what to make of it," answered Lund. "If it is, God help the skipper! I reckon he's in a bad way. Anyhow, he's out of it for the time being, Rainey."

"There's the girl," said Rainey. "I don't believe she wants to marry Carlsen."

"If she does," said Lund, "she ain't the kind we need worry about. If you're interested about the gal, Rainey, an' I take it you are, I'm telling you that Carlsen'll marry her if it suits his book. If it don't, he won't. An' if he wins out, he'll take her without botherin' about prayin'-books an' ceremonics. I know his breed. All men are more or less selfish an' shy on money, in streaks more or less wide, but that Carlsen's just plain skunk. I'm no saint, but so long as I can keep my eyes on his money, there ain't enny hunter or seaman goin' to harm a decent gal. That's another way they ain't my equal, Rainey. Savvy? Nor is Carlsen. There ain't enny real mutton in that Carlsen to grease a skillet. How about it, Rainey; are you lined up with me?"

"Just as far as I can go, Lund. I'm with you to the limit."

Lund brought down his hand with a mighty swing and caught at Rainey's in his aid, gripping it till Rainey bit his lips to repress a cry of pain.

"You've got the guts!" cried the giant, checking the loudness of his voice abruptly. "I knew it. It ain't all gold to go as they like it. Watch my smoke. Now, then, keep out of Carlsen's way all you can. He may fry an' pick a row with you that'll put you in wrong all around. Go easy an' speak easy till Lund's sighted."

"What do you think Carlsen's game is, if it goes through?"

"He's got enough to think up a dozen ways. Run the schooner ashore somewhere in the night. Wreck her. Git 'em in the boats with the gold. Inside of a week, Deming an' one or two others would have won it. Then—he'd have the only gun—he'd shoot the lot of 'em an' say they died at sea. He ain't got enny more 'arm blood than a squid. Or he might land, and accuse 'em all of piracy. What do we care about his plans? He ain't got to put 'em over."

Rainey had to relieve Hansen, who left Lund pursued for resistance against Carlsen, against all the crew, if necessary, resolved to save the girl, but as Lund stayed below and the time slid by, his confidence eared out of him, and the odds assumed their mathematical proportion.

What could they do against so many? But he held firm in his determination to do what he could, to go down with the forlorn hope.

The Karlik was howling along northward toward landfall and the crisis between Lund and Carlsen at good speed. The weather had subsided and the half gale now served the schooner instead of hindering her. Rainey turned over the wheel to a seaman and paced the deck. Lund's mysterious hints were unsatisfactory. He could not believe them without some basis, but the giant would never go further than vague talk of a "loker" or card on his sleeve. And they would need more than one card, Rainey thought.

He wondered whether they could win over Hansen, who had spoken for Lund against the skipper, and had then kept his counsel. But the dismissed Hansen as an ally. The Scandinavian was too cautious, too apt to consider such things as odds. Sandy was useless, aside from his good-will. He was cowed by Deming, scared of Carlsen, too puny to do more than he had done, give them warning.

Tamada? Would he fight for the share of gold he expected to come to him? Lund had described him as neutral. But, if he knew that he was to be left out of the division? At any rate, Tamada might provide him with a weapon, a sharp-bladed vegetable knife if nothing better. He could not class Tamada as an unimportant factor. There was no question to Rainey but that Tamada was, by caste, above his position as sealer's cook. It was true that a Japanese considered no means mental if they led to the proper end.

Was that end merely to gain possession of his share of the gold, or did Tamada have some deeper, more complicated reason for signing on to run the galle of the Karlik? Somehow Rainey thought there was such a reason.

CHAPTER VI.

Tamada Talks.

It was an hour from the third meal of the day. Tamada was juggling the food for three messes, and he was doing it with the calm precision of one who has every detail well mapped out and is moving on schedule. The boy Sandy was not there, probably engaged in mending the table for the hunters' mess, Rainey imagined.

Tamada regarded him with eyes that did not lack a certain luster, as a stowaway might hold it, but which, beneath their hooded lids, revealed neither interest, nor curiosity, nor friendliness. They belonged in his uncreased face, they were altogether neutral. Yet they seemed covertly to suggest to Rainey that they might, on occasion, flame with wrath or hatred, or show the burning light of high intelligence.

"Tamada," he queried, "you think I am your friend, that I would rather help you than otherwise?"

"I think that—yes," answered the Japanese without hesitation and without servility. "You are not hating me because you are Californian and I Japanese," he said. "I know that."

There was little time to spare, and there was likelihood of interruption, so Rainey plunged into his subject without introduction.

"They promised you a share of this treasure, Tamada?" he asked.

"They promised me that, yes."

"You do not intend to give it to you. You may have guessed this, but I am sure of it. I, too, am promised a share of the gold, but they do not intend to give it to me. They will offer me Lund, only a small portion of what was originally arranged, the same amount as the rest of them are to get."

"What the Japs grab they don't let go of. If they should suspicion us of gettin' gold off enny island they c'd trump up to call them, if they found gold on us at all, it 'ud be all off with us an' the Karlik. We'd be dumped inside of some Jap prison an' the schooner confiscated."

"An' if things go right with us, an' we ever sight the smoke of a Jap gun-boat comin' our way, the first thing I'll be apt to do will be to scrag Tamada or he'll blow the whole proposition, whether we've got the gold aboard or not. Even if he didn't want to tell becoz of his own share, they'd git it out of him what we was after."

"Ever played at cards?" he went on. "Play for lost red when you don't know where to turn for another, an' have all the crowd thinkin' you're goin' broke as they watch the play? An' then you slap down a card they've all overlooked an' larf in the other chap's face?"

"That's what I'm goin' to do with Carlsen. I've got that kind of a card, matey, an' I ain't goin' to spoil my fun by tellin' even you what it is, though you're my partner in this gamble. It's a trump, an' Carlsen's overlooked it."

Lund chuckled hugely as he mixed himself some whisky and water. Rainey refused a drink. He was nervous, hithering over what the outcome might be, and how he might handle himself. He was not at all sure of his own game. There was a nasty doubt as to his own prowess and his own courage that kept cropping up. And that state of mind is not a pleasant one.

Rainey went over and over the situation as a squirrel might race around the bars of his revolving cylinder, and came to only one conclusion, the inevitable one, to let the matter develop itself. Lund's winning card he had bothered about until his brain was tired. When he turned in at last, despite his determination to follow Lund's admonition concerning sleep, it would not come to him.

He was awakened at half-past seven, got a cup of coffee after dressing warmly, and went on deck. Carlsen and the girl had preceded him. Lund stood at the rail with his back to a nose wrinkled, sniffing toward the icy crags that were spouting a dazle of white flame, set about with smaller, sudden flares of ruby, emerald and sapphire.

Tamada appeared and announced breakfast.

"You'll be coming later, Rainey?" asked Carlsen. "You and Lund?"

