"He's some fox," said Lund. "Miss Peggy, you better superintend the theatricals. It's got to be done right. Rainey, not to interrupt you, what do you know about enteric fever?"

"Nothing." "Well, it's the same as typhoid. There'll be a surgeon aboard that grub-boat. You got to bluff him. Say little 'an' look wise as an owl. Don't let him mix in with your patient."

"My patient?" "Tamada! He's got enteric fever. If there's time left give you all the dope." "But I don't see how that—"

"You will see when you see Tamada," Lund grinned. "How about them logs? Can you fix 'em?" "I think so."

"Then hop to it. I'm goin' to wise up the men and arrange a reception committee. Don't forget your name's Carlsson, an' mine's Simms."

Rainey wrote rapidly in his log, erasing, eliminating pages without trace, imitating the skipper's phrasing. Fortunately Simms had made scant entries at first and, later on, as the drug held him, none at all. Carlsson had kept no record that he could find. The girl had gone forward to aid with Tamada's plan which Lund had evidently accepted.

not to dislodge the masses of ice that overhung the schooner. Fires to thaw out the ground were unavailable for sheer lack of fuel; there was no driftwood between these forestless shores. What fuel could be spared was conserved for use under the boilers that melted ice to provide water for the cradles and flumes, and help to cook the meals that Tamada prepared out-of-doors for the workers.

Buckets of coffee, stews, and thick soups of peas and lentils, masses of beans with plenty of fat pork, these were what they craved after hours of tremendous endeavor. Despite the cold, they sweated profusely at their tasks stripping off overgarments as they picked and shoveled or crow-barraged out the rich gravel.

"Where is Mr. Lund?" he panted. Rainey pointed to Lund, now examining a crack that had opened up in the floor, a possible line of exit for the Karrik, later on. The men were beginning to show on the schooner. They, too, he noted somewhat idly, acted differently this morning. Usually they were sluggish until they had eaten, the melting of water and the forge, that were kept glowing all night, the tools were stacked to help preserve their temper.

The aurora quivered in varying indelicacy as Rainey watched Lund prodding at the floor ice with a steel bar. The girl was busy with the coffee, and Tamada was compounding two pots of stew and bubbling pens puddling for the breakfast, food for heat and muscle making.

Sandy appeared on deck and came swiftly over the side of the vessel and up the worn trail to the fires. He showed excitement, Rainey fancied, sure of it as the lad got within speaking distance.

"I can manage," returned Rainey, alias Carlsson. "It's enteric. I've reduced the fever."

"You passed on through the hunters' quarters. The girl fell behind with Rainey." "A good makeup and a good actor," she whispered. "I helped him to be sure he covered everything that would show. It was my idea about the bandanna. Just what a sick negro might wear, and it hid his straight hair."

head bound in a red bandanna above the black face and neck that showed above the blankets. The eyes were closed. The black hands, showing lighter palms, plucked at the coverings.

"Delirious," said Lund. "Serves him right. He's a rotten cook."

"I can manage," returned Rainey, alias Carlsson. "It's enteric. I've reduced the fever."

"You can bet your life they do," said Lund. "They're smart, but they overlooked that beach an' they've given us three weeks to cash in."

Lund himself had imbibed enough of the sake to make him loose of tongue, added to his elation at the success he had achieved. The grub-boat was gone on its patrol, and he had a free hand. He half filled a glass with whisky. "Here's to luck," he cried. And spilled a part of the liquor on the floor before he set the glass to his lips.

"Here's to you, Doc," he added. "An' to Peggy!" He rolled eyes that were a trifle bloodshot at the girl.

"Our relations have gone back as usual, Mr. Lund," she said quietly. Lund glared at her half truculently. "I'm agreeable," he said. "As a daughter, I disown you from now on, Miss Peggy. Here's to ye, jest the same!"

CHAPTER XII.

My Mate.

