SCHOOL EXHIBIT WORTH SEEING

The rural schools exhibit at the old Piggly Wiggly building, Nogales, this week contained many articles of exceptional merit. Many visitors visited the display and comments were heard on all sides commendatory of the work of the teachers and pupils. The display consisted of baskets, embroidery, needle work, drawing, crocheted work, wood carving and furniture, as well as maps, natural history displays, and other things too numerous to mention.

It is easy to accept another man's opinion when you are about to ask him for a favor.

Idol of DX Fans Finds Romance In The Air

Austin Wiley, Leader Of "Nightcaps," Prefers The Ether After Midnight

Austin Wiley is the man who plays for the whole world after his regular job for the day is done. Millions "listen in" to him every night or, in some cases, every day, for when he goes on the air at station WEAR, Cleveland, Ohio, at midnight, his farmer auditors on the West coast are just getting up to begin the day, and other scattered listeners in Africa, the Orient and Europe tune in to hear their favorite concert.

SCHOOL NOTES

(Editor, Joan Evans)

The A class is reading their third First Reader. All have improved in reading.

In number combinations, Jean McDonald, Justo Anallo and Ermenia Quiroga are in the lead, completing the combinations in one and one-half minutes. Myrtle Hooks is second, taking two minutes, and Nina Dawson, Mary Dawson, Eva Perez, third, taking two and a half minutes.

The Fifth grade are working with "areas" and "perimeters."

The Fourth grade are doing good work in their arithmetic review.

The Fourth and Fifth grades will soon be ready for their examinations.

A rural school exhibit is being held at the old Piggly Wiggly in Nogales. The exhibits will be displayed all week.

Patagonia had a local exhibit last Friday.

The Girls' and Boys' Basket Ball teams will play Sonora Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Farrell and Miss Bailey visited the school last Wednesday.

School closes May 15.

The copper roof on the dome of the Massachusetts state house at Boston was put on in 1831 and in its 93 years of life not one cent has been spent to repair copper base, which was painted yellow in 1931, covered with leaf gold in 1874 and regilded in 1885, 1898, 1906, 1911 and 1924.

The United States consumes more oil and gasoline than all the rest of the world combined. At present more than twice as much gasoline is being extracted from a barrel of crude oil than was obtained ten years ago.

Because the air is comparatively free in this country at the hours he plays, Wiley has been heard in more countries than any other broadcaster. He has had letters from Japan, London, Mexico, Scotland and Paris, to mention only a few distant points. "There is a great thrill in playing for distance," says Mr. Wiley, who in daytime conducts an orchestra at Cleveland's famous Golden Pheasant Restaurant. "The romance of shooting a song into the ether for millions to pick up never fails to get me. "People all over the world like jazz best. They tell me so in every language. Just now one of their favorite tunes is 'Prince of Wales.' They like it so much that I have nicknamed it the radiolullaby."

The Elgin Junior Orchestra had its regular practice meeting Monday night, all members being present.

The writer very much feared that his weather predictions as to rain would be wrong, as indications were unfavorable for rain before the end of June. But on Tuesday great dark clouds came up from every direction, accompanied by high wind, thunder and lightning, threatening to upset our predictions for wet weather made the previous day. But, being an old-timer here we are pleased to note that we will not be classed with the "professional" weather man. We hit it right sometimes.

Mrs. Charles Reeves and sister-in-law, Lola Reeves, were Nogales visitors Thursday and Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Klone are entertaining relatives from Los Angeles this week.

Reagan Gardner was a Blisbee visitor Thursday.

Move to the Elgin valley and live in peace and harmony.

A number of Elginites attended the Vaughn church services Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Neil are enjoying a visit from Blisbee friends.

GRADUATION EXERCISES MAY 14

The graduation exercises of the Eighth grade classes of the rural schools will be held in the auditorium of the high school building at Nogales, Thursday evening, May 14, at 8 o'clock. Eight schools are to send graduates and each school is responsible for one part of the program. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend these exercises, which promise to be interesting.

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS

OF THE

SANTA CRUZ COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS, Nogales, Arizona, April 6, 1925.

The Board of Supervisors met pursuant to adjournment of March 2, 1925. Present: Chairman James L. Finley, Members Robert A. Campbell, Hugo W. Miller, and Clerk A. Dumbauld. Minutes of previous meeting were read and approved as read.

Mr. Wingo appeared before the Board with reference to road work on the Ruby road on the Forest Reserve. Mr. Wingo asked to know about the amount that the county would have to expend upon this road in order that he might take up the matter with the Supervisor of the Forest and try to get a like amount from them.

It was the opinion of Mr. Wingo that two men regularly upon this road to rub out six months would put the road in fairly good condition. The matter of the amount of wages to be paid on this work was raised and, after discussion of this, the following motion was made:

Motion of Miller, seconded by Campbell, that the county provide for three months' work by two men and that the Forest meet this with three months' work of two men, the matter of wages to be left with Mr. Wingo and Mr. Campbell for adjustment and arrangement agreeable to the forest and the county.

Mrs. Ada Jones appeared before the board with reference to taxes on her property and after discussion of the facts as stated by Mrs. Jones the matter was held for future action and consideration.

The Clerk of the Board was duly authorized to stop payment on the following warrants: No. 242 for $99.78 and No. 246 for $93.75 on the road fund and payable to Roy & Titcomb, Inc., and to issue duplicate warrants in payment of the above amounts as the above warrants were reported lost in transit.

The following Notarial Bonds were presented by the Clerk of the Court for approval of the Board: F. Frank Smith, H. J. Garrett, Winifred Plagera and Jesse Dunbar. The same were approved and ordered filed with the Clerk of the Court.

The following monthly reports of county and precinct officials were presented: Superintendent of Health, County Attorney, County Recorder, Clerk of Court, Assessor, Sheriff, and J. P. Prentiss No. 1, and the County Treasurer.

The superintendent of outdoor indigent relief reported the county indigents as follows with amount of monthly allowance to each:

PARTY FROCK THAT IS IN FAVOR; STAMP BLOUSE WITH GAY COLOR

IF THE crystal globe of fashion-design reveals the future truly to those who peer into its depths to learn of "styles to be," then assuredly this summer will see chiffon enthroned as the reigning fabric for evening frocks. At this very moment dance and party dresses are unfolding a continuous and fascinating story of diaphanous georgette crepes and chiffons, always with the shoulder bouquet playing its part of coquetry and loveliness. It is peach-

Perhaps the tulle blouse is indebted to the ensemble suit for the honors showered upon it this season. This much is sure, the blouse and the tulle are topics supreme in the season's modes. Paris is content to keep coats and matching skirts severely simple, letting the blouse receive the full force of lavish touches and decorative features.

The French couturier has the gift of saying much in little. That is why colored georgette, touched with the magic of the stylized art which accounts for the charm of the party dress in the picture. Even our party dresses flaunt a flowing necktie, for neckties are a very important trimming item this season. Artificial orchids are worn on the shoulder.

Sheer materials reign supreme throughout advance costume collections. Billowy masses of chiffon manifest in tiered circular ruffles on evening frocks, in insets of circular portions that make the skirt measure yards around the bottom; in voluminous bows of chiffon at the left hip-line and in countless other entrancing ways. Notwithstanding all this superfluity of transparent fabric, the effect as a whole is of extreme simplicity, for there is little or no trimming save the inevitable never-to-be-omitted shoulder bouquet. Another item, very important is the satin costume slip over which these frocks of transparency are posed. It must be nothing less than perfect, both as to color and fit.

Very many of the new chiffon frocks are trimmed in lace dyed an accurate match. Not only are airy-fairy delicately meshed silk laces used, but the woman of fashion takes joy in owning a blouse "from Paris." It is sure to have a cunning touch here and there which stamps its artistic origin. Even the simplest tailored blouse is not immune from a delightful appeal of subtle detail. For example, note the blouse to the right in this picture. In this model the artist resorts to tiny horizontal plaitings for molding the blouse to the figure. It is an excellent suggestion to carry out in one's tailored blouse, that is if one is not so favored as to be in a position to indulge in the purchase of the "original model." The thought is particularly valuable as it illustrates the tendency to get away from the short hip-band effect. The high turn-over collar, with its plaitings, likewise the box plait down the front and the cuffs, are tailored-looking without being severe.

The dressier blouse to the left shows the inevitable touch of embroidery. It also has a graceful way of evading the now passe high hip band, by means of an abbreviated skirt effect buttoned at the side.

Color is a subject of vital importance when it comes to the blouse or tunic. There is no such thing, this Deputy United States Marshal Celso Lopez announced in Santa Fe, N. M., that Mrs. Antonia Coriz de Montoya, 18-year-old widow of Jose Montoya of Cienega, a native hamlet six miles from Santa Fe, had confessed to poisoning her husband April 18.

Warrants for the arrest of H. S. McCluskey, secretary to Gov. G. W. P. Hunt, and George Eberle, purchasing agent of the Arizona Highway Department, were issued in Tucson, Ariz., by United States Commissioner Edwin S. Jones on complaint of M. P. Cosby, federal prohibition agent, who charged the two men with possession and transportation of liquor.

Charging that prisoners in the Churchill county jail have been permitted to go and come at will, to attend motion picture shows and in several instances were provided with keys to the jail to permit their entering the place at any hour they desired, contempt proceedings were filed in the Federal Court at Carson City, Nevada, directed against Sheriff J. R. Crane. The proceedings were filed by Assistant United States Attorney George Whiteley and were accompanied by affidavits signed by prohibition agents.

Bob Emmett and Sheldon Chalmers, both former residents of Utah, quarreled over a woman at Ely, Nev., and engaged in a pistol duel which resulted in Chalmers being instantly killed and Emmett dying of wounds. The two men are said to have been drinking and to have wrangled over a woman inmate of a notorious Ely resort. After a brief fistie encounter they decided to "shoot it out." The back yard of the Green Lantern resort was the battleground.

That New Mexico is likely to terminate her representation in the Rio Grande Interstate Compact Commission is stated to Secretary of Commerce Hoover, federal member, in a wire sent from Santa Fe by J. C. Seth, New Mexico member of the river board. He gives as a reason the recent action of Secretary of the Interior Work as alleged by New Mexico and Texas water users, in granting the permit for a 250,000-acre feet storage reservoir on the upper Rio Grande near Del Norte, Colo., in violation of alleged promises made to the southern water users.

