PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

Little Eugenia Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Little of Duquesne, who is under Dr. Smelter's care in Nogales, is so far recovered from her injury, caused by a fall some time ago, that she was dismissed from St. Joseph's hospital February 12. Her mother has taken a house in Nogales for the period during which the baby must be under a doctor's care.

Dave Dowd took a load of supplies out to the Exposed Reef mine Monday and will do some development work on the property.

Two cars of ore were shipped to the El Paso smelter by Tuesday's freight. The Trench mine was one of the shippers and the second car was made by from ores extracted at various properties in the Salero district.

Mrs. H. H. McCutcheon went to Nogales Wednesday, where she will remain for a few days under the care of a surgeon. She has a very sore knee which has been giving trouble for several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Chapman were in town Tuesday visiting relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Heady and the former's mother, Mrs. William E. Heady, were visitors Wednesday at the ranch of Miss Grace Van Osdale.

Frank Powers of the World's Fair mine at Harshaw, was a Patagonia visitor Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Kinsley and John Bodle of the San Rafael Valley motored to Nogales Friday for supplies for their ranch.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Sanders and daughter, Dorothy, of Nogales spent Sunday at the ranch of Howard Keener in the San Rafael Valley. Mr. Sanders is proprietor of the Nogales Piggly Wiggly store.

Joe McKinney, manager of the Perinances, Elgin, was a Patagonia visitor Wednesday.

Immigration Inspectors Curtis Sawyer and Jake Farrar of Benson were in town Wednesday on official business.

Fred Kolberg of Nogales was a Patagonia visitor Saturday. He visited the Duquesne mine before returning to the county seat.

Supervisor R. A. Campbell is circulating a petition to be presented to the supervisors of Pima county, which asks that the Pima county part of the road which connects the two state highways between Sonolita and Tucson be placed in repair. Santa Cruz county has built a road to the county line and if Pima county would construct about seven miles of highway there would be a good road between Sonolita and Greaterville.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry De Ford and daughter, Betty, of Tucson were visitors at the ranch of Miss Grace Van Osdale in the San Rafael Valley Wednesday.

Ethyl McCormick, daughter of Mrs. E. D. Farley, left Wednesday for Los Angeles, where she expects to remain indefinitely.

Mr. and Mrs. Heady will make their home in the San Rafael Valley, where Mr. Heady owns a large cattle ranch.

C. OF C. MEETING MARCH 19; NOT FEBRUARY 19

In last week's paper we announced a meeting of the Nogales Chamber of Commerce for February 19, at which time an open meeting was to have been held for the purpose of discussing mining and agriculture in Santa Cruz county, with the view to letting the country at large know of the wonderful natural resources we have. The date of the meeting is March 19, not February 19. We hope our error did not cause anyone to make an unnecessary trip to the county seat.

$20,000,000 WANTED BY SMELTER INVENTOR FROM BIG CONCERNS

San Francisco.—Injunctions will be applied for shortly against the American Smelting and Refining Company and all its subsidiaries to restrain them from further use of the Carson process for side charging copper reverberatory furnaces, John H. Miller, attorney for George C. Carson, alleged inventor of

The injunctions if granted, Miller said, would stop operations of the smelter at El Paso, Texas; Hayden, Arizona; Garfield, Utah, and Tacoma, Washington. The aggregate amount of ore treated at these furnaces, he claimed, is over 3,000,000 tons a year. Carson declares, according to Miller, that his process saves in those plants $1,200,000 per year, and that the American Smelting and Refining Company will be required to account to him on that basis for the last six years.

Miller further asserts that Carson emphatically denies the statement of the American Smelting and Refining Company that his damages will not exceed $500,000, pointing out that the court decided his patent was basic and fundamental and not a mere detail, and that the total amount he should realize approximately $20,000,000.

Tucson Rodeo Starts Feb. 21

A wirey, fighting, bucking mass of horseflesh, such as Pachito Villa, one of the many outlaw horses that will be entered in the lists of championship events for the Tucson rodeo, to be held in Tucson February 21, 22 and 23, where the best of the riders, ropers and bulldozers of the "old west" will compete for thousands of dollars in cash prizes.

Pachito Villa is one of the most picturesque fighters of the Burrell bucking string and has been ridden by few of the many cowboys who have tried to rattle on his back. In the bunch of 25 head of bucking horses that will be shipped from California to Tucson by Mr. Burrell are such noted outlaws as Fort Sage, Sontag, Little Jeff, Bonney Leonard, Papago, Sunshine, Black Devil and many others as good. This string of buckers will be augmented by 40 head of bucking horses from the nearby ranches, thereby insuring fresh horses each day for the big contest.

The two big features of the rodeo will be the two daily "wild horse races." The first one a "mane-and-tail-hold" race, will open the contest, and the last one, with saddles, will close the day's entertainments at the grounds. The horses for these events are being gathered on the ranges and are broncos that have never seen a rope since the day they were branded, much less a saddle.

Cowboys from all over the west and northwest are drifting into the city for the rodeo, even from as far north as Calgary, Canada, the home of the Calgary Stampede. The first arrivals were from California, where many a veteran of the range is now riding for the western pictures and where some of the best of the contestants may be found during the off season. From Miles City, Mont., Paddy Ryan, who last year won the world's bucking horse championship at Cheyenne, has wired that he would be here to defend his title. Ray Bell of Pendleton, who won the Madison Square Garden, N. Y., championship last fall in the bucking contest, has also signified his intentions of competing in Tucson.

"A Wife-Saving Station" is the unique advertising an Illinois power and light company is using. The company proves its claim by its showing of the many conveniences for the home, that save housewife's time and strength. With almost 14,000 homes supplied with electric current, 500,000 of them on farms, many a wife is indeed being saved.

The women folk who were stepping on the gas all last summer should not forget how to step on the sewing machine treadle this spring.

SCHOOL NOTES

San Dawson gave a splendid outline of the first two chapters of "Ivanhoe," which is being read one period each week.

Vivian Reagan has written some very creditable minutes for Sixth grade class work.

The officers of the Sixth grade are keeping excellent order during class periods.

The "Ukulele Boys" invited the two upper rooms to a party last Friday evening at Cady's Hall. The boys took complete charge of the affair under Miss Sjoborg's advice. The mothers helped with refreshments and serving, but the boys did everything else, from writing the invitations to keeping order.

The hall was decorated in red and white with half hidden hearts all about. We were given part of a cut Valentine and the boy who held the matching half was our partner for the evening. After everyone had matched their Valentine and secured his partner Miss Sjoborg played the grand march. Then followed games—hunting the hearts, "Ruth and Jacob," "Going to Jerusalem," "Winkum," and "Fruit Basket."

Then we danced awhile to the music on a phonograph. After which the boys brought their partners refreshments—sandwiches, cocoa and cake. A few more dances and another game finished the lovely evening.

In appreciation of the entertainment the Camp Fire Girls sang a cheer to the boys, thankin' them.

Saturday morning the Camp Fire Girls met at their guardian's home to bake Valentine cookies. The dough was mixed at Miss Sjoborg's and then the girls separated, half baking their cookies at the guardian's and half at Mrs. Evans'. The cookies were covered with red frosting and cut in the shape of hearts, which made them especially appropriate for St. Valentine's Day. The girls delivered them, a committee having already secured orders. The money received ($8) will be used for our camping fund for next summer and to help outfit the Camp Fire Girls' house in Nogales.

Miss Sjoborg's room earned a half holiday last Friday, which was enjoyed very much.

Leta Mead and Ernest Valenzuela have returned from Tucson, where they were guests of the University for a week.

Collins Buried in Sand Cave

Cave City, Ky.—Floyd Collins came to his death from exposure caused by being accidentally entrapped in a sand cave, a coroner's jury declared after a detailed investigation.

Each member of the jury was a personal friend of Collins, and intimately acquainted with the region around.

Of the hill above the sand cave the family and friends held a funeral service for Floyd Collins. There was no casket, no corpse, no grave and no hearse. Sixty feet underground in the sand cave trap which closed on him 18 days before lay the body of Collins.

Rather than risk the lives of tireless volunteers, his family decided to leave him in the cave for his last sleep.

LONGEST POWER BORE IN THE WORLD IS COMPLETED

Huntington Lake, Calif.—The Florence Lake power tunnel, 13-13 miles long and 15 feet high, the longest bore of its size in the world was "holed through" today, this week. The work on the tunnel started in 1920 from four different bores which were drilled toward each other. The cost of the tunnel will be $17,000,000. It is a unit in the power development project of the Southern California Edison Company.

WOMAN, 102, ARRESTED ON CHARGE POSSESSING BOOZE

San Pedro, Calif.—Mrs. A. Nuncey, who gave her age as 102, was arrested here this week charged with illicit possession of liquor. It was the second liquor raid on her home in the last two months.

ELGIN NEWS NOTES

The St. Valentine's dance held in Elgin last Saturday night was attended by many persons from Tucson, Nogales and Patagonia. All seemed to enjoy themselves.

S. M. Beebe and family were county seat visitors Tuesday.

An excellent dinner was enjoyed Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. Eva Barnett. Many friends of the hostess were present. After-dinner speeches and toasts were enjoyed by the company. Mrs. Barnett entertains often and her guests always enjoy her dinners.

Farm and Home Week at the University of Arizona was attended by about 30 Elgin residents. Those who took advantage of the opportunity to visit the university spent a profitable time and plan to attend all future Farm and Home Weeks.

W. H. Collie and Otto Rumsley were Tucson visitors last week.

Oliver Rothrock, one of our prosperous ranchers, seems to have started to work. The writer found him cutting some wood last week. When asked why, he replied that his brother, Ira, had gone on a strike and that he was getting hungry and needed the wood to cook his meals. Don't work too hard, Oliver, too much work isn't good for a man.

Lee H. Gould, county agricultural agent, was at the dance Saturday to play with the local orchestra.

W. F. Nell was a Tucson visitor Saturday. We know that because he was absent from the mail route on that day.

Miss Sophie Sjoborg was an Elgin visitor Saturday.

Henry Barton, Canille mail carrier, says: "Learning to play a cornet is a hard job." But the people living in his neighborhood say that he has reached the stage where the noise is far greater. Stay with it, Henry and we will back you to win out.

Mrs. Catherine Carter, former Elgin school teacher, and daughter were visitors in Elgin Saturday. Her many friends were glad to see her.

Why not come to Elgin valley and enjoy the climate?

Legislation to Protect Bank Depositors

Phoenix.—In addition to the opening of the first skirmish over the Colorado river question in the state legislature, a new bill was introduced this week proposing to protect bank depositors. The bill was introduced by Senator Cox and would require banks to furnish bond for the protection of depositors, and this bond would have to be approved by a special board, of which the state bank examiner would be a member.

A resolution dealing with banking constitution, introduced by Senator Colter, which declares "it is the sense of the Seventh Legislature that legislation be enacted as soon as possible to protect depositors' funds therein."

A bill which has caused vigorous discussion in the senate was recommended for indefinite postponement in the house. This bill would do away with supervisorial districts, and it caused prolonged discussion before going to the scrap heap.