From the day following the arrival and departure of the Japanese grub-boat, they attacked the little U-shaped beach that lay between two buttresses of the volcano and sloped sharply down to the sea. Twenty-one men, a

"Lund should have told me," he said. "I've got to change his name on the papers. It doesn't appear in the log." The Japanese officer wasted no time on deck. For precaution, Rainey made his alteration in the skipper's cabin, leaving the log there on the built-in desk.

"This is Lieutenant Ito, Doctor Carlsson," said Lund. "You want to see our papers, Lieutenant?"

"My orders are to examine the schooner," said Ito, in English even more perfect than Tamada's. His face was officially severe, though his slant eyes shifted constantly toward the girl. Evidently she was an unexpected feature of the visit.

"I'll get the papers first," said Lund. "Doctor, you an' Peggy entertain the lieutenant." Rainey set out some whisky, which the Japanese refused, some cigars that he passed over with a motion of his hand. He sat down stiffly and ran through the papers.

"We ain't trespassin' on purpose. Didn't even know you owned the island."

"It is on our charts," said Ito crisply, as if that settled the right of dominion. "How did you come here at all?"

"We was brought," said Lund. "Got froze in north of Wrangell, Gale set us west as we come out of the strait. We're bound for Corwin. Nothin' contraband. All regular. Six hunters, two damaged in the gale, though the doc's fixed 'em up. Twelve seamen, one boy, an' a bigger cook who's poisoned himself with his own cooking. Doc's bringin' him round, too, though he don't deserve it. Want to make you any inspection? We're in no hurry to get away until the ice melts. Take your time."

The little, dapper officer with his keen, high-checked face, and his shoe-brush hair, got up and bowed, with a side glance at Peggy Simms.

"It is not usual for young ladies to be so far north." His endeavor at gallantry was obvious.

"I am with my father," said Lund. And looked in turn at her with a side glance at Peggy Simms.

"Where I go she goes," said Lund. And looked in turn at her with a side glance at Peggy Simms.

MANY OVERCOME IN SUBWAY FIRE

SCORES BATTLE TO ESCAPE THE DEADLY FUMES IN TUNNEL.

SMOKE FILLS STALLED TRAIN IN THE NEW YORK SUBWAY.

New York.—Trapped in a dark subway tunnel seventy-five feet below the street and reeking with gas fumes and smoke, nearly 500 men, women and children passengers on an East Side train of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company were converted into a frenzied, shrieking mob.

The train—a ten-car Jerome avenue express, heavily loaded—was crashing along its subterranean way when passengers in the third coach were startled by an explosion which blew open the door of the driver's compartment. A short circuit had occurred. The train stopped.

Patrolman Fred Norman, who was riding in the car, seized a fire extinguisher and rushed to the compartment and shot the contents of the extinguisher on the flames, which were eating the insulation from the control box wires. He declared the extinguisher served only to spread the flames, and in a moment the car, and soon the entire tunnel, were choked with smoke and fumes.

Patrolman Norman seized a woman who had been overcome, climbed down into the darkness of the tunnel and commanded other male passengers to follow him.

"They're Drunk, an' They're Goin' on Strike," said Sandy.

Patrolman Norman seized a woman who had been overcome, climbed down into the darkness of the tunnel and commanded other male passengers to follow him.

He groped his way along with his burden to Fifty-ninth Street and led the refugees up a long, winding emergency stairway to the street.

Then he sent alarms which brought all available fire apparatus, ambulances and police reserves in the vicinity rushing to the scene.

Power was shut off to save the passengers from possible electrocution. But the darkness only added to the panic and the passengers on the train smashed their way out of the cars and joined in the available for exits.

Men, women and children clamped in their tracks, as the fumes, the smoke and the excitement overcame them.

Those least injured were laid out in rows on sidewalks to receive first aid while the graver cases were taken to improvised hospitals, later to be removed to regular hospitals.

Pulmoners were rushed to the scene, and at one time fourteen pulmonary operators were working over prostrate forms on the sidewalk.