Acceptance by President Coolidge of the resignation of Solicitor General Buck, expected to take effect at an early date, adds another prospective vacancy to four others already existing in important offices which are receiving the President's attention.

Federal surveyors have been directed to hasten a resurvey of the rich Garfield county, Colo., oil shale district, which the Interior Department stated is expected to reveal fraudulent mineral locations. The field has a potential oil output estimated at more than 100,000,000 barrels.

The election of Field Marshal von Hindenburg as president of Germany is a menace to world peace in the opinion of James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany. He characterized the election as a flat declaration by the German people of a return to militarism and monarchism.

The grand fleet of the United States exemplified the weakness of the defense of the island of Oahu, the purported center of the nation's web of defense in the Pacific, when it delivered its main attack in the joint army and navy maneuvers in the vicinity of Hailuwa, on the northwest coast of the island.

Announcement that the gold basis had been restored in England was acclaimed at the treasury as a reconstruction step second only to conclusion of the Dawes reparation plan. Prediction was made that other European nations soon would be enabled to restore the gold basis officially as a result of the British decision.

Maj. Frederick L. Martin, first commander of the army world flyers' expedition, and First Lieut. Leigh Wade and Leslie P. Arnold, members of that expedition, received recently the first distinguished service medals ever given for military service performed in time of peace. The presentation ceremonies took place at the War Department and were attended by officials representing the army, navy, state, treasury, commerce and post-office departments.

President Coolidge has submitted to vaccination against smallpox because of the prevalence of the disease in Washington. The affliction has cost nineteen lives in the capital since Jan. 1, and White House physicians finally prevailed upon the President to be inoculated as a precaution. At first White House physicians declined to comment on the vaccination report, but later they admitted it was true. All government employees in the District of Columbia have been requested by the public health service to submit to vaccination against smallpox.

Import duties on American corn have been suspended by the Mexican government for a period of two months beginning April 27.

The gold standard in England will be restored by a special license to the Bank of England to export gold bullion, it was announced by Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, in his budget speech in the House of Commons.

Hope that Germany by continuing to pursue a course toward an international understanding may soon regain the position in the world to which she is entitled, was expressed by ex-Chancellor Dr. Wilhelm Marx, defeated candidate for the German presidency, in a congratulatory telegram to President-elect von Hindenburg.

Clashes between armed factions in cities throughout the state of Sonora, Mexico, where municipal elections were held recently, caused a total of thirty-two deaths, it was announced in reports received by officials in Nogales, Ariz. Two men were killed in Nogales, Sonora, opposite Nogales, Ariz., when a mob plundered the polls two blocks from the international boundary.

That Von Hindenburg election to the German presidency may prove beneficial if it opens the eyes of the world to real sentiment of the German people was the opinion expressed in Paris in official circles, where the result of the polling caused no surprise. In the same quarter it was said that the large women's vote for the field marshal was deemed the most significant feature of the election.

Capt. Joseph E. Bernier, veteran arctic explorer, stated in Quebec that he was prepared to produce proofs of his assertion that climatic conditions were such as to make it highly impossible for Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, U. S. N., to make sufficiently accurate observations to verify his claim that he discovered the North Pole in 1909. "I have my own beliefs," Captain Bernier said, "and that is all there is to it."

Occupied farm land in Canada showed no fluctuation in 1924, remaining at an average value of $37 per acre, according to the report of the dominion bureau of statistics. The figures included improved and unimproved land as well as houses, barns and other farm buildings. British Columbia registered the highest average value of farm lands among the provinces, with $96 an acre. Others ranged from $53 an acre down to $24.

The city of Rheims, France, recently entered into possession of a fully equipped hospital for children, the gift of the women of America. The building, the first of a group of hospitals planned for construction just outside the city, costs $300,000 and there is an endowment fund of $900,000, insuring its maintenance as a permanent record of the American women's desire to benefit Rheims and at the same time keep alive the memory of the Americans who fell on French soil.

Horst's complaint charges his reputation was attacked by an article which he said was published by the California Liberator, the Anti-Saloon League's official journal.

The losses from fires in the United States last year approximated $500,000,000, according to Frank C. Jordan, Indianapolis, chairman of the joint fire prevention committee, reporting to the American Waterworks Association, in convention in Louisville, Ky.

Thousands of dollars of damage was done at Denison, Texas, when a terrific wind and rain storm blew cotton compress buildings across the M. K. & T. railroad tracks, damaging houses, flooding business buildings and severing communications. No lives were reported lost. Transportation on the Katy was blocked. Telegraph and telephone wires were snapped. Several churches were damaged.

Decision to send part of the United States fleet to Australia this summer was reached in pursuance of custom and should not cause alarm in any quarter, Secretary Wilbur declared in a letter to Frederick J. Libby, secretary of the national council for prevention of war. The latter had written Mr. Wilbur urging abandonment or sharp curtailment of the Australian cruise on the ground that it would be misunderstood abroad.

The Buchanan Bible bill, passed by the recent session of the Ohio General Assembly, to make daily reading of the Bible in all public schools of Ohio compulsory, was vetoed by Governor V. All men employed in road work in Gila county have been placed at the call of the officers of the Tonto and the Crook National forest. It was announced in Phoenix by F. L. Kirby, assistant supervisor of the Tonto forest.

With a view of finally determining the feasibility of destroying the thurberia cotton boll weevil in Arizona by means of wiping out the wild mountain cotton plants in infected areas, a thorough survey of the extent of this plant is now being made under government supervision, it was stated in Tucson by T. P. Cassidy, government entomologist, who is in charge of the work.

Geo. Strynham, alias George Dickson, Wallapai Indian, made a confession that he killed J. M. Cavell, Prescott taxicab driver, near Prescott, according to authorities in Kingman. The Indian, who is a grandson of the famous Chief Leveche and a nephew of the present chief by the name, was arrested in Kingman by Sheriff Mahoney when he was discovered driving the car owned by the slain man.

The International Trade Conference and Western Division Chamber of Commerce secretariat convention came to a close in Douglas after forming a resolution in opposition to the Mexican quota law and restrictions affecting the entrance of Mexican laborers into the United States. The final meets were held between secretaries of Arizona Chambers of Commerce and Mexican representatives from the states of Sonora and Chihuahua.

The Phoenix-Tempe Stone Company has been awarded the contract on state highway work between Benson and Bisbee, embracing the resurfacing of ten miles of asphalt paving from Tombstone south and ten miles of new paving extending from the end of the present surfacing. Rogers Bros. of Snowflake were awarded a contract for the grading and surfacing of four miles of highway in Tombstone canon. Bids for the ten miles of new paving were Phoenix-Tempe Stone Company, $857,759.55; White & Miller of Yuma, $116,649.06; W. J. Rand of El Paso, $103,053.43.

Nearly 2,000 persons participated in ceremonies at Poston Butte, two miles west of Florence, in dedication of a stone monument to Charles Debbelle Poston, termed "the father of Arizona," and one of the foremost pioneers of the state. The ceremonies were conducted under the auspices of the state historian's office and the Maricopa chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. On the program were Gov. George W. P. Hunt, State Historian Maj. George H. Kelly, who presided; former State Historian Col. James H. McClintock, and a number of others. The monument was erected on the butte upon which the pioneer once planned to erect a temple to the sun, for which he sought the aid of followers of Zoroaster in Persia. Remains of Poston are interred on the butte, where a stone monument bearing a copper tablet has been erected.

INCOME TAX TO BE CUT 12 PER CENT.

REVENUE COLLECTED EXCEEDS MARK SET BY EXPERTS
BY $8,000,000

INCOME EXCEEDS ESTIMATE

TREASURY OFFICIALS SEEK A PLAN TO REDUCE INCOME TAX NEXT YEAR

Washington.—Unofficial estimates by treasury officials indicate that a 12 per cent reduction in income taxes may be possible as the next steps in lifting the federal tax burden.

This figure, while calculated without intention to commit Secretary Mellon to any policy, was suggested on the basis of an incomplete analysis of returns on income taxes, under the present law as shown in the March or first quarterly installment. It would bear out previous estimates that another $2,000,000 total reduction could be made effective on taxes paid in 1925.

Present indications are that the treasury will avoid making any definite proposal to the next Congress when it is expected the tax question again will be alive. While Mr. Mellon has made no direct statement on the subject, most of his advisers favor keeping the treasury out of the fight; they are urging that the treasury inform Congress of the state of the finances and point out what is possible, thus leaving the whole question of rates for the congressional leaders to decide.

The first indication that another cut in income taxes was possible was given when the March installment exceeded the treasury's estimate, made last summer, about $8,000,000. Further evidence that total revenue receipts will be larger than originally estimated is given also in receipts from import tariffs, which just now are about $5,000,000 above the amount collected up to the same date in 1924.

Miscellaneous receipts, a general source of revenue from which it had been expected about $127,000,000 would be cut off through the reduction by the last law, have not dropped to that extent and the indications are that the decline will only slightly exceed $105,000,000. With larger receipts expected from the several sources than had previously been predicted, it was apparent to treasury officials that the surplus will be far greater during this and the next fiscal year than it had been apparent when the last budget figures were drawn up.

Some officials favor the application of the bulk of the next cut to the middle class incomes and those derived from business. Their argument was that the smaller income earners were given important relief in the last tax revision and that the class which is maintaining the flow of life blood in industry should be treated next. Should their views prevail, it would mean substantial cuts in incomes from $25,000 to perhaps as high as $200,000.

Autos Cause 19,000 Deaths in 1924

New York.—Automobiles caused 19,000 deaths and injuries to 450,000 persons in the United States in 1924, statistics made public by the national bureau of casualty and security underwriters, revealed here. This represents a daily average of fifty-two deaths and 5,650 injured. Notwithstanding the death toll, the largest ever reported, the bureau found signs of encouragement in a pronounced fall in the rate of increase of accidents. The increase in the number of deaths in 1923 over figures for 1922 was 20 per cent, while the increase in 1924 over the preceding year was only 4 per cent.