The bill was introduced in the senate by Senator Leslie C. Hardy of Santa Cruz county.

With numerous amendments, the bill restricting the purchasing and carrying of firearms was recommended for passage.

PRISONER HANGS SELF IN PIMA COUNTY JAIL

Tucson.—With the aid of a short cord and a handkerchief, S. Wong Mook, a Chinaman, hanged himself in his cell at the Pima county jail and was found dead this morning by two cellmates. Mook was an immigration and had been in the local jail since January 5. No reason for the suicide was evident.

Teacher—Henry, why are you not writing?

Henry—I ain't got no pen.

Teacher—Where's your grammar?

Henry—Gimme one, please.

ABE LINCOLN MINE SOLD TO LOS ANGELES CAPITALISTS, WHO WILL ERECT MILL SOON

Word has just been received in Patagonia that the Abe Lincoln mine, known locally as the Blue Nose, has been sold to Capt. C. C. Spicer and associates of Los Angeles and a deed given for the property.

The Abe Lincoln was owned by the Richardson Real Estate, Mining and Commercial Corporation and Frank Hereford, a prominent Tucson attorney. Mr. Hereford has been in Los Angeles for some time closing up the sale. The transaction was closed today and word was sent here by telephone to E. F. Bohlinger, executor of the Richardson estate.

The new owners of the property will be in Patagonia within a few days, when arrangements will be made for the erection of a mill to treat the large body of low-grade ore known to exist in the Abe Lincoln.

There is every reason to believe that, with the opening up of this property, other mines in the same neighborhood will take on new life, which means that this rich mining district will again become active, as it should be with lead and silver prices what they are at present.

ARIZONA LEGISLATORS MARKETING BOARD CONSIDER MANY BILLS PLAN IS ATTACKED

Phoenix.—The state senate this week mapped out an orderly program to expedite the consideration of legislation dealing with the Colorado river compact and adopted the plan as a special rule.

The different proposals are placed in four groups with the understanding that one group will be disposed of before the next is brought up for consideration. Debate and amendment are limited on many of the proposals and the rule stipulates that all debate must be in the committee of the whole and the proceedings carried in full in the journal.

In the first group is a memorial relating to the determination of the rights of Mexico in the distribution of Colorado river water. In the second group are the two Colter resolutions protesting against the compact as an unfair division of water.

The third group contains the St. Charles resolution calling for ratification of the compact as drawn, and the Sims, Favour and Elliott resolution proposing ratification with reservations.

The fourth group contains resolutions calling for a tri-state conference on river problems between Arizona, Nevada and California.

A new resolution by Senator Colter and Denny was introduced and will have to be slipped into one of the groups. It asks that the governor be given $100,000 for a survey of the resources of the Colorado river.

There was a lively skirmish Wednesday in the house over the Colorado river question. After Representative Wisener had read lengthy excerpts from the 1923 journal concerning the flood menace in the Yuma and Imperial valleys and then asked to have his resolution proposing ratification continued on the calendar for another day, several members protested against the privilege being extended him in making comments on the pact before it was regularly before the house. Representative McGrath made a motion that the resolution proposing ratification be postponed until March 2.

This was defeated by a narrow margin after Representative Wisener had made a plea for its life and promised not to make further remarks. A motion to postpone definitely the resolution was also lost.

The governor sent to each house copies of correspondence relative to the application of John Lyle Harrison of Kansas City for permission to build a toll bridge across the Colorado at Ehrenburg. This matter had been brought to the attention of the governor in a letter from Representative Carl Hayden. The governor referred the subject to the attorney general, who was of the opinion that the state was without power to act in the matter, but added that no doubt the Yuma county authorities could grant a franchise covering such permission.

The senate passed the house bill providing for the dissolution of drainage districts and also the senate tax anticipation bond measure. That was transmitted to the house, which took it up and passed it under a series of suspensions of the rules. The committee of the whole the senate disposed of the following measures: The bill including unincorporated towns in the benefits of the firemen's fund raised from the taxation of premiums of fire insurance companies. The bill increases that tax from 2 to 3 per cent. The bill was favorably recommended. It recommended the passage of what is known as the "Town Ditch" bill, a measure asked for by the city of Phoenix to facilitate the improvement contemplated by the filling up of the Salt River valley canal running through the city. The bill authorizing the state corporation commission to secure the publication of articles of incorporation was recommended for indefinite postponement on motion of Mr. Favour, its author. The bill providing for the protection of garage owners and battery station proprietors against dishonest patrons by declaring the act of keeping batteries beyond a specified time or defacing the owners' mark on rented batteries to be embezzlement, was recommended for passage. Similar action was taken on the bill for the controlling of operations in gas and oil development. The house in the committee of the whole considered and passed favorably on several bills, among them the measure amending the no-fence law and putting the burden of the enforcement of the law upon officers, instead of having the proceedings initiated by a neighbor against a neighbor whose stock is found trespassing. The bill was resisted on the part of stockmen, it being complained that the enforcement of the law under the terms of the bill in many cases would amount to confiscation.

Washington.—Proposals of the president's agricultural conference to a co-operative marketing board were attacked before the senate agriculture committee by T. A. Nason, counsel for the Kansas Wheat Growers' Association, as "designed to organize distributors instead of the producers."

"If I wanted to ruin the co-operative wheat campaign in Kansas this is just the step I would take," the witness declared, indicating copies of the bills already introduced to carry out the conference's recommendations.

He expressed conviction that the board for supervision of co-operative marketing was just as impracticable as a central board for control of all businesses in the United States.

KILLER SENTENCED TO HANG

Phoenix.—Ramon Escobar, Mexican, convicted in superior court recently of first degree murder, was sentenced by Superior Judge M. T. Phelps to be hanged for the murder of his wife last November. April 24 was set as the day for Escobar's execution.

It up and passed it under a series of suspensions of the rules.

In the committee of the whole the senate disposed of the following measures:

The bill including unincorporated towns in the benefits of the firemen's fund raised from the taxation of premiums of fire insurance companies.

The bill increases that tax from 2 to 3 per cent. The bill was favorably recommended.

It recommended the passage of what is known as the "Town Ditch" bill, a measure asked for by the city of Phoenix to facilitate the improvement contemplated by the filling up of the Salt River valley canal running through the city.

The bill authorizing the state corporation commission to secure the publication of articles of incorporation was recommended for indefinite postponement on motion of Mr. Favour, its author.

The bill providing for the protection of garage owners and battery station proprietors against dishonest patrons by declaring the act of keeping batteries beyond a specified time or defacing the owners' mark on rented batteries to be embezzlement, was recommended for passage. Similar action was taken on the bill for the controlling of operations in gas and oil development.

The house in the committee of the whole considered and passed favorably on several bills, among them the measure amending the no-fence law and putting the burden of the enforcement of the law upon officers, instead of having the proceedings initiated by a neighbor against a neighbor whose stock is found trespassing. The bill was resisted on the part of stockmen, it being complained that the enforcement of the law under the terms of the bill in many cases would amount to confiscation.

WASHINGTON CROSSING THE DELAWARE. FROM JANICE MEREDITH.

EARLY WASHINGTON

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

WASHINGTONIANA of 1925 includes these facts:

Plans for the celebration in 1932 of the two-hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington are taking shape under the direction of the Sulgrave Institution, with headquarters in New York. The Colonial Dames of America have raised a fund of $100,000 for the endowment of Sulgrave Manor, the ancestral home of the Washingtons in England, given to the United States by the English people. Mrs. Victoria Woodhull Martin of Norton Park, Worcestershire, England, has given an ancient English manor house to be used as a hotel for American visitors to Sulgrave Manor; she is the Mrs. Victoria Woodhull who ran for President in the Grant-Greeley campaign of 1872 and is the wealthy widow, now eighty-seven, of John Bidolph Martin, an English banker. The American Bar association visited Sulgrave Manor last summer as the guest of the Sulgrave Institution of Great Britain and deposited in the museum a number of historical relics of importance. President Coolidge recalled to the recollection of his countrymen an almost forgotten spot which should be a Washington shrine by paying an unadvertised visit last summer to the birthplace of the "Father of His Country."

George Washington was born February 11, 1732, on Pope's Creek Farm, Westmoreland county, Virginia. The place is on the west bank of the Potomac river, 97 miles from Washington by automobile and about 75 by boat. Alongside the road is a small tablet with the inscription, "This is Wakefield." George Washington, however, never knew the place as "Wakefield." That name was given the farm by William Augustine Washington, his nephew.

The visitor turns in on a well-kept road constructed by the federal government. After a mile or two he comes out into a little clearing on a knoll among the pines. At the center of the knoll, inside a high iron fence rises a granite shaft, bearing the inscription, "George Washington's Birthplace." There is no date. This monument is 35 feet high, of the same pattern as the Washington monument at the capital and was erected by the federal government in 1896. At the same time the federal government constructed an iron boat landing on Bridge creek, a mile away, and so restricted its use that boats refused to land; it is now in ruins.

Pope's creek winds about the edge of the clearing and gives its name to the approximately thousand acres comprising what always has been known as the Washington farm. Pope's creek took its name from Col. Nathaniel Pope, from whom John Washington, the immigrant, bought this farm about 1652 and whose daughter, Anne Pope, he married. It is now a prosperous farm in the possession of the Latane brothers (pronounced Latane), who apparently have come to it through inheritance.

The house in which Washington was born was burned so long ago that the date has been forgotten. In 1813 George Washington Parke Custis marked the spot with a big boulder of Potomac bluestone. Visitors chipped much of the stone away and during the Civil war the last fragment of it was carried off. This stone was inscribed with the date of Washington's birth and the names of his parents.

John Washington of Northamptonshire, England, came to the "northern neck" of Virginia as this region is known, in 1657 and bought his farm of Colonel Pope. He left it to his son Lawrence—"Captain" Lawrence Washington—and he to his son, Augustine, the father of George Washington. Augustine was born on the old home place in 1694, and in 1715 took as his wife Jane Butler, a daughter of Caleb Butler, a neighbor. From this union sprang four children but only two, Augustine and Lawrence, outlived childhood. On the death of Jane Butler-Washington in 1729 the widower married Mary Ball of Lancaster county. The Ball homestead, called Epping Forest, is still standing. The children resulting from this marriage were: George, Samuel, John Augustine, Charles, Elizabeth and Mildred. The last named died in infancy. When Augustine, the father of George, died in 1743, he left the home place on Pope's creek to his son Augustine. To his second son Lawrence he bequeathed Mount Vernon. He bequeathed to George, when he should come of age, the farm on the Rappahannock opposite Fredericksburg.

The farm on which George Washington was born passed on the death of George's brother, Augustine, to the latter's son, William Augustine Washington, and next to his son, George Corbin

BUST BY DAVID

Washington. It then passed out of the Washington family. In 1846 the Washington farm was bought by John F. Wilson of Anne Arundel county, Maryland, who gave the farm to his son, John E. Wilson, who had married Betty Washington, granddaughter of William Augustine Washington. In this way the birthplace of George Washington came back to the Washington blood. Among the children of Mrs. Betty Washington-Wilson was Latane Wilson.