He started for the companyway and the girl followed. As she passed the wheel Rainey spoke to her:

"I am sorry your father is so ill, Miss Simms," he said.

She looked at him with eyes that were filled with sadness, that seemed liquid with tears bravely held back.

"I am afraid he is dying," she answered in a low voice. "Thank you for your sympathy. I—"

She stopped at some slight sound that Rainey did not catch. But he saw the face of Carlsen framed in the shadow of the companion, his mouth open in a wolf grin, and the man's eyes were gleaming crimson. He held up a hand for the girl. She passed down without taking it.

Lund came over to Rainey.

"Clear weather, they tell me?" he said. "That's unusual. Fog off the Aleutians three hundred an' fifty days of the year, as a rule. Soon as we sight land, which'll be Unalaska or thereabouts, Carlsen will have the course changed. There's a considerable fleet of United States revenue cutters at Unalaska, an' Carlsen won't pull ennything until we're well west of there. He's pretty cocky this mornin'. Wad, we'll see."

There had always been a certain polking good-humor about Lund. This morning he was grim, his face, with its beak of a nose and aggressive chin beneath the flaming whiskers, and his whole magnificent body gave the impression of resolve and repressed action. Rainey fancied whimsically that he could hear a dynamo purring inside the giant's insensibility. He had seen him in open rage when he had first denounced Honest Simms, but the serious mood was far more impressive.

"You Are Not Hating Me Because You Are Californian and I Japanese," He Said.

He will refuse that tomorrow, when a meeting is to be called. Then there will be trouble. I shall stand with Mr. Lund. If we win you will get your share, whether you help us or not. If you help us I can promise you at least twice the amount you were to get."

"How can I help you? If this is to be talked over at a meeting I shall not be allowed to be present. I do not think it will help you for me to join. I do not see how you can win. If you can show some way out I will do what I can. But I like to see you out."

He mollified the bald acknowledgment of his neutrality with a little bow and a hissing-in-breath. Back of it all was a will that was inflexible, thought Rainey.

"If we lose, you lose," he went on humely. He had come on a fool's errand, he decided.

"I think I shall get my money," said

Lund. The Oriental gave a swift smile, that held no mirth, no friendliness, rather, a sardonic appreciation of the situation, without rancor.

"They are very foolish," he said. "They make me cook, they eat what I serve. They say Tamada is very good cook. But he is Jap, d—n him. Suppose I put something in that food, that they would not taste? I could send them all to sleep. I could kill them. I could do it so they never suspect, but would go to their beds—and never get up from them. It would be very easy. Yet they trust me."

The statement was so matter-of-fact that Rainey felt his horror gather slowly as he stared at the impassive Oriental.

A thought suddenly flashed over him. Was Tamada in league with Carlsen? Had he mistaken his man? Did Carlsen plan to have Tamada undertake a wholesale poisoning to secure the gold himself, providing the cure? Was it a friendly hint from the Japanese?

When Rainey's watch was ended and he was closeted with Lund in the latter's cabin, the giant promptly quashed all discussion of Tamada's attitude.

"I'll put no trust in any slant-eyed, yellow-skinned rice-eater," he announced emphatically. "They're against us, race an' religion. They want California, or rather, the Pacific coast, an' they think they're goin' to git it. They're no more akin to us than a snake is a cousin to an eel. They're not of our breed, an' you can't mix the two. I'll have no deal with Tamada, beyond gettin' dope out of him. If he helped us it 'ud be only to further his own ends. Not that he can do much—unless—"

He lowered his voice to a husky whisper.

"There's one thing may slip in our gold-gettin', matey," he said—"the Japanese. I doubt if this island is set down on American or British charts. But I'll bet it is on the Japanese. They don't know of the gold, or it wouldn't be there. Rightly, the island may belong to Russia, but, since the war, Russia's in a bad way, an' enny-thing loose from the mainland'll be gobbled by Japan."

"What the Japs grab they don't let go of. If they should suspicion us of gettin' gold off enny island they c'd trump up to call them, if they found gold on us at all, it 'ud be all off with us an' the Karlik. We'd be dumped inside of some Jap prison an' the schooner confiscated."

"An' if things go right with us, an' we ever sight the smoke of a Jap gun-boat comin' our way, the first thing I'll be apt to do will be to scrag Tamada or he'll blow the whole proposition, whether we've got the gold aboard or not. Even if he didn't want to tell becoz of his own share, they'd git it out of him what we was after."

"Ever played at cards?" he went on. "Play for lost red when you don't know where to turn for another, an' have all the crowd thinkin' you're goin' broke as they watch the play? An' then you slap down a card they've all overlooked an' larf in the other chap's face?"

"That's what I'm goin' to do with Carlsen. I've got that kind of a card, matey, an' I ain't goin' to spoil my fun by tellin' even you what it is, though you're my partner in this gamble. It's a trump, an' Carlsen's overlooked it."

Lund chuckled hugely as he mixed himself some whisky and water. Rainey refused a drink. He was nervous, hithering over what the outcome might be, and how he might handle himself. He was not at all sure of his own game. There was a nasty doubt as to his own prowess and his own courage that kept cropping up. And that state of mind is not a pleasant one.

Rainey went over and over the situation as a squirrel might race around the bars of his revolving cylinder, and came to only one conclusion, the inevitable one, to let the matter develop itself. Lund's winning card he had bothered about until his brain was tired. When he turned in at last, despite his determination to follow Lund's admonition concerning sleep, it would not come to him.

He was awakened at half-past seven, got a cup of coffee after dressing warmly, and went on deck. Carlsen and the girl had preceded him. Lund stood at the rail with his back to a nose wrinkled, sniffing toward the icy crags that were spouting a dazle of white flame, set about with smaller, sudden flares of ruby, emerald and sapphire.

Tamada appeared and announced breakfast.

"You'll be coming later, Rainey?" asked Carlsen. "You and Lund?"

He started for the companyway and the girl followed. As she passed the wheel Rainey spoke to her:

"I am sorry your father is so ill, Miss Simms," he said.

She looked at him with eyes that were filled with sadness, that seemed liquid with tears bravely held back.

"I am afraid he is dying," she answered in a low voice. "Thank you for your sympathy. I—"

She stopped at some slight sound that Rainey did not catch. But he saw the face of Carlsen framed in the shadow of the companion, his mouth open in a wolf grin, and the man's eyes were gleaming crimson. He held up a hand for the girl. She passed down without taking it.

Lund came over to Rainey.

"Clear weather, they tell me?" he said. "That's unusual. Fog off the Aleutians three hundred an' fifty days of the year, as a rule. Soon as we sight land, which'll be Unalaska or thereabouts, Carlsen will have the course changed. There's a considerable fleet of United States revenue cutters at Unalaska, an' Carlsen won't pull ennything until we're well west of there. He's pretty cocky this mornin'. Wad, we'll see."

