Two Love Songs Win Husband For Singer

"When The One You Love Loves You" Is Cupid's Messenger

New York City.—The love story of Margaret Merle and Donald McMillan is based upon two songs. The first is "Song of Love," which Mr. McMillan heard Miss Merle sing as Miti in "Blossom Time," and the second is "When The One You Love Loves You," which she gave as an encore at the house of a friend in Atlanta, Georgia.

Miss Merle played the lead in the "Blossom Time" company which toured the South last year. Mr. McMillan chanced to be in the audience the night she played the song. His friends were all saying what a pretty girl the star was, but not until she began to sing the "Song of Love" did Mr. McMillan comment.

Love at First Sight

Then, according to those who sat next to him, he merely gasped, sighed and muttered, "I've got to meet that girl."

Later, he did meet her, and it was then she completed his conquest with "When The One You Love Loves You."

"The first hit me hard enough, but when she had finished that second, I knew I was going to ask her to marry me," confesses Mr. McMillan.

He did, too, following the pretty singer all the way to the South.

Has Double Role

Miss Merle now plays housewife in summer and pursues her career in winter.

"I kept up my music all year, along with my housework," she said recently. "The two are not incompatible at all, and while I am in New York this winter and my husband in Atlanta, we expect to visit back and forth, so that neither of us will get lonesome. Of one thing you may be sure—since our romance had a musical foundation, there will always be songs in our home. We believe it is the way to live happily ever after."

A report from the County Attorney, Mr. James V. Robins, was presented to the Board, in which he showed the amount of $19,082.95 back taxes collected since January 16th, and also stated that there was the amount of $9,090.00 ready and waiting to be paid into the County Treasurer's office, but which had not been paid in for the reason that the Treasurer had not had time to make out the tax receipts.

Mr. Robins stated that he anticipated the collection of approximately $35,000.00 in March, and due to results already obtained and suits filed and others needing immediate attention asked that the appointment of E. R. Thurman as special tax attorney be made permanent.

Upon motion of Campbell, seconded by Miller and carried, the appointment of E. R. Thurman as special tax attorney was extended until the end of this fiscal year, June 30, 1925.

H. J. Brown, Sheriff, appeared before the Board asking that the salary of James W. This matter was taken under advisement for future consideration. Mrs. Rinehart appeared before the Board asking that she be allowed the care of a county indigent, Mrs. Madden, who is at the St. Joseph Hospital. Mrs. Rinehart stated that she would care for this case for the sum of $50.00 per month.

A petition was presented to the Board asking that the Board of Supervisors provide for the construction of a bridge across the Santa Cruz river at Amodeo in conjunction with a bill introduced by Senator Hardy in the event that Senator Hardy could not secure full amount from the state for construction of this bridge. This matter was held for future action and consideration.

This is the "first spring in five years with any evidence of general stimulus in agriculture," the bureau of agricultural economics declared a few days ago in a report on the situation. The forty-mile stretch of the Central route through Arizona lying between Safford and Duncan is being rapidly brought up to standard by state highway forces which began active prosecution of the work nearly a year ago.

Assurance that the beginning of actual construction on the bridge to be built across the Colorado river at Ehrenburg, is a matter of but a few months, or sooner, is contained in a letter received by T. G. Norris, Prescott attorney, from John Lyle Harrington of the firm of Harrington, Howard & Ash of Kansas City, the firm given the permit to construct and operate the bridge by the last Congress.

The University of Arizona polo team will claim the western collegiate championship of the United States, and will ask permission to enter the national championship this year as a sectional representative, Captain Fenton Jacobs, assistant coach, announced in Tucson after the Wildcats had defeated the Fort Huachuca Buffaloes in three straight games. The Arizona team has practically defeated all the collegiate teams of Texas, New Mexico and California.

Governor Bay of the state of Sonora, Mexico, will pitch the first ball, and Governor Hunt of Arizona will catch, with General Oregon, former president of Mexico, acting as umpire, if present plans materialize for the opening day of the Arizona State league when the teams of Greater Nogales and Phoenix meet in Phoenix on Easter Sunday, April 12. Governor Hunt has expressed his willingness to receive the first ball pitched and backers of the Nogales team believe the Mexican officials will participate in the ceremonies.

SICK WOMEN ATTENTION!

Read this Remarkable Testimony Regarding Results from Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Norfolk, Virginia. — "If you only knew how many women and girls have taken your medicine by hearing my testimony, that I wrote to you. Every day and every chance I have I advise some one to try it. It was in June, 1904, when I had given up to never get well, that I wrote to you. My husband went to the drug-store and brought the Vegetable Compound home to me. In a few days I began to improve and I have often taken it since. I am now passing through the Change of Life and still stick by it and am enjoying wonderful health. When I first started with your medicines I was a mere shadow. My health seemed to be gone. The last doctor I had said he would give me no more local treatments unless I went to the Hospital and was operated on. That was when I gave the doctors up. Now I am a healthy robust woman. I wish I could tell the world what a wonderful medicine Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is. I will be only too glad to answer letters from anywhere. I wish all sick women would take it." — Mrs. J. A. Jones, 317 Colley Avenue, Norfolk, Virginia.

Queer Thing

Father William E. Cashion, who has resigned his chaplaincy of Slug King prison after 12 years' service, takes a deep interest in prisons and reformatories.

Talking about a reformatory of rather antiquated pattern, Father Cashion said the other day:

"A queer thing happened to a man in that reformatory in 1902."

"Yes? What happened?" said the reporter.

"He reformed," said Father Cashion.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

German Parties Lining Up for Second and Crucial Election on April 26.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

GERMANY failed to elect a President to succeed the late Herr Ebert, no one of the seven candidates receiving a majority vote, and now the party bosses are scheming various combinations for the "run-off" election that will be held on April 26. The best guess at this time is that the three candidates who will be offered to the people on that day will be Dr. Karl Jarres, right coalition; Doctor Marx, left coalition; and Herr Thelmann, communists. Jarres, the monarchist coalition candidate in the first election, led all his rivals but Stresemann's Industrialist party is now trying to substitute another man for him. Braun, Socialist, was second, and Marx, Catholic Center, was third. Gen. Eric Ludendorff, supported by the Fascist ultranationalists, ran last and received only about 300,000 votes.

The fight at the polls April 26 will really be between the republic and the monarchy, for the royalists, though they do not hope to change the form of government immediately even if they win the election, keep that in view for the not distant future. It is said they have completed their plans for putting the eldest son of former Crown Prince Frederick William on the throne in case a right coalition candidate is elected President, and that Frederick William himself favors this scheme. This prospect is worrying the republican press of Germany and also is causing a lot of anxiety in France.

BERLIN has been officially notified of the attitude of the allies toward the guarantee pact which Germany has offered. What England, Italy and Belgium have to say is not definitely known, but it is known that Premier Herriot has sent a series of specific questions and makes it plain that France insists that the eastern frontiers must be guaranteed the same as the Rhineland and that Germany must join the League of Nations. Herriot's firmness should do much to relieve the anxiety of Poland. Former Premier Poincare made an important speech warning France to reject Germany's proposal and to decline to reduce her armaments while Germany remains a potential danger.

France's position in regard to the new conference on limitation of armaments which President Coolidge desires to call is at this writing a matter of controversy. Dispatches from Paris say Ambassador Daeschner was instructed to tell the Washington government that France "could not permit any intrusion in her military forces until the security problem has been solved."

On the other hand the embassy in Washington denied that M. Daeschner had received such instructions, and at both the White House and the State Department it was asserted that no official communication concerning the proposed conference had been received from the French government. It was explained that Secretary of State Kellogg was still studying the situation and had not yet taken up with the President the matter of approaching other governments. Senator Borah, who as chairman of the senate foreign relations committee should know what he is talking about, says the plans for the conference should go forward and feels certain that reports of French opposition are exaggerated. Senator King of Utah, after calling on President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg, expressed the belief that the conference would be held in Washington before winter and that it would take up the reduction of land forces as well as of naval forces.

ETIENNE CLEMENTEL, French minister of finance, resigned Thursday night because of opposition in the senate to his plan to add 6,000,000,000 paper francs to the money circulation of the country for the purpose of aiding business. Senator de Monzie was selected to succeed him. He has been prominent in negotiations with Soviet Russia and opposes the government's Russian policy. There were reports that the entire Herriot government would soon resign, in which case Poinleve, Briand and Caillaux might be expected to come into power. France's financial condition is admittedly desperate.

SENATOR BURTON K. WHEELER of Montana, indicted by a special federal grand jury in Washington for conspiracy to obtain fraudulently gas and oil permits on public lands in Montana, gave bail of $1,000 to appear for trial, and then issued a formal statement bitterly assailing the administration.

"The administration seems determined," Mr. Wheeler said, "to chastise every one who has the temerity to criticize or oppose the illegal practices of those in authority at Washington. A brief survey of political Washington during the last few years clearly indicates that I am not alone the subject of administration displeasure. Every public man who has raised his voice in protest against incompetence and corruption has been the subject of attack, the last being Senator Couzens of Michigan."