In 1735, when George was three years old, his father removed to the so-called Ferry farm in Stafford county, across the Rappahannock river from Fredericksburg—perhaps it was the burning of the "Wakefield" house that caused the removal. George Washington lived as boy and man on the Stafford county place until he took over Mount Vernon, which had been bequeathed him by his half-brother, Lawrence.

How does it come that February 22 is now celebrated as Washington's birthday? In this way: In 1582 Ugo Buoncompagni, known to fame as Pope Gregory XIII, took the Julian calendar in hand for doctoring. Caesar's calendar was then ten days behind the sun. Part of the world adopted the Gregorian calendar and the rest stuck to the Julian calendar. It was not until 1752 that Britain made the change. The English Colonies in America of course followed suit.

George Washington was then twenty years of age and already a prominent figure. He had been commanded by Governor Dinwiddie of Virginia to go to the Ohio valley and order the French pioneers to leave. Being young, George quite naturally wanted to be older and promptly added 11 days to his age, fixing his birthday as February 22. The British parliament later passed an act prescribing that all births and deaths prior to September 2, 1752, should be dated according to the Julian calendar. Nevertheless, George Washington's birthday is February 22. George gave evidence early in life of being a real "go-getter."

The celebrations of Washington's birthday began immediately after the Revolution. The first celebration appears to have been in the form of a ball given by his neighbors and friends at Alexandria, a few miles from Mount Vernon. The principal cities of the Colonies quickly established similar social gatherings. This birthday ball was always held at the seat of government while Washington was President and he and his wife attended. February 22 was also a gala night at the theaters.

Apparently Washington's sixty-fifth birthday, February 22, 1797, was the first to be publicly celebrated on a large scale with day-time ceremonies. It was so celebrated at Philadelphia with much ceremony. The ships in the harbor were decorated. The church bells rang peals every half hour. The diplomatic corps, members of congress and citizens called at his house to offer congratulations.

In the evening a ball was given in his honor in the amphitheater. The building was floored for dancing and gaily decorated. The President and his wife, upon entering, were conducted to an elevated platform, on which was a sofa and a canopy. There were at least 500 ladies present and a larger number of gentlemen. The President did not use the sofa much, but moved about, conversing with the company. "The President and Mrs. Washington," wrote an eye-witness, "were in very good spirits and, I am persuaded, have not spent so agreeable an evening for a long time. Every countenance bespoke pleasure and approbation; even Democrats forgot for a moment their enmity, and seemed to join heartily in the festivity."

No wonder the Washingtons were "in good spirits." Washington's second term as President was almost at an end and they were looking forward to a resumption of their old happy life at their beloved Mount Vernon, "far from the madding crowd" and free from the cares of state. Washington, of course, could have had a third term for the asking. Every statesman in Europe expected him to make himself a king in fact if not in name. Men like Aaron Burr considered him a fool for giving up the Presidency. Had Washington felt it his duty, he would undoubtedly have taken a third term. But he saw no such duty and set the precedent which has prevailed to this day.

The picture of Washington crossing the Delaware is from the moving picture, "Janice Meredith." Could Washington himself see it, he would laugh—and he seldom did more than smile. For Washington knew his way about—in canoe and batteau and river craft of all kinds, just as he did on horseback and on foot through the forest and anywhere the emergency found him. Any man who successfully carried a fight to the American Indian in his own wilds had to know his business. So Washington would be as amused as astonished at the boutland here pictured. However, it is an improvement on the famous painting in the Boston museum by Thomas Sully (1783-1872), which it much resembles.

While the picture may be laughed at, the crossing itself on that Christmas night of 1776 must be reckoned as a vital factor in the outcome of the Revolution. Before that crossing the cause of the Colonists seemed hopeless. Washington was their one hope. And Cornwallis had just chased Washington clear across New Jersey and driven him to the Pennsylvania side of the Delaware, leaving him with 1,500 Hessians at Trenton to gobble him up as soon as the river should freeze over or boats be secured. Congress was inefficient. Jealousies had created dissensions among the officers. The Colonial forces were melting away by desertion. No less than 2,700 of the New Jersey people had turned Tories to save their necks and estates and had applied to Rall for "protection papers." Cornwallis was so sure of immediate victory that he had arranged for passage home that he might carry the news in person. In Trenton the Hessian hirelings were celebrating by a glorious drunk. So it was that that fateful Christmas night.

Behold the transformation by noon of the next day—Washington in possession of Trenton; Rall and his surviving Hessians prisoners! And when Washington marched his captured Hessians through the streets of Philadelphia all the world marveled at the "Fabius of America" and the Colonies passed from despair to jubilation.

President Washington was inaugurated April 30, 1789, in "Federal hall," Wall street, New York. December 8, 1790, the seat of government was moved to Philadelphia. During the next ten years Washington came into being as the federal capital and in October of 1800 John Marshall, secretary of state, Oliver Wolcott, secretary of the treasury, Samuel Dexter, secretary of war and Benjamin Stoddert, secretary of the navy—brave in cocked hats, powdered wigs, broadcloth coats and small-clothes—arrived and took possession of the little brick offices clustered about the White House. President John Adams and his family arrived in November. Thereupon the Sixth congress assembled in the one little wing of the Capitol that was ready for it.

The government of the United States of America was at home in its own capital at last. Nevertheless, the new capital was a good deal of a joke. New York, Philadelphia and other cities called it the "national bantling, a rickety infant unable to go alone." That there was anything at all resembling a capital was largely due to the activities of President Washington, to whom congress had delegated the task of selecting and developing the site. The act of 1790 was passed when the new nation's treasury was empty and it had no credit; therefore there was no appropriation.

A list of the "counterfeit presentments" of George Washington—portraits, replicas, copies, statues, busts, medallions, etc.—would fill several of these columns. Every now and then a new one—or one stored away and forgotten—comes to light. The portrait reproduced is the well-known painting by Gilbert Stuart in the Henry C. Frick collection. Last year what appears to be a replica of this portrait on a circular iron panel was purchased by a New York collector at a price said to be $100,000.

Last year Walter L. Ehrlich of New York exhibited in the Chicago Art Institute one of the four "Lansdowne" portraits painted by Stuart of Washington. Thereupon 500,000 school children, with help from their elders, bought the picture by penny contributions for $75,000.

The bust here pictured has had a most amazing history. It is said to be—and probably is—the bust made in 1832 by Pierre Jean David. This bust was presented to the United States by France. Fire destroyed the Congressional library in 1851. The bust was supposed to be burned. In New York, not long ago, Mitchell Kennerly, president of the Anderson Galleries, announced that he had just sold the missing bust for $10,000 to Henry E. Huntington, retired railroad man and art collector. According to Kennerly the bust was rescued from a junk yard.

POULTRY

HATCH CHICKS EARLY FOR WINTER LAYERS

Early hatched chicks are the ones that make the early and consistent winter layers. However, this does not mean that earlier than around March 15 is desirable. Neither does it mean that late April and May hatched chicks are the desirable kinds. The problem is to have the chicks hatched sufficiently early to have winter laying pullets and yet not have them so early that they will molt in the late fall. Again, the quicker-maturing, smaller breeds like the Anconas may be safely hatched later than the larger breeds like the Wyandottes. Yet, all in all, it appears to me that in far too many cases, the hatching of chicks on farms is too late and that few are the who have their chicks coming off too early, writes A. C. Hartenbrow in the Oklahoma Farmer.

Whether to incubate the eggs on the farm or to buy baby chicks must be governed to no small extent by the equipment on the farm, by the prices of eggs when compared with that of baby chicks, and by the breeding stock available. In many cases, it will be a paying proposition to purchase baby chicks from reliable breeders to the end, especially, that good stock may be had to replace the mixed stock now on the farm, while in still other cases, where the farmer makes consistent improvement in his flock of pure bred chickens by culling, using high-class males or keeping a breeding pen, it would be folly to send away for baby chicks. I know there are thousands of dollars practically thrown away each year in purchasing baby chicks for the simple reason that the equipment at hand for caring for the chicks is not suitable, and the result is a good per cent of the young chicks never reach maturity. In other words, the cost of those raised is away out of reason when compared with what they will bring when sold either as breeding stock or on the market.

Incubation of Eggs of Various Fowls on Farm

The eggs from all but Muscovy ducks will hatch in twenty-six to twenty-eight days. Muscovy duck eggs require from thirty-three to thirty-six days. Guinea eggs take from twenty-six to twenty-eight days to hatch. Turkey eggs hatch on the twenty-eighth day, but it varies on an egg hatch on the twenty-seventh day and the hatching continues until the twenty-ninth or thirtieth day.

Duck eggs in an incubator require a temperature of 102 degrees. This is also satisfactory for turkey eggs. The guinea eggs will hatch at 102 to 103 degrees. Incubators are very satisfactory for duck eggs. Turkey eggs are seldom hatched in incubators. Neither are guineas.

A mixture of equal parts of bread crumbs and rolled oats, and a sprinkling of about 3 per cent sand is a good starting feed for ducklings. Bread and milk is also satisfactory. Stale bread soaked in milk and squeezed nearly dry is a good first feed for pullets. When three weeks old they can be worked over to rolled oats and fine chicks' scratch feed, and larger grains added as the birds develop. There are many good rations for turkey pullets but do not use sloppy mash. Guineas like bread crumbs and rolled oats and can soon eat fine chick feed. They are great foragers and insect eaters and will soon gather most of their ration.

Iowa Ration No. 11

Here is Ration No. 11, recommended by the Iowa experiment station. The mash is as follows: Two hundred pounds ground oats, 100 pounds ground corn, and 100 pounds of 60 per cent tankage. This is fed with scratch feed composed of 200 pounds shelled corn and 100 pounds oats. It is considered one of the lowest priced and one of the most practical rations, the college states, that can be recommended for farm conditions.

Poultry Hints

Gather eggs twice a day. Keep the eggs in a cool, fairly dry place. Remember quality is essential for best prices. Know the shipping requirements of express or railroad companies when you use their services. Market eggs at least twice a week. Delay in marketing means selling stale and deteriorated eggs. Keep an abundance of clean litter on the poultry house floor. Clean floors mean fewer dirty eggs. Don't crowd the winter layers. Each hen should have at least three square feet of floor space, where the flock is confined in the house, for maximum egg production.

Provide one nest for every four or five hens and make the nests of clean material. Plenty of clean nests reduce the number of stolen nests and the number of cracked and dirty eggs.

AMERICAN LEGION FUND IS GROWING

As final preparations were being made in Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky to start active work on the American Legion Endowment fund, preliminary steps were taken to extend the movement to a second group consisting of 12 states, most of them in the South. The states in the second group are: Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Tennessee, West Virginia and Ohio.

At the same time it was announced that Judge Robert W. Bingham of Louisville, editor and publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal, has accepted the chairmanship of the executive committee to direct the endowment movement in Kentucky.

Stearns post, Stearns, Ky., a mining town with a population of 121, is the first Legion post in the entire country to "go over the top" in the movement. The goal for the post was set at $100. Twenty-four hours after the post learned the amount, a check for $100 was on its way to national headquarters at Indianapolis.