Five Drown as Boat Sinks

Muscatine, Iowa.—Five persons were drowned in the Mississippi river near Fairport, Iowa, six miles northeast of here, when a gasoline launch in which they were riding was swamped by a high wind and waves. The dead: Gus Dusenberry of Fairport, Iowa; his wife, Mrs. Ida Dusenberry, and three children: Charles, 12; Clifford, 6, and Tony, 3. Only the body of Mrs. Dusenberry was recovered by searchers. Four other occupants of the launch were saved by clinging to the overturned craft.

Herriot Re-elected in France

Paris.—Little change in the political complexion of France was perceptible from the first returns in the municipal elections held throughout the country. In Paris and the principal cities the outgoing councils in many cases were re-elected with only slight modifications. A notable exception, however, was Bordeaux, where the left blue defeated the outgoing Centrists. Edmond Herriot, former premier and now president of the chamber, was re-elected by a substantial majority in Lyons of which he is mayor.

Goodyear III Wins Balloon Race

St. Joseph, Mo.—W. T. Van Orman, piloting the Goodyear III, covered the greatest distance in the national championship balloon race which ended here when the last two bags came to earth. Van Orman landed at Reform, Ala., unstripping the veteran Capt. H. E. Honeywell by about forty miles. Captain Honeywell brought the St. Joseph down at Aberdeen, Miss. Van Orman and Captain Honeywell were the only contestants to remain in the air three days.

BRINGS YOUTH TO OLD FOLKS

One of Tanlac's greatest blessings is the new life and vigor it brings to old folks. Men and women up in the seventies and eighties are writing to us every day to thank us for Tanlac's wondrous benefits. Tanlac is a natural tonic. It drives poisons from the blood, stirs up the lazy liver and puts digestive organs in working order. Made after the famous Tanlac formula from roots, barks and rare herbs, it is nature's own tonic and builder—harmless to man or child. If your body is weakened and run-down, if you lack ambition, can't eat or sleep, you'll be delighted with Tanlac's quick results.

Flames Destroy Two Big Chicago Elevators

Two immense grain elevators at South Halsted street and the river, Chicago, were destroyed at night by one of the most spectacular and dangerous fires with which the Chicago firemen have contended for years. The elevators, which were full of grain, were under lease to the Grain Marketing company, a recently formed co-operative association of farmers, millers and elevator operators. The loss was put at $2,250,000.

THE DEATH DODGER

By HORACE R. HARRIS

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

A LEADEN sky became black; glistening sidewalks turned glassy; dripping eaves formed icicles; a raw atmosphere grew penetratingly cold; ice buzzed and broke into brilliancy.

Mobe Ryson shivered. His coat and trousers were shiny and thin. The tops of his shoes had survived and he wore socks, but they had holes. The frozen slush cut his feet. His hat had been a black felt. It was now a rusty rag.

Mobe had smiled through the smoke of his own revolver at the writhing of Officer McGann; smiled because he had beaten McGann to the draw. He had snarled at the judge who sentenced him to the chair. That he had smiled at locks and bars, the warden of a state penitentiary could testify.

Mobe fumbled a benumbed hand in his trousers pocket and drew forth a shiny dime. He pulled his cap down over his eyes, distorted his features and slunk into Hogan's club.

"Couple o' snids," he mumbled hoarsely, as he tossed the ten-cent piece to the bartender.

He drank the two glasses of beer, one after the other, in one breath each. Then he turned to the free-lunch counter and ate ravenously. He noticed a bounce glowering at his devouring appetite but paid no heed. Presently, satiated and warmed within by the malt-liquor, he looked up mockingly at the resentful bouncer and—made a direful mistake. He smiled.

Instantly Crouse and Renks, stool pigeon and plain-clothes man respectively, recognized Mobe, and simultaneously visions of the ten thousand golden dollars on Ryson's head flashed across the minds of the two men.

Hogan's club was a decidedly inconvenient place for an arrest by any less than the whole strong-arm squad. Some five weeks previous to this night the mutilated bodies of Detectives Randon and Clancy were found floating in the East river. They had been sent from headquarters after Red Zimmerman, who had been reported hiding at Hogan's club.

The expressionless faces of Crouse and Renks gave no sign of their discovery. They looked at one another as if casually. Renks finished his beer, wiped his mouth on his sleeve, and shuffled out of the saloon. Crouse ordered a whisky, drank it, put down his glass, and turned toward the lunch counter. Here he faced Ryson, and as he looked into Mobe's eyes his features simulated surprise and pleasure. But he quickly chided this mask to remember that he must be cautious not to reveal Mobe's identity to those around. He drew Mobe aside and asked him "why in h—!" he had come back to New York. He thrust a two-dollar bill in Mobe's hand and gave him his (Crouse's) address. As if by an after-thought Crouse suggested that they go to his abode for a little chat about a certain "job."

Mobe followed Crouse through the doors. The two had made their way some blocks and were just opposite an alley when Mobe suddenly turned and struck Crouse back of the ear with a short, leaded rubber club produced from up his sleeve. Mobe had understood the stool pigeon.

Mobe quickly rifled the pockets of the unconscious man and dragged him into the black night of the alley. Then, without a glance at the huddled form, he took to the streets again.

The crusty ice bit cruelly into the soles of his unprotected feet and the piercing cold wind penetrated his thin garments so that his flesh became fairly blue.

He was under the "L" and almost breathing freely when the shrill blast of a police whistle startled him to instant flight. Three flashes numbered his pursuers before the well-nigh simultaneous reports reached Mobe's ears.

A half a block away the sleepy chauffeur of a belated empty taxicab became suddenly aware of something hard pressed against his left side. This was the first intimation that someone shared the front seat with him.

"Turn left next block, then speed er. Squeal an' I crank yer."

The driver needed no coaxing. The taxicab rattled and jolted along at a good thirty-mile clip until they reached Broadway.

"Right," Mobe emphasized the command with a nudge.

Up through the wholesale and business district, up to Manhattan's twinkling white night, sped the car.

"Left," Mobe directed at Fifty-second street, and at Eighth avenue and Fifty-second street the driver found the seat beside him empty.

A few hundred feet beyond the spot where Mobe had slipped noiselessly from his seat beside the chauffeur, one of the three men who had whispered together by a big pillar of the "L" down in the East side, dropped from the rear of the taxicab just quitted by Ryson and rolled to the gutter. It was Renks.

Mobe turned up toward Columbus circle. Renks followed.

There was a skyscraper in construction. The steel skeleton reached many stories above the already bricked walls. The floors were in up to the top of the structure and ladders led from floor to floor. Mobe entered the building. Renks, now accompanied by an officer, watched him climb the ladder leading to the second floor. Mobe waited for several minutes and then made his way up the ladder leading to the third floor. Hence he climbed higher and higher until he had passed ten stories. In the dim light from the flare of Broadway, with all the care and caution of the far-northern hunter of the silver fox, the two men mounted after him.

Mobe was just relaxing his bone-tired body on a bed of gunny sacks when he caught the gleam of an eye peering over the head of the ladder which he had climbed to this floor. Immediately he was on his feet and rushing toward the rear of the building. Renks scrambled after him only to sink to his knees in horror as Mobe leaped wildly from the unvalued floor straight out into the blackness of the eleven-story drop.

The two shaken men made their way down the ladders and hastened around the skyscraper to gather up Mobe Ryson's poor crushed remains. They found the remains—of a smoldering gunny sack.

A glance overhead explained. High above, where ribs of the great building were still growing, a derrick stretched out its strong arm to hoist the huge girders to place. The cable of the derrick extended to the ground. As Mobe jumped out into the air he had grasped the cable and, using part of his intended couch as a wheelless trolley, had slid to the ground unhurt except for a pair of scorched hands. The friction had fired the gunny sack.

A black sky became a radiant blue; glassy sidewalks began to steam; icicles started dripping; a freezing atmosphere turned moderately warm; the sun blazed with blinding splendor.

Mobe Ryson blinked, rubbed his eyes, and yawned. He looked around his bedchamber, the public bathroom of a West Sixtieth street boarding house, whither he had crept unobserved the night before, but he saw nothing available to him in any way. He stood up, stretched himself, and carefully unlocking the door, stole down the hall and out the front entrance.

Mobe walked deliberately up to Broadway and started downtown on the great thoroughfare. The headlines on a newspaper, "Ryson Grins Again," caught his eye. He stopped and, with his hands in his pockets, stood reading the paper, which topped one of the piles of dailies arranged on the sidewalk by the newsboy.

Suddenly there was a rumbling sound on a roof above, and a large piece of ice bounded over the eaves and came grating and flashing in the sunlight in its dash to the ground. At a cry of warning, Mobe looked up in time to catch the jagged mass full in the forehead.

The doctor shook his head at the plying faces of those crowded around. "Poor devil, he's done for."

"By a chunk of ice, too, Doc, me by a chunk of ice!" murmured Mobe as his face broke into his wonderful smile and his soul went out to solve the Great Mystery.

Jones, of the World, stared in amazement.

"Who is he?" queried the man standing next to him.

"Why," replied the reporter, still gazing in astonishment at the glazing eyes, "why, one of the greatest criminals on the police records. It is Mobe Ryson."

"And," mused Jones, "they called him the Death Dodger."

Harp Probably First of All Sweet Sounds

The harp comes down the ages to us with a halo of reverent radiance around it which no other musical instrument can rival. It sends us back to the beginning of history, and there close on the bedrock of narrative of the material creation we discover its origin in the brilliant intellect of Jubal, son of Lamech and Adah, centuries before the flood. He was the "father of all such as handle the harp and organ."

We can reconstruct in imagination the fertile plains of Mesopotamia, with all their beauty of foliage, says a writer in the Christian Science Monitor. "And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food." The orange and the citron; the apple and the plum; the graceful, waving acacia and palms of many kinds. All the varied tribes of smaller fruits and flowers are hung luxuriously around; cucumbers, dates and melons and scarlet pomegranates; roses and naryles and lilies and all the bright colors of giant convolvul.

Away in the distance the soft blue atmosphere reveals the faint outlines of a mountainous region, from which flowed the sparkling rivers which enriched the land of Havilah. "The gold of that land is good; there is bdellium and the onyx stone."