BRIG. GEN. WILLIAM MITCHELL, who incurred the resentment of certain of his superiors by advocating the creation of a separate air service and by his talks and writings concerning the relative importance of planes and battleships, thereby losing his position as assistant chief of the army air service, has been assigned as an air officer of the Eighth army corps with headquarters at San Antonio, Texas. The transfer takes effect April 23 and on the same date Mitchell automatically reverts to his former rank of colonel. Mitchell wanted to be assigned to the Sixth corps with headquarters at Chicago, but Secretary Weeks decided otherwise. "In selecting a post for General Mitchell," said he, "I took into consideration the fact that his rank as colonel in the air service entitles him to the best air post in the corps area. I understand he wanted to go to Chicago, but he did not apply formally for that post."

BY A vote of four to three the United States shipping board decided last week to sell to the Dollar Steamship interests its five vessels now in the California-Orient service. The price obtained is $5,625,000. Commissioners Plummer, Thompson and Benson vigorously opposed the sale, pointing out that the price was $25,000,000 less than the original cost of the ships and $15,000,000 less than it would cost to build them at this time. The Pacific Mail Steamship company has been operating these ships for the board and there are hints that this concern may try to prevent consummation of the deal and may carry the matter before congress at the next session.

THE week in the United States was marked by two huge financial transactions. In the first the Dodge Brothers Automobile company was sold to a syndicate of bankers headed by Dillon, Read & Co. of New York. The consideration was cash and though the exact sum was not made public it is known to be more than $175,000,000. The sellers were the widows of John and Horace Dodge. Some time ago it was learned they were tired of business cares and wished to sell their property, and at once there began a lively struggle among various interests to obtain it. Many bids were rejected and the final contest was between two groups of bankers, one headed by Dillon, Read & Co. and the other by J. P. Morgan & Co., who are largely interested in the General Motors corporation. The company is to be maintained as a separate organization, but an entirely new corporation will be formed, chartered in Michigan, with a capital of between $175,000,000 and $200,000,000. Its backbone will be an issue of first mortgage bonds, probably of about $100,000,000, the balance to be represented in common and preferred stocks, in which control of the organization will be vested. It is not unlikely that an offering to the public of some new Dodge Brothers company securities will be made soon.

It was announced Wednesday night that control of the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company had passed to a group of interests including the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, Blair & Co., Inc., and the Chase Securities corporation. Edward L. Doheny, chairman of the board of the Pan-American and a pioneer of the Mexican oil interests, signed the contract in New York for the sale of 501,000 shares of the voting stock of his company. The consideration was not stated but the present market value of the stock transferred is about $38,000,000. The shares are held by the newly organized Pan-American Eastern Petroleum corporation. This deal is the largest consolidation in the history of the oil industry. It gives the Standard Oil Company of Indiana an important rank not only in the oil industry in this country, but also in foreign markets. It acquired control not only of the Mexican properties of the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company, its pipe lines and refineries, but also of its tanker fleet, consisting of 31 vessels with an aggregate deadweight of 272,500 tons and capable of transporting 1,800,000 barrels of crude oil. This tanker fleet is second in size to that of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

MORE systematic and effective efforts to enforce national prohibition are expected to follow the appointment of Assistant Secretary Lincoln C. Andrews as the head of all the prohibition activities of the Treasury department. He was given this post by Secretary Mellon after Assistant Secretary Moss and Prohibition Commissioner Haynes had indulged in a long controversy over the holding of the balance of power. The prohibition unit of the department and the "dry" work of the coast guard and customs divisions will be managed by Andrews. He was in the regular army 30 years, rising to brigadier general, and gained note as the reorganizer of the military police system of the army in France after the armistice.

WHETHER Federal Judge George W. English of the Eastern district of Illinois shall be impeached will not be known until December when the congressional subcommittee that has been investigating his acts reports to the full committee. After a lot of testimony had been heard Judge English took the stand in his own behalf. Some of the accusations of official misconduct he denied, others he sought to explain and to justify, and in excuse of others he pleaded ignorance of the law. The subcommittee adjourned but may hear some further evidence later.

THE sixth international neo-malthusian and birth control conference came to an end in New York last week after adopting a resolution providing for encouragement of large families among persons of superior stock.

"The conference believes," said the resolution, "that persons whose progeny give promise of being of decided value to the community should be encouraged to bear as large families, properly spaced, as they feel they feasibly can."

An international birth-control committee was appointed, with England, Scandinavia, Austria, Hungary, Holland, Germany, Japan, China, Mexico, Switzerland and America represented. The conference voted to raise a fund to pay the fine of 37,000 francs to save Eugene Humbert and his wife from further imprisonment in France for distributing birth-control pamphlets. The next international conference will be held in Geneva next August.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE. It is announced, has selected White Court, at Swampscott, Mass., for his summer vacation and he and his family will go there on June 13. The residence was leased recently by Frank W. Stearns, the President's close friend.

SECRETARY WEEKS has invited bids for the purchase of power developed by the Wilson dam at Muscle Shoals. This is in accordance with the plan of the army engineers to develop and sell the power pending final disposition of the project by congress. About July 1 the Wilson dam will begin the development of 100,000 horsepower daily. It is not expected that high rates of pay will be obtained since the contracts must be revocable by the government on 30 days' notice and will be of short duration.

POULTRY

DUCK RAISING IS WORTH CONSIDERING

The average farm has all the facilities which are necessary for the raising of a goodly number of ducks and with a little outlay may add considerably to the farm income from that source.

Duck raising in some sections of the country has become a greatly specialized industry. It is hardly advisable for the average person to go into it extensively, at least not until he has become acquainted with handling ducks on a smaller scale. However, ducks do afford a side line to the regular poultry business of the farm that is worthy of the consideration of the average person.

The houses which are needed for ducks are simple affairs. They are plain and comfortable and need very little furnishings. Generally on every farm there is a small shed or building that can be used for this purpose. Warmth is not essential to the extent that is necessary with hens, but if it is dry and protected it will generally serve the purpose. Ducks should not be closely confined.

Artificial incubation and brooding are used almost entirely by the large producers of ducks, but under most farm conditions the incubation and brooding will be mostly done by hens or by ducks. Before the hens are put on the eggs and again before the ducklings are given to her she should be thoroughly dusted with insecticides. The nest should be watched for lice and treated as may be necessary.

The feed of the ducks in nature is both vegetable and animal. In the wild state they get a great deal of their food along the creeks and marshes. This type of food needs to be imitated to some extent. The duck has no crop like the chicken, the food passing directly to the gizzard and as a consequence they are not fitted for as much hard food as chickens. In fact, a large number of the professional raisers depends largely on soft foods. However, under farm conditions where the ducks have free range the problem is not so difficult and most of the additional feed will be grains. Feed that is adapted to producing growth on chickens will answer the purpose for ducklings without going to the expense and inconvenience of mixing additional rations. The main difference that will be noted by the beginner is that the ducklings make a faster growth and therefore they will consume a larger amount of food.

Sick Fowls Afterwards Are Usually Worthless

When a fowl becomes ailing and emaciated it most often denotes either a tubercular condition or coelitis. Such hens, should they recover, are poor layers and are apt to pass their weaknesses to their offspring. Seldom will they get well and fatten to marketable condition, so it is a money-saving method to kill and burn their carcasses.

As the majority of poultry diseases are contagious, retaining such birds threatens the present health of the flock, as well as the vigor of future ones. Often one sees an emaciated hen walking stiff-legged about a henhouse. Such birds almost always die without human aid, but while alive very likely infect other fowls as well as the yard where the remainder of the flock runs. Whole flocks are often devastated through the owner's neglect of destroying worthless individual hens.

If flock owners realized that through ignoring such present menaces they are inviting weakly flocks in ensuing years, more importance would be placed on the necessity for immediately killing and burning hens or growing stock that becomes ailing, especially those which get decidedly poor in flesh, an almost unerring tubercular indication.

Poultry Hints

Keep young stock growing.

Protect hens and young stock from the sun.

A clean, disinfected poultry house gives the laying hens a chance to do their share.

Sensible people are willing to pool their interests and co-operate in a common cause. Are farmers sensible people?

The brooder house floor should be covered with fine gravel or sand, over which is scattered a litter of alfalfa or clover leaves if available.

Proper care of the chicks during the brooding season will do much to stop up one of the important "leaks" in the poultry business.

In warm weather the hens can be dipped in a solution of sodium fluoride made by dissolving an ounce of the material in a gallon of water.

Salt in excess is poisonous to chickens. If salty water is thrown where chickens can drink it or if salt is mixed with the feed in quantity chickens may be poisoned.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

CARLSON RENDERED SERVICE IN RUSSIA

After the breakdown of the Russian government in 1918, the allies in the World war were confronted with a very serious threat. The Russian people were in distress. German prisoners of war were pushing intrigues of every sort. To meet the danger, the allies decided to send an expeditionary force to occupy the port of Archangel in north Russia, in order to prevent the Germans from using it as a submarine base and to guard allied supplies.