The first posts to send contributions for the fund to national headquarters were Eugene post, Eugene, Ore., and C. H. Berry post, Tamaqua, Penn. The Oregon post sent $75, and the other, $17.13. Adjutant Arthur S. Wolfe, of the Tamaqua post, said, "This represents the voluntary contributions from the members of this post, such contributions having been taken after each post meeting for the last few months."

Cardinal O'Connell of Boston was the first member of the national honorary committee for the fund to contribute to it. His contribution was also among the first received.

Lloyd W. Kendall, Legionnaire of Farmer City, Ill., sent a check for $5 for the fund. "I am very strong for this move," he said, "and only wish I was financially able to donate $50 or $500."

William B. Boggs, commander of the department of Panama, called that "the Canal Zone pledges $2,500 to the fund." The foreign departments of the Legion were given no quotas but asked to give what they could. Panama was the first to respond.

Hon. John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for President in 1924, called from Paris that he is glad to serve as a member of the national honorary committee for the fund. Other recent acceptances on the committee are: Mrs. Mary Lord Harrison, New York city, wife of the late President Benjamin Harrison; William Green, Washington, president of the American Federation of Labor; Otto H. Kahn, New York banker; Will H. Hays, New York city, president of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, Inc.; John R. Quinn, Los Angeles, past national commander of the American Legion; Bishop Charles H. Brent, Buffalo, chief of the chaplain service in the A. E. F.; Booth Tarkington, Indianapolis, author; V. M. Johnson, Rockford, Ill., president of Kiwanis International; James E. Chandler, imperial potentate of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine; Charles Dana Gibson, New York city, artist; Gen. James A. Thomas, Dublin, Ga., commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans; Gen. John H. Dunn, Boston, commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars; John Drew, New York city, actor.

Predict Veterans Will Seek State Home Care

"In a few years," predict American Legion officials of Lincoln, Neb., "World war veterans will ask admission in great numbers to state homes, and states throughout the country will have to make proper provision for them." The government has adequate facilities to care for indigent and helpless veterans at present, say the Legionnaires, but later the state will have to supplement government aid.

This prediction was made in the face of a survey revealing that there are fewer soldiers in state homes in Nebraska now than there were in 1921. Deaths among the veterans of the Civil war account for the decrease, the Legionnaires point out. Within a few years World war veterans will be clamoring to enter the state homes, they maintain.

Massachusetts Ahead

At Pittsfield, Mass., recently, for the first time since the inception of the American Legion in Massachusetts, it went into state convention with black ink figures, instead of red ink, on the balance sheet, according to a statement of Treasurer E. W. Gross. Massachusetts department of the Legion was $10,000 in debt in January, 1923; as against the $270.50 to the good at this time.

Cup for Minnesota Post

Gerald V. Barron of Cloquet, Minn., past department commander of the American Legion, announces he will donate a cup to the Legion post in the Department of Minnesota having the best and most consistent record for the past five years. The trophy will be given at the next department convention.

A HOME WITHOUT CHILDREN

Lacks the Greatest Joys of Life

Many Wives are Childless Because of Ill Health. Read How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Mrs. Benedict

MRS. MARY R. BENEDICT
313 PAYSON STREET, KEWANEE, ILLINOIS
Kewanee, Illinois. — "When I was married about a year and a half I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because of ill health. I did not have any children. I now have two healthy little girls and I am sure I would not have had them had it not been for your medicine. Last spring and summer I got all run down, irregular, and I had awful headaches, and my back and side hurt me so that I could stay up only a short time. My limbs would get so tired and ache till I could cry. I started to take the Vegetable Compound again and used the Sanative Wash, and it was not long till I was relieved. Now I do all my own work and help others. I sure praise Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine to any one I meet that is suffering from similar troubles. I think if mothers with girls would give it to them when they come to womanhood it would make them stronger. People who have known me all my life are astonished to see me now as I was always sickly when in my teens until I started taking the Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. MARY R. BENEDICT, 313 Payson Street, Kewanee, Ill.

Has a Beautiful Baby Girl Now

Bridport, Vermont. — "In the first place I wanted a baby, but none seemed to come to me. I just love children and my husband is away all day, so I was not happy at all. A doctor told me I could not have a baby until I went to a hospital. But my sisters said, 'Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and you will be O.K.' I was nervous, had organic weakness, with backache, sideache, headache and no strength. I had been in bed nearly a week when I began taking the Vegetable Compound. It was all that ever helped me and I just wish you could see my beautiful baby girl. I am fine now, and so is she. I am still taking the medicine as it keeps me well. You may be sure I am recommending the Vegetable Compound and always will." — Mrs. A. W. HOWE, Bridport, Vermont.

Apples Important Food

Apples are one of the best sources of iron for the diet. Raisins have been advertised for their iron content. It is true that both fresh grapes and raisins, as well as plums and prunes, furnish this element, but the apple is the heaviest iron-carrying fruit that we can eat, having 39-100 per cent of iron in its makeup.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

MY FAVORITE STORIES

By IRVIN S. COBB

Driven Beyond His Strength

The late Paul Armstrong had two favorite stories. One of these he called by the title "Pansy and the Pilsener," and while it was funny, it would never do for publication in a newspaper having a family circulation. The other was what is known as a parlor story. It dealt with a down-and-out, who made a precarious living as a sandwich man. Encased front and back, like a turtle in its shell, between broad boards which bore advertisements for a dairy lunch, he marched the Bowery all day long for wages barely sufficient to keep body and soul together.

One day, as he plodded his weary route, he saw a shining coin lying upon the sidewalk. Instantly he set his foot upon it, and then, stooping with a difficulty because of his wooden waistcoat, he clutched it in his eager fingers and raised it to his eyes. Then his heart inside of him gave a great throb of joy. It was a twenty-dollar gold piece. He was wealthy beyond his wildest ambitions.

Across the street was an excavation for a new building. He hurried thither. Standing on the edge of the digging he unbuckled the straps which bound the squares of planking to him, and, kicking them to pieces with a glad exultant cry, he flung the shattered emblems of his servitude down into the hole below. Then straightway he departed for the nearest saloon, and, stalking in, a triumphant figure even in his flaunting tatters, he slapped his precious gold piece down upon the bar and called for a drink of whisky. It was to have been the first of a long and gorgeous succession of drinks of whisky.

Someone jostled him in the side. He turned his head to see who might be interrupting his happy dreams, and when he looked back again his double eagle mysteriously had vanished, and the barkeeper was motioning him to depart.

He protested, naturally. Whereupon the barkeeper reached for the bung starter, swung it with a skill born of long practice, and struck him squarely between the eyes. A moment later the ex-sandwich man found himself sprawling on the sidewalk, his happy visions gone forever.

A prey to melancholy, filled with deep disappointment and a yet deeper sense of injustice, he got upon his feet and started to limp away.

Next door to the saloon was a basement barber shop. From it at this instant there emerged a Bowery mission worker, an elderly gentleman of a benevolent aspect, his pink jowls newly scraped and his face powdered. As he climbed up the steps to the level of the sidewalk this gentleman bent over to refasten a loosened shoelace.

Now, to the best of his knowledge and belief, the derelict never before had seen the missionary, but as the latter stooped, presenting before him an expanse of black coat tails, the misanthrope halted off and dealt the gentle stranger a terrific kick.

With a yell of astonishment and pain the clergyman landed ten feet away.

"What did you mean by that?" he demanded, rubbing the seat of his trousers with both hands. "Why did you kick me?"

"Oh," said the ex-sandwich man, in tones of an uncontrollable annoyance, "you're always tying your shoestring!"

In Permanent Storage

Once upon a time, in the middle part of the state of Georgia, there lived a banker who was known far and wide as the Human Safety Clutch. In his day he was accused of many things, but nobody ever charged him with being a spendthrift. His home was on a plantation a mile from town. One Sunday he remembered that he had left some important papers on his desk, and he gave an aged negro servant on the place his keys and sent him for the documents.

It was a hot day and the road was dusty, but in an hour the old darky had returned with the papers intact. The owner felt in all his pockets, one after the other.

"That's too bad, Uncle Jim," he said finally. "I thought I had a nickel here that I was going to give you."

"Cap'n Henry," said Uncle Jim, "you look again. Ef ever you had a nickel you got it yit."

As a Favor to the Railroad

A New York theatrical magnate had a bad attack of gripe in the winter and went South to recuperate. He stopped a few days in a small town in South Carolina. When he got ready to leave for the North he found the official bus had mysteriously vanished; probably the driver had gone joy riding. There was no conveyance, public or private, to be had; and in order to catch his train the Northerner was compelled to labor afoot over a mile and a half of dusty road, with a valise in each hand.

When he staggered up to the tiny station there was no one in sight except an old darky who was sitting on the platform.

"Uncle," inquired the New Yorker, "why in the name of goodness did they build this depot so far from the town?"

The old man scratched his head. "I don't know, boss," he said, "onless it wuz because dey wanted to git closer to de railroad!"

Democratic Legislator

The following yarn is going the rounds just now: The wife of a member of the government (the British labor government) received an invitation to tea from a titled society hostess. When the M. P. came home from the house and read the letter his democratic instincts came to the surface with a rush, and he put the letter in his pocket, remarking darkly that he would reply to it.

Next day he sent the following reply:

"Dear Countess: My wife and I beg to acknowledge receipt of yours of the fourth instant. We are refusing your invitation for the following reasons: 1. I do not drink tea. 2. My wife only drinks tea with her friends. 3. The day for which you ask us is washing day."

A Pet Modern Theory

Some of the "Intellectuals" entertain the idea that young people should be given a wider latitude to "express themselves."

I frown upon the precocious offspring who is able to demonstrate his superior abilities as a marksman only by using your shed windows for target practice, these thinkers would smile tolerantly and plead for the boy to have his fair chance for "self-expression."

"If you interfere with Johnny" they would insist, "you heap up a dangerous force of suppressed desire in his soul, which eventually might break loose in some dangerous revolt."

All which may sound plausible. Yet doubt will be felt if the epidemic of ferocity now menacing the country is due to too much suppressed desire. It looks rather as if desires had not been sufficiently repressed.

The young toughs who are now terrorizing dark city streets and getting away in yellow triumph with other people's hard-earned money, perhaps had too much self-expression in nearly youth.

Perhaps they began by expressing a lawless spirit through stealing fruit and burning the fences of unpopular neighbors in July Fourth bonfires. Their fathers at that time might well have taken a hand in the game of self-expression, expressing their views of such doings by a suitable award of the traditional discipline of the woodshed.

These youngsters would probably have concluded in that case that it would be more interesting to express their racticity along more conventional lines, such as playing good games like baseball and football or earning money for wholesome fun and self-improvement.

If the boys of Patagonia can be carried past that critical age when they feel the superiority of their own wisdom, they are likely to put on the harness of useful toil, and express their better natures by becoming useful men and citizens.

ESSENTIALS FOR SERVICE

H. M. Atkinson of the Georgia Railway and Power Company gives five factors essential to the development and increase of new industries.