Blame for the seriousness of the accident was laid on the fire extinguishers by Capt. Thomas Rush of the engine company No. 39, which was the first to reach the scene.

BRICKBATS AND BOUQUETS

How many times, Mr. and Mrs. Reader, have you said a kind word to the editor? How often have you stopped him on the street to commend him for an editorial or dropped him a note giving him your support in some fight he was making for the public good?

An editor doesn't seek any words of thanks. Probably if you did stop him and shower some kind words in his ear he would be as embarrassed as a 10-year-old schoolboy speaking his first piece. But at any rate it will sound good to him when he has time to think it over.

Instead of words of praise, here is what you generally hear:

"Why, that paper isn't worth half the price. It never has any news in it, and what it does have is mostly wrong."

Yet when that person wants to advertise a cake sale or a dance he or she sends the items to this same newspaper.

Then you hear that the editor is a crank, that he is biased and does not present news fairly, that he does not know how to run a paper, and so on.

You have all heard these remarks or similar ones, but are they fair?

An editor, in the first place, is only a human being. He is dealing with human beings and it's sound logic that you can't please all the people all the time. At some time or another he has to print some news that is going to offend someone and make an enemy. The editor can't help that. A cop who gets into trouble never think about the newspaper until they want their name kept out. Then they get mad at the editor because he prints the news.

It is true that an editor makes mistakes, and no one regrets more than he the slips of the type, but, again, he is human and so is every man and woman who works for him.

Did you ever stoop to think how many characters there are in a column of type? Well there are thousands, and that means there are thousands of opportunities to make errors. And newspapers are generally printed and read in a hurry, and confusion. Everything is rush. And yet if a few types get mixed up the paper is criticized.

Take it right home to yourself. Can you sit down and write a letter—seven or eight lines—without sometimes getting a word wrongly placed or misspelled? Be honest, be charitable and overlook a few mistakes when you see them in your home town paper.

No man tries harder to avoid mistakes than the editor. It's common sense that he would much prefer to have a perfect paper and avoid mistakes.

The editor is always ready to back any movement for the uplift of his community. If you want to start anything right in your home town and get it across to the people you go right up to the editor's door and ask him to help you out. And he never refuses if it is for a good cause. The editor does more and gives away more real dollars in free space than any merchant in town.

You can always count on your editor. In fact, you do count upon him. And what would an town be without a newspaper? Have you ever thought of that? What would the world be without newspapers? It would be like going back to the dark ages. Business and everything would be tied up in knots if it weren't for the newspapers. They spread the ray of light that shows the way to progress.

Just think if you had to travel all around the county to get the news of interest to everybody. Well, you wouldn't do it. The editor does this for you—he is the connecting link between you and the news centers of the world and the news of your home town. This news he gathers faithfully and as accurately as is humanly possible, puts it on white paper, and it is delivered to your home every morning or evening, or every week, as the case may be, for little or nothing. The money received often doesn't pay the costs of white paper. A newspaper is the biggest bargain that is offered to the public today, and it has been so for years.

The next time you meet the editor—well, just remember he is a human being just like you are and that the Golden Rule works both ways.

LAZY VOTERS

The greatest danger to American institutions lies in apathy of conservative voters who, by failing to vote, allow a small minority to inflict its will on the majority of the people.

In many primary elections from 12 to 20 per cent of the total registered voters choose candidates to go on the ticket at general elections.

The same procedure takes place in regard to initiative measures placed on the ballot. Particularly is this true where unusual taxation measures come up at special elections, those who have pecuniary interest in the measure vote for it, and this minority of registered voters will load a city, county or state government with a burden of debt which all must pay.

Every citizen should see that he is properly registered, and go to the elections and vote, as a matter not only of good citizenship but as a business proposition.

The average business man would be most indignant if the charge were made that he allowed third parties to contract debts in his name and then objected to paying them.

What is the difference if a business man allows himself to be loaded with a burden of tax debt simply through his negligence or laziness in failing to go to the polls and fulfill his duty as a citizen in voting for sound men and measures?