Among the first United States troops sent to Archangel was the Three Hundred and Thirty-ninth Infantry. In the little American force there were 553 casualties, of whom 100 were killed in action. After the armistice it was found impossible to remove the detachment because of climatic conditions, which prevented movements of large bodies of troops or large amounts of supplies.

One of the officers in the Three Hundred and Thirty-ninth Infantry was First Lieut. Albert B. Carlson, now department commander of the North Dakota department of the American Legion. Commander Carlson took part in the battles of Perek, Chelkova, Turhiskaya and Osherskiya and in the retreat from Papepeld. He was wounded once in that nightmare campaign in the snows of the far north.

Commander Carlson, who is now assistant manager of the Minot Wholesale Grocery company, entered the service in June, 1917, and was discharged in September two years later. He was awarded the St. Stanislas cross (Russian) and the English Military cross.

As chairman of the American Legion's state legislative committee in 1920 he was largely instrumental in securing the passage of a state compensation measure for World war veterans, a bill making Armistice day a legal holiday and another prohibiting the illegal wearing of the American Legion button. Commander Carlson was himself a member of the legislature that session. He is a member of William G. Carroll post, No. 26, at Minot and was its commander in 1923.

Install Radio Outfits in Veteran's Hospitals

All Veterans' Bureau hospitals are being equipped with radio outfits, according to information received recently by rehabilitation officers of the American Legion from Director Frank T. Hines of the bureau. The Legion has been urging this step for some time.

In 47 hospitals operated by the bureau radio has been installed or the equipment will be completed shortly.

Experiments already made prove that the radio is a highly valuable adjunct to hospital equipment. It is without doubt the most adaptable and popular of recreational facilities now provided for the disabled. The therapeutic qualities are considered to be as valuable as the recreational qualities. One important feature of this form of entertainment is that a patient may listen in or not as he himself feels inclined.

Rev. Father Bellamy Is to Succeed Doctor Clark

There is a story behind the appointment of Rev. Father Bellamy as state chaplain of the New York department of the American Legion, to succeed Dr. J. A. Clark of Oneonta, who resigned because of ill health.

Father Bellamy, through his activities, was one of those in line for election as chaplain at the state convention last year. His election was looked for by many, but he had a different idea. He worked actively for the selection of Doctor Clark and nominated him for the office. Religious lines were forgotten—a Catholic stepped aside and worked for the appointment of a Protestant. It was this that state officers considered in electing a successor to Doctor Clark, they said.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE THINKING CAP

Little Mahalia had been having a holiday. She had been doing nothing but play.

She hadn't studied, nor had she thought, nor had she worked. She had been having a beautiful time.

The holiday had begun on a Friday and had kept up all through the next week until the Monday following so that she had had really ten days of pleasure.

But now she had to go back to school and think about lessons and studying once more and when she began she couldn't seem to think.

She had had a far longer time playing in the summer and though it had been a little hard when she had begun school again in the autumn she had never known it to be as hard as it was now.

Even after the Christmas holidays it had never been so hard. For some reason, or other, it just seemed impossible to think.

She just couldn't get started on her lessons. How dreadful it was.

She sat bending over her books wondering, wondering, wondering. Her mind went over the games she had played, the new friends she had made—a whole new family had come to live at a farm half a mile down the road.

She thought of them and how many of them there were and what grades they were in and how many animals they had.

It was so easy to think of everything but the lessons.

She looked at the lessons that must be done. She wished she had done them at once—that Friday night instead of waiting until the very end to do them. It wouldn't have been so hard then.

But at that time she had thought it would be so easy to wait until the end of the holiday time. She had wanted to begin playing at once.

As she was thinking of what she had been doing and wishing she could get her mind on studying she heard a rap, rap, rap under the table where her books were.

"What's that?" asked Mahalia.

"It is I," said a voice. "Don't ask 'What's that?' Ask 'Who are you?'"

"All right, I ask it," said little Mahalia.

There came climbing up the table leg a little creature about the size of a very enormous pencil. Upon his head was a long, long cap.

At first Mahalia thought perhaps it was a dunce cap but there was something about it quite different from a dunce cap. It looked like a superior cap somehow.

Then Mahalia noticed that the cap was covered with little pockets and out of the pockets stuck little packages upon which were written:

"School Thoughts, Special Arithmetic Thoughts, Special Composition Thoughts, Special Grammar Thoughts, Special Spelling Thoughts, Special History Thoughts," and some others which she couldn't see.

"I'm the Thinking Cap Gentleman," said the little creature. "I go around and supply thoughts to people who're running low on them."

"When people have got out of the habit of thinking I give them a fresh supply of thoughts to start in with once more."

"Very often I'm around when no one sees me but that is when they don't need me as badly as you do."

"Sometimes people will say:

"Dear me, I'd better put my thinking cap on." That means they haven't been concentrating.

ing, or thinking hard on one subject, but have let their minds wander.

"Well, just having me wave my cap over them is enough. They don't see me but their minds are made up to think, and one wave of my cap starts them off."

"But you are really dreadful. You need a visit from me just to start you a-thinking again."

"See, I've brought packages of thoughts for you. Each package is filled with thoughts. Sprinkle them over you—they are quite dry enough not to get you wet but they're not so dry as to be dull and dusty. Then you'll have the right thoughts for the right subject and you'll think of one subject at a time instead of a dozen."

"See, I wave the Arithmetic Thoughts over you now."

He disappeared but as Mahalia opened her arithmetic book and made up her mind to use the Thinking Cap Gentleman's Arithmetic Thoughts she found it was easy once more to study.

Bonbright & Co. has prepared a "data book" of the most generally accepted statistics on the industry at present, a copy of which will be forwarded without charge to any contestant.

Announcement states that papers should be submitted on or before May 18, 1925, and should be confined within the limits of 5000 to 10,000 words. A fictitious name should be signed to each paper but attached to it should be an envelope containing the proper name and address of the author.

As the development of the electric light and power industry is closely related to the convenience and welfare of practically every home in America, this offer of prizes to stimulate an expression of thought on its future as well as a record of its past accomplishments, should bring forth a number of valuable papers in the public interest. The competition is open to all and it is the wish of the judges and donor of the $20,000 in prizes that the creative work necessary to the competition be as little circumscribed by regulation as possible. It is predicted that when the list of prize winners is announced it will include the names of many independent observers as well as leaders in the executive, engineering and educational branches of the power industry.

The Bonbright prize will be divided into 3 awards, as follows: First $5000, second $1000, third $500, ten prizes of $250 each, 10 prizes of $100 each, and $10,000 awarded in conjunction with the above contest as a single prize by the American Superpower Corporation for the review that proves in 1930 to have been most accurate.

NO IRRECONCILABLE CONFLICT

Bernard J. Mullaney, vice president of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Co., says that the whole idea that there is an irreconcilable conflict between capital and labor is nonsense when you analyze it.

"Even accepting the classification as made," he says, "few of us will admit that we do not labor and most of us are capitalists. It is one of the merits of this country that every person entering it by birth or by immigration is a potential capitalist. For all of us who own anything are capitalists, and that means practically everybody except those who live from hand to mouth and spend every penny as they go."

The thirst for education seems to be confined to the basket ball floor.

A half truth soon grows into a whole lie.

BUNKO-PRO-FOUND-DO (Latin)

Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer, wherever you find a man making a fight for a cause and who has the entrails to continue that fight for justice and principle in the face of big odds, what do you generally hear the supposedly self-elected, I-am-educated, opposition saying? Nothing less than this: Keep off that fellow, Bolsheviki, anarchist, ignorant enemy of education, etc. This is the great weapon used by the so-called elite of our country, state and nation many times, and is used to squelch and put the silence on the individual and to injure him so he will become helpless. And nine times out of ten the individual, unless he has real marrow flowing from the base of his brain, down the spinal column which feeds the nervous system, will lie down and quit.

This is part of the Bunko-pro-found-Do used by certain minority systems, and mediums, to gain their ends. But usually, if enough rope is given these so-called educated systems they generally hang themselves.

Now, Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer, I have examined the membership list of the Santa Cruz County Farm Bureau thoroughly, and I find less than 10 bona fide farmers and stockmen on the list. Remember less than 10! The balance of this list is composed of merchants, hotel people, barbers, mail carriers, road workers, school teachers, and men and women of other government positions. These are the people that actually are imposing this unjust tax upon us in this county and forcing an exploitation system on us also.

This membership list of names will be published in an article in the Patagonian at a later date.

Now I believe there are quite a number of people who have signed membership cards that have done so thoughtlessly and without investigating, and who have no intention of harming anyone or to be oppressors of unjust taxes. And I trust these people will write to the illegal secretary of this Farm Bureau system and demand that their names be taken off this membership list. This is very important, for, according to the by-laws and constitution of this system, in our county, unless you advise the illegal secretary in writing to take your name off the list you must do so to cease being a member. Just imagine this being a part of the by-laws and constitution of any system! "Take it off and it's legal, too. If this system were using dark lanterns, blimps and guns on you, you will still be a member unless you advise in writing to remove your name. And you don't know you must advise in writing because you have never seen or ever been allowed to see and examine the by-laws and constitution of this system. They say: "Just sign a card; that's all that's necessary; we will do the rest." And you sign, thereby aiding and abetting an exploitation system not only on yourself, but on everyone else in the county.