1. Availability of raw material.
2. Labor supply and conditions, both skilled and unskilled.
3. Transportation facilities.
4. Power supply.
5. A favorable attitude of the public mind toward the establishment and operation of industries.

Given the first four, development is impossible without the fifth. The public mind is brought to a favorable attitude by the constant vigilance of our modern industries and public service companies to the ever-increasing needs of the people for new and varied product and services.

WHERE BLUE SKY LAWS FAIL

A reliable authority estimates that the small investors of the United States lose about $2,000,000,000 a year through ill-advised, fraudulent and worthless investments. This sum, he says, would purchase outright 17 of the greatest public utilities companies in the country.

The value of a dollar, the ways of getting it and the story of what it can do and how it should function in society ought to be a good course in the schools and colleges. Greek, Latin, French and astronomy are excellent cultural studies; but some knowledge of industries and business principles on which a government functions and a community exists might be infinitely more valuable. Part of this vast sum lost on bad investments might be saved by such a course of study.

What the World Is Doing

As Seen by Popular Mechanics Magazine

"Inverted Wells" Dig in River Beds to Save Water Supply

Digging wells in the bed of a river to save the water supply seems like nonsense, but that is what engineers in the Santa Clara valley in California are planning to do for the sake of the 116,000 acres of prime trees. The unusual method is proposed as a means of keeping the natural water supply from running into San Francisco bay. The region normally is provided with abundant artesian water from the mountains. For years it has percolated into the underlying gravel beds where it spread to the entire valley. But lately clay washed down with the freshets has formed a sort of blanket over which the water has passed without sinking into the lower strata. The "inverted wells," as they have been called, will penetrate this accumulation of silt and allow the streams to soak down to their natural reservoir of gravel and coarse sand. Advocates of this plan point out that it will save the cost of building large dams and other irrigation projects.

A Good Farm-Shop Chimney

To lessen the fire hazard about his shop, a Nebraska farmer used a 6-in. tile for the outside chimney. The lower section has an opening on the side, in which the pipe fits, and is supported by a wooden block held by wires and nails as shown. The bottom of the chimney is filled with concrete to a depth of 4 in. The upper section is cemented to the lower tile, wired to the wall, and extends well above the roof. For a building in which appearance is of secondary importance, this construction is excellent.

Electric-Lighted Skyscraper Cross to Blaze Message for Miles

As a silent preacher, a huge cross, fashioned with steel beams after the manner of a skyscraper, has been erected on the heights of historic Mount Royal at Montreal. Electric lights will make the emblem visible at night, and because of its huge size and location on the lofty summit, the cross can be seen from a considerable distance even by day.

A Washington inventor has developed apparatus that will photograph a message, transmit it by radio and reproduce it at the receiving end. The invention is expected to be especially useful in China, due to the number of characters in the language.

Renewing Worn Files

Old files, which have become badly worn, can be renewed by immersing them in a solution consisting of six parts of water and one part of nitric acid for about five minutes. The file is then rubbed a few times over the edge of a block or table padded with about two or three thicknesses of cloth. This wipes the acid from the surface of the teeth but does not remove it from the spaces between them. The file is laid down for half an hour, which allows the acid to eat the grooves deeper; it is then thoroughly washed.

Self-Tightening Paint-Pot Hanger

When painting on a ladder, it is customary to use a wire hook on one of the rungs to hold the paint pot, but it is much harder to have the paint pot on the right side of the ladder, held by a self-tightening hanger of the kind shown in the drawing. It can readily be swung open and loosened so that it can be shifted up or down as desired. Pulling or pushing the arm down only causes the hanger to grip the ladder more firmly.

The arm is notched to receive the ball of the paint pot, and the weight of the pot keeps the hanger securely clamped to the ladder.

Your Income Tax

No. 5

In making out his income tax for the year 1924 the business man, professional man, and farmer is required to use Form 1040, regardless of whether his net income was or was not in excess of $5000. The smaller form 1040A is used for reporting income of $5000 or less derived chiefly from salaries or wages.

Forms have been sent to persons who have filed returns of income. Failure to receive a form, however, does not relieve the taxpayer from his obligation to file a return and pay the tax within the time prescribed, on or before March 15, 1925. Copies of the forms may be obtained from offices of collectors of internal revenue and branch offices. The tax may be paid in full at the time of filing the return, or in four equal installments, due on or before March 15, June 15, September 15, and December 15.

New Counterfeit Bills Out

El Paso.—Three new counterfeit notes are in circulation, according to a notice received at the postoffice from the treasury department.

One is a $10 Federal Reserve note; another a $10 national bank note and the third a $5 silver certificate. Business men and people handling money are warned to be on the lookout for them.

The $10 Federal Reserve note is on the Federal Reserve Bank of New York; check letter "D"; face plate number indistinct; A. W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury; Frank White, treasurer of the United States; portrait of Jackson.

The $10 national bank note is on the First National Bank of Superior, Wis.; check letter "A" and portrait of McKinley.

An Indian portrait is on the $5 silver certificate. The check letter is "B." The general appearance is that of a washed or bleached note.

Mining Coming Strong

Mining is being revived all over the west. Properties, both old and new, are being developed as they have not been in years. The demand for metals for industry promises to be as stable as the demand for wheat or wool. The big investments for mines and mills seem as safe as money put into banks or bonds.

This mining activity must have a profound effect on transportation, on agriculture, on every other American industry, during the year 1925. There never was a series of years that promised better for our United States than the years just ahead.

The Situation

Our cook is arrogant. Doesn't know her place, eh? No. She knows too many other places she can easily get.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Eugene Funk or Dr. Jardine May Be Picked for the Agriculture Portfolio.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE is said to be, at the time this is written, nearly ready to name his new secretary of agriculture, to succeed Mr. Gore on March 4 when that gentleman becomes governor of West Virginia. For several days it has been believed that John G. Fields of Oklahoma City, publisher of farm papers, would get the position. Then two more names were brought forward, those of Eugene Funk, Illinois farmer and brother of Congressman Frank H. Funk, and William H. Jardine, president of the Kansas Agriculture college and a member of the President's agricultural conference. Mr. Funk belongs to a famous family of corn-belt farmers and is himself not only a practical agriculturist but an authority on farm economics and the marketing of food products. He is a graduate of Yale and studied also in Germany. It was believed he was just the kind of man the President was seeking.

Doctor Jardine had the united backing of the Kansas delegation in congress though it had previously ignored J. C. Mohler for the post. So far as the theoretical side is concerned, his experience would seem to fit him to take the portfolio. Starting life as a cattle puncher in Montana, he later attended the Utah Agricultural college and in 1890 went to Washington as assistant United States cerealist in charge of the grain work in the West. In 1900 he was made director of agronomy work in the Kansas college and in 1918 became its president. Doctor Jardine was in conference with the President last week, and also went before the senate committee on agriculture to explain some of his recommendations in the agriculture conference. He told the senators that agriculture in the United States is only passing through a normal post-war crisis and that it is certain to recover.

MEANWHILE President Coolidge is formulating an agricultural policy for the nation, based partly on the advice of Secretary Gore and the agricultural conference and largely on the ideas of Secretary of Commerce Hoover. Its fundamental principle is that the country shall be self-contained in the matter of production and consumption of food and clothing, that it shall raise all the farm products it needs, including those now imported, but shall cease to raise them for export. Another purpose is to increase the buying power of the entire community so as to increase the consumption of farm products at home and in turn warrant the increase of production beyond the normal accretion due to the growth of population. The fostering of co-operative marketing also enters largely into the plan. Representative Dickinson of Iowa, leader of the house farm bloc, says attempts are being made to "Hooverize" the Agriculture department.

UNDER suspension of the rules the house passed the Kelly bill providing for increases in postal salaries amounting to $68,000,000 a year and for changes in the mail rates that are designed to add more than $62,000,000 annually to the revenues of the Post Office department. This is a substitute for the bill which the senate passed and the house sent back. It provides for about $21,000,000 more revenue than did the senate measure, and it makes the salary increases retroactive to January 1, 1925, instead of to July 1, 1924.

GENERAL MITCHELL'S fight for a unified air service is attracting more and more interest daily, but those who agree with his views do not now believe they will prevail, especially since the official announcement that President Coolidge is not in favor of a unified service. The Navy department bolstered its stand by issuing a list of 21 eminent men and influential groups that are opposed to the views of Mitchell. This list comprised Gen. John J. Pershing, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, Maj. Gen. Charles T. Menoher, former chief of army air service; the general staff, United States army, Rear Admirals William S. Sims, Bradley A. Fiske, W. F. Furlan, Charles E. Badger, Henry T. Mayo; Admiral Robert E. Coontz, commander in chief United States fleet; Rear Admiral H. S. Knapp, Vice Admiral Joseph Strauss, Capt. T. T. Craven, formerly director of naval aviation; Capt. Noble E. Irwin, formerly director of naval aviation; Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, present chief of the bureau of aeronautics; the general board of the navy, the national advisory committee for aeronautics, Marshal Foch, Marshal Haig, Admiral Jellicoe, Admiral Beatty.

The house aircraft committee heard more testimony from Mitchell, gave out a denial that any witnesses were muzzled by their superiors, and asked permission to defer making a report until the next congress because the time before March 4 is too short for the reaching of comprehensive conclusions.

CONGRESS learned officially last week that Coolidge and Dawes won the Presidential election. The houses met in joint session and received the tidings in the form of two mahogany boxes containing the certificates of the electors. The ballots were examined and pronounced "regular in form and properly authenticated" and Senator Cummins, the presiding officer, solemnly announced that Coolidge and Dawes had received 382 votes, Davis and Bryan 136 votes, and La Follette and Wheeler 13 votes. This, he declared, was under the Constitution a sufficient decision of the persons elected, so the joint session came to an end. The mahogany boxes are made new each four years and are presented one to the outgoing vice president—or in this instance to Senator Cummins—and the other to the incoming vice president.

ARRANGEMENTS for the inauguration of Coolidge and Dawes on March 4 are nearing completion, but they have been tremendously curtailed by the President's determination that economy shall rule. As now planned, the affair will consist of the swearing in ceremony at the Capitol and a brief parade down Pennsylvania avenue to the White House. The governors may join in the procession, with their staffs, if they wish to, and army and navy detachments around Washington will be included. The projected fireworks display in the evening has been abandoned, and in place of the inaugural ball there will be a charity ball.

SO SERIOUS is the opposition to Charles R. Warren as attorney general that his appointment may fail of confirmation by the senate at this session of congress. It is due to his connection with the sugar trust and is voiced especially by Basil Manly, director of the People's Legislative service. In the first place Mr. Warren was at one time a representative of the American Sugar Refining company in the maintenance of holdings in beet sugar companies. Until a few days ago he was president of the Michigan Beet Sugar company which, together with other beet sugar concerns, has just been accused by the federal trade commission of conspiracy to suppress competition. Warren is named as one of the defendants. Mr. Warren's friends retort with the assertion that the trade commission is continually instigating charges that turn out to be unfounded. They point to the fact that the commission in the course of its career has been upheld by the federal courts in 14 cases and has been overturned in 35 cases.