Doubtless, then as nowadays, the music of the harp, newly invented, had charms to soothe and to bring calm to harassed hearts.

Bed of Rio Grande

In Colorado and New Mexico the Rio Grande occupies various valleys, some of which are old and some new. The greater part of its present channel, however, especially below El Paso and across the coastal plain of Texas is geologically recent. Higher terraces bordering the valley in most places in Texas indicate the existence of a large stream in the earlier part of Pleistocene and even late Tertiary time that may be regarded as a predecessor of the Rio Grande, but probably not having the present watershed of that river.

POULTRY FACTS

POULTRY DAMAGED BY DISINFECTANTS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

As a result of the widespread use of cheap coal tar products with a strong carbolic acid odor for disinfecting poultry houses and coops, large quantities of poultry contaminated with the odor have been received at some of the big markets. The bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, has received complaints from handlers of market poultry who have suffered heavy losses because of the unsalability of tainted fowl, one large firm reporting a loss of $10,000 on four cars.

Because of the appearance of European fowl pests in certain parts of the country, farmers throughout the East and Middle West, through fear of this disease, have been doing much more disinfecting than usual. In many instances chemicals with strong and offensive odors have been used, many of them not in the list approved by the department, and in some cases the results have been aggravated by the failure to dilute the product. Birds kept in houses so treated, or shipped in crates reeking with the odors, absorb them into their bodies, where they remain after the birds have been killed and dressed. It is thought that another source of the contamination in dressed birds may have been feed on which the chemicals have been sprayed. When such penetrating odors are present in the disinfectant used the birds should not be marketed within less than two weeks of the time it was used and then not in crates recently so treated.

Coops and poultry houses should always be thoroughly cleaned before disinfecting. A good plan is where possible to scrub the interior with hot lye solution or scalding hot water. Such cleaning solutions are themselves good disinfectants. If scalding hot water is not available, the coops may be disinfected with a 4 per cent solution of formaldehyde. While this disinfectant has a very pungent, disagreeable smell, the odor soon disappears. If the poultry are marketed for several weeks a three per cent solution of compound solution of cresol or a product of similar composition may be employed. Any coal tar disinfectant is apt to leave an odor which will gradually disappear.

Many cheap products are now being sold in response to the unusual demand which has arisen since the appearance of the fowl pest. In certain sections peddlers are taking advantage of the situation and are going to the farms with a great variety of cheap disinfectants, sometimes doing the work for the farmer. Some of them are selling strong smelling by-products from local gas plants.

The department wishes to encourage efforts at disease prevention, even though much of this work is being done in regions far removed from any point where fowl pest has been found, but urges farmers to use the above-mentioned methods, which will not leave a taint in the fowls when offered to the consumer.

Sodium Fluorid Useful in Treating Poultry

Sodium fluorid is an insecticide used in treating poultry for lice by placing just a small bit of it at different points in the feathers of the fowl where lice are usually found. Although it is a poisonous substance, the poultry do not seem to get enough of it into their digestive system to cause trouble. If used on cattle there would be more danger of poisoning, because cattle would be more likely to get it into their digestive system by licking themselves.

For cattle a mixture of one-half powdered kabadilla seed and one-half sulphur is favored. This can be spread along the backs and necks of cattle where the lice are most likely to be, and will be found quite effective in keeping them in check so that they will cause very little trouble to the cattle.

Poultry Facts

Capitalize the cockerels. Goslings never eat much during the first few days.

Chicks given the right kind of start in life have many advantages over those receiving only indifferent care.

It is very important not to feed the points too heavily, especially the first few weeks. Keep them just a little hungry.

Buttermilk is an almost indispensable food for growing chicks and may be given in any one of a number of forms.

Chicks which are well grown and matured are the ones which make profitable layers during the coming winter.

Young turkeys seem to have a great fondness for new corn when it is just past the milk stage, and they probably could not get anything that is worse for them if they wanted to.

American Rights in the Far North

Donald MacMillan makes an interesting suggestion when he urges the Washington government to assert its claim to lands near the North pole. It will be remembered that under the terms of our treaty with Denmark a few years ago the little Scandinavian country received an undisputed title to the immense area of Greenland, while we took over the territorially insignificant Virgin Islands and paid $25,000,000 into the bargain. Now, says Professor MacMillan, Denmark's foothold in Greenland may prove embarrassing if the United States ever happens to want landing zones for airships in that part of the world, comments the Providence Journal.

The Canadian government has asserted its sovereignty over the great northern islands west of Greenland, but we have been singularly indifferent to the potential value of all these white wildernesses. And yet Americans have composed the most distinguished company of Arctic adventurers. Who is so wise as to say that United States territory at the pole may not be worth something to us some day under the new system of globe-circling transportation that will eventually become a commonplace?

Quail Food

Quail take particular delight in a feast of mulberries, is the finding of biologists working upon quail investigations in the Southern states. On several occasions quail were observed to fly directly from their nests to the upper branches of a mulberry tree, eat their fill and return immediately to their incubation.

HERE'S ONE CONTRIBUTED BY A WOMAN, OF COURSE

Woman's reputation as a "good sport" has never amounted to much. She can't take a joke on herself; she is not a good loser in either love or business; she won't take her punishment standing if there is a chance to run; and she hasn't the "spirit" of a gambler.

And yet—when the car breaks down three miles from the roadhouse and food, who is the one that raves an uproar and acts like a baby deprived of its bottle? And who is the "good sport" that forces a smile and points out the beauty of the scenery to distract his attention from his hunger?

Who is it that pretends to like her steak rare because "he" likes it that way, and to prefer the back and wings of the chicken so that he can have most of the white meat?

Who is the "good sport" when the picnic lunch runs low, so that "he" can have the last sandwich and the last piece of pie while she nibbles a tea-cake?

Who is it that jumps on the water when the chop is burned and then lunge around in his chair like a whole menagerie when he has to wait 15 minutes for another?

Who is the "good sport" that lies on the edge of the country hotel bed all night and pretends to sleep, so that her 175-pound spouse can wallow in the sunken trough in the middle and get his beauty sleep?

Who is it that gets out of bed on an icy morning to shut off the alarm clock, turn on the radiator, put down the window and pull up the shades, so that her spoiled darling will have a nice, warm, comfy room to dress in?

Who is it that doesn't "care for" the Morris chair, never wants to lie down on the couch evenings, cheerfully does her reading on the wrong side of the bridge-lamp, foregoes her morning shower and lets her coffee get cold while she finds his brief case and fixes his eggs?

It is that "good sport," the Average Wife!

In war, in business, in a game or a fight, a man may be "the better sport"—but in all the thousand and one little situations in life that affect his appetite, his comfort and his patience, he is as peevish and unreasonable as a prima donna.—Tucson Star.

PROGRESSIVE THINKING

"Because a town is small there is no reason why its citizens should feel that it is small, for when a people have that feeling they never do much to make a small town grow. Los Angeles would not be Los Angeles today if her people 50 years ago had concluded that this was only a small place and would never amount to much. That sort of sentiment has held back many a town. The chamber of commerce in a small town has just as important business to perform as has a civic organization in a larger city.

"This magazine publishes news items concerning development work in outside communities. Only too frequently the editor receives a communication from some secretary in a small town, saying: 'As you realize, this is only a small place and there is not much doing here in the way of news.' That expression creates two impressions. One is that there is something sadly lacking in the makeup of the civic organization that should be pushing ahead, and the other impression is that the people live what they have. If they did appreciate their surroundings they would be getting down to work, and work produces results, and results produce

WORKMAN'S COMPENSATION ACT FOR ARIZONA BEST IN U. S.

Arizona is to be congratulated upon the new accident compensation law awaiting ratification at the September elections. It is so far superior to the present outgrown Arizona act that its rejection would be little short of a tragedy for the injured wage-earners of the state. At the same time it abolishes one of the most frequent causes of friction and litigation against the employer.

The requirement that employers insure their compensation risk, while opportunity to insure more economically through a competitive public fund, and the creation of an administrative commission are gains whose importance can hardly be exaggerated. Without security of payment and adequate administration the social purpose of compensation legislation is in a large measure defeated. Reaching this, 37 American states provide for administrative commissions and 42 require insurance of compensation risks, 17 of them providing additional protection both for employers and workers through state insurance funds. These changes alone, without a single increase in benefits, would make the new Arizona statute a vast improvement.

But providing, in addition, for the standard seven-day "waiting period" after the injury and a 65 per cent benefit scale, the proposed statute when put into effect, will be not only an improvement over the old, but will rank as one of the most liberal compensation laws in the country.

The provisions of this law are, moreover, reasonable and in line with successful experience in other states. Nineteen American laws provide a benefit scale of 65 per cent or more; 36 have standard waiting periods of seven days or less. A dozen laws allow medical benefits considerably more liberal than those thus provided in Arizona.

Having provided liberal benefits which by constitutional guarantee can not be reduced without popular consent, the legislature wisely adopted an almost universal practice and made the compensation the exclusive remedy unless this modern protection has been specifically rejected by the worker before the injury. Thus a friction-provoking and expensive provision of the old law is eliminated while employees are at the same time guaranteed continuous and adequate protection. This is beneficial to employers and workers alike.

This new measure, combining the best features of American compensation acts, should become one of the most satisfactory compensation laws in the country. Ratification of the constitutional amendment in September is necessary before this excellent compensation measure can be put into effect. Its adoption by the voters will be another forward step in the interests of the general welfare.

ADVERTISE, SAYS HODGE

Advertising has become a leading factor in decreasing the cost of public utility service to the consumer, and has shortened by half the time that would have been required without it to reach the present state of public service development, declares William H. Hodge, president of the Public Utilities Advertising Association. "No advertising of necessities is defensible that does not produce a public benefit," he says. "Public utilities advertising has played a leading role in public utility development. It has brought the advantages of these services to millions.

"Find a poorly developed utility situation, usually with high service rates, and you will find a non-advertising utility imperfectly meeting public requirements. Look for the town or territory with good service, fully served population and industries, reasonable rates, harmonious public relations, and you will invariably find utilities that believe in and practice advertising on a liberal, intelligent basis.

"There is no more possibility of making a success out of the utility business in this age minus advertising than there is in trying to get along without good engineers, capable accountants and auditors, salesmen, and trained workers."