Rainey fancied whimsically that he could hear a dynamo purring inside the giant's insensibility. He had seen him in open rage when he had first denounced Honest Simms, but the serious mood was far more impressive.

the big man stepped like a great cat, his head was thrust slightly forward, his great hands were half open. One forgot his blindness. Despite the unsightly black lenses, Lund appeared so absolutely prepared and, in a different way, fully as confident as Carlsen. A certain audacious assurance seemed to ooze out of him, to permeate his neighborhood, and a measure of it extended to Rainey.

Carlsen, before he went below, had sent a man into the fore-spreaders, and now he shouted, cupping his hands and sounding his news as if it had been a call to arms:

"Land-ho!"

"What is it?" called Rainey back.

"High peak, sir. Dead ahead! Clouds on it, or smoke."

He came sliding down the halcyards to the deck as Lund said: "That'll be Makushin. Now the fun'll commence."

From below the masts a crowd came up on deck, and the hunters, the latter wiping their mouths, fresh from their interrupted breakfast, all crowding forward to get a glimpse of the land. Minutes passed before Carlsen came on deck. He had not hurried his meal.

"I'll take her over, Rainey," he said briefly.

Rainey and Lund were barely seated before the heeling of the schooner and

REDUCTION WILL SAVE MILLIONS

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COM. MISSION REDUCE RAILROAD RATES 10 PER CENT.

FREIGHT RATES CUT

5.75 PER CENT IS TERMED AS A REASONABLE RETURN ON INVESTMENT.

(Western Newspaper Union News Service.)

Washington.—Railroad freight rates will be reduced on July 1 by amounts equal to 10 per cent of their present levels under a decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission announced here. Practically all classes and commodities of traffic are affected by the decision, which marked the conclusion of the investigation begun last autumn by the commission, on its own initiative, into the reasonableness of existing freight levels.

Agricultural products in all sections of the country outside of New England, live stock and western grain and grain products are the chief commodities excluded from the reduction, these comprising the freight classifications upon which reductions have been recently put into effect. Passenger charges and Pullman fares also are not unchanged by the decision.

With its decision on rates the commission also announced its determination of 5.75 per cent as the reasonable annual return which carriers in the future will be entitled to earn on their actual capital investment. This compares with 6 per cent, the level fixed under the transportation act for the period expiring March 1.

Railroads were required to signify to the commission whether they would voluntarily make new schedules complying with the decision or require the commission to issue its formal and detailed order for the alteration. Though divergence in view within the commission was indicated by several supplemental conveying or dissenting opinions, the full weight of the commission appeared to be thrown behind the statement made in the majority and controlling opinion, that "general reduction in the rate level as substantial as the condition of the carriers will permit will tend to stabilize the industry and carry on with consequent fuller assurance to carriers of realizing a fair return."

"Practically all agreed that stability of freight rates is highly desirable," the majority opinion declared, "and that normal traffic may not well be expected until the present widespread expectations of rate reductions is realized or dispelled. To assume that rates can or should be stabilized on the present high basis is futile."

"On the statement of the commission that rail freight revenues in 1921 approximated $1,000,000,000, the decision will reduce the national freight bill by $400,000,000 per year."

the scuffle of feet told of Lund's prophesied change of course. Rainey looked at the telltale compass above his head.

"Heading due west," he told Lund. "West it is," said the giant. "More coffee, Tamada. Fill your belly, Rainey. Get a good meal while the eatin' is good."

Although it was Hansen's watch below, Rainey found him at the wheel instead of the seaman he had left there. Carlsen came up to him smiling.

"Better let Hansen have the deck, Mr. Rainey," he said. "We're going to have a conference in the cabin at four o'clock, and I'd like you to be present."

"The shots blended. Lund stood there erect, uninjured. A red blotch showed beneath Carlsen's eyes."

Good Story Explains Why His Satanic Majesty Can Not Endure Sight of Horseshoe.

Tradition has not designated the manner of hanging the horseshoe; it has no such influence in this respect as the crescent moon is supposed to have upon rainfall, by pouring out or retaining luck. The superstition is of the vintage of mortality plays in Merle England, and is a part of the folklore of the farm in feudal times; the horseshoe frightens the devil away.

The story runs that the devil, driven out of the fertile country into the rocky hills by the good people, found one hoof worn to the quick by the sharp stones. Limping in pain to a village smithy, he terrorizes the smith at night into fitting him with an iron shoe. The canny smith in friendly chat finds his customer much the same as the general run of the peasantry. Emboldened by the roaring of his forge fire and the ring of his hammer on the anvil, he drives all the nails but one in the usual manner, clinching them in the hoof; then, asking his confiding client to put his hoof on the floor that he may judge the fit, with a mighty blow he drives the last nail right through the shoe deep into the osseous floor.

Leaving the raging devil a prisoner, he goes to summon the villagers to dispatch him. This strategy did not succeed, for the terror-stricken devil in his struggles wrenched off the shoe and with bleeding hoof in great pain escaped to continue his evil practices. But to this day whenever he sees a horseshoe hung up he flees the place in shame and fright.

Japan Changes Great Warship.

Washington.—The work of converting the Japanese superdreadnaught Amagi, 14,000 tons, into an airplane carrier displacing 27,000 tons is rapidly getting under way, according to advices received here from Tokio. The Amagi, one of the largest and most powerful ships ever designed by Japanese naval experts, was doomed to be scrapped under the original Hughes naval proposal, but was saved under the later provisions of the naval treaty which permit conversion of certain capital ships into airplane carriers.

Ulater Jails 300 Sinn Feiners.

Belfast.—The gravest raid in the recent history of Ireland was carried out recently when swarms of police went through Ulster and rounded up 300 Sinn Feiners, the majority of whom were Irish Republican army officers. They will be interned. The northern government's action was taken, it was stated, in an effort to suppress not only the Irish Republican army and the Irish Republican leadership, but all other Sinn Fein organizations in the six-county area.

Motor Demand Increases Jobs.

Detroit.—Steady improvement in the automobile industry here is reflected in the employment situation, and Detroit once more is riding the crest of a wave of prosperity. Employment agencies report a slight surplus of jobs over the number of work applicants. Looking houses, the Y. M. C. A. and hotels at the moderate rates all report keen demand for rooms from non-residents to the city in search of employment.

Congress Raises Philippine Credit.

Washington.—The Philippine credit bill passed recently by the House, authorizing an increase from $90,000,000 to about $120,000,000 in bonds the federal government may issue, has been passed by the Senate without amendment, and now goes to President Harding. The bill also authorizes an increase in bonded indebtedness of Manila from $4,500,000 to $12,000,000. Governor General Wood urged the legislation.

$3,140,409,000 Gold in U. S. Treasury.

Washington.—If the world keeps on piling up gold in the United States at the present rate it will not long before America will possess three-fourths of the world's gold supply. The treasury recently listed the gold assets of the country at $3,140,409,000. Of this stupendous sum only $280,103,000 represents gold coin, the rest being bullion. Net imports of gold since 1914 total $1,627,000,000. Considerable gold is coming from Scandinavian countries and from France.