SENATOR NORRIS is to have the investigation of the so-called power trust for which he has been clamoring. The senate has called on the federal trade commission to make such an inquiry, naming specifically the General Electric company and seeking to know the extent to which that company or its stockholders or security holders monopolize or control production, generation or transmission of power or electric energy. An amendment to the resolution was adopted calling for an investigation of the American Tobacco company and the Imperial Tobacco company of Great Britain and their alleged efforts to hamper tobacco co-operatives.

STILL another investigation was demanded in the senate by Senator Howell of Nebraska, the subject of the proposed inquiry being the Van Sweringen-Nickel Plate merger of the Nickel Plate, Erie, Pere Marquette, Chesapeake & Ohio and Hocking Valley lines, and the acquisition of the Gulf Coast lines by the Missouri Pacific. Mr. Howell said the Van Sweringen merger was being financed by J. P. Morgan & Co. and the First National bank of New York.

RAILROADS will continue to impose surcharges on passengers using Pullman facilities, the practice having been approved by the Interstate Commerce commission. The majority opinion says "there is less warrant for eliminating the surcharge than for reducing the basic passenger fare which applies even to travel in mixed trains of freight and passenger cars."

GREAT BRITAIN, through Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill, has made an informal proposal to France concerning the Anglo-French debt. Briefly, Britain repeats Balfour's offer to make a heavy reduction in the debt provided France agrees to make fixed annual payments irrespective of the actual receipts from the Dawes annuities. Finance Minister Clementel and other officials in Paris considered the British plan fair in principle and offering a satisfactory basis for negotiations. The government press in France agreed with this view, but the proposal was bitterly attacked by the nationalist and reactionary papers, which blamed America for forcing Britain to demand reimbursement. The finance committee of the French chamber of deputies has named a subcommittee to study the matter, and it is believed a conference will be held in London within a few weeks.

FOLLOWING the withdrawal of the United States and China because of dissatisfaction, the international opium conference at Geneva adopted a protocol and convention and adjourned sine die. Japan had threatened to quit but was placated by the insertion of a clause reaffirming the obligations of the Hague convention and making it clear that opium smoking is permitted only temporarily. The signers were Great Britain, India, France, Japan, Holland, Portugal and Siam.

ONE of the greatest disasters in German mining history occurred in the Stein mine at Dortmund where 144 men were entombed by an explosion, and at least 138 of them perished. The tragedy aroused the people to a state of anger that threatened revolution, for the mine owners were accused of failing to safeguard their employees and also of paying them starvation wages while selling coal at higher prices than the British and Americans.

MORE than 325 hours after Floyd Collins became entombed in Sand cave, Kentucky, by the fall of a boulder on his foot, the rescuers who were sinking a shaft from the top of the hill had reached the limestone roof of the cavern near which the young man was trapped. He had been without food for eight days and for two days those who listened with a microphone outfit for sounds of his heartbeats and breathing had heard nothing.

During the week the state military board conducted an investigation into the efforts at rescue that had been made and also into persistent reports that the whole affair started in a publicity scheme to attract visitors to the cave. There had even been stories that Collins was not in the cavern at all, but these and other wild tales were discredited by the testimony of most of the witnesses. However, the idea was held by many persons that Collins was the victim of a hoax, and the county attorney announced that there would be a grand jury inquiry and that charges of homicide might be lodged.

Business stopped in Ventura, Calif., while tribute was paid to Kenneth Bastard, 12, and Thomas Thompson, 11, Ventura boys, who died while playing they were "Floyd Collins" in a Kentucky cave. A sudden collapse of sand in which the miniature of the Kentucky cave was built, buried the two boys and smothered them to death. The bodies were placed in adjoining graves.

Failure to see any bright future for junior officers of the military air service under the present system has caused Lieut. Frank Seifert, who gained distinction in the summer of 1923 by piloting one of the planes during the midair refueling tests at Rockwell field, when eight world flight records were broken, to resign from the air service, according to an interview in the San Diego Union.

WASHINGTON

Senate investigation of the Nickel Plate railroad merger being negotiated by the Van Sweringen interests, is sought in a resolution offered by Senator Howell, Republican, Nebraska. The resolution also would direct the Senate Interstate commerce committee to investigate "consolidations now being consummated by the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company," which have been approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The Kelly postal pay and rate increase bill has been passed by the House and sent to the Senate. The bill was approved after less than two hours' debate under rules requiring a two-thirds vote for passage and barring amendments from the floor. Carrying the same pay increases as provided in the bill vetoed by President Coolidge, the measure proposes rate advances estimated to yield $61,000,000 as against an expected increased outgo of $68,000,000 in salaries.

Administration leaders will seek to prevent action at this session of the Senate on the nomination of Charles B. Warren of Michigan, to be attorney general. This was disclosed after Chairman Cummins of the Judiciary committee had frankly informed President Coolidge of the extent to which opposition has developed.

Secretary Work recently authorized the leasing of 320 acres of coal lands, near Evanston, Utah county, Wyo. Under terms of the order, the Wyoming lease will require a royalty of 10 cents a ton, mine run, an investment of $15,000 in the properties during the first three years, and a minimum annual production of 8,000 tons, beginning the fourth year.

Having already displaced Great Britain as the financial center of the world, the United States is now pushing the English for commercial supremacy. Comparative trade figures, issued by the department of commerce, disclosed that American business men outstripped their British rivals in 1924 by sending their wares over the earth. Britain's total exports were $4,142,000,000, or $358,000,000 less than America's.

Charges of unfair methods in competition are made by the Federal Trade Commission against the Larowe Milling Company of Detroit and seventeen manufacturers of beet sugar in a complaint made public by the commission. Among the manufacturers named in the complaint is the Great Western Sugar Company of Denver, Colo.

Surcharges imposed upon railroad passengers using Pullman facilities were held by the Interstate Commerce Commission to be justifiable and railroads were authorized to keep the practice in effect.

Although the American delegation has withdrawn from the international opium conference and there seems little likelihood of the United States signing an anti-narcotic convention, conference leaders have decided in private meetings not to eliminate the United States from the list of countries which will appoint members of the central control board.

Nothing has ever caused such commotion among the staff of the secretariat of the League of Nations in Geneva as the bringing up in the British Parliament of a suggestion that the seat of the League might be removed to some other city. Officials of the league, however, are unanimous in interpreting the governmental reply as meaning that England would not take the initiative in such a step. These officials say they know of no serious project to transfer the headquarters of the league elsewhere.

Heavily armed cordons of police, supported by a dozen machine guns guarded the approaches to the federal Supreme Court building at Leipzig, Germany, when the trial of the sixteen Communists alleged to be members of the German Chelka, opened in a dramatic setting. The witnesses and spectators were subjected to a close scrutiny before they were to enter the courtroom, all being searched for arms, while each of the sixteen defendants was accompanied by a policeman. The prisoners are charged with murder and terrorist plots alleged to have been financed from Moscow.

ADVENTURE, FIGHTING—AND LOVE

He turned his examination first to the cut in her head. He tore strips from his shirt, went down to the water and cleansed them thoroughly; then, returning, he proceeded to wash and bandage it. It was a bad gash from a rock, and she had bled a good deal, which was a good thing, relieving the concussion which had no doubt been the cause of the prolonged insensibility. Having ascertained that she seemed to have received no bodily injuries beyond contusions, Lee examined her limbs. He saw that one knee hung awry. In a moment he had the gaiter off, and discovered that the joint had been dislocated.

It was unnerving, holding that white knee between his hands, so instinct with life, so fragile, delicate, so wonderful when viewed as a piece of mechanism which he was to manipulate like some clumsy journeyman, called in to repair the work of a master.

Fortunately, Lee had assisted at precisely that same operation several times in the field; and, trying to disregard the moans of pain that came from the girl's lips as he proceeded, he fumbled with the displaced bone.

But that struggle was terrible, for the body of itself knows no dignity. Conscious, Lee knew that the girl would neither have flinched nor moaned; but unconscious, she could not control the protests of the body, which had to be restrained by something almost brutal in its frank violence.

But Lee struggled on, feeling the shaft head of the bone scow the edges of the socket under the cap. A final struggle, the weight of his whole body and shoulders thrown to his task—and suddenly it was accomplished.

Here you have the hero and heroine: Lee Anderson, Royal Canadian Mounted Police sergeant, and Joyce Pelly. They have been thrown down a cliff by an explosion of dynamite, set off by the Free Traders. The girl's memory is gone from the shock; they are in a wilderness and are being pursued by the Free Traders, who are bent on killing the hero and recapturing the girl, whom Rayway their leader, greatly desires. Moreover, Anderson, who has met the girl on the trail by chance, is there to arrest Joyce's father. The Free Traders, wilderness hootch-runners, think he is after them. And Anderson, in rescuing the girl from them, has beaten up Rayway in a fight. So the story starts out with the hero and heroine in difficulties.

Who is the author? Why, Victor Rousseau. And that tells you a lot—among other things, that the adventures of the young couple to date aren't a circumstance to what's coming. The hero is shot at, thrown into a cataract and generally manhandled. The heroine is abducted again by Rayway. But somehow both manage to escape death. And in the end of course the brave deserves the fair and wins her, even if his purpose to arrest the heroine's father might near wrecks the exciting romance.

CHAPTER I

Sergeant Anderson Rides Into Little Falls

Lee Anderson, sergeant in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, had been leading his horse up the last hill. Now he stopped at the top and lit his pipe, letting the animal snatch a few blades of the sparse grass that grew among the ferns and raspberry brambles beside the cart track.

There were, perhaps, thirty-three or four years to his credit. His rather lined, deeply sunburned face and throat contrasted markedly with the edging of white flesh at the V-top of his open shirt. Lee, in his prospector's clothing, appeared to be typically one of those reserved, quiet, self-contained men whom the north breeds.

His rather heavy horse, a combination of pack and saddle, was well laden behind the rolled blankets that formed a parapet across its shoulders.

Lee inhaled with delight the warm, steamy exhalations of the earth, rich with the added debris of the year. He turned and looked forward, beyond the settlement of Little Falls, lying at the foot of the slope in front of him, the last of the settlements on his side of Stony range.

It was an unkempt, untidy little place, created by the advent of the lumber companies a few years before, and straggling among the knee-high stumps of what had been virgin forest within the decade.

After his belated return from France, only to find the old Northwest mounted, of which he had been a member, merged in the new Dominion body, Lee himself had been stationed at Manitowish. He had been in the police eight years before the war. It was the only life that appealed to him. His service had expired during his term at the front, but his first act on returning had been to rejoin.

Inspector Crawley had sent for him a few days later.

"Anderson," he said, "I want you to be ready to start for Stony range in the morning to pick up a man named Pelly. He's on the list of 'wanted'—headed it for some time, in fact. I guess you don't know anything about the case, though."

"No, sir. It must have happened while I was in France."

"Oh, it happened a deuce of a time before you went to France, Anderson. Twenty-five years ago, more or less. Might have left the poor devil alone, especially as he's been a fugitive so long. But it's murder, Sergeant, and—well, the new police have got to show themselves just as efficient blood hounds as the old force. The papers in the case have just come through Ottawa."