"LITTLE THINGS"

Arthur Brisbane, writing editorially on the eviction work employed by the Pennsylvania coal mine owners, says: "Owners of Pennsylvania coal mines are evicting families of miners on strike from company-owned houses and putting in non-union miners brought in truckloads from West Virginia."

"About 50 families a day are put on the sidewalks, and strikebreakers put in. This is all strictly legal. Whether it is strictly wise, future events will show."

"Wherever you see a big, important change in history, you find that it was built up on a number of little things. Putting families in the streets at the rate of 50 a day may be one of those 'little things.'"

FOLLOW QUEER OLD CUSTOM

Good Friday Ceremonies That Have Foundations in Charity Are Still Maintained in London.

One of the queerest customs to be seen in the queer old city of London is observed on morning of Good Friday, when 21 widows of the parish pick up as many bright silver sixpences, fresh from the mint, from a flat tombstone in the churchyard and receive as many hot-cross buns.

Rahere, the founder of St. Bartholomew's, away back in the Twelfth century, who is credited with having been a merry jester in his unregenerate days, may have laughed at the continuance of a custom the origin of which nobody understands, not even the generous-hearted gentleman who hands out the sixpences and the buns, or the thankful ladies who receive them.

The custom is "pep in misery," as Mr. Yellowplush would say, but it goes on year by year. One story is that a lady who passed away in the earlier years of the Reformation, anxious that masses should be said for her, and knowing they could not be said publicly, left money for that purpose to be distributed every Good Friday. She hoped that the poor widows, as they picked up the sixpences from her tombstone, would offer a silent prayer on her behalf.

Conservation of the Birds.

Entirely apart from the economic and the ethical and aesthetic phases of the question. Does not good citizenship demand that all possible measure be taken to conserve, perpetuate and increase all the beautiful and useful creatures of the earth? The fauna no less than the flora of a country are among its great treasures to be cherished and protected for the generations to come, as well as for the delight and enjoyment of that of the present. In any country as more persons turn back to nature for recreation and entertainment, the appreciation of natural resources increases and a kindlier spirit is manifested toward the birds. This quickened interest in all phases of bird life finds expression in organized effort to promote their well-being as well as in the individual effort to attract and cherish through kindness these delightful ornaments of park and lawn.—Exchange.

Pathetic Picture of Author.

In the first chapter of Edmund Gosse's "Impressions" he recalls a strange pair in a victoria he often met in the course of his walks from the northwest of London toward Whitehall in and after 1874. The man, prematurely aging, was hirsute, rugged and satyrlike. That was George Henry Lewes. The woman was "a large, thick-set sylph, whose massive features, dreamy and immobile, somewhat grim when seen in profile, were incongruous bordered by a hat, always in the height of the Paris fashion, which in those days commonly included an immense ostrich feather." That was George Eliot. The contrast between the solemnity of the face and the frivolity of the headgear had something pathetic and provincial about it.

EXULT WHEN FOX IS KILLED

English Farmers Glad to Contribute Money to Exhibitor of Dead Enemy of Hen Roosts.

It is no uncommon sight in the country to encounter a poor countryman carrying a fox—dead, of course—in his arms, and calling with it on farmers and landowners in the neighborhood, says London Answers.

He usually conveys it to the back door and displays it proudly to anyone who will listen to him; then, having described graphically what a fierce and destructive animal the fox was before his death, he begs for a small gift of money.

The custom is very ancient and is called in many parts of England, "begging the fox." The idea is this: Foxes, especially in nonhunting districts, are one of the farmers' greatest enemies, and the knowledge that one of these creatures has been destroyed—especially the female fox—is indeed good news to the farmer. As a consequence, should any poor cottager be fortunate enough either to shoot or to trap a fox, he carries his victim for miles round the countryside and displays it.