Reclamation Office Remains in Denver.

Denver.—The United States reclamation office will remain in Denver, according to a dispatch received from United States Senator Samuel D. Nicholson from Washington. "If there is any change it will come after the passage of the McNary bill," the senator declared, "and will be in the direction of strengthening the Denver office, rather than weakening it. You may rest assured of that." Western business men had flooded Washington with telegrams of protest against the removal.

Wood Delays Accepting New Post.

Mining Revives in Mexico.

Mexico City.—A great boom in the silver and copper mining industries in Mexico is expected. This expectation is based upon two developments:

- 1.—The rise in the price of silver.
- 2.—Exhaustion of the war-time stocks of copper.

Silver mines in the states of Durango, Guanajuato, Zacatecas and Hidalgo, which were paralyzed by price depression, are being prepared for re-stimulation on a big scale.

Bill Would Abolish Grain Speculation.

Washington.—Supported by the organized farmers of America, a new government law has been launched by Senator Capper, Republican, chairman of the agricultural bloc, to abolish gambling in futures in the grain markets. Capper said in an interview here that "farmers would not be robbed of millions," despite the decision of the Supreme Court in invalidating the Capper-Phelan act. The Kansas senator said he was preparing a new bill "if it won't stand in the courts."

Keeping Railway Clerks Fit for Their Work

In order that its employees may enjoy better health and become more efficient in their work, the Rock Island railroad has instituted a system of exercise periods in the morning and afternoon, during which the windows are all open and the clerks all go through a number of exercises. The head of a department and his four assistants are here seen taking their afternoon exercises.

Park Chain From Ocean to Ocean

National Park Director Mather Outlines Plan for System Reaching Across Country.

IS NOT GOVERNMENT PROJECT

Scheme Is Purely a State Proposition, but Will Have Approval and Assistance of National Government—Follow Rail Routes.

Omaha, Neb.—A dream of a park system reaching from the Atlantic to the Pacific along half a dozen or more of the great travel highways was outlined in Omaha by Stephen T. Mather of Chicago, director of the government national park system. Mr. Mather emphasized that while these park lines are not sponsored by the government and are purely state projects, they have the approval of the national system in every way.

"It is a gigantic undertaking," says Mr. Mather.

Mr. Mather is now in the West getting the great national parks, Yellowstone, Yosemite, Rocky Mountain, Zion and the other playgrounds, ready for the coming sight-seeing season.

"Many of the states are working on these park lines now," says Mr. Mather, "and we hope to have others interested very quickly."

Will Follow Rail Routes.

West of the Mississippi these park lines, as outlined by Mr. Mather, will follow closely the big transcontinental railroad lines. One system of parks will follow the Southern Pacific road from New Orleans across Texas, New Mexico and Arizona to California. A second line will follow the Missouri Pacific and Santa Fe from St. Louis through Kansas City and on to the Pacific through Kansas and the states west. A third line of parks will follow the Union Pacific from Omaha across Nebraska, Wyoming, Utah and Nevada to San Francisco, with branches at Ogden to Los Angeles and Portland. Still another park system will extend from St. Paul and Minneapolis out to Seattle.

East of the Mississippi these lines of parks will follow trade routes across New York, northern Ohio and Indiana to Chicago; across Pennsylvania, central Ohio and Indiana to Chicago and St. Louis; across Maryland, West Virginia, southern Ohio and Indiana to "Steamship lines to Europe are advertising a specific amount as the expense of a trip abroad, everything included. To offset this the government park service has figured the necessary cost, including railroad fare, Pullman and dining car extras and the expense in the parks themselves. While our service has nothing to do with expenses outside the park, it has everything to do with those within the park boundaries, and we have forced the total cost down to a minimum."

May Use Different Roads. "The government service has arranged with the railroads which reach these parks to take passengers in at one entrance and permit them to leave the parks at entirely different gateways and use a different railroad thenceforth, if they wish to do so. "From inquiries the park service is receiving now, we believe the word 'pleasure' is coming back into the vocabulary of the ordinary people, and this year these great western parks will entertain their largest crowds for many years—if not in their history. "The people are going to enjoy the great outdoors more in the future than they have in the past, and when the different states complete these chains of state parks across the country the American people will get a new idea of what it means to be out-of-doors."

ANCIENT SHOP HAS BEEN SOLD

Nothing but Drugs Ever Sold in This London Pharmacy.

Worshipful Company of Apothecaries Disposes of Its Historic Shop in City of London—Established in Seventeenth Century.

London.—The Worshipful Company of Apothecaries has sold its ancient shop to a London firm of druggists. It has been carried on by this company since early in the seventeenth century and was, as it were, the classic druggist's shop, with its discreet window of frosted glass—the apothecaries did not display their wares—the shop forms, the plain facade behind which is hidden a dim old courtyard and then the hall and other rooms of the society. Almost next door, in Water Lane, was the Blackfriars theater, where Shakespeare and Burbage played. The society's prescriptions, formulae and special preparations—many of them centuries old—are taken over by the new owners. The little factory where the society makes drugs wholesale, chiefly on government orders, has not changed hands yet.

The shop is a spacious place, lined with mellow-looking old bottles, glistening warmly with gilt and color. You look in vain for patent medicines or any paraphernalia of the modern chemist. It is all drugs and nothing but drugs, and people who come in with prescriptions are usually known and addressed by their names. The shop is leisurely and quiet, as befits its pedigree. Many customers are sorry that the company should be giving up its useful service of selling sound drugs in these days when the city companies rarely still perform their original functions.

In the old days no apothecary could open a shop in the city without a license from the Apothecaries' Hall, nor could he sell drugs that had not been duly tested at the hall. The old charter gives the company the right to burn unwholesome drugs in front of the offender's door. The company is one of three bodies entitled to grant a medical degree. In the early eighteenth century there was a fierce quarrel between the physicians and the apothecaries over this, and Doctor Garth in his dispensary spoke rudely of the Apothecaries' Hall as the place "where tyros take the freedom out to kill."

MORE GOOD THINGS

A most appetizing salad and one very appropriate for picnic occasions is: Herring and Potato Salad.—Take one cupful of herring cut in dice, three cupfuls of cooked diced potatoes, one teaspoonful of onion Juice, two tablespoonfuls of minced green peppers, four tablespoonfuls of olive oil, three tablespoonfuls of vinegar, a dash of paprika and a few grains of salt. Make a French dressing of oil and vinegar and let the fish and potato stand in it for an hour. Then combine the fish, potato and pile the mixture upon the platter, surrounded with shredded cabbage mixed with a salad dressing. Sprinkle with chopped green peppers and garnish with whole herring.