"This man Pelly appears to have killed a man in Toronto in the nineties for insulting his wife. Those details are not given. It appears a tip came down some time ago that Pelly has been living in the Siston lake region, on the other side of Stony range, for a good many years. Pelly appears to have got wind of this and made a quick getaway. Now the word's come in that he's been seen in the district. May be true or false.

"Probably it won't be possible to convict now. If it is possible, I don't suppose he'll get much of a sentence. But headquarters are anxious that we should establish our prestige by getting after him—to show that we're on the job as our predecessors were. I want you to ride in, and, if he's alive, pick him up and bring him back with you."

Anderson saluted. He was about to leave the office when the inspector called him back.

"Stop a moment, Sergeant. You can guess that this man Pelly was probably betrayed by someone with a grudge against him. I suppose you know that the Free Traders opened up at Siston lake during the war?"

The Free Traders, as Anderson knew, were a gang of liquor men, organized from Montreal, and sending its agents far and wide into the Indian lands, debauching and corrupting. The Free Traders dealt in human souls as well as fur and whiskey; they were the most iniquitous thing that had so far entered the northern territories.

"There's a man named Jim Rathway who seems to be handling their work for 'em up there. Ten to one his gang's mixed up with this Pelly matter in some way. Perhaps they're out for Pelly's head because he wouldn't stand in with 'em. On the other hand there's the chance that he's in with 'em and someone else tipped us off. In that case you'll find yourself up against the organization."

"This Rathway's believed to have been running liquor under various aliases for years, and there's ugly rumor about happenings at an Indian camp in the Far North, where the Free Traders have another post at Lake Misquash. They've got to be a big factor during the years of the war—so big that we're not going to tackle 'em until we're ready to launch a general campaign against 'em."

"You'll remember not to butt in if you find 'em selling liquor, but pick up Pelly as quietly as possible, and take notes, if you get the chance, on what's going on at Siston lake."

"You've got carte blanche, and you'll take a covering warrant from the stipendiary to use in any way you see fit. And take all the time you want, because there'll be nothing doing till spring. But don't let 'em get wise to your job. So you'll leave your uniform behind you, Sergeant, and conduct your inquiries as inconspicuously as possible. And in a case like this, one man's better than two. That's why I'm sending you alone."

"Finally, you'll bear in mind that Pelly's arrest comes first. Soon as you locate him, bring him out of the range."

At dawn Lee was upon the road. There had been rumors—recurrent rumors of a gold find in Stony range that summer, but the nearer Lee got to the range the less explicit the news became.

He passed a number of men on their way south, morose and sullen, but ready enough to pour out their grievance that a summer's prospecting had failed to show even a trace of color anywhere.

Lee had listened to their stories and then gone on, leaving the impression that he was a prospector on a belated journey to the range.

And now at last the range lay in front of him, uplifting its wild peaks into the glory of the autumn sunset. Lee felt his heart uplifted too. This was life at its most zestful—the world spaces, and the hunting of the king of all created beings—Man.

So, leading his horse, Lee passed down the long slope toward the settlement of Little Falls. Soon he was abreast of the first shacks, set in the clearings among the stumps. Then came rows of uniformly ugly wooden cottages, a small mission church with a tin roof, a bank, and a small hotel announcing itself by a dilapidated shingle.

Lee fastened his horse to the hitching post in front and entered. On the right of the interior passage was the dining-room, on the left the parlor, with the furniture piled up in corners and the floor strewn with duflibags and blankets.

A passage ran past a flight of rickety stairs, and from a room at the end of this came the clamor of voices. Here Lee found the bar, packed tight, and running wide open. Behind the mahogany stood a fat and cynical-looking landlord.

"How about a room and stabling for the night?" asked Lee.

The landlord slid a schooner of beer from one end of the bar to the middle, and turned to Lee, his fat body quivering, apparently with mirth, though his face did not relax anything of its solemn, cynical aspect.

"Stabling? You said it. Room? You can have six foot by four of the parlor floor, stranger," he answered.

"Pretty full, eh?"

"Fuller 'n h—'s full of fire-logs."

"Logging crews signing up?"

"Loggin', nothin'. Town's full of these here fool guys that's been prospectin' Stony range all summer. Got cold feet all to one and all quit together. Feeling pretty sore over it, I guess. Ya ain't aiming to start for the range yerself this time of year?"

"I guess there'll be time to wash a few pans of dirt," answered Lee. "Then maybe I'll board my horse here and trap a bit this winter."

He led his horse into the stable, gave it some corn and raked out a bale of hay, and carried his blankets back to the hotel parlor, where he staked out a sleeping claim upon the floor.

A small negro boy, carrying a large bell, came out of the kitchen and began to ring it, swaying to and fro with a cheerful grin, as if he were tied to the clapper.

At the sound of the cracked tones the men began to straggle out of the bar into the dining-room, where they took their seats on long benches either side of a long table covered with a stained, tattered oilcloth, on which were placed cheap knives, forks, spoons and plates.

Next appeared a thick-set young squaw who began to hand out portions of a greasy dinner, consisting of suspicious meat, beans, and potatoes that had apparently been frozen to death in bed.

Lee, who had taken a seat opposite the door, surveyed the other guests with that quiet watchfulness which was a part of his nature as well as of his training. For the most part he summed them up as being of the average prospector type.

Among them, however, appeared to be a few of those hard-bitten characters who are to be found in every gold rush. Most of them had been drinking hard, and all seemed embittered by their experiences of the summer. They were freely cursing their ill-luck.

Lee's attention was first drawn to the two men who were seated opposite him by the fact that they took no part in this chorus of denunciation. A glance showed him that they were not prospectors, and that the understanding between them was an intimate one.

One was a short, thick-set, muscular red-haired man, with one of the hardest and most repulsive faces that Lee had ever seen. The other, apparently his partner, was a huge half-breed with a great muscular torso covered with black hair, and long gorilla-like arms.

"If I had that guy here what started that yarn about the gold in Stony range?" began a man on Lee's right.

"Ah, for the love of Mike, cut out that spiel, Bill!" shouted another across the table. "D'you think you're the only real fool's ben summerin' in the range?"

"Old Pelly never found no gold mine. He was cracked about it. Ef he had, wouldn't others have got wise to it, with half the district hangin' about the range spyin' on him?"

"Nobody knows what happened to him, do they?"

"Jest disappeared. Mebbe he had a stroke in the woods or somethin'. Nobody's seen nor heard of him this good while past."

Lee absorbed this conversation without feeling that he had got very far. Pelly had discovered a problematical gold mine. Pelly had disappeared; it began to seem probable that the report of his return was false. If these men had been prospecting the range all the summer, it was probable that if Pelly had returned to the vicinity they would have heard of it. In which case someone would have corrected the statement that nothing was known about it.

While he listened Lee noticed that the two men opposite him were likewise taking in every word. The big breed was obviously under the influence of liquor, and his little companion was not only watching the company but also watching him. At times he would turn and whisper in his close scrutiny of the company, he turned his gaze on Lee.

For a moment Lee felt chilled by the eyes of the little red-haired man. They were pale grey, glassy, venomous. They looked like a snake's eyes. Lee, though his gaze was as steady as the other's, did not like the look of the little red-haired man.

The conversation drifted. By twos and threes the men began to make their way back to the bar. Lee had risen from the table and left the dining-room, intending to take a smoke on the stoop, when he heard a feminine voice, and found himself staring in surprise at a girl who had just come in and was in conversation with the landlord.

For this was not in the least the type of girl whom one might look for in such a place as Little Falls.

CHAPTER II

A Girl Rides Into the Range

She was perhaps two or three and twenty, slender, of medium height, with clear, grey, fearless eyes, and hair of pale brown with gold flecks in it, coiled up loosely about her head.

Her open mackinaw revealed an almost boyish figure, slender and long-waisted. She wore corduroy breeches and riding gaiters; and there was about her that hardly definable, but unmistakable air of breeding that crops out in such unexpected places along the Anglo-Saxon frontier.

From a respectful distance the men were staring at her, each asking Lee's unspoken question as to what such a girl was doing in Little Falls.

That she was riding into the range was evident. Had she been riding out, the men would have known of her. But—whose daughter was she?

There was no one in the now deserted range to whom she could be going. The only possible destination might be the Moravian mission on the other side. But—there were no women at the mission.

"Well, ya see, Miss," the fat landlord was saying, "we're purty well filled up so far as rooms is concerned. But the wife's over to Old Landlag for a few days, an' I guess you c'n hev our room till she comes home. It's the fust room on the right at the top of the stairs. You jest walk up and make yourself comfortable, Miss."

Looks as if the sergeant was in for a tough time. And who is the girl he has befriended?

and I'll take your boss into the stable and see that he gets fed and watered. And supper's ready."

"Thank you, but I had mine on the road. And I shall be going on early in the morning."

By now the crowd of ex-prospectors had formed a wide circle about the girl, standing as far as the passage would permit, staring and scrutinizing her frankly, and looking sheepishly away whenever her unembarrassed glance fell upon any of them. Lee, hearing a muttering behind him, turned, to see the big breed staring at the girl and whispering excitedly to his companion. His red-headed partner was tugging at his arm as if to restrain him.

"You d—n fool, Pierre!" Lee heard him expostulate.

Suddenly the breed shook off the other's grip and lurched forward. Planting himself in front of the girl, he leaned toward her, with an expression on his face that brought the blood into her cheeks.

From a Respectful Distance the Men Were Staring at Her, Each Asking Lee's Unspoken Question as to What Such a Girl Was Doing in Little Falls.

Before he could utter a word, however, Lee stepped quietly into the breach with that instinctive air of authority which he retained, despite the shedding of his uniform.

"That'll be all," he said crisply.

The breed turned on him and broke into a string of oaths.

"Say, whadya mean?" he shouted. "You don't know me. He don't know who he's talking to, eh, Shorty? I'm Pierre Cauchon." He doubled a brawny forearm. "Say, young feller, you see dis? Dere ain't no man either side of de range can say 'dat'll be all' to Pierre Cauchon. You t'ink you can fight, mebbe?"

Lee, mindful of the rigid code of conduct that bound him, shook his head.

"I never fight if I can help it," he answered.

The two men suckered, and there came a murmur of disgust from the crowd, which, till that moment, had been decidedly favorable to Lee.

The breed turned about. "He never fight if he can help it," he jeered. "You hear dat, boys?" He turned to Lee again. "Mebbe you like to set up de drinks, den?" he inquired blandly.

"I don't drink," answered Lee with complete equanimity.

"Well, whadya t'ink of dat?" cried Pierre to the crowd again. "He don't fight an' he don't drink. You sure are one d—n four-flusher," he grinned belligerently in Lee's face.

Lee, relieved to see, without turning his head, that the girl had taken the opportunity to slip away, returned Pierre's glare calmly. The breed was posing himself ready to strike, but something in Lee's aspect, some uncertainty, the inability to size him up, checked him. Perhaps he sensed how quickly Lee's right arm, hanging negligently before him, would rise to the defensive; perhaps he did not like the look of Lee's left.