He expects a reward from each farmer he visits and is very seldom disappointed. The gifts vary from sixpence to as much as 5 shillings, and one day on the road "begging the fox" can easily yield the lucky laborer 4 or 5 pounds.

The skin is also, of course, his own property, and for this he can sometimes secure as much as 25 shillings in the market of the nearest town.

A Way to Save Him.
Willy is a little scamp. He goes from one piece of mischief to another so fast that his mother is worn out and nervous from the strain of continually exhorting him from his predicaments. The last straw was an incident that occurred while they were visiting at grandma's.

Was it mischief or just curiosity that led Willy to stick his hand between two rods of the banister? It was when Willy tried to get his hand out and couldn't that the trouble commenced. He raised his voice and the mischief started. The entire household rushed to his rescue—mother leading with grandma a close second. They tried in every way possible to extricate the boy's hand but without success. It must have expanded during the moments of its imprisonment.

When grandma, with her usual presence of mind, ordered, "Get me a saw, quick!" mother broke down completely. "Oh, grandma, will we have to cut his hand off?" "No," answered "Gram," calmly, "Just the banister rod."—Chicago Journal.

GOT TAPESTRIES AT BARGAIN

Vienna Pawnbroker Would Have Done Good Stroke of Business Had Not Police Interfered.

A distracted young widow, reports the Vienna correspondent of the London Daily Mail, took one of three tapestries found under her father's bed to a pawnbroker and obtained a loan of about $15. She was amazed and scared when they told her the tapestry was a Gobelin worth millions of crowns.

The Gobelins are the property of Prince Cartoryska, who had given them to the young woman's father to guard. When the man discovered one was missing from the hiding place under his mattress he rushed to the police, who tracked down and arrested his daughter.

The weeping girl told the judge that she was married eighteen months ago and her husband died the day her baby was born. She became homeless and went to lodge with her father, who had been in the service of the prince. She meant to redeem the Gobelin with the first money she earned.

The prince said he had suffered no injury, as the tapestries were undamaged and the amount the girl had borrowed was no more than he had meant to pay her father for taking care of them.

When the young mother was acquitted her father repeatedly kissed her tear-stained face and led her from the court.

HAD EXAMPLE IN ROGUERY

Famous "Captain Von Koepnick" Not the First to Make Fraudulent Use of Army Uniform.

The recent death of Voigt, the famous "Captain von Koepnick," reminds Le Petit Parisien that he had precursors of the same rare audacity in Paris.

In Paris, during the Directory, two men of military aspect presented themselves at the Nouvelle barracks, provided with forged orders of the police prefect and commandant of the city.

In virtue of these orders they requisitioned two sergeants and some soldiers, and went with them to Rue Richelieu, then the Rue de la Loi, where they entered the house occupied by a young Turkish diplomat.

Showing their false warrant, they unlocked the rooms and furniture of the young Turk, took his jewels and his gold and threatened to take him to prison; but finally, on his request, left him at home guarded by one of the sergeants and two or three soldiers.

After which, dismissing the rest of the troops, they departed and have never been seen since.

The two men were thieves for whom the police of that time were looking in vain.

Stainless Iron Held Great Invention.

Stainless iron, which is already on the market in the form of golf clubs, cutlery, small metal parts, shop fittings, sheets for turbine parts, and for other machinery parts specially liable to corrosion through exposure, is steadily being made cheaper by the manufacturers in Sheffield. Its high cost at present is the chief obstacle to its general use. When people recognize its intrinsic value, stainless iron will be used very extensively, says a steel maker. At present the development is in its infancy, and the closest investigation is necessary before unqualified claims can be made or before the discovery can be fully exploited. Stainless iron was regarded as one of the most important metallurgical developments of 1921. A great future is prophesied for it in engineering construction. It is expected that eventually it will replace copper, brass, and nickel in the manufacture of a wide variety of articles.

Up to Date.

A Philadelphia builder advertises that all houses he is erecting are being wired for radio telephone service. That starts a lot of talk. Nothing Americans like more than a thing with the latest improvements.