I hope you intelligent, right-thinking people will get wise, and if you don't want to believe these facts I am giving you, that you will at least investigate for yourselves. And if this advice miffes you a bit, and you don't wish to advise me and I'll see that you get a look at one.

We also have a certain clique connected with this outfit that is right in for the big exploitation purpose and have no scruples about how it's put over either. They imagine they are bunko-pro-found-Do artists. The bunko-pro-found-Do sounds so educational, don't you know? But let me take you back to 15 or 20 years ago: You remember the farmer and stockman used to go to the city with a nice fat bankroll of from $2000 to $5000 on his person, and invariably he would be surrounded by two or more "sleekers" who would sell him the city hall or the Masonic temple. They also would furnish him with a deed, an immediately the farmer or stockman would go down to the courthouse to record his deed and, of course, the city officials would give him the deed and inform him he was bunked. The newspapers would herald it with broadcast and the poor fellow would go back to his ranch or farm and make another stake (He could do so in those days—the farm bureau system not being born yet). But today this vulgar system of bunk is illegal and illegitimate, and in its stead we have the modern, up-to-date, political, educational, legal, Sapiro, Gentile front system, known in the Latin term (?) as bunko-pro-found-Do, meaning in English, Hogtie him and get it while the getting is good. Deep "bunk."

Sincerely and thoughtfully,
M. W. EASON, Canille, Ariz.

JOYCE DECIDES TO DROP APPEAL

Tucson.—Feeling that neither himself nor his wife is able to stand the ordeal of a new trial and the resultant strain of testifying again to the events which led to the shooting of Jess Whitley at the Carlink ranch last November, E. M. Joyce, now serving a 6 to 8 year sentence for manslaughter for the shooting, said that the appeal for a new trial would be dropped.

Life is a good deal like a vaudeville show. You think all of the time that the next act will be better, but it isn't.

MEDICOS TO MEET IN BISBEE

For the first time in the history of the state body, the president of the American Medical Association will attend the annual convention of the Arizona State Medical Association, to be held in Bisbee April 16, 17 and 18.

The head of the national organization, which includes $2,000 physicians and surgeons, is Dr. William Allen Pusey of Chicago, a famous specialist in skin diseases and by virtue of his personal work and position recognized as one of the world's leaders in medicine.

Besides attending the state convention in Bisbee, Dr. Pusey will pay visits to Phoenix and Tucson, attending an addressing public meetings to be held in those cities.

Addresses at both the Phoenix and Tucson meetings will be given by Dr. Pusey, whose talk on "The Social and Economic Condition of the Medical Profession" will be an outstanding feature of the annual dinner at the state convention in Bisbee, where he will also present a scientific paper.

REQUEST TO PECAN GROWERS

Owing to the large number of pecan trees imported into southern Arizona during the past season, the inspectors of the state entomologist's office are requesting all growers to keep a careful tab on all trees and report any insect pest or plant disease that may be observed. While all shipments were carefully inspected before the same were released to the consignees, it is practically humanly impossible to be certain that no pest or disease was present on the trees. A periodical inspection on the part of the grower and the report of any insect or disease suspected of being injurious will aid in keeping under complete control all such infestations. Requests for inspection or aid in determining disturbances found upon agricultural or horticultural crops of any kind will receive prompt attention by the staff of the state entomologist's office.

Hot and Cold Baths

Patagonia recently witnessed the destruction of an adobe building by fire. The husband and father was away from home and the wife and mother was sick in bed. There was no insurance on that building.

What a blessing it would have been for the family had the building been insured in a good company, such as I represent.

Fire may come at any time, even though you have used every precaution and have what you think are fireproof buildings—and when it does come, sweeping all before it, are you fully protected against financial loss? We will be glad to talk the matter over with you at your convenience.

What the World Is Doing

As Seen by Popular Mechanics Magazine

Simple Method of Foiling the Auto Thief

A simple and effective method of foiling auto thieves or joyriders is shown in the drawing. Drill and tap a hole in the intake manifold for a 3/8-in. pipe or tube fitting, and connect a length of pipe or tubing to extend back to the dash. The open end is flared out a trifle to receive a wooden plug made to fit snugly. When the plug is in place, the engine will run normally but when the plug is removed, so much air is admitted to the cylinder that no combustion can take place and therefore, the car cannot very well be run off on its own power. If, however, the engine is started by excessive use of the choke, the firing will be so erratic that the thief will be glad to abandon the car in a block or so. Of course, the plugged end of the tube should be located in an unnoticeable place behind the instrument board.

Glasses Developed for Color-Blind to Correct Defect in Vision

Color-blind persons may be able to differentiate various shades as accurately as others, if special glasses now being devised by opticians prove successful. The lenses in the spectacles are to be colored and will seek to adjust the eyes to record properly the varying wave lengths of light. Inability to perform this function is said to be the chief cause of color-blindness.

Electric Furnace for Heating Knives Prevents Furniture-Shop Fires

Furniture makers, before their goods are permitted to be shipped from the factories, carefully inspect all pieces for dents or abrasions that may occur in handling the articles. When any such imperfections are found, they are filled in with a special kind of wax that must be melted and worked into the wood with knives. To eliminate the danger of fire from blowtorches or other implements used to heat the wax and the tools, a small electric furnace that can be placed upon the workbench and supplied with current from the light socket, has been invented. It will hold two knives at once, is furnished with an asbestos base, and the metal in the heating chamber is of a kind that will not rust or scale. The heater requires but little electricity and weighs only two pounds.

Cross-Word Puzzle Centuries Old Seen in Ancient Disk

Although the cross-word puzzle idea, as it is now presented for the entertainment and distraction of millions, is said to have originated in the fertile mind of a newspaper reporter, there is a possibility that this form of brain teaser really dates back to about 2600 B. C. At least such is the indication of a copy of an ancient terra-cotta disk in the museum of the Johns Hopkins university. The original came from the island of Crete and bears on both sides a continuous spiral line of picture writing. No one has been able to decipher it, hence it is not known whether the legend begins at the center and runs outward or the reverse, or whether the characters should be considered vertically or horizontally. The curiosity is known as the Phaistos disk and, although a German scholar several years ago asserted he had found the key to the puzzle, others refused to accept his claim.

Novel Sliding Gate

On farms where high fences are used, a sliding gate of the kind shown in the drawing will prove to be convenient. It can be made from materials available almost everywhere. The rail is a length of 1/2 or 3/4-in. pipe, supported at each end by an elbow, a short nipple and a flange, the latter being securely screwed to the post. The gate hangers are made of flat iron, screwed to the gate and bent over to slide easily on the rail. Gravel is applied to the rail every two or three months, to reduce the friction and permit the gate to slide noiselessly. For large gates, it is advisable to provide a stop on the outside, near the bottom, to prevent them from swinging outward in a strong wind.

Woman Who Made The Supreme Sacrifice

"Madelon is no poem to me, but is a clear-eyed, pure-hearted French girl"

"She gives a lie to every slur on the virtue of France, writes U. S. ex-service man."

IN an autobiographical sketch appearing in the May issue of Smart Set, a young ex-service man tells the story of a real Madelon who made the supreme sacrifice and sent her man back to the States and to his first love.

According to the famous French marching song, Madelon was the daughter of an inn keeper in Brittany, and through the years of the war she poured out wine to the weary soldiers while they poured out their love stories into her friendly ear. "She coquetted with them all but favors none at all," runs the song. Lucille Guillemont granted the young American lieutenant only the favor of her friendship. He mistook it for something more, and there followed one of those dramatic love stories of the Great War.

In those days, writes the young soldier, "We got wickedly lonesome for the gentleness which women mean"; but far from taking advantage of that loneliness, Lucille played up to her role of Madelon. Through this beautiful and thrilling revelation, one sees why the boys in France glorified that name, and went into the trenches singing "Madelon."

KILLED 35 MEN "HONESTLY"

Phoenix—Charles Doesha, 87, Arizona and California pioneer, died here Tuesday after a brief illness.

Doesha was one of the most noted early-day gunmen of the southwest, and friends say that before he died he admitted that he had kept a record of the number of men he had killed, all of whom he declared he had killed "honestly," giving 35 as the total.

POLICEMEN PLEAD GUILTY

Cincinnati—Thirty-one former Cincinnati policemen and rural dry agents pleaded guilty to the federal grand jury on liquor graft indictments in the United States district court. Six of the indicted men pleaded guilty last week.