You will find that it always pays to work and smile overtime.

Being an easy mark saves a lot of wear and tear on the disposition.

In looking through this magazine there will be found items of interest concerning some very small communities, because the people of those communities are active and have faith in their towns, and as a result those small towns some day are going to be large towns while other small towns whose citizens have no faith in them will always remain small. Big things were never produced on a foundation of small ideas. —Southern California Business, published by Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

PERMISSIBLE NEGLIGENCE?

If you carelessly ran over a man with your automobile, it is probable that you would have to pay him damages for your carelessness.

In every walk of life a man is held responsible for his careless act if it causes injury to others—except in case of fire. An individual can carelessly burn up $100 of his own property and $100,000 worth of his neighbor's and nothing is said. The city may spend $1000 or $10,000 of taxpayers' money to put out the fire. Owners of tenement houses, hotels and rooming houses can maintain absolute fire traps with open stairways which act as flues for a fire in the building, thus cutting off means of escape for occupants. Such buildings, born down daily and we calmly read of the persons killed in the fire "which originated from some unknown cause" and think no more about it. We pay no attention to the fact that the building and the construction of its stairways offered visible proof that if arrested at the structure it meant almost sure death to some of the occupants.

"Thousands of cities permit this class of construction and when persons are burned to death through the criminal negligence of an owner and a city permitting the use of such a firetrap, nothing is said and no damages are collected.

The whole process of the law will be set in motion to collect $100 for a man who has had a finger broken in an automobile accident. But 15,000 persons can be burned to death annually in the United States, many of them through the criminal negligence of property owners in maintaining firetraps, and not a complaint is uttered.

TIME TO WAKE UP

Suppose some legislator had the temerity to suggest that all future issues of public utility bonds should be tax-exempt because such companies furnish communities with an essential service and if taxed the customer has to pay increased rates?

This is no more absurd than present laws that exempt from taxation all bonds issued for municipal and state undertakings for whatever purpose.

Municipalities and states do not actually save any more money by this type of financing. Somebody must pay the cost of government. When you exempt the income of one man from taxation, you simply shift his burden to others and yet the tax-exempt bond farce is continued on the theory that the taxpayer is saving money thereby.

CONSERVATIVE LABOR LEADERS

All indications point to the fact that organized labor in our country is entering upon more conservative paths.

Under the leadership of William Green, the new president of the A. F. of L., there will be an even more consistently conservative course than under Samuel Gompers.

President Green was one of the federation's executive minority that opposed the league with the Third Party in the late presidential campaign.

President Green's slogan is not politics but concentrated effort to improve the economic and legal status of the American working class. This is sound Americanism from the standpoint of both capital and labor.

FOREST FIRE PREVENTION

American Forest Week should annually become one of the most important events in each of our states. This nation's future depends upon an everlasting supply of timber.

For four years the United States Forest Service has directed observance of Forest Protection Week. This year it felt that the best interests of forestry would be served by transferring observance of the week to non-governmental agencies. As a result, various organizations all over the United States are taking an interest in the matter. Lumber manufacturers' associations have rendered particular assistance.

The American public is one of the greatest offenders in forest destruction because of its carelessness with fire. If it can be awakened to its responsibility as the best guardian of its own forest resources, the first big step will have been taken in reforestation, as the young trees will have a chance to grow without being blighted by thousands of forest fires which this nation now has annually.

Ruins—Human and Others

The American heiress had just come back from her first trip to Europe. At dinner her neighbor inquired: "Did you see many picturesque old ruins during your trip?"

"Yes," she replied. "And six of them proposed to me."—Irish Weekly Times.

AMERICAN GRAPEFRUIT IN GROWING DEMAND ABROAD

There has been a remarkable growth this past winter in the popularity of American grapefruit in England and Scotland, reports Edwin Smith, foreign representative of the department of agriculture. Although London is the center of grapefruit distribution in Europe, direct shipments have been made also to Glasgow and Liverpool.

The wholesale trade in cities like Manchester and Birmingham have stated to Mr. Smith that three years ago only the fancy fruiterers in the better shopping districts were customers for grapefruit. During the past winter the small green grocers have been putting in the fruit in response to demand from both city and suburban residents.

Some very fine fruit has been received from Florida, and there is considerable preference for this fruit as compared with that from South Africa. Grapefruit from Arizona is also well liked because it is seedless and sweet. Although some customers like a russet fruit, the trade preference is strongly in favor of brights and sizes running 80 and 96 to the box.

A few British fruit distributors are advertising grapefruit through posters and the daily newspapers, but grapefruit advertising is not receiving the attention that it should receive in Great Britain, Mr. Smith says. The Fruit Traders' Federation is spending approximately $150,000 a year in its "Eat More Fruit" campaign on oranges, apples, bananas and other fruits, and this is indirectly increasing grapefruit consumption. Advertising contributions, however, are on the basis of 1 cent per package on all fruits imported, and the present contributions from grapefruit receipts are not great enough to justify special posters and window strips for this fruit.

If the American grapefruit industry could arrange for a special advertising fund, Mr. Smith says, the Fruit Traders' Federation could administer the money in an effective manner toward increasing grapefruit consumption. The federation is working in close cooperation with retailers in Great Britain, so that a good opportunity exists for American distributors to reach the entire retail trade through the federation.

Connecting Radio Dry Cell Batteries

There are several tubes on the market of different voltages, and the novice is often perplexed just how to connect the dry cells to suit the tubes. The WD-11 and 12 tubes are 1½-volt tubes, and operate on one or more dry cells, one cell being usually provided for each tube. If two or more cells are used for more than one tube, they are connected in parallel, as shown in Fig. 1. No matter how many dry cells are connected together in this way, the total voltage always remains 1½. For 3-volt tubes, as UV-199 and C-299, the required voltage is obtained by connecting two dry cells in series, as shown in Fig. 2. With this arrangement the positive of one cell is connected to the negative of the other. When two or more 3-volt tubes are used, it is good practice to use two dry cells for each tube, connecting them in series-parallel, as shown in Fig. 3. This gives 3 volts and a maximum amperage. A higher voltage than that for which a tube is designed should never be used, and the filaments should never be burned brighter than needed for good results.

Automobiles Built in Queer Shapes to Save Space and Weight

Bodies of automobiles are being built in fantastic designs to accommodate developments of machinery parts and to give the cars artistic lines. One such model exhibited in Berlin consists of a sedan on which all corners have been eliminated producing a flat appearance when seen from a short distance. It is claimed this type is suitable for advertising purposes since a great amount of space is provided for signs and painted inscriptions. Another light-weight vehicle has been constructed with an enormous hood which causes the car to resemble a whale. Only three wheels are provided, a single one being under the forward part of the machine. Steering is done in the usual way.

Removing Paint and Varnish

The most efficient method of removing old paint and varnish is to burn the surface with a painter's blowtorch. The heat causes the film to soften and it can then be scraped off easily. This method, however, can only be used on flat surfaces, and where a slight scorching of the wood is not objectionable. A hot solution of caustic soda (concentrated lye), 1 lb. to the gallon of water, is also efficient. This should be applied with a fiber (not bristle) brush until the paint softens. This solution is very hard on the hands, and also raises the grain of the wood, and surfaces treated with it should be thoroughly washed and dried before repainting.

A Good Drying Oil

To ½ gal. of water add 1 lb. of sugar of lead (poison—lead acetate). Shake occasionally, and when the lead is dissolved add 2 qt. of water; then filter the solution and add 3 gal. of raw linseed oil. Stir in 1 lb. of powdered bismuth, shake it often and then let it stand for several days. The oil found on top will be the drying oil, and it must be poured off into another vessel. The liquid is clear and bright and dries in about 24 hours.

Whitewashing Trees

When trees in an orchard are whitewashed it looks much better to have the sprayed parts all of uniform height. This can be done by using a strip of oilcloth, about 12 in. wide and long enough to encircle the largest trees. One end of the strip is tacked to the end of a pole as shown in the drawing, the pole being 2½

ft. longer than the height of the part to be whitewashed. After the strip is wrapped around the tree a few turns, the sprayer can be used and there will be no ragged edge when finished.

FIFTEEN RULES FOR MOTHERS

If a child does not eat the proper foods, it may be the mother's fault. Dr. Douglas A. Thom, child specialist, says in the May Hygeia that mothers should ask themselves the following questions to see if they are making any of the mistakes indicated:

1. Do you fret about what your child eats and whether he is getting enough? If so, very likely at every mealtime you make him the star actor in a little drama, and every child likes to be the center of attention.
2. Do you talk about his eating habits to other persons in his presence? If so, any child would feel important and want to keep up being different.
3. Do you insist on feeding him after he is old enough to feed himself just because it is easier than to teach him? Better let him spill a little until he learns, than to become dependent and fretful.
4. Is some one else in the family very particular about his foods? Of course, a child likes to imitate older persons.
5. Do you choose plain, nourishing, easily digested foods and cook them well?
6. Do you let your child taste everything that grown persons have? A child used to having tea, coffee and highly seasoned foods and too many sweets has lost a healthy appetite.
7. Do you serve food as attractively as you can and not in too large quantities?
8. Do you feed your child regularly? A child cannot go too long without food, but eating between meals means that his little stomach is overworked.
9. Do you find that he sleeps poorly, is irritable, has violent tempers or strange fears? If so, not only his eating but his other habits are probably disarranged.
10. Do you know that a child who is angry, fearful or worried cannot digest food properly? Overcome the emotion first and then let him eat.
11. Do you create an unpleasant scene in an effort to make him eat?
12. Do you create jealousy by denying to one child what another has? The child who is refused what the other children have should know why.
13. Do you try to show your authority by making a child eat anything just because you say so? It is better to show that you are reasonable and expect him to be; that you consult his preferences when you can, but if a food is needed for health, he must try to learn to like it.
14. Do you suggest to the child your own doubt as to whether he is going to eat? A child is quick to refuse if he senses that you expect him to, and as quick to eat what is offered without question.
15. Are you so afraid of your child's missing a meal that when he refuses what you give him you provide something else? Missing a meal will not hurt him. Leave the food 20 or 30 minutes and then take it away and give nothing else until the next meal.