A few years hence prospective tenants, after inspecting a house, will say: "Plenty of closet room, a large bath, good plumbing, everything convenient. You have, of course, an airplane landing on the roof?"

Airplanes soon will take off by rising straight up in the air. Airplane landings on house roofs will be as common as garages are now.

A newspaper reporter had been regaled with a most sensational story from a rural subscriber and was trying to seek verification.

"Is the fellow who gave you the account of this story regarded as a truthful man?" he asked. "Waal," replied the next-door neighbor and best friend of the man in question, "I ain't sayin' he ain't altogether truthful, but I kin say that what happened 't Ananias an' Sapphira ain't never affected him none."

FIRST TO CROSS CONTINENT

Sir Alexander Mackenzie Made Adventurous Trip With a White Party in 1792-1793.

The first white man to cross this continent by a route north of Mexico was Sir Alexander Mackenzie, a Scotsman, who rose high in the service of the old North West company, which was amalgamated with the Hudson's Bay company in 1821. Mackenzie was in the Far West when he planned his trip across country to the Pacific coast. In the autumn of 1792 he led his party far up the Peace river, where they built a post and wintered. On May 9, 1793, the party set out, passing up the Peace river, through the Rocky mountains across to the Fraser river, which was followed down stream for some distance, and then across country through an unexplored region, until the party came out on the Pacific coast. Mixing a quantity of vermillion with melted grease, Mackenzie wrote on the inland side of a high rock rising from the shore these words to mark his visit: "Alexander Mackenzie, Just from Canada by land, the twenty-second of July, One thousand seven hundred and ninety-three. Lat. 52 degrees, 20 minutes, 48 seconds north." Mackenzie then retraced his course and returned to the East.

A Quick Thinker.

"You didn't wink at this young woman?"
"No, your honor. Some foreign substance got into my eyes and made me wink. I was really suffering."
"But she also says you smiled at her. How can a man smile at a pretty girl when his eye is giving him great pain?"
"Your honor, where the fair sex is concerned I have Spartan courage."
"Umph! I doubt if you have Spartan courage, but your mental alertness impresses the court. I'll assess a nominal fine of $5."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Publicity.

Alderman John Coughlin of Chicago was cornered the other day by some younger members of the city council who asked him how he had retained his seat in the council for over thirty years. "Boys," said the veteran, "we all like to have nice things said about us in the papers, but, whether it's nice or not, have them say something and say it often!"

NEW YORK IS LARGEST CITY

American Metropolis, in Population, Has Gone Far Ahead of the Capital of England.

New York has surpassed London in population, according to the New York city census committee. If the same method of territory is included within the New York city limits as is calculated in the London figures...

Greater London, it is explained, includes not only London county, but an "outer ring" in which the metropolitan police have specified powers and duties.

This radius reaches Tottenham, Staten Island, part of Westchester and Nassau counties and the part of New Jersey that includes Newark, Jersey City and other large population centers immediately adjacent to New York.

The population of Greater London on June 19, 1921, was 7,476,168, while that of "Largest New York," including the outlying districts, on January 1, 1920, was 7,820,076.

In the 30 years between 1891 and 1921, 1,841,302 persons, while the largest New York increased, between 1900 and 1910, 1,873,540 persons.

NEED NOT DREAD POISON IVY

Science Announces the Discovery That Gasoline Will Prevent Evil Effects So Much Dreaded.

The fear of poison ivy, which has kept many a city dweller away from the woods and meadows a whole season through, is now an unnecessary fear. The specter in the shadows of the forest is gone.

Science has discovered that the irritation of the skin, in ivy poisoning, is no different from any other chemical burn, and that gasoline or benzine will dissolve and remove the poisonous oil of the ivy if applied in time.

Insect's Depredations Enormous.

The rhinoceros-beetle is rendering the plantations along the coast of German New Guinea valueless, and unless the Australian government, which holds the mandate, does something to fight the pest the plantations will be nothing more than monuments to the depredations of the rhino.