Turban of Smoked Salmon.—Take one and one-fourth cupfuls of minced smoked salmon, three-fourths of a cupful of soft bread crumbs, four tablespoonfuls of butter, pepper, two eggs, one tablespoonful of minced parsley and a few drops of onion Juice. Soak the salmon to remove the excess of salt, then mince fine. Cook the crumbs and milk together to a smooth paste, add butter, parsley and a few drops of onion Juice and turn over the fish. Beat the egg yolks, add to the mixture and fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Turn into a ring mold, surround by boiling water and bake until firm, about twenty-five minutes. Unfold and fill the center with well-seasoned string beans and serve with a cream or egg sauce.

Fish Batter Cakes.—Take one-half cupful of shredded codfish, one cupful of pastry flour, two-thirds of a cupful of water, two egg yolks, one-half tablespoonful of melted butter and two egg whites. Freshen the fish. Put the flour into a bowl, add the water, gradually beating well, then add the codfish. Beat the yolks, add, then add the stiffly beaten whites. Add the melted butter and drop by tablespoonfuls into hot fat. Have the fat hot enough to brown a cube of bread in sixty seconds.

"The best portion of a good man's life—his little, nameless, unremembered acts of kindness."

SOMETHING GOOD TO EAT

A tasty dish, if well cooked, is broiled or pan-broiled calf's heart. Cut it in thin slices, and if it be pan-broiled, add a little butter; cook well on both sides, spread generously with butter, season with salt and pepper, and serve hot. If broiled, cover with butter as it is placed on the hot platter.

Brown Fricassee of Sheep's Tongues.—Take four sheep's tongues, wash and cover with boiling water, then simmer for two hours. Cool and remove the skin, cut in halves lengthwise, sprinkle with salt and pepper and put away in a cold place until the next day. Boil the tongues in flour, fry in butter with a little onion until a rich brown. Add flour to the pan, after removing the meat (with some of the stock in which the tongue was cooked) to prepare the gravy; season well with salt, pepper and a little lemon Juice. Serve with boiled rice, all piping hot.

Oatmeal Date Cakes.—Take one cupful of sugar, two-thirds of a cupful of shortening, two eggs, one-half cupful of sour milk, one cupful of chopped dates, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and soda, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of nutmeg, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of lemon rind, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of cloves, one cupful of walnut meats, two cupfuls of rolled oats and two and one-half cupfuls of flour. Mix and drop by teaspoonfuls on a buttered sheet. If the rolled oats are browned slightly in the oven, then ground, the cakes will be more tasty and wholesome.

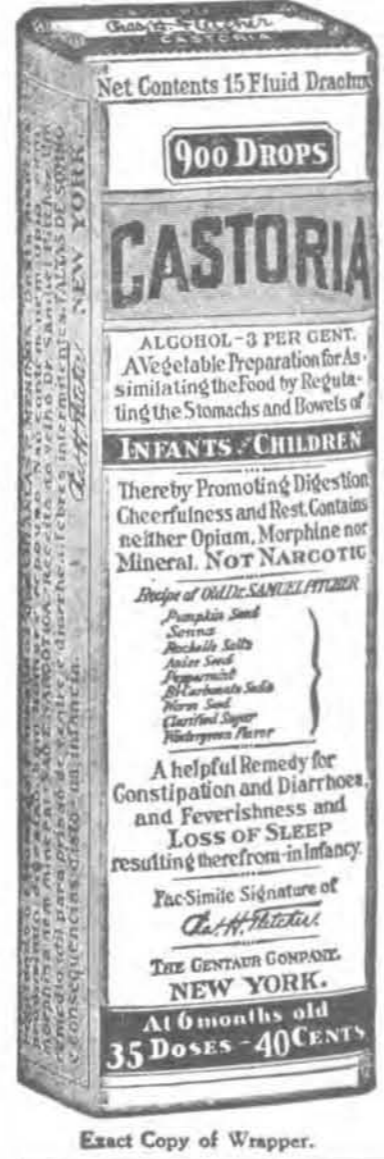

Fruit and Nut Filling for Cake.—Take one cupful of raisins and one-half cupful of nuts chopped and mixed, one-half cupful of shredded coconut, and one egg white. Mix well and add to the egg white. Spread over the cake a layer of Jelly, then put on the filling. Frost and decorate with halves of walnuts.

Pineapple Delight.—Take one small can of pineapple and one-half pound of marshmallows; soak the marshmallows in the pineapple Juice until soft. Just before serving add one-half pint of whipped cream and the pineapple cut in bits. Chill and serve.

Honey Angel Cake.—Sift one and one-half cupfuls of flour four times, add one teaspoonful of cream of tartar and sift again. Beat the whites of eleven eggs until stiff, add one and one-half cupfuls of honey, beat lightly, add flour and beat until it is put into the pan. Bake in a moderate oven.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Special Care of Baby. That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food. A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Of Another Race. Mrs. Subbuis had hired a green country girl whose looks reflected the benefit of plenty of fresh air and wholesome country food. One morning Mrs. Subbuis entered the kitchen just after the grocer's boy had been there and she said to the girl, "Why, Hester, what a rosy, happy face you have this morning. You look as if the dew had kissed you."

Hester's face grew still rosier and her eyes sought the floor.

"Pheasant," she murmured, "he isn't a Jew, his name is Michael."

HAD HIGH SENSE OF HONOR Mark Twain Punctilious to a Degree, in Order to Satisfy His "Presbyterian Conscience."

Mark Twain, it is well known, labored in his older years to repay the debts incurred by his publisher; but probably a great many persons, basing their opinions on Twain's own jests, supposed him to be rather lumpy-go-lucky in smaller affairs. But he was not. Shows Gamaliel Bradford in his sketch of Twain in "American Portraits."

The most obvious instances of his rectitude, says Mr. Bradford, are in regard to money. In spite of his dreams and speculative vagaries, he was punctiliously scrupulous in financial relations, his strictest culminating in the vast offer of patience and self-denial necessary to pay off the debt of honor which fell upon him in his later years. But the niceness of his conscience was not limited to broad obligations of this kind.

"Mine was a trained Presbyterian conscience," Twain says, "and knew but the one duty—to hunt and harry its slave upon all pretexts and all occasions. I don't wish even to seem to do anything which can invite suspicion," he said, as to a matter so trivial as taking advantage in a game.

TOOK THREE ENEMY SCALPS Exploit of Indian Girl Made Her Famous Among the Tribes of the Northwest.

One of the most warlike of Indian maidens was Hanging Cloud, a Chippewa girl, the daughter of Nan-noo-ga-bee, chief of a branch of that tribe which occupied the territory around Rice Lake in northern Wisconsin, some 75 years ago. In her hair Hanging Cloud wore three eagle plumes, signifying that she had slain that many braves in battle.

This exploit she performed when a party, including herself and her father, were ambushed by a force of Sioux, the Chippewas' traditional enemies. Her father was slain, and Hanging Cloud, feigning death, waited until the Sioux came to secure the scalps of the slain Chippewas, and then, seizing her father's rifle, killed one and, in the pursuit which followed, succeeded in killing two more. She scorned to marry one of her own tribe, for she could not espouse herself to a lesser warrior than she, and so she finally married a white man, with whom she lived for many years near Rice Lake.