MUCH NONSENSE ABOUT FOOD AND RHEUMATISM

Food never causes true rheumatism, but a poorly balanced diet may be a factor in the disease.

The above statement by a recognized authority on diet, Dr. Solomon Strouse, is in direct contradiction to the idea held by many persons that diet, particularly a meat diet, often causes rheumatism.

Much nonsense and much unproved tradition has entered and obscured the field of food and rheumatism, writes Dr. Strouse. You hear about meat causing rheumatism, about acids in the food being harmful; those who so talk do not know what acid foods are. Meats are acid foods because after they are burned up in the furnace of the body their ashes are acid, and occasionally an excessive meat eater may complain of pains in various parts of the body. Fruits, even sour grapefruit juice, are not acid, because when they are burned in the body their chemical effect is the opposite of acid.

Overeating to the point of obesity is harmful in many ways. The extra weight may put an extra strain on joints and make them susceptible to the poison of rheumatism. That kind of arthritis called gout is common in high livers and heavy drinkers, but such a thing as "poor man's gout" also exists.

STATE CONVENTION OF PEACE OFFICERS MEET IN PHOENIX

Phoenix.—The state convention of peace officers just held in Phoenix discussed the question of public safety on the highways of Arizona and the matter of insufficient lights on automobiles and other vehicles using the highways after dark received much attention.

Sheriff Johnnie Moore of Maricopa county has recently started a crusade against automobile drivers on the public roads after dark with bad lights that has resulted in the arrests of nearly 100 drivers.

Manager Charles Kimberlin of the Automobile Club of Arizona, who had much to do with getting public safety legislation passed during the last session of the state legislature, says that the law is clear requiring each automobile to carry two front lights, properly focused, and one rear light which shall be so hung as to illuminate the license plate on the rear of the automobile.

Manager Kimberlin also calls attention to other vehicles, horse-drawn and bicycles being required to show proper lights after dark. This light matter is a matter of public safety on the highways and peace officers of this state have no other course than to enforce it.

Kimberlin advises every automobile owner to visit a reliable garage and have his car inspected, the lights and brakes properly adjusted for his own safety as well as that of others.

The fatal accident on Fish Creek in April 4, in which two lives were lost, would not have happened if the brakes had worked properly when needed.

ALIENS BARRED FROM ARIZONA HIGHWAYS

Phoenix.—The state highway department has issued a ruling declaring that the provision of the highway law declaring that workers shall be paid "not less than the current rate per diem wages in the locality where work is performed," means the rate established and paid by the board of supervisors in the county where the work is performed.

Engineer W. C. Lefebvre has sent a marked copy of the state highway laws to all contractors citing the provision that "no person not a citizen or ward of the United States or who has not declared his intention to become a citizen shall be employed upon or in connection with any state, county or municipal works or employment."

He was hoarse with passion. But as he tried to seize her in his arms again, she drew away suddenly, stopped—and then he saw that she had a hunting knife in her hand.

"Listen to me now, James Rathway," she said, still speaking in the same strained, monotonous tone. "I shall never be yours. I shall kill myself first. I would have fulfilled my compact in the spirit and the letter, and you fulfilled yours. But I didn't trust you. I suspected that you were tricking me—as you were."

"That's a lie. I didn't trick you. Put down that knife!"

"It's not a lie. You tricked me twice. The first time you forced me into a marriage with you by the threat that unless I consented you would betray my father to the police. I married you, and still you betrayed him."

"I did not. Someone else must have done so. Why should I have betrayed him? He was my friend."

"You were the only man who knew his secret. Then the second time, knowing that I would never live with you, you sent me a lying message to lure me up here, saying that you held my father in your power. You knew that nothing else on earth would bring me up to you. And it was a lie, because my father has been dead for months past."

Rathway's face blanched. "I don't believe that story. How do you know?"

"He died in his mine. His body lies at the bottom of it, where he was stricken. If you did not know that he was dead, at least you were lying when you said he was in your power."

"He lies—at the bottom—the bottom of the mine?" Rathway stammered.

"I—I didn't know." He seemed to shake off a sort of stupor. He tried to take her hand.

"Joyce, if I did lie to you, it was only because I love you. God, think of the years I've loved you, Joyce! I've given all my life to the hope of winning you. Isn't a woman touched by the thought of that? All that I've ever done, since that day when I first saw you in your father's house, has been for you. And now I've got you, and you tell me you will never—"

He was pressing toward her, but she held the dagger pointed at him, and he stopped, afraid of the look in her eyes.

"Joyce, don't be foolish. Put that knife away. What do you mean to do?"

"Kill you and then myself, if you lay a hand on me again. I've told you I shall never live with you."

"By heaven, I'll kill him if you go to him!"

"I shall not go to him. That is why I sent him away. I shall go away alone."

"Joyce, listen to sense. Do you realize that you are my wife? That I can hold you by force, and there is no law in the dominion to prohibit me, and no man who would not approve? Joyce, be sensible. If you're still in love with this man, Anderson, I'm willing to wait till you've forgotten him a little. Lord, I've waited long enough for you! But I'll wait longer if I have to."

"Don't you see how foolishly you're acting," he pleaded. "Don't you realize how much better off you're going to be with a husband who is rich and devoted to you? Your father never took a penny out of that mine all these years. There must be a hundred thousand dollars' worth of gold dust there—perhaps a million. Can't you see the old boy working night after night like a beaver, to make you and me rich?"

And he threw back his head and uttered his hyena laugh again. But Joyce said nothing at all, and he added:

"I suppose you know it all belongs to me, as your husband, under the law, and that if you leave me you don't get a penny of it?"

"Well?"

"Well? I thought you mightn't understand. How far from here is the mine?"

"I don't know."

He burst into a spasm of fury. "By heaven, I'm going to make you know! Do you think you're going to keep the secret of my own mine from me? I tell you I meant to have it from the first moment that your father began dropping his hints, the old fool. It was to find out about it that I stayed on with him year after year."

"I've always known that."

Rathway stared at her. He was staggered by the quiet, indifferent manner of her speaking. He had not believed her before. He had been so confident when he sent her for her, under the pretext of having her father at his mercy, that she could solve the secret which he had never been able to solve himself.

Yet now it began to occur to him as a probability that Joyce had never known the secret. He had taken too much for granted. If she had not known it when she went south, as had certainly been the case, how could she have learned it since?

And all his plans seemed suddenly defeated.

"You say you don't know where the mine is? Ah, but you told me your father's lying at the bottom of it!" he cried suddenly. "Who found him there?"

"Mr. Anderson."

"He knows, then? Your lover knows and your husband doesn't? If you mean to say it wasn't you who told him?"

"I've told him nothing, because I know nothing. He found the mine and found my father's body there. He hasn't told the secret to me, and I don't want to know."

An extraordinary look came over Rathway's face, the look of the fox, the wolverine. He seemed to reflect—and suddenly he pounced.

In an instant he had gripped Joyce by the arms, imprisoning the hand that held the knife. With a laugh he tore the hand open, took out the knife, and thrust it into his belt. He strained the girl against him.

"I've had enough of this nonsense, my dearie!" he cried triumphantly. "You're going to make that lover of yours tell you the secret of the mine. You'll do it when you've learned to love me. And, by heaven, I'm going to make you!"

She screamed and bent furiously at his face, impotent in his grasp. They wrestled to and fro. So violent was the girl's resistance that for a moment or two she held Rathway at bay, bending her fists in his face again and again, and drawing blood from his nose and lips.

The fury of her resistance only made her the more desirable in his eyes. He held her fast now, her arms forced to her sides again, his bloodshot eyes leering into hers, his black beard sweeping her cheek.

In the room they had taken at the rear of the house the three men, who were drinking and playing cards, hearing the girl's screams and the sounds of the struggle, burst into mirth, and came tiptoeing along the passage.

Joyce, making one final, desperate effort, broke once more out of Rathway's arms, burst through the door, and ran screaming along the passage. She got the front door open.

"Lee! Lee! Come to me!" she cried in wild abandonment.

Then Rathway's arms closed about her from behind, and Joyce ceased to struggle.

CHAPTER XVI

Joyce or a Gold Mine

Lee did not go as far as the forest, which loomed out of the distance beyond the ridges of broken ground. He waited some little distance away, until the priest's sleigh had gone. Then he went quietly back toward the log house.

Lights burned inside. A strip of cloth had been pinned before the window of the largest room—the one in which Lee had camped with Joyce for a brief hour upon that afternoon of their arrival. This was the room that Lee had selected in his mind for their occupancy during their brief honeymoon.

But not the least spasm twisted Lee's face at the realization that another had supplanted him in that relationship with Joyce. There are some phases of emotion so tense that they appear to neutralize themselves by destroying their own manifestations.

Lee's expression showed not the smallest deviation from the normal now. It was quiet, dispassionate, and very cold. Softly Lee approached the window and, stooping, looked between the frame and the curtain of cloth.

The window on this side had a piece missing out of the corner, and over the little gap some one had pasted a piece of paper. With the barrel of his rifle Lee quietly made a small hole in it.

From there he could catch glimpses of the two figures. He heard their voices. He was in no hurry. He was waiting till they chose to finish their conversation. Then, in due time, Rathway would stand in a line with his sights and he would make an end of him.

And the wild turmoil in Lee's heart seemed divorced from his brain, which remained impassive and cold and steady as the piece of mechanism in his hands.

Rathway's voice grew louder. Lee saw the hunched figure gesticulating, the sneer on Rathway's face. Lee drew a bead. He might as well end the business after all.

But before Lee's finger tightened on the trigger, a hand upon his shoulder made him leap to his feet and start up, his rifle clubbed, ready to strike. He thought Rathway's men had surprised him.

But to his amazement it was a woman standing at his side; then in that cloaked and hooded figure that confronted him he recognized—Estelle once more.

She looked at him fixedly; she was deeply agitated, and caught at her breath before she was able to find her voice.

"You fool!" she exclaimed bitterly. "You fool! You had her in your hands and you let Jim Rathway take her away from you! You couldn't hold her—and now I come upon you to find you planning a cold-blooded cowardly murder—you, a policeman!"