PRIVATE RAILROAD OPERATION VERSUS FEDERAL CONTROL

The following figures were compiled and made public by the Interstate Commerce Commission:

During 26 months of federal control, including an annual rental to owners of $800,000,000, the total deficit was $1,200,000,000, or at the rate of less than $40,000,000 a month.

During that period the nation was on a war basis and extraordinary transportation expenditures were incurred.

During the first six months of private operation following the return of the roads to their owners, and when the carriers were guaranteed by the Cummins-Beck bill, the deficit as determined by payments made to May 1 was $746,235,411, or at the rate of more than $120,000,000 a month.

Many claims are still unpaid, and when the six-month guarantee period is closed the cost to the people for six months of private management will not fall short of the total cost of the 26 month war period when the government was in control of the railroads.

NEW HOME FOR UNDERTAKER

The Nogales Undertaking Company, of which Frank Caroon is the head, is to have new quarters within the next 30 days.

It was recently announced that the concern is to move from Arroyo boulevard, Nogales, to 149 Nelson street, first door north of the postoffice at the county seat.

The new location is being remodeled and will be made into one of the most modern undertaking parlors in the state. An attractive chapel will be installed, and the new quarters throughout will be larger than those now occupied.

Detroit, with approximately 350,000 families, has one automobile to each three families. This is said to be the highest percentage in the world.

Danzig, Poland, with a population of 350,000, has 561 automobiles—a small number for an American city of 10,000.

Monrovia, capital of Liberia, has three automobiles.

FIRESTONE SALES FOR JUNE BREAK FORMER RECORD

There can be no doubt as to the general business conditions improving, and especially in Akron, O., as word comes from the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company announcing a record-breaking sales volume for the month of June.

More tires in numbers were sold in the month of June than in any previous month in the history of the company. The demand seems very general for Firestone products, and comes from all sections of the country, the increase being mostly from dealers who have been carrying low stocks and are now in their full selling season.

Manufacturer's business and export shipments are also increasing.

With tire prices on so low a basis, the consuming public is purchasing freely, knowing that the values are in accord with the times.

Production at the Firestone Akron plants is now running in excess of 25,000 tires daily.

The highways of this nation total more miles than nearly all the rest of the world's put together—2,500,000.

France, Italy, and England will be represented at the French Grand Prix near Strasbourg, July 15.

The smallest necessary is said to be a clip for keeping auto keys together.

The price range for American-made cars is all the way from $819 to $19,000.

THE MIDDLEMAN

Oh, I am a member of that clan, The much-belated old tradesman. I deal in hosen and bonnets and tea, And spring lamb chops and veal; I deal in butter and lard and eggs; In prints and sugar and wooden legs; I deal in kettles and picture frames; In silk and satins, and pines and loaves, Canary birds and dogs and cats, In dressing gowns and beaver hats.

By anyone who wants a pair of socks, A barrel of peaches or a line of frocks, A flannel shirt or a length of hose, Or a pair of shoes to protect his toes; Or a bottle of rum or a yard of lace, Or something to color a pulled face; A brush for his boots, his teeth, or hair, An apple for an Elopee chair— Whatever's been made since the world began He's got the same from the Middleman.

Now, who are the Middlemen today? The world is howling to put away The druggist, the butcher, the man who takes, The fellow who sells you your hosen and rakes, The chap who opens a shop and sells Pajamas, suspenders, and dinner belts, The "agent" who hauls your your ties and shirts, The fellow that plagues your wife with skirts, And lures the ladies in glad array, In any old thing on bargain's day.

He's your he's Mr. Let's Him; he's He! Wherever the wheels of commerce whirl He hails and swears to pay his score And hold the Valpine away from his door. He didn't ask to come onto the earth, And you can't blame him because of his birth, But now that he's here in this Vale of Milk,

He's your he's friends, he's a right to work! So what's he to do and what is your plan? When you have got rid of the Middleman? —John K. Bangs.