A FIGHT FOR LIFE

SYNOPSIS.—Lee Anderson, Royal Canadian Mounted Police sergeant, is sent to Stony Range to arrest a man named Pelly for murder. He is also instructed to look after Jim Rathway, reputed head of the "Free Traders," illicit liquor runners. At Little Falls he finds Pelly in a room with a girl, obviously out of place in the rough surroundings. A half-breed, Pierre, and a companion, "Shorty," annoy the girl. Anderson intervenes in her behalf. The girl sets out for Siston Lake, which is also Anderson's objective. He overtakes her and the two men with whom he had trouble the night before. She is suspicious of him and the two men are hostile. Pierre and Shorty ride on, Anderson and the girl follow. In the hills the road is blown up before and behind the two. Anderson, with his horse, is hurled down the mountain side, senseless. Recovering consciousness, Anderson finds the girl has disappeared, but he concludes she is alive and probably in the power of Pierre and Shorty. On foot he makes his way to Siston Lake. There he finds his companion of the day before, and Rathway, with a girl, Estelle, a former sweetheart of Anderson's, who had abused his confidence and almost wrecked his life. Rathway strikes Estelle, and after a fight Anderson, with Estelle's help, escapes with his life. Anderson's companion's mind is clouded and she is suffering with a dislocated knee. Anderson sets the knee and makes the girl as comfortable as possible. He has a broken rib. The two plan to make their way to a Moravian mission, of which Father McGrath has charge. Their acquaintance ripens into love. The girl remembers that her name is Joyce Pelly. She is daughter of the man Anderson has been sent to arrest. Torn between her love for her father and her regard for Anderson, the girl practically drives him from her. In the forest Anderson stumbles upon the entrance to a gorge and is convinced he has located Pelly's mine.

Lee saw that from the point where he was clinging, there appeared to be a fairly easy descent to the bottom. It was only the upper parts of the cliffs in the gorge that were unscalable. But he could go no further now. Anxiety for Joyce was rising in him. He was half afraid she might do something rash.

In some way Rathway seemed to be associated with Pelly; perhaps he was protecting him. Suppose, then, that the girl had gone back to the Free Traders' headquarters on Siston lake? Or fled into the storm in her frenzy? Suppose they had been followed? Lee remembered his fancy that he had seen an Indian watching them. The Free Traders would surely have been watching the trail at either end of the lake, knowing that sooner or later they must emerge out of the forests.

Then he remembered the shadow in the log house, and this specter in which he had disbelieved, now began to assume in his mind a formidable aspect.

Suddenly, as Lee hung there, he heard a rumbling sound above his head, and a moment later something hurtled past it and smashed upon the ground of the chasm. Looking down, Lee saw the fragments of an enormous boulder lying on the ground immediately beneath him.

He had had a narrow escape. And reluctantly he turned to re-enter the tunnel. But before he had thrust his head and shoulders in, there came another rumble. And this time it was only the little projecting ledge above his head that saved his life.

The boulder struck the edge of it, shot out into the air, and, just missing him, smashed to pieces below.

Lee looked up, but the overhanging cliffs shut out the view of everything except the overhanging bushes and the sky.

Whether or not human agency was responsible for the fall of the two boulders, it was certain that the tunnel's mouth did not appear to be a particularly healthy spot at that moment.

And Lee forced his head and shoulders through, and groped for the rock ladder within, bruising his thighs and shins against the edges of the openings. Extending his hands, he felt the smooth surface of the water-worn, interior wall. He grasped the ladder, clung to it, pulled himself up, and found his footing.

And then of a sudden Lee had the unmistakable instinct that he was not alone. There was another living thing within the tunnel!

Though it was absolutely dark, except for the faintest reflection from the interior of the gorge, which filtered up from below, and though Lee could not hear the faintest sound, he felt its presence; by some inner sense that was not hearing, he felt the rhythmic pulsations of its life.

And it was a human being. Lee felt the fog of human hatred flung out toward him. Instinctively he knew the imminence of an encounter under conditions more nerve-racking than any he had ever experienced. He knew for sure now that the fall of the two boulders had been no accident.

He had been watched, he had been seen to enter, and that watcher meant to fight him to the death. And of course it was Pelly!

He did not relish the prospect of a struggle with the crazed old man, one which could hardly end in any other way than by the death of one of them. It would be a sharp, relentless struggle, in which Lee's disadvantage lay in the fact that he could not be the first to fire.

Lee called: "Is that you, Pelly? I want to talk to you."

No answer came. He strained his eyes upward through the darkness. Colors and wheels of light flashed across his vision and went out.

"Pelly, listen to me!" Lee tried again. "You know what I've come for. You've got no chance. Surrender, and you'll get fair treatment."

Still no answer; and yet Lee could feel that other human personality close to him. He waited, baffled. There was no way to move, save vertically; and there was no possible retreat for him. The ice-smooth granite walls were all about him. The tunnel was a straight, narrow shaft, up and down, from the rocky stone above to that deadly drop below.

It was impossible to rush the other. Impossible to do anything except to clamber stiffly up those slippery rungs of rock, expecting every instant to hear the roar of Pelly's pistol and to receive the bullet in his breast. It was absurdity. And once again Lee tried:

"Pelly, you'd better give up. I can shoot you from here. Surrender, and—"

He did not end that sentence. For, as he hung there, in a moment the thing above him had materialized into life, action, fury. A bellow burst from its throat, and the sound, compressed within the shaft, and deflected from wall to wall, sounded like the roar of some prehistoric monster.

And a heavy body was precipitated against him with a force that all but dislodged him. For an instant Lee struggled wildly to retain his balance—and then there came a blow over the head that knocked the wind out of him.

Lee's hand encountered an enormous hand at his chest. Within that hand he felt the hilt of a knife. Reaching back, Lee's fingers closed upon the last inch or two of a wide blade.

The steel appeared to be buried almost to the extremity within his body.

There was no sense of a stab, but for an instant Lee felt a deadly faintness overcome him, and again he reeled and clutched for foothold. Then he had torn the hand away, plucked out the knife, and hurled it down through the darkness of the tunnel into the gorge below.

The next instant he was fighting the most desperate battle of his life to win through the tunnel before he bled into unconsciousness.

He caught at two long, sinewy arms that clutched his body in the endeavor to fling him down; and, holding on by their knees and feet, the two wrestled in complete silence.

It was a man—the thing that held Lee, but it seemed more like a monster, for the naked arms were covered with thick hair, underneath which the sinews moved over each other like steel bands. Lee was no match in wrestling; he could only cling on like grim death, feeling his lungs constrict under that pressure, and expecting every moment to feel his injured rib crack in his side.

His left hand encountered a groove in the rocky rung above him, and, gripping it, determined that nothing should tear his hold away, with his right fist he began hammering his assailant's face and body incessantly.

His blows rebounded from the great chest as if it were of rubber, and each blow sent the breath issuing hoarsely from the lungs with raucous wheezing that filled the tunnel.

If the other could have got Lee's left hand, he might have torn him from his hold, but, as if unaware of his hold, his assailant put all his strength into the endeavor to force breath from his body and twist him backward; while Lee, clinging on desperately, continued to batter the face and body.

Although it was impossible to draw back his arm far enough to deliver a blow with full force, Lee's lower position gave him the advantage of equisole over his strange assailant, and enabled him to administer fearful punishment.

For a minute or two it was problematic whether Lee could withstand the strain long enough to conquer. The great shoulders swung Lee from side to side in the shaft like a child, and all the while Lee, believing himself seriously, if not fatally wounded, fought on with the mechanical action of a piston, dashing his fists into his opponent's face until at last groans began to burst from the other.

Then, feeling the clutch relaxing, Lee let go his hold, and, standing straight up on the rung, brought both fists into play. No human being could have stood up against that fearful punishment. Lee's fists were wet with blood. The grasp about him relaxed. He redoubled the fury of his blows—and suddenly found that he was hammering at the bare face of the rock.

His assailant was gone. Faintly Lee heard the scraping of his feet on the upper ledges of the rock ladder.

Then, feeling cautiously above him, Lee continued his ascent, until at length there came a tiny glimmer of light from above, changing into a sudden glare as of high noon.

The tunnel was empty. The glare decreased to a glimmer. Lee understood what it meant. His assailant had tilted back the rocking stone and fled.

In another moment or two Lee was beneath the stone. He flattened himself upon the ground and drew his automatic. He fired one shot, and, before the echoes had died away, had pushed the stone back and emerged, pistol in hand.

The glare had been only in contrast to the dark of the tunnel. Outside it was melancholy twilight. Lee emerged into a solitary, snowbound world. There was no sign of his antagonist, who had evidently had enough for the present.

Lee looked down at the fragments of shirt that remained to him, expecting to find himself soaked in blood. He was astonished to see only a thin thread on his chest. He tore the rag open.

There was only a scratch on the skin from the knife-point, but there was a spreading bruise—under the thick coils of Joyce's hair, in which the knife blade had become entangled.

The blow, struck immediately over the heart, would have killed him instantly but for that. Lee raised the tresses reverently to his lips. And with a deep feeling of tenderness toward the girl, he began to make his way through the twilight toward the log house.