At that something broke in Lee's heart. The realization of the act he planned came over him. He would have killed Rathway as heedlessly as any bloodthirsty forest beast. But Estelle's reference to the police touched his pride.

He let the rifle drop, grounding the butt.

"Listen to what I've got to tell you, Lee. I love him. Do you understand that? I suppose you think it's not my nature to love. But it is! It was you who couldn't hold my love. I hated and despised you. I never knew how much I loved James Rathway till I found out how much I hated you that morning when you came to our camp and struck him down so treacherously."

"Oh, yes, I have love and passion, and constancy in my nature, Lee Anderson. It was only you who couldn't draw them out!"

Her voice was vibrant, hoarse with passion.

"That girl will make a fool of you too, Lee Anderson, just as I did," she cried. "You'd be made a fool of anywhere, by any woman!"

But her words passed Lee by like the wind.

"I could have killed you that morning, as I could kill you now, only—I love James Rathway. And he'll love me again when you take this new attraction away out of his sight, where he can't find her. I thought you'd got away—but here you are, back again with her, and all the work's got to be done over again."

"I was crouching near, and I overheard your dialogue, you and she, and the priest, and James Rathway. You gave her up—the woman you love—because she'd stood up before the altar with the man she hated and called herself his wife. I'd hold the woman I loved, were I a man, against God Himself, and all his cohorts!"

"Oh, if only I could find words to hurt you, Lee Anderson, to pierce that tough skin of yours! But I haven't time. Listen to me, now! You don't have to commit murder to get her. You fool, you blind fool, shall I tell you?"

She laughed with taunting menace. "Shall I tell you, Lee Anderson?" she repeated.

And suddenly came the sound of Joyce, screaming within the house. There came the noise of a struggle.

Even as Lee turned, Joyce was running along the passage toward the door. Instantly Estelle glided away into the shadows.

Joyce flung the door open; and then Rathway caught her from behind and swung her back toward him. His black beard hung over her face.

"Lee! Lee! Come to me!"

Joyce ceased to struggle.

"Here!" answered Lee, and dashed his fists into Rathway's face, sending him staggering.

Rathway howled and felt for his pistol. Lee was upon him, pinning his arms to his sides, before he could draw it. But Rathway's men came hurrying along the passage. In an instant there was a furious melee. Lee tripped over a leg thrust out, fell heavily upon his back, and struggled in vain under the weight of his four adversaries.

Quickly he was reduced to helplessness, his limbs held firmly. Momentarily he ceased to struggle, nursing his strength for a more violent effort.

He looked up into the grinning faces, at Rathway, standing over him, leering, arms outstretched, gasping for breath and consciousness.

Rathway pulled his pistol and covered Lee. "Pierre! Shorty! Kramer! You're witnesses that you saw this man spying outside this house."

They assented. Pierre grinned, Shorty swore, spat, and scowled, and Lee saw the half-healed scar of his pistol butt upon his cheek.

"You saw him assault me?" Rathway continued. "Well, Anderson, I guess if I choose to shoot you like the dog you are, the law wouldn't have much to say about it. But I'll be reasonable. Get back to your quarters!" he snarled to his aides, and the three men in surprise released Lee and went down the passage.

Lee leaped to his feet, confronting Rathway resolutely, but puzzled. Rathway held him covered.

"You must want my wife mighty bad to come back like a fox at night in the hope of picking her up under my nose, Anderson," said Rathway.

"Well, I'm a business man, and I guess anyone can get most anything he wants if he wants it bad enough to be willing to pay the price for it. Maybe you can get her at the price, Anderson."

"Pelly's gold mine belongs to me under the law. She tells me you've found it and are holding the secret of it. All right. The price is Pelly's gold mine. The woman for the mine."

"What do you say to that, Anderson?" Rathway was trembling with eagerness. "I was willing to overlook the past and take her back, but if she doesn't want me and does want you, I guess I can't hold her against her will. So I'm ready to take my mine instead and close the bargain. What do you say to it, Anderson?"

Lee suspected some trick, but the anxiety on Rathway's face, the trembling tones of his voice showed that his avarice was a stronger passion than that for Joyce. And, despite the violence of the proposal, Lee realized that in no other way could Joyce be saved.

He knew that even then Rathway was contemplating treachery, but there was nothing else to do. If he refused, Rathway would shoot him in cold blood—and the law would justify him.

"I must speak to Miss Pelly first," Rathway snarled. "If you mean Mrs. Rathway, you can have five minutes' talk with her to make up your mind. And if you don't accept, or try any tricks on me, by heaven, it's your last minute!"

Lee nodded, took Joyce by the arm, and drew her inside the room. Rathway stood in the doorway, covering him with his pistol, but Lee quietly closed the door on him, and Rathway accepted the situation. Lee went back to the girl.

"Joyce! Joyce, darling!"

"Oh, Lee, I can't bear it. I thought I could, but it's impossible. Oh, take me away, Lee! Help me now, as you offered to help me on the range, though we can never be anything to each other. Take me somewhere to safety, where I need never see that man again, or think of him, or of this place, or—ever remember anything of the past."

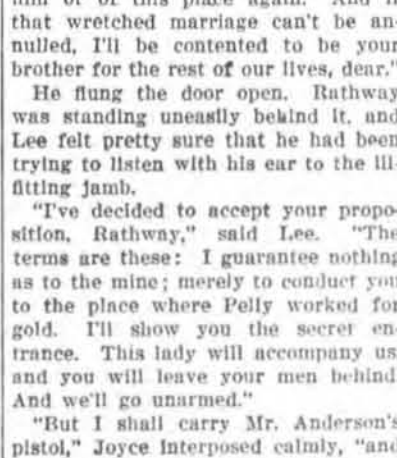

She clung to him, sobbing in terror and loneliness. Lee, holding her, raised her hands to his lips.

"Joyce, dearest, I'll do as he proposes, then. I'll show him the mine, and then I'll take you away somewhere south, where you need never think of him or of this place again. And if that wretched marriage can't be annulled, I'll be contented to be your brother for the rest of our lives, dear."

He flung the door open. Rathway was standing uneasily behind it, and Lee felt pretty sure that he had been trying to listen with his ear to the ill-fitting jamb.

"I've decided to accept your proposition, Rathway," said Lee. "The terms are these: I guarantee nothing as to the mine; merely to conduct you to the place where Pelly worked for gold. I'll show you the secret entrance. This lady will accompany us, and you will leave your men behind. And we'll go unarmed."

"But I shall carry Mr. Anderson's pistol," Joyce interposed calmly, "and Lee obeyed the instinct not to tell Rathway that Lehouef was alive.

"Besides," Rathway went on, "as for C. P.—Well, that might mean anything. Charles Patrick, or Clarence Peel. There used to be a Clarence Peel in this district who disappeared. I swear that's the truth, Anderson. Any old-timer will tell you that I'm not lying to you. N-no, Anderson, you can't prove that's the body of old Pelly, just from those initials."

Lee wondered at Rathway's agitation. The man seemed quite beside himself. He twined his fingers in his black beard, and shuffled away with his peculiar hunched stoop. Lee led him to the cross above the little grave.

"I think that's proof," he said quietly.

But Rathway, clenching and unclenching his fists, said nothing. Lee went back, calling Joyce, and they proceeded in the direction of the cave. Lee pointed out the pans and cradle, and the proofs of dynamiting.

"Aye, but the gold—where's the gold?" Rathway demanded.

"I have seen none," answered Lee, "and, if you remember, I made no guarantee as to it."

"How do I know you haven't taken it away?" Rathway shouted. "Aye, you may have stolen my gold as you stole my wife. You may be planning to take my wife and my gold away together."

Lee looked at him in amazement, for Rathway was nearly crazed by some passion, probably, Lee thought, the anticipation of obtaining the treasure of old Pelly.

"I've taken no gold and I've seen none," he answered. "I must again remind you of our agreement, Rathway."

Rathway pulled himself together with an effort. "Aye, that's all right," he answered. "This looks like Pelly's mine. Let's look inside. Have you been inside, Anderson?"

"I've only explored the entrance," Lee answered. "I brought no candle with me last time I was here."

Relighting the candle, he preceded Rathway within. The sound of the distant roaring came immediately to their ears. By the candle light Lee saw fresh footprints on the sands. They were made by a man wearing moccasins, no doubt Lehouef. He did not call Rathway's attention to them, and Rathway, absorbed with his eagerness to find the treasure, noticed nothing.

Lee wondered, however, what the Indian had been doing in the cavern.

self discovered during his years of fruitless effort to follow old Pelly; and there was no sign of the three.

It occurred to Lee, besides, that Rathway was not likely to wish the entrance to the mine to be known to any of his aides.

Rathway was looking uneasily about him. "It's in the gorge, then?" he muttered. And, throwing off all pretense of concealment, "There's no way to go down. I've walked round and round the place a thousand times."

Lee tilted back the stone and showed Rathway the hole beneath it. Rathway stared at it in amazement, uttering an oath as the stone came back into position.

"I shall go first," Lee said, "and light the candle. Miss Pelly—" Rathway muttered, but Lee could not bring himself to call her by the man's name—"Will please follow me. You, Rathway, will come last."

Lee pushed the stone back, lay down on the ground, and, after showing the girl how to elevate it from beneath, descended. When his feet were on the first rung of the ladder, he lit the candle. In a moment Joyce appeared, and then Rathway behind her, clinging to the opening and looking down with uneasy suspicion.

"Hold tight to the rocks," Lee called. "It's slippery, and if you lose your hold there's a deadly drop below."

He led the way down, shifting the candle from hand to hand alternately as he descended, to illuminate the way for Joyce, until he reached the bottom orifice. Then he began slowly to complete the descent, instructing Joyce where to put her hands and feet, guiding her, and bracing himself against the cliff, ready to sustain her weight in case of a slip. However, all three reached the floor of the gorge without accident.

Rathway muttered, looking about him. In the moonlight Lee saw that he was dripping with perspiration. He was trembling with excitement.

Lee said eight fatal words: "The rock marks the entrance to the tunnel." Rathway looked at it and nodded.

"I had some difficulty in finding it before," Lee added. He turned to the girl. "Joyce dear, I'm going to show Rathway something that I think it would be better for you not to see. Will you wait where you are for a few minutes? We won't go out of your sight."