Useless. "Great men," said Chief Justice Taft at a dinner, "are usually tactful men." Look at Edison, Henry Ford, Lincoln. All strong, silent fellows.

"Talkative men, after all—" and Mr. Taft chuckled—"Well you know the Mark Twain story!" "Isn't Gabbell a splendid talker, though?" a friend said to Mark Twain. "Best I ever escaped from," Mark answered.

HAD ANOTHER THINK COMING Bill Was Sadly Mistaken Concerning the Proper Classification of Apple His Mate's Enjoyed.

Bill Symes drew a large, pink apple from the side pocket of his coat and prepared to attack it, when another of his workmates reached over and took the apple, saying: "What kind of apple is that, Bill—Cox's Orange Pippin?" Then, as he munched, he said: "No, it ain't!" Another loafer reached for the apple, saying: "Cox's Orange Pippin, my happy aunt! Don't yer know a slenuty of Kent when yer sees it? Lemme taste it. No, 'tisn't that!" Still another grimy paw reached out and took the fruit, deploring: "You fellows eat as if you'd never seen apples before! That ain't no Beauty of Kent, it's a Dutch Mignon. No, 'tain't!" as he took the last bite of it. "What was that apple, Bill?" "I thought," replied Bill sadly, "that apple was my lunch!"—London Answers.

When Hungry Little Muscles Say, "Please Help Me"

DID you ever stop to think who it really is that's talking, when childish voices raise a clamor, "Mother, I'm hungry?"

It's really muscles and bones and nerves and cells worn in the stress and strain of play—that are calling for rebuilding material.

What kind of an answer? The right thing, or just anything? It makes a big difference.

Grape-Nuts, so deliciously crisp and appetizing to taste, and so quick and convenient to serve, is a splendid food for rebuilding young bodies. All the wonderful nutrient put in wheat and barley by Nature, including the vital mineral elements, is there—and Grape-Nuts digests easily, quickly and completely. Served with cream or milk, Grape-Nuts is exceptionally nourishing.

"That's splendid!" says appetite. "That's just the need!" say the hungry muscles, nerves and bones.

Ready to serve right from the package—always crisp and fresh. A favorite dish with all the family. Sold by grocers.

STUNG BY BEE, DIES IN HOUR

Apoplexy Following Shock Kills New Jersey Farmer Afflicted With Weak Heart.

Caldwell, N. J.—Stung on the right temple by a honey bee Harry Collier, a farmer living four miles from here, died half an hour later. After returning from town, where several of his friends remarked that he seemed in perfect health, Mr. Collier began chopping wood. A few minutes later he hurried to the house, telling his wife that he had been stung by a bee.

Mrs. Collier discovered the stinger and extracted it. As her husband's pain seemed to increase she set out for the nearest house to telephone for a physician while his sister, Miss Matilda Collier, applied first aid.

The sick man's neck began to swell. He soon lapsed into unconsciousness and died before a physician arrived. Coroner Thomas J. Lewis said death was due to a stroke of apoplexy caused by the shock of the insect's sting and a weak heart.

AS THE EDITOR SEES IT

Jury service is one of the first duties of citizenship. It is one of the last duties the average citizen is willing to perform.

Men of character and ability who are possessed of the qualifications necessary to the rendering of fair and intelligent verdicts will go to great lengths in order to evade service on a jury.

The average man feels that he can not afford to neglect his business interests in order to spend two or three days or a week in a jury box at small pay.

Some people are perfectly willing to feed millions of dollars to the birds—provided they are other people's dollars.

Europe never tires of importuning this country for great loans, while at the same time they are spending their own money on the maintenance of immense armies.

With Europe on the brink of another war, with industries torn and disrupted with bolshevism boring under the surface, it is difficult to understand how adequate security can be offered for such loans.

International bankers and bond houses may advocate them, but such concerns do not as a rule invest their own money.

POMERENE'S MOVIE FOR A CLEAN SENATE

While Attorney General Daugherty is telling Senatorial candidates that only the sky is the limit in campaign expenditures, Senator Atlas Pomerene (Dem. Ohio) has taken the initiative to protect the United States Senate against Newberryism by introducing a bill which it is hoped and believed will be upheld as constitutional.

VOICE RETAINS ITS QUALITY

Fixed Feature of Human Vocal Organs Which is Regarded as Something of a Phenomenon.

The changes that come with age, observes the editor of the New York Medical Journal, are so manifold and striking that we are inclined to overlook the persistence through the years of the quality of the voice, and yet this one fixed feature is remarkable.

When one notes that the organs which, in their functioning and, hence, in their structure, have so endured, are relatively small and delicate and in very frequent use, the phenomenon is of greater interest.

GOT NAME FROM INDIAN CHIEF

How the City of Medicine Hat, in Canada, Acquired Its Decidely Odd Cognomen.

Medicine Hat, the Canadian city which figures so prominently in weather reports, and which possesses undoubtedly one of the most extraordinary names of all the cities of the world, acquired its title from an old Blackfoot chief whose tepee stood on the site which is today the center of the city.

Once a great battle was fought between the Blackfeet and the Crees on the site of the present city. The fight went against the Crees and, just as they prepared to leave the field, a strong gust of wind caught the "medicine hat," lifted it off the head of the chieftain and deposited it in the river.

Genoa Conference Ends After Planning Parley on Russia at The Hague.

EIGHT-MONTHS' TRUCE SIGNED

America Declines Invitation to Participate in the New Meeting—Good Work by League of Nations'
Council—Pinchot's Victory in Pennsylvania.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

TOTAL results from the Genoa conference that was to bring about the regeneration of Europe, economically and financially, and which has adjourned, appear to be: Plans for new negotiations for a settlement of relations with Russia, to be carried on by commissions which will meet in The Hague in June; a truce of eight months between all the soviet republics and the other European powers; a clearer comprehension on the part of the world of the arrogant attitude and extravagant demands of soviet Russia; and a repeated affirmation of the position of the United States, that it will not participate in the political wrangles of Europe and will not enter into dealings with the Moscow government until the latter recognizes its international obligations.

The last mentioned result came when the Genoa conference invited the United States to take part in the proposed negotiations at The Hague, virtually admitting that without the aid of America's financial resources any agreements for the commercial regeneration of Russia would be useless. Secretary Hughes' reply, after expressing the deep sympathy of this country for the people of Russia and its desire to aid them in every practicable way, continued:

"This government, however, is unable to conclude that it can helpfully participate in the meeting at The Hague, as this would appear to be a continuance, under a different nomenclature of the Genoa conference, and destined to encounter the same difficulties, if the attitude disclosed in the Russian memorandum of May 11 remains unchanged.

"The inescapable and ultimate question would appear to be the restoration of productivity in Russia, the essential conditions of which are still to be secured and must, in the nature of things, be provided within Russia herself.