He was torn between apprehension for her and speculation as to his assailant. His first thought had been that the man was Pelly. But now he began to doubt this. An old man might have had his assailant's strength—he would not have had the endurance. But stronger still was the conviction that that monstrous form which had attacked him in the shaft could never have been the father of Joyce.

Yet who but Pelly knew the secret of the mine?

The problem was at present insoluble, but its consideration brought with it the fear that Joyce might have been attacked as well. Lee quickened his footsteps through the storm,

He Flattened Himself on the Ground and Drew His Automatic.

which was now subsiding, though the snow still fell steadily. He blamed himself bitterly for having left the girl. Surely the strength of that love and tenderness he felt toward her would reach her, and she would respond!

And he planned what he would say to her. He would advise her that it was improbable that her father would receive anything but a nominal sentence, that he might even go free, that in the absence of witnesses a conviction might prove impossible. His best course would be to surrender. Lee began to grow more hopeful.

The log house came into sight, standing bare and bleak in the snowy wilderness. There was no light within. Lee's alarm increased. He hurried to the door. He called, but no answer came. He struck a match. By the tiny light he saw that the kitchen and the adjacent room were empty.

And he began going from room to room, striking matches and culling her, and knowing all the while the futility of it. Joyce was not in the house.

She had fled into the snow, and, desperately weary as he was after his encounter, Lee had no alternative but to take up the quest. She could not have gone far, but she must have been in a state of desperation to have gone out into that storm. Why? The falling snow had surely long since obliterated her footprints.

He made his way down toward the trail beside the river. Only two ways were possible: one ran toward the mission, nine or ten miles away, the other in the opposite direction to the Free Traders' headquarters.

But suddenly Lee's hopes and spirits leaped up confidently. Stooping, he traced the tracks of a sleigh along the trail. It had been drawn by a single horse, and it was going in the direction of the mission.

There was only one reasonable inference. Father McGrath must have been passing, perhaps he had met Joyce, and he had taken her with him.

Lee took up the long walk immediately. The snow was deep, progress was difficult without snowshoes, and the frost had already crusted the surface, so that his feet sank in cumbersomely at every step. But a great load was removed from his mind; the future now looked rosate.

At last the mission came into sight—a group of log huts clustered about a larger one on a low elevation, surrounded by the forest. Lights gleamed pleasantly inside them. A horse was neighing in some stables. Over the largest hut a wooden cross stood out against the background of the sea-gray sky.

Lee strode up the ascent, hesitated as to which hut to approach, stood irresolute for a moment in the open space at the crest of the little hill. Then, as he waited, the door of one of them was flung open, and a man in a mackinaw and lumberman's boots stepped out toward him. Under his arm he held a rifle. He presented it at Lee's breast.

He looked to be about fifty years of age, or a little older. He had a round, smooth face as soft as a babe's, an incipient paunch. A silver cross hung from his mackinaw. A jolly-looking priest; but the eyes within the face were steel-gray and ice cold. He stopped two paces distant.

"Take yersel' off, ye damned Free Trader," he said softly, "or I'll blow ye into Kingdom Come!"

CHAPTER XI

"If You Find My Father"

Lee spoke quietly. "I want to see Miss Pelly."

"Aye, ye want to see Mees Pelly! But ye canna see her and ye wilna see her."

"Will you give Miss Pelly my message?"

"Will ye tak' yersel' awa'?"

McGrath flung down the rifle. "Come on, then; come on, ye swine of a hooch peddler!" he shouted, brandishing his fists.

Lee flung up his arm just in time to protect himself against a straight right that would have knocked him senseless. Next moment Father McGrath's arms were locked around him, holding him as if in a vise.

"Will ye tak' yersel' awa' before I'm tempted to forget my calling?" the father panted.

"Father McGrath—"

"I'll ha' no dealing w' ye and your nest of inequity. I'm no afraid of all the Free Traders that iver come out o' b—l. I'll send ye back to the de'il before your time, if ye come meddling w' my meeson."

"I've made my compact w' your maister, as I'd mak' a compact w' the evil one himself, to protect my bairns. Mebbe ye're a new hand—I don't remember your face—so I'll remind ye of it. Ye're to be free to peddle your filthy liquors whaur ye weel—aye, an' I dinna doot the guid Lord will score it again ye too, for shamlin' His good corn whuskey by neexin' in your feithly woad alcohol the way ye do—ye can peddle them whur ye please, but ye'll leave my lasses and weans alone, or I'll mak' Siston lake too hot to hold ye."

"Father McGrath—!" Lee tried again.

"Will ye fight, mon to mon, ye damned Free Trader? Will ye fight or wrestle w' me?"

"I'd be glad to, Father, but just now one of my ribs is broken. When I get better, perhaps—"

Father McGrath released him. "Ye're speakin' the truth? Well, then, tak' yersel' off. Ye canna see Mees Pelly—"

A light footstep sounded beside him. Joyce stood there. Lee swung toward her.

"I came to make sure you were safe. Joyce—!" Lee held out his arms.

"Dinna speak to him, Mees Pelly. I understand he's helped ye—aye, there's good in the wurst of us—but he'll get around ye, Mees Pelly. Go back!"

"Father, there's something I want to say to him," Joyce answered in a low voice.

"Aye, but he's got a smooth tongue, and the stomp of inequity hasn't come upon his face yet. Ye wouldna thenk he'd sold himself to his maister. If ye must speak to him, I'll just stand by, and if I see he's getting 'round ye I'll send him about his business."

With which the doughty father took up his post just out of hearing, glaring at Lee and prepared for instantaneous intervention. Joyce stepped forward.

"Lee, I—I'm sorry for what I said to you this afternoon. It was partly the shock of awakening. I think, I was unjust to you, and unjust, too, in coming here without trying to get word to you. I owe you a great deal. I accept your word that when you met me in the range you did not know who I was, that you did not pursue me because I was the daughter of the man whom it was your duty to apprehend. I—I hear you no ill-will for having to do your duty."

"Then, Joyce—"

"But," she said solemnly, "you will see how my father's safety, perhaps his life, stands between us. We can only be enemies—at least, until—"

"That's what I wanted to speak about," said Lee. "As I understand it, this killing was committed years ago, a whole generation ago. It was more or less justified. If your father is brought to trial and convicted, it will almost certainly be for manslaughter."

His sentence will be a nominal one. Quite probably it will be impossible to produce the witnesses required to convict at all. In such case he will go free.

"He has acted ill-advisedly. He should never have fled. His best course will be to surrender. He will find himself a free man in a little while, instead of a hunted outlaw. Will you unite with me in persuading him to surrender?"

She shook her head. "We always told him that—my mother and I," she answered. "But the thing had crazed him, he hated civilization after it happened. He was insane upon that subject. He will never surrender."

"Let me try to picture to you what happened, and the treachery and faithlessness that have always pursued him. When my father fled from the law he came here and settled with my mother. I was born here. For a long time we were very happy. My father trapped, and in those days this was one of the richest fur districts in Canada."

"But my father was an educated man, and in his heart he was always chafing against his exile. He always cherished the hope some day to take us south where I could be educated properly. Then in an evil day he fancied he had discovered a gold mine."

"It became a mania with him. He would tell no one where it was, except Jacques Leboeuf, an old servant, whom he trusted. They used to go off by night and work it together. My father was always talking about the gold he had collected. He wanted to develop the mine, to sell it for a fortune, but he was always afraid of being discovered, and he put it off and put it off; and neither my mother nor I ever believed in the mine."

"Then in an evil day a man called Rathway came up. He was a small, wiry, peddler. He had committed some crime against the Indians. He had been beaten, pursued, and was half dead when my father saved him from their vengeance. He took him in and fed and protected him. Rathway learned of the mine, and was always searching for it, but neither my father nor Leboeuf would tell him where it was. Once he tried to spy on them, and Leboeuf had him by the throat and would have killed him if my father had not intervened in time."

"My mother died. Rathway grew fat and consequential, lived here, helped my father with his traps, and, though for a long time my father did not know it, continued debauching the Indians with his whiskey. When I was a girl of seventeen he began to take notice of me. He said he loved me. I didn't know much about love, but I knew I hated him. Then one day my father came in from the woods just in time to protect me from him, and he shot Rathway through the arm."

"He was aiming again to shoot him through the heart, for he was terrible when his anger was roused, when Rathway, standing facing him, with his arm dripping blood, coolly told him he knew that my father had committed one murder already, and that the facts were in his possession, written down and left for safety with a friend in the south. The change in my father was dreadful. He dropped his rifle, he seemed almost demented. His fears for my future, conflicting with his fears for the present and his fears of Rathway, broke his will."

"After that, Rathway stayed on and on, and they were always talking together, and Rathway threatened my father, but still my father refused to show him the mine, in spite of his threats. My father wanted all of the gold for me—it was his mania."

"Once Leboeuf came to my father and offered to kill Rathway, but my father refused, and Leboeuf, who was devoted to him, never thought of disobeying his strict command."