Looks as if the sergeant was in for a tough time. And who is the girl he has befriended?

Homemade Lancet

A good surgical needle of the lancet type for home use can be made from a large darning needle. The point is ground down and whetted to the shape of a spearhead, which gives a keen, penetrating and cutting edge, says Popular Science Monthly. A cork pushed on the eye end serves as a handle. Before using the needle, sterilize the point by holding it in the flame of a gas jet or match.

JARDINE GIVEN FARM PORT FOLIO

EXTRA SESSION OF NEW SENATE CALLED PRESUMABLY TO CONFIRM APPOINTEES.

CABINET IS COMPLETED

COOLIDGE NAMES WILLIAM M. JARDINE OF KANSAS AS SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE

Washington.—President Coolidge has completed the cabinet he will take into office with him on March 4 when he begins the term to which he was elected last November in his own right.

He chose William M. Jardine of Kansas as secretary of agriculture and sent his nomination to the Senate along with that of Frank B. Kellogg of Minnesota, whose selection as secretary of state to succeed Charles E. Hughes was announced a month ago.

The nomination to fill the third vacancy in the cabinet—that of Charles B. Warren of Michigan to be attorney general—was made early in January and has met with so much opposition that administration leaders in the Senate have hesitated to seek confirmation at this session because it might operate to prevent enactment of important legislation.

Immediately after completing his cabinet the President issued a proclamation calling the new Senate in extra session "to receive such communication as may be made by the executive." Should the cabinet nominations now pending be disposed of before March 4, there would remain little for the Senate to dispose of except the reappointments of present cabinet members to whom Mr. Coolidge desires to give commissions in his own name.

Both Republican and Democratic leaders said that so far as they knew there would be no serious opposition to the confirmation of either Mr. Kellogg, who is a former senator, or Mr. Jardine, who is president of the Kansas Agricultural College and has the endorsement of the entire Kansas delegation in Congress.

The way to the confirmation of Mr. Warren, however, is not so clear. After conferences with President Coolidge, some of the majority leaders said they would make no effort to force action at this session, but apparently a change in this program now is being considered.

Senator Curtis of Kansas, the Republican floor leader, said if the Judiciary committee reported the nomination out, the Senate would act.

Mrs. Longworth Is Mother of Girl

Chicago.—A daughter was born to Mrs. Nicholas Longworth at the Chicago Lying-In hospital. Physicians in attendance said both mother and baby were "doing well." The child is the first born of Mr. and Mrs. Longworth and is an addition to the grandchildren of Theodore Roosevelt. Representative Longworth of Ohio was in Washington. Mrs. Longworth's mother, Kermit Roosevelt and Mrs. Medill McCormick, wife of the senator from Illinois, were at the hospital when the baby arrived.

Former German Chancellor Expelled

Berlin.—Gustave Adolph Bauer, former imperial chancellor, has been expelled from the Socialist party. His expulsion was due to his alleged connection with the Barnum financial scandal.

Governor's Son Serves Jail Sentence

Columbus, Ohio.—Gov. Vile Donahy's 18-year-old son, Hal, served a three-day sentence in the city jail for violation of the automobile traffic laws of Columbus. He described it as "just another day" except that he attended the prison religious services with other prisoners in the morning. City prison rules laid down a bid to permit young Donahy to visit with his sister and several friends. Friends sent him great baskets of food, and one admirer of the governor sent the son a bouquet of American beauties.

Three Dead in Race War

Orange, Texas.—Three white men are dead and two negroes are in jail here in connection with the slaying as the result of a wholesale shooting scrape. The fight grew out of a campaign inaugurated by white mercenaries to induce white persons to trade with them. The dead are: Joe Prejean, proprietor of a meat market; Dallas Morris, an employee of Prejean; and Basil Stokes, deputy sheriff. The shooting occurred when two meat market trucks met on a street.

Elihu Root Retired

New York.—"My active life is finished," Elihu Root told members of the Union League Club at a dinner given in his honor, "but I am filled with deep and abiding faith in the competency of a people born and reared in the practice of individual liberty to maintain their liberty with order and justice." Among those who paid tribute to Root on his eightieth birthday were Secretary of State Hughes and Solicitor General Back.

MAIL PILOTS TRAVEL 1,288,352 MILES IN SIX MONTHS

Washington.—The forty-six air mail pilots in the postal service flew 1,288,352 miles in the last six months of 1924. Postmaster General New announced here a few days ago.

These postmen of the air, since they first entered the Postoffice Department have flown a total of 6,902,657 miles, or approximately 235 times around the earth.

The pilots flew 437,387 miles at night and 902,363 miles in the daytime. Pilot Lewis holds the record for night flying with 26,410 miles in darkness. Pilot Short has the greatest amount of mileage to his credit, having covered 39,376 miles, flying both day and night.

The parachute flare is the best safety measure in use for night flying, according to reports received from the air mail pilots. Each plane is provided with two flares in case one does not work. All planes assigned to fly between Cleveland, Ohio, and Rock Springs, Wyo., are so equipped.

Story of Inheritance Untrue

Livingston, Mont.—Miss Esther Johnson of this city was taken to the State Hospital for the Insane following a decision adjudging her insane. She is the victim of a toxic potter, it was said, and is expected to recover rapidly. Miss Johnson, a student at the University of Washington in Seattle, created a sensation here recently when she claimed to have inherited $2,000,000 from an aged Detroit millionaire, whom she had nursed at a tourist camp in Yellowstone National park. All efforts to verify her story failed.

French Aviator Killed in Africa

Namery, French West Africa.—The second plane of the French air mission to Lake Tchad crashed on taking off here, and Sergeant Vandele, the pilot, was killed. Colonel Vuillemin, commanding the plane, Captain Dagneux, and Sergeant Knecht were injured.

Fleischmann Will Filed

Minneapolis, N. Y.—Julius Fleischmann, Jr., and Mrs. Henry C. Yeiser, Jr., children of the late Julius Fleischmann, yeast magnate, are the chief beneficiaries under his will filed here. Other bequests include a $200,000 trust fund for educational or charitable purposes, preferably in Cincinnati. Mr. Fleischmann's former home; 20,000 shares of stock of the Fleischmann company to certain employees and a $100,000 trust fund for a cousin, William S. Fleischmann of New York City.

League Advances New Peace Plan

Geneva.—The separation of disarmament from compulsory arbitration and security is the latest idea advanced in League of Nations circles here as the one possible development in the case of the famous Geneva peace protocol, which now is being discussed between the English mother country and her dominions and commonwealths. This idea, if carried out, would give an entirely new angle to the international struggle which is being waged to outlaw war.

Commons Votes Wales Expenses

London.—The House of Commons, 3 a vote of 295 against 87, passed a supplementary budget estimate to cover the expenses of the forthcoming trip of the Prince of Wales to South Africa and South America. The vote was taken after the chamber had rejected a motion by David Kirkwood, Labor member for the Dunbarton Burghs to reduce the £15,000 which it has been estimated will be required for the trip. The vote on this question was 304 against 90.

May Waive Grazing Fees

Waiving of grazing fees in the national forests of the state by the federal government will, it is expected, be ordered by congress, according to a telegram received by John R. Towles, register of the U. S. Land Office at Phoenix, from Senator Cameron last Saturday. The senator's telegram follows:

"Just secured unanimous report from agricultural committee of the U. S. senate on my resolution to waive grazing fees. I expect to secure consideration and the passage of the same tonight. Please advise all concerned.—Ralph H. Cameron."

WHOLE NATION MAY HEAR

It is announced that the inaugural ceremonies, March 4, will be broadcast by a chain of stations scattered across the continent so that every nook and corner of the United States will be in tune with Washington.

Forty stations will be linked together by telephone wires, breaking all records for inter-connection between broadcasters.

When President Harding was inaugurated in 1921 the public address system was employed, enabling the crowd of 125,000 which filled the plaza and overflowed into the park to hear his voice.

Think of the wonderful advancement during the short period of four years! President Coolidge's voice will be carried to a national audience of 25,000,000.

KAHN'S WIDOW SUCCEEDS HIM

Conscience Fund Proves Most People Are Honest

The public is honest! This is the opinion of the general auditor for the Southern Pacific Company.

The auditor, in his official capacity, keeps a record of the Southern Pacific's "conscience fund," which includes remittances sent from conscience stricken persons who had defrauded the company in various ways.

Several hundred dollars, ranging in amounts from 3 cents to $75 have been sent into the railroad since 1907, when the special fund was established. The remittances came from both patrons of the company and employees. Most of them came from passengers who had ridden free or unpaid their fares on the company's trains.

The Southern Pacific's "conscience fund" is perhaps one of the most unique funds ever established by a corporation.

Half of the electricity used in the world is generated and used in the United States, where nine-tenths of it is developed under private initiative.

LARGEST SINGLE-UNIT LOCOMOTIVE FOR S. P.

The American Locomotive Company has announced the receipt of an order from the Southern Pacific system for a very large and powerful three-cylinder locomotive, says the Railway Review. It will be the largest and most powerful non-articulated locomotive that has ever been built. It will have a tractive power of approximately 90,000 pounds, a 4-10-2 wheel arrangement, and, being the first of this type built in the United States, will be known as the "Southern Pacific type."

REDUCE FIRE HAZARDS

Fire insurance rates of a city or town cannot be lowered until the physical hazard is lessened.

The water supply must be adequate, the number of fire hydrants sufficient for rapid and efficient fire-fighting, old buildings of an easily inflammable character of construction must be torn down and it is very important that rubbish and trash be not allowed to accumulate.

This fact is being more widely recognized and, instead of demanding lower rates, cities are looking around for ways and means to decrease their fire hazards so that reduced rates will be warranted.

Patagonia is inadequately protected from loss by fire. The chemical apparatus we no have is no use except for small blazes that are discovered and reached before much headway is attained.

The city of Nogales for years was protected by a two-compartment chemical engine, having two hand chemical tanks attached so that in case of a small blaze the larger apparatus would not have to be used. The machine is in excellent condition and the fire department of the city mentioned has offered that outfit to Patagonia at a ridiculously low price. We should use every effort to secure the apparatus, not alone because we haven't an efficient fire-fighting machine, but because of the added protection we will have in case of fire. A small payment down will secure the apparatus and property owners—both real and personal—should feel that it is their civic duty to aid in securing this protection against loss by fire.

Labor Grows Conservative

The oldest labor newspaper in the country, the Indianapolis Union, declares "there is nothing in the contemplation of public service conditions in the United States to cause us to consider that public or municipal ownership is in any sense the solvent of public service problems."

"Public ownership will not do. But ownership of utilities by the people as individuals is quite another matter. There is scarcely a community in the country the people of which could not acquire such substantial interests in the securities of the public service companies as to make them actual administrators to their own needs in public service."

"We must get away from the idea that public utility ownership is a big man's game. It is the most practical of all means for the small man to participate in big business."

"There is no better security in the world than the average well-managed public service company's investment securities under ordinary conditions."

The most acceptable service to God is doing good to man.—Franklin.