Intense disappointment was caused in Genoa by this answer, and though it seemed final, some of the delegates, especially the British, refused so to consider it. Before the meeting at The Hague gets under way it is likely another attempt will be made to obtain the co-operation of the United States.

ACCORDING to the accepted plan, the nations represented at Genoa will send delegates to The Hague, and from them will be selected a commission that will deal with the financial and economic problems involved in the recognition of soviet Russia, but not with political affairs. The findings will be submitted to the various powers, and, if they are approved, the commission will begin conferences with a commission of Russians. Meanwhile the eight months' truce with the soviet republics will be in effect and the powers will not enter into separate treaties with Moscow or back their nationals in trying to obtain property in Russia which did not belong to them before the soviets came into control there.

Because it already has made a treaty with Russia, Germany is not to be included in the negotiations at The Hague. To this exclusion M. Tscheterin made strong objection, on the ground that one of the chief objects of the meeting, credits, was not dealt with in the Rapallo pact. The Russian leader also had a hot exchange with the Japanese, asking whether Japan intended to engage in a truce in the Far East or to continue the state of war in Siberia. Viscount Ishii's swift reply was that regardless of past differences among the Russians which had necessitated the presence of Japanese troops in Siberia to protect the property of their nationals, Japan was now ready to conclude a non-aggression pact in the Far East if the Chita republic also complied with the truce.

Tscheterin then squabbled with the Poles, Rumanians and others over alleged plans of anti-Bolshevik leaders to organize expeditions against Russia, but was again squelched. When he asked that what is left of General Wrangel's army be removed farther from Russia, Mr. Lloyd George retorted: "Who wants them? We don't." The British premier severely scored Tscheterin's defense of Russia as an "innocent, patient, and tolerant model of all the Christian virtues," and in concluding said: "Speaking after 20 years as a minister, longer than anyone else here, I believe the best we can do is to mind our own business. Organizing an expedition under General Wrangel to convert the heathen in Russia or under M. Tscheterin and Litvinoff to convert the heathen in our country will only bring trouble."

The Russian delegates have been trying hard to "save their faces" and it is predicted they will not be enthusiastically received by the more extreme communists at home. They have the treaty with Germany to their credit, but they have failed to obtain recognition for their government, and, what hurts more, they haven't the ghost of a show of getting the huge loan which was demanded.

German-Polish treaty settling the Upper Silesia question; the establishment of a financial and economic protectorate over Albania by the league; the throwing open of the court of international justice to all nations, including Russia, Turkey and Mexico; the creation of a commission for international intellectual co-operation with an American member, and the setting of a definite date for disposal of the mandate over Palestine.

The last thing the council did was to decide to support Germany in her protest to the league against the treatment of more than a million Germans residing in Poland. They were barred from citizenship by a ruling that Germans must prove continuous residence in Poland for six years. Nearly all of them were serving in the German army during the war and so are deprived of citizenship. The council determined to urge strongly on Poland the reconsideration of the ruling.

IN PASSING upon the constitutional-ity of the grain exchange law the Supreme court of the United States found that the taxing features of the measure are unenforceable. Therefore the agricultural bloc in congress, under the leadership of Senator Capper of Kansas, is drawing up a revamped bill to overcome the objections. In place of the taxing power the new bill will probably provide for federal control over exchanges by declaring their activities to be a form of interstate commerce and therefore subject to government supervision.

THE Supreme court knocked out another piece of legislation last week, holding that the child labor law, passed in 1919, is unconstitutional, as an attempt by congress to regulate through its taxing power something entirely within the jurisdiction of the various states in the exercise of their police power. The law was designed to regulate the employment of children in any mill, cannery, workshop, factory or manufacturing establishment, under the age of fourteen or in any mine or quarry under sixteen years by imposing an excise tax of 10 per cent upon the net annual profits of those employing such labor. The Supreme court ruling is in effect another victory for the mill owners of Southern states.

PROGRESS in the senate debate over the tariff is outrageously slow, despite the fact that night sessions are being held. This is by no means due altogether to the Democratic opposition. Republican members are so lax in their attendance that Senator McCumber felt called on to take them to task, telling them if they couldn't keep on the job they should resign. The Democrats attack especially the section of the bill which gives the President power to raise or lower duties within a range of 50 per cent and to proclaim American valuation. This, they assert, is unconstitutional.

ANOTHER battle in conference between the house and the senate is presaged by the action of the senate appropriations subcommittee in agreeing that the army for next year shall consist of approximately 140,000 enlisted men and 12,530 officers. This represents a cut of 10,000 from the strength asked by the War department, but is an increase over the house bill of 25,000 men and 1,500 officers.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST is again causing the Democrats of New York state great distress of mind. He has declared himself a candidate for the nomination for governor and told the party leaders that he has done so much for the party that it should do that much for him. Mayor Hyland of New York city has come out strongly in favor of Hearst, and his chief up-state supporter is W. J. Conners, the Buffalo editor. Tammany doesn't know just what to do.

In the Gulf coast field, west Columbia shows no change, and Orange county is reported at 17,500 barrels, against 19,000 barrels.

Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States increased 14,950 barrels for the week ending May 13, totaling 1,422,000 barrels, as compared with 1,407,450 barrels the preceding week.

Proof That Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is of Great Help at This Period

Metropolis, Illinois.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it is all it claims to be and has benefited me wonderfully. I had been sick for eight months with a trouble which confined me to my bed and was only able to be up part of the time when I was advised by a friend, Mrs. Smith, to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills. I was so much benefited by the use of these medicines that I was able to be up and about in two weeks. I was at the Change of Life when I began taking the medicines and I passed over that time without any trouble. Now I am hale and hearty, do all my housework, washing, ironing, scrubbing, and cooking, all there is to do about a house, and can walk two or three miles without getting too tired. I know of several of my neighbors who have been helped by your medicines."—Mrs. ENMA CULVER, 706 E. 7th St., Metropolis, Illinois.

Depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Nervousness, irritability, heat flashes, headache and dizziness, are relieved by this splendid medicine.

Why do women like pipe smokers?

"We asked many women. One said: 'Because a man who thinks things out, does them and goes all the way through with anything he starts generally smokes a pipe if he smokes at all—and nearly always he does smoke.'

Another replied: 'A pipe smoker is more of a home man, it seems to me. There is no better picture of contentment than a man smoking a pipe in his home after the day's work is done.'

"He is more honest, more reliable, more manly," said another—but she was rather young.

"Pipe-smokers are not so jumpy and fidgety, so nervous as non-smokers. They're more easily contented," was the opinion of one woman.

There were many reasons given by the fair ladies; some of them not very powerful from a logical viewpoint. The significant feature of the questionnaire was that the great majority of the women admitted that they do like pipe smokers.

And just to show that woman is not the only illogical of the two sexes, we asked a number of men why they liked the tobacco they smoked. One said it was strong enough for him. Another said it was mild enough for him—and they were smoking the same brand. All of them had some more-or-less indefinite reason for liking a certain tobacco, but putting that Leoney negotiated the distance in 9.7 to 10 seconds, one-tenth of a second better than the former record, which stood at 9.4-5.