"That happened before the Free Traders were organized in Montreal, but already the hooch sellers were getting together. They had established a number of posts, one of them at Lake Misquash, miles away. A week's journey north of here. Rathway went to Lake Misquash to confer with them. As soon as he was gone, my father seized the opportunity to send me away south to a convent, to be educated."

Here is the big question. Will it separate the lovers, in spite of their love?

Growth of Jellyfish

The manner in which a jellyfish produces its "children" is really wonderful.

In most cases the beginning is an egg, which, lying on the bottom, produces a beautiful tree-like growth. The "tree" fastens itself to the bottom and brings forth buds which, when ripe, drop off and develop into jellyfish. The latter, in turn, lay eggs and the process is repeated, as told in London Tri-Bits.

Most of the very large species have a different way of reproducing themselves. The egg is set free in the water and develops into a pear-shaped larva, which for a while swims about rapidly being provided with hair-like appendages that serve the purpose of ears. Then the larva settles down, anchors itself to the bottom, increases in size rapidly and finally splits up into thin, flat discs which swim off and grow up into large jellyfishes.

Where the Real Fault Lay

The tourist was one of that type which for some mysterious reason are more numerous encountered abroad than at home. He was doing the cathedral towns of England, not because he was particularly interested in English towns, or in English cathedrals either, but because the guide book advised him to do so.

Near the close of a glorious spring afternoon he stood on the greenward facing Canterbury cathedral with his legs planted far apart, his cap on the back of his head, his hands rummaged deep into his trousers' pockets, his clear stuck into one corner of his mouth, and on his face an expression betokening profound boredom.

The celebrated Canterbury chimes were ringing for vespers, filling all the air with silver melody, when a side door of the cathedral opened and there issued forth a little, plump, pink-cheeked, benevolent clergyman. He approached the visiting stranger and in cultured tones said to him:

"I take it, sir, that you are a stranger?"

"Hey?" inquired the American, cupping one hand about his ear.

The clergyman raised his voice: "I assume, sir, that you are not a resident of these parts?"

"Nope," said the American. "I'll from Nebraska. It's a damned good state, too—best in the Union. You ought to come out there some time, elder, and give us the once-over."

"Eh—quite so," said the reverend gentleman. "Then," he continued, "since you are newly-come to this place it must seem to you, even as it does to those of us who dwell in these clustered and holy precincts, that the noise of our glorious bells comes floating down to one almost like the voice of the Almighty Himself, seeking through the medium of their old brazen throats to communicate the message of peace, on earth goodwill to men, to us His children here below."

"Which?" inquired the visitor, inclining his head somewhat.

"Er—what I meant to say was," stated the clergyman, "is that one must carry away from here, after hearing our chimes, the conviction in his soul that really he has been in communication with Deity itself—that the voices of the angels have cried out to him. Er—is it not so, my friend?"

The American shook his head.

"I'm sorry, parson," he said regretfully, "but them d—n bells is making so much noise I can't hear a word you say!"

What Might Be Called an Active Man

The wharf at New Orleans was crowded with foot travelers, vehicles and freight piles. A brawny Irishman, driving a truck, locked wheels with another truck operated by a negro.

As the two trucks jammed the negro opened his mouth in profuse and highly disrespectful protest. But before he had freed six words of his speech unconsciousness shut off further utterance.

For the Irishman, with one flying leap had reached the earth. His left hand closed on the negro's ankle, and as the latter was jerked violently into space the enemy's right fist landed a wing shot squarely on the point of the hip, and for the time being he knew no more.

Ten minutes later the victim half opened his eyes. A policeman was bending over him, applying first aid.

"What's the matter with you?" demanded the officer.

"A white man hit me," said the dazed, "an' I wants him arrested."

"What's his name?"

"I never seed him befo' in my life," bawled the negro, "but he looks like a nigger."

"Well, then, what does he look like?"

"I don't rightly know dat, neither. Hlt happen so quick-lak I didn't get a good look at 'im."

"Then how do you expect me to find him if you can't describe him?" asked the puzzled policeman.

"Boss, dat ain't goin' to be no trouble," stated the negro. "You jest go look for the dole-est man they is in New Orleans!"

Sauce for the Goose

An East Sider of foreign birth and short term of residence in this country prospered to the extent where he graduated from the ranks of the Forsyte street sidewalk merchants and became a regular business man, with a store and showcases and everything. Also, for the first time in his life he was able to start a bank account.

One day he was engaged on the telephone by the assistant cashier of the bank where he kept his checking fund. "Mr. Abrams," stated the cashier, "I called you up to tell you that on the first day of this month your account appears overdrawn $108."

"So?" droned Mr. Abrams. "Say, young man, would you do it for me a favor?"

"Sure."

"Then, please, you should look at your books and tell me how stood the account on the first day of last month."

In a minute or two the bank functionary was back at the phone.

"Oh, Mr. Abrams," he said, "on the first day of last month you had a balance to your credit of $222.25."

"So?" shouted Mr. Abrams. "End did I call you up?"

HATS "SAY IT WITH FLOWERS"; ONE-PIECE FROCK IS POPULAR

THIS season's chapeaux are surely "saying it with flowers" first, last and all the time. When fashion prescribes flowers in abundance, fascinating millinery is the result—which exactly describes the new spring hats.

Not only are our chapeaux generously beflowered, but in an overflow of enthusiasm stylists are pinning boutonnieres to match on milady's coat lapel or dropping a wee bouquet on her shoulder. Sometimes this floweret is attached to a ribbon which serves as a connecting link between chapeau and bouquet. This novelty of matching a boutonniere to the flowers on the hat is favored by smart Parisiennes, and milliners everywhere are encouraging a one-piece cloth dress. Far be it from us to wrest any honors from the ensemble costume than which there is no more popular fashion this season. However, as a faithful record of the mode, be it stated here that the one-piece frock still occupies a conspicuous niche in the realm of present-day modes.

In the modern street dress of cloth, sleeves are a very important item. That they must be long, buttoning to the wrist, is fashion's edict. This does not interfere with varied treatment, as the picture herewith bears witness. In fact designers are bestowing real artistry in the fashioning of the long sleeve this lovely fashion by selling with the hat an extra matching flower to pin on coat or frock.

One of the most charming uses of flowers is the covering of the entire crown with them as noted in the second hat to the right center in this illustration of flower-bedecked hats. Violets were used in this instance topped with a single lovely pink rose.

Milliners particularly favor roses this season. Note them on the hat illustrated first in this group; also on the piquant straw shape to the right below.

Novelty is the charm of most of the little handmade straw hats. The model at the center left of the picture is cleverly fashioned of tulle and silk and fine milan straw tape, with violets perched at the very tip-top of the unique silk-covered flange.

Another interesting method of positioning flowers on the hat is to start at the top of the crown, showering them down over one side as shown on the milan straw hat in the group.

When is a street frock of marked individuality? Answer: When it dares not to be an ensemble costume but definitely plays the role of

at the recent inauguration ceremonies. Front flares are also often introduced in the otherwise straight-line dress for street wear. The idea of accenting this flare with a border of fur seems to be heartily endorsed by the majority of designers.

Special emphasis is being placed on distinctly wearable cloth types this season, many of which look like coats but are really dresses. The introduction of the yoke gives a new aspect to tailored types.

STORM LEAVES TRAIL OF RUIN

THREE ARE KILLED AND TWENTY-THREE INJURED IN FLORIDA TORNADO

TORNADO HITS FLORIDA

STORM DOES $200,000 DAMAGE TO PROPERTY; NOISE TERRIFIC

Miami, Fla.—Three persons were killed and twenty-three injured, three seriously, when a tornado struck the White Belt dairy, located a few miles west of Miami, Westwood Inn, a roadhouse, near Little River, and continuing northeastward, demolished about seventy-five houses.

The dead: John W. Simpson, 3, Westwood Park; Mrs. Mithilda, Schultz, 70, White Belt dairy; F. E. Sullivan, Westwood Inn. Twenty-three injured in the storm area are in Miami hospitals.

The storm formed near Hialeah, six miles west of Miami, and struck with greatest force at the White Belt dairy, wrecking homes and buildings and doing damage estimated at between $150,000 and $200,000. It continued in a northeasterly direction, and passed out to sea about fifteen miles north of here.

After crossing a canal at Hialeah the great funnel-shaped cloud lifted and then crashed down on the White Belt dairy, two miles away, completely demolishing six buildings, fatally injuring Mrs. Mithilda Schultz, 70, and injuring a number of employees of the dairy.

Sweeping in between two buildings the foot of the tornado gathered up four small dwellings, a large garage and the mess hall of the dairy and piled them all in a twisted, jumbled mass in the center of the group.

The cone of wind played about the dairy for about a minute and then crossed the road to the east.

In the path of the storm houses were unroofed and debris carried to a height of several hundred feet. Arthur Pryor, bandmaster, who lives at Hialeah, near where the storm started, said he saw roofs of houses raised 200 and 300 feet in the air. The noise of the storm was terrific, he asserted, seeming that hundreds of cannons were being fired.