Gen. Grigorie Semenov, former astronaut of the Cossacks, has been ordered released from arrest at New York by the appellate division of the Supreme Court, which reversed the decision of Supreme Court Justice DeLoaherty. The higher court directed that $10 and costs be awarded. He is now out on $25,000 bail.

Breakfast and Its Relation to Health

(By HELEN BARR)

HEALTH IS A NATIONAL OBLIGATION. GOOD FOOD HABITS ARE NECESSARY FOR HEALTH

WHAT ARE GOOD FOOD HABITS?
They are: The eating of the right kinds of food; the eating of the right amount of food; the eating of this food at the right time and in the proper manner.

Use plenty of milk, vegetables, and cereals and make sure that all building stones are supplied.

IS APPETITE A GOOD GUIDE?
There are very few wise and intelligent appetites. Taste is too depraved to trust as a guide. The chances are that we would be getting far more than we needed of some material and not enough of others. This is a waste of food.

How then can one be sure of securing a proper balance?

1. There should be at least 1 qt. of milk for every two or three people over five years of age (1 qt. for every child under five).
 2. There should be plenty of bread or cereal and milk for breakfast with fruit if possible. If people are working hard other things may be added.
 3. The main dish at one other meal should consist of one or more vegetables with milk and bread or cereals.
 4. The third meal should have as its main dish meat or meat substitute prepared with plenty of vegetables.
 5. There should be plenty of milk, vegetables, and cereals in every dish.
- If these foods are made the important items in the diet the sugar may be reduced to a minimum. It should never be allowed between meals or at the beginning of a meal as it destroys the appetite for the foods needed. Learn to eat cereal without sugar. Whatever sugar is given should be given at the end of the meal. It contains no iron and is likely to lessen the eating of iron foods. Iron foods are very necessary.
- There should be a reasonable amount of fat in every diet. Cheaper fat oils may be used in place of butter, provided there are plenty of milk and green vegetables.

HORTICULTURAL DEPARTMENT OF UNIVERSITY AWARDED SILVER MEDAL

TUCSON, June 2.—The Department of Horticulture of the University of Arizona was recently awarded a beautiful silver medal, known as the Wilder Medal, by the American Pomological Society in its Annual Meeting at Toledo, Ohio, for an exhibit of dates. This is the highest award offered by the Society and is based on general merit and educational value. The exhibit comprised a collection of date varieties attractively arranged with a specially prepared box of Haynays occupying the center. Various types of commercial packs were also shown, the whole attractively labeled, and supported by a background of graceful palm leaves.

In addition to receiving this high recognition by the oldest and largest horticultural society in America, the exhibit was a splendid advertising feature for Arizona.

Fashions in Flowers.

Flowers have not always meant beauty alone. In the days of the French revolution to wear or even possess the proscribed fleur-de-lys meant death. Likewise, after Waterloo and the fall from power of the Napoleonic regime, the violet, which had been chosen as the emblem of the Napoleons, was forced to disappear from public view. Yet later, as times changed, history found the Empress Eugenie wearing the violet on her breast at a ball in the Tuilleries to signify to the world that she had accepted the hand of Napoleon III.

Nor have the same flowers always found favor in the eyes of the world. Some flowers have their fashions, too, as, for example, the camellia and the once despised sunflower and marigold. It was through Dumas that the waxen beauty of the camellia came into general favor, and the pre-Raphaelites restored to high place the sunflower and the marigold, the mythical goldflower of the Greeks—Exchange.

Auntie Remembered.

Auntie, getting along in years, is an earnest advocate of the "blank" system of memory training. By its use she has had remarkable success lately in recalling names, always so inclined to slip away from her. The other day, however, it took three attempts to get the rightful appellation. Nephew went up to her at a dance, requesting an introduction to the new and decidedly sturdy and stout young kindergarten who was substituting in our town.

"Yes, yes, I know her name," said auntie eagerly; "just let me think a moment—it was entirely appropriate, so I don't bother much with it. Let me see. Strong, no; Betty, oh, no; I remember it applied to her calling as well as to her person. I have it now, Powers—Miss Powers," said auntie triumphantly.—Chicago Journal.

Gold Knives Used to Carve Sacrifices.

At Chichen-Itza, in Yucatan, where there is a sacred sinking well, there has been found all sorts of beautiful sacrifices imbedded in the mud. Jade necklaces, gold plates and small jars heavily studded with jade, sometimes containing human hearts, have been found in this well. The Maya Indians made these sacrifices when they wanted rain or a blessing for their crops. Beautiful gold knives that were undoubtedly used to carve up the victims of sacrifice, usually young women, have also been found.

The Maya Indians of northern Yucatan probably use the same language as the builders of the ruins among which they live, says Prof. A. M. Tozzer, of Harvard university.

Lightning Flashes.

No doubt lightning flashes vary in thickness, but one photographed recently was estimated from the size of the trace it left on a photograph and the distance of the tower it struck from the camera, to be only one-fifth of an inch.

Take All But Cabin.

A very curious propensity of the wolverine is its habit of stealing and carrying away articles which can be of no possible use to it, says the American Forestry Magazine. An instance is recorded where these animals removed and concealed the whole paraphernalia of an unoccupied hunter's axes, knives, cooking vessels and blankets.

Experienced hunters and trappers claim that a big wolverine may weigh as much as 90 pounds, but that 50 pounds is the more usual weight. They are very tenacious of life and instances are on record when the animal has been shot through and through the chest and not succumbed to the wound. In such cases, of course the heart is not penetrated.

Kipling as a Street Musician.

Kipling's verse, even where it is not stang, is rarely poetry, but it is, for the most part, clean and neat in its rhythmical swing, well adapted for the purposes of the music halls, easy to remember, even without tune, praiseworthy in its control of the means of clarity, and, in short, a genuine article of its kind. Kipling is like a practised musician in that strange orchestra which we sometimes see in the street, clinging around one performer; he nods his head, and all the bells tinkle about his pagoda-shaped hat; he stamps his foot, and the drumstick bangs the drum and sets the cymbals clapping on his back, and all the while he is playing the concertina with both his hands and perhaps blowing into a panpipe with his mouth. —Arthur Symonds, in London Quarterly Review.

Quaint Custom.

A quaint custom is still maintained in one of the old streets of the Strand, the London Times reports. This is the burning of a light in the hall of one of the houses all through the night when everybody is asleep. This light has a history, and marks an ancient privilege and bygone right-of-way. The light is maintained by the Westminster council and not by the tenants of the house. The lamp-lighter enters at twilight and kindles the light, and on his round in the early morning he re-enters with a latchkey and extinguishes it. The light is the remaining symbol of a right-of-way formerly enjoyed by residents in the street to proceed to a spring of water in the basement, which was once their sole water supply.