"Red" Organizer Gets Forty Years Honolulu.—Private Paul Crouch, Twenty-first Infantry, stationed at Schofield barracks, was sentenced to forty years imprisonment and given a dishonorable discharge from the army after a general court-martial found him guilty of attempting to organize the Revolutionary Communist League among soldiers stationed at the barracks. Crouch was charged with being the leader of a self-styled ring of Communists and was charged with having issued propaganda under the pretext of being a teacher of Esperanto at army schools.

Dodge Sale Threatened by Suit Detroit.—John Duval Dodge, cut off with a $150 monthly allowance under the will of his father, John F. Dodge, founder of Dodge Brothers, Inc., has filed in Circuit Court here a bill of complaint seeking to enjoin his stepmother, Mrs. Matilda R. Dodge, from disposing of any part of the estate of Anna Margaret Dodge, her daughter, who died last April at the age of 4 years. Part of this estate, young Dodge's bill avers, is a one-eighth interest in Dodge Bros. Inc.

MacMillan to Survey Arctic Washington.—The vast unknown regions of the Arctic will be explored this summer with naval aircraft by navy pilots, but not as a government project. The attempt at absorbing uncharted area of more than 1,000,000 square miles lying between Alaska and the North pole, where a continent may exist, will be made in connection with an expedition headed by Donald B. MacMillan, the explorer, who will return for the fourth time to his favorite haunts of ice and snow on a ship leaving Wisconsin, Maine, about June 15. The plan has been approved by Secretary Willard and endorsed by President Coolidge. The expedition will also have the backing of the National Geographic Society.

Dr. Cook Enters Prison Fort Worth, Texas.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, said an accomplice, but not good bye to Fort Worth. "I'll be back some time," the physician-explorer-writer-off promoter-convent, told the friends who gathered to bid him farewell as he boarded the train for Leavenworth prison.

Millerand Wins French Election Paris.—Former President Millerand was elected senator for the department of the Seine to succeed the late Senator Magny. M. Millerand received 529 votes and M. Antrand, his chief opponent, 175. M. Millerand announced he would become a member of the Republican Union group, of which M. Poincaré also is a member. The vote received by M. Millerand was almost triple that of the next candidate. There were 1,104 votes cast, making 508 an absolute majority.

"How I Decorated 7 Rooms at a Cost of less than $1.00 a Room"

"Last fall I tried my hand at redecorating the walls of my home, using King Wall Finish. I was surprised at the pleasing results. It took me less than an hour to do most of the rooms. When starting out I meant to try only two of the seven but things went so easily that I did them all in just the colors I have wished to have for so long. The tones are so pleasing and fresh that they brighten my whole house. I am sorry I put off doing this work for so long. I had thought it an expensive undertaking, but the cost was less than a dollar per room."

Claims Sure Cure for Scarlet Fever

A serum for scarlet fever has been found which will cure the most hopeless cases in 24 hours, according to Dr. Francis G. Blake, professor of medicine at the Yale Medical school, the discoverer. The serum is prepared from immunized horses, and 72 cases have been treated at the New Haven hospital, an adjunct of the Yale Medical school. The cases were classified as 43 without complications, and the remainder complicated with measles, typhoid and other diseases. In the first classification, with treatment and single serum injections, before the third day the entire group was cured, he said. In most cases within 12 hours temperature subsided to normal, the rash disappeared and an excess of anti-toxin circulated in the blood. Only one death resulted in the remaining 29 cases, all complicated and treated on various days from the third to the ninth. A child, in coma, and having typhoid and scarlet fever simultaneously, treated on the eighth day, recovered.

Swedish hospitals for the insane are now almost universally using moving picture films selected by psychiatrists as a form of treatment through diversion. Films are used also for auxiliary training of the tuberculous and of the deaf and dumb.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THRILLING PARADE A FEATURE OF FLEET VISIT

San Francisco.—Seven thousand U. WALTER P. CHRYSLER'S TRAFFIC TALKS

REDUCE CROSSING INTERFERENCE

THE Rapid Transit Commission of the City of Detroit declares that the most effective way of increasing the capacity of a traffic lane is to reduce the crossing interference. "This can be done by separating the grades, but it is a costly procedure and should only be resorted to when other means are exhausted," says the Commission.

"Moreover, streets must be at least 120 feet in width to permit grade separation for through traffic without damaging the abutting property or interfering with local traffic," continues the report.

Another way of materially reducing the crossing interference is to limit the crossing movements to designated cross streets located a number of blocks apart instead of every block.

Boston has a trying traffic problem at the corner of Boylston and Tremont streets because traffic coming down one street may wish to turn to the right to cross the intersecting street, or to turn to left. To take care of this unusual situation a signal system has been installed. A tower has been constructed on the corner of the two streets and this is what the various lights mean:

A red light always means stop.

Red and amber lights signal foot traffic to cross.

A plain blue light means go straight ahead.

A green light bearing an arrow means turn in the direction arrow points.

Combination of blue and green allows both straight ahead and turn.

A red flash means signal changing.

It is interesting to note that the signals permit the crossing of pedestrians in all directions at one time. During that time no motor vehicles are permitted to move.

Boston's system looks a bit complicated; but time and experience will help in simplifying the plan of directing traffic.

BUSINESS REVIEW OF ARIZONA 20 OUT OF 100,000 MEET DEATH ON HIGHWAYS

The Arizona Industrial Congress has just issued its bulletin on business conditions in Arizona during the month of March, as follows:

The Situation in General
Opening of the spring season brought improvement in a number of business lines, and the general situation compares well with a year ago. Interest in agriculture centers in cotton planting, a small increase in acreage over last year being in prospect. State cotton production in 1924 was approximately 102,000 bales. Grain and hay are doing well.

Some improvement in range conditions has resulted from rains in the northern and eastern sections, but more moisture is needed. In the southern part of the state conditions remain poor. Fat cattle prices have advanced, but feeder sales for spring delivery are slow.

The copper market declined during the month, closing at 13½ to 13¾ cents a pound. There have been no noteworthy changes in the industry in the state, and much development work continues.

Building construction has been active in a number of Arizona cities during the past few months. There has been considerable development in the way of expansion of industries, reports of new plants, openings of branches or outside firms, etc.

Reports from wholesale and retail trade lines vary, but the general level is reflected in banking transactions in principal cities reported to the Arizona Industrial Congress, exceeding February figures in all cases, and figures for March of last year with but one exception.

CAPITAL CITY NEWS

Phoenix.—Papago Park will again be the scene of the annual sunrise Easter services, to be held next Sunday, according to Sanford Sweet, who is head of the Federation of Young People's Societies in charge of the services this year. A white cross will be erected on Papago Peak and thousands of devout pilgrims will trudge up the rocky slope to reverence the emblem of the church.

If the expectations of Mr. Sweet are fulfilled, there will be a larger number of persons to witness the rising of the sun in the park this year than last. All the churches of Phoenix are co-operating to make the services more beautiful than ever before.

Phoenix.—Governor Bevilacqua of Arizona, pitcher; Governor Hunt of Arizona, catcher. That's the honorary battery of the opening game of the Arizona state baseball league, when the Phoenix Tigers cross bats with the Nogales Internationals next Sunday afternoon here. Final arrangements were completed this week.

Phoenix.—Congressman Carl Hayden has opened an office here, and if current rumors are true this office will be his political headquarters, for many close friends predict he will enter the race for the United States senate at the next election.

Republican gossip has it that both Ralph H. Cameron and Dwight B. Heard will make the race on the Republican ticket. Mr. Cameron has been wearing the senatorial toga for the last four years. Mr. Heard was candidate for governor in the last election.

With such formidable contenders already in the arena, the senatorial combat for 1926 promises to be an interesting affair.

PATAGONIA VERY DRY

Immigration inspectors C. J. Trask and William Adams captured Leopoldo Simoni and Pio Mendibila, two local purveyors of wet goods, as they were making their way toward Patagonia at 3 a. m. Saturday morning with a supply of tequila, presumably to enliven dancers at the hog given here Saturday night. They were accompanied by two other merchants who made their escape. And now Patagonia is as dry as the Sahara desert and no rain in sight, either.

20 OUT OF 100,000 MEET DEATH ON HIGHWAYS

Twenty out of every 100,000 persons in the United States were killed during 1923 in motor vehicle accidents on public highways, according to the report of the national conference on street and highway safety.

Of these fatalities only two of every 20 occurred at railroad crossings. Fast driving and inattention are given as the responsible element in the majority of cases.

George W. Anderson, Judge of the circuit court of Massachusetts, discussing this situation in a recent article, said:

"Twenty-five years ago we were struggling, strenuously and expensively, to get rid of railroad grade-crossings because of their obvious danger to life and limb. Motor cars have today made thousands of miles of our city streets, for all practical purposes, grade crossings. Indeed, in many respects, worse than grade crossings, for the rail tells us where the stea engine and cars are going, whereas the motor car is very frequently found where the pedestrian does not fairly expect it."