"Very well, Lee," the girl answered quietly. She had understood what Lee meant immediately. Lee took Rathway through the laurel tangles and showed him Pelly's remains. He showed him the initials on the handle of the revolver.

Rathway stood dumbly staring at the skeleton. He was trembling even more violently than before.

"He must have fallen from the cliff," said Lee, indicating the broken bones.

"Aye, but where's your proof that it's Pelly?" Rathway burst out suddenly. "Why, man, there isn't a court in the land would admit that skeleton as proof that Pelly was dead. That's as like as not the body of his Indian, carrying Pelly's revolver."

Lee obeyed the instinct not to tell Rathway that Lehouef was alive.

"Besides," Rathway went on, "as for C. P.—Well, that might mean anything. Charles Patrick, or Clarence Peel. There used to be a Clarence Peel in this district who disappeared. ## MY FAVORITE STORIES

By IRVIN S. COBB

A Lover of Statistics

There was a seance on—a regular seance, with a trance medium and a black cheesecloth cabinet and a mysterious table rapper and a ghostly cabbage picker and a smell of frying collards floating in from the back of the house and everything orthodox, like that. The medium was a stout body in black, who was raising a brown mustache and whose controls took those liberties with the English language which seemingly is permitted in a realm where there is neither space nor time—nor grammar. She came from Brooklyn, where so many of those who take in spiritualism for a living do come from, but at the time of which I speak she was playing the provinces, as the troupers say. The audience was of fairish size. Amid the throng sat a half-grown youth from about three miles out on R. F. D. No. 3. He was attending his first spiritualistic seance. And he was being suitably impressed. As manifestation succeeded manifestation, his eyes popped and his ears twitched. If he had had gills, beyond doubt they would have opened and closed.

Presently the medium's husband, who acted, so to speak, as ringmaster, desired to know whether there was yet another present desirous of having speech with some dear departed one. If so madame would undertake to establish liaison.

This was the cue for the yokel. He mustered courage to utter an embarrassed plea. He wished to have speech with the shade of his late father.

After a proper wait there were sounds in the cabinet and through the darkness there spoke the tones of one of seeming hoary age.

"Is that you, my son?" asked the voice.

"Yes, paw, this here is me," answered the youth.

"Was there any questions you wished to ask me concernin' my present state?" continued the accommodating voice.

The boy thought a moment. Then: "Where air you, paw?" he inquired with simple directness.

"Heaven, my son."

"Air you an angel, paw?"

"Oh, yes, my son."

"An angel with wings and a harp and everything?"

The answer was somewhat muffled but seemingly in the affirmative. The son considered a moment. Then he had an inspiration.

"I say, paw," he demanded sagely, "what do you measure from tip to tip?"

He Didn't Believe in Signs

A fireman on duty behind the scenes of one of the big New York theaters and charged with the responsibility of seeing to it that the regulations were strictly obeyed backstage, suffered a profound shock as he came around from behind a stack of scenery, just before the evening performance. Standing in the opposite wings was a salesman for an East side cloak and suit concern, who had procured entrance via the stage door for the purpose of soliciting orders for his wares among the young ladies of the chorus. This person was vehemently pulling on a large, long, black, malignant-looking cigar.

In three jumps the scandalized fireman had the violator by the arm.

"Say," he demanded, "what the h—l do you mean, comin' in here with that torch burnin' in your face? Don't you see that sign right up over your head?"

The trespasser's eyes turned where the fireman's finger pointed.

"Sure, mister," he said, "I see it."

"Well, can't you read?" demanded the fireman.

"Sure I can read," admitted the other calmly.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

The DAIRY

PROPER FEEDING OF
BULL IS IMPORTANT

Proper feeding of the herd bull is just as important as the proper feeding of the milk cows. Too often the spoiled or musty hay is put to one side to be fed to the bull. Again we find dairymen giving the waste feed, left by other animals, to the herd sire. All of which is a very poor practice, writes R. D. Canan in the Indiana Farmer's Guide.

The herd bull old enough for service should be fed enough to keep him in a vigorous, healthy condition, free from any excess fat. Most breeders feed their regular grain mixture to the bull at the rate of four to ten pounds daily depending upon the size and condition of the animal and the variety of roughage. A good grain mixture to use consists of three parts ground corn, three parts ground oats, three parts wheat bran, and one part linseed oil meal. Ground oats are especially good for bulls. Cottonseed meal is generally looked upon with disfavor, since it may cause impotency.

Legume hay, whenever available, should be fed at the rate of ten to twenty pounds a day. Legumes are high in protein and mineral matter, and will keep the heavily used bull in excellent condition. When nontemperate roughages, such as timothy hay, fodder or straw are fed, it is necessary to feed more linseed oil meal than with the legume roughages.

Breeders differ as to the breeding powers of the bull when silage is fed. Silage fed in large amounts will have a tendency to distend the paunch, which is very undesirable. However, ten to fifteen pounds of silage daily may be safely fed along with other roughages.

It is essential that the herd bull receive plenty of water, and where it has been found necessary to keep the bull in a stall or pen, he should be watered at least twice a day.

The value and importance of using good bulls is essential to the economical development of the dairy industry. The present use of good bulls is entirely too limited, and when a good bull is once in service his usefulness may be prolonged for an indefinite period through proper feeding and plenty of exercise.

Milk Flow Falls Off in Fly Weather in Summer

Flies on the cows on hot days often cause an actual decrease in milk production. A good fly spray, correctly applied, will not only quiet the cows and help the milk run freely, but will also save the temper of the milker.

A good spray for this purpose can easily be made at home, according to the cow men of the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca. The ingredients are 4½ quarts coal tar dip; 4½ quarts fish oil; 3 quarts coal oil; 3 quarts whale oil; 1½ quarts oil of tar.

Dissolve three pounds of laundry soap in water, add the ingredients of the spray, and bring up to 30 gallons with lukewarm soft water.

This spray, applied twice a day—in the morning after milking and in the afternoon while the cows are in the barn for silage or other green feed—will keep the flies away and keep the hair coats of the cows soft.

Thirty gallons of this mixture will spray forty cows twice a day for six days, at a cost of one cent a cow a day. Two men with a portable half-barrel cart carrying a spray pump and nozzle can spray forty cows in five minutes.

Danger in Cross-Breeding

Cross-breeding in reality is a two-edged sword. One cannot mate a Holstein cow with a Guernsey bull and expect the female progeny to take on a type or evidence a function or produce milk with the quality of the Guernsey and the quantity of the Holstein. Actually, straight cross-bred animals of this mating are quite as apt to inherit the quality of the Holstein and the quantity of the Guernsey. It is difficult, indeed, to establish a type under such circumstances.

Feeding Cows Minerals

A dairy cow giving a large flow of milk will need some added minerals. If she is to be properly nourished. Especially is this true if she does not get legume hay, wheat bran, wheat middlings, cottonseed meal or linseed meal in her ration. Milk contains a large amount of lime and phosphorus which makes it necessary for the cow to get a liberal supply in her ration. If she is to continue to produce milk very long.

Treat Warts on Teats

Bathe warts on cows' teats several times daily with warm water containing a tablespoonful of washing soda per pint, or immerse the teats in the solution for five minutes or more, night and morning. After the evening immersion cover the affected parts with a thick paste of cold-pressed castor oil, salt, and flowers of sulphur. Warts that have slim necks may be snipped off with blunt scissors, a few at a time, and tincture of iodine applied.

STIBOLT SUFFERED
FORTY LEG WOUNDS

More than forty wounds in the legs led Noble Stibolt from the paths of a traveling salesman to those of the law. Today he is succeeding as an attorney in the capacity of inspector for the American Surety company of New York city, is highly pleased with his position and says he has better prospects of getting ahead than he would have had if the World War had not changed the course of his career.

Stibolt was wounded by fragments of a high explosive shell in the St. Mihiel drive of Sept. 12, 1918. After returning to civilian life, he attempted to cover his old territory as a butler. But his legs couldn't stand up under the strain of walking all day. Stibolt, who is a member of North Shore post of the American Legion in Noble Stibolt.

Chicago, declares that the conscientious efforts of the government agencies given the herculean task of rehabilitating the disabled will surely be appreciated by the men more and more as time goes on.

"The American Legion is in a great measure responsible for this wonderful work, and they certainly deserve the support of the citizenry for the important role which they have played in helping rehabilitate the thousands of incapacitated men, thereby fitting them for life's battle on an equal basis with their fellowmen," he wrote to national headquarters in Indianapolis recently.

Plans for Monuments
Laid Before Congress

Final plans of the American Legion Battle Monuments commission towards marking the battlefields abroad and commemorating the activities of American troops overseas have been laid before congress, according to legislative officials of the American Legion in Washington.

The plan call for beautification of the American cemeteries, commemorative monuments to the members of all American organizations which participated in the major American operations, historical monuments to record important operations of American divisions, a monument at home to commemorate the activities of the army and naval forces of the United States in Italy and surrounding waters, erection of tablets to mark locations of headquarters of the American expeditionary force and two memorials and three monuments to commemorate naval activities.

The commission contemplates the expenditure of $3,000,000 to carry out its plans.

The Legion has taken a leading part in the work of the commission since it was created by act of congress in 1922. Several Legionnaires are on the commission, including Gen. John J. Pershing, chairman; and Thomas W. Miller, president of the Fidae, organization of inter-allied veterans.

Harmon Playgrounds Are Awarded to Many Cities

Many cities throughout the country have recently been awarded Harmon Foundation playgrounds through the instrumentality of their local American Legion posts. The latest instances of awards being made were in Dillon and Marion, S. C., where the Legion posts took a leading part in securing the playgrounds. The post officials had been working for the gifts ever since the Harmon Foundation published notice about a year ago that 50 awards would be made to qualified cities. More than 1,000 applications were made from all parts of the United States.

Daddy's Evening
Fairy Tale
By Mary Graham Bonner

SOME DAY

John had been promised that some day he would be taken to Cow Bay.

Cow Bay was a most wonderful stretch of beach overlooking a bay or arm of the sea.

No one quite knew why it had been called Cow Bay. There were no cows there. True, you passed cows in pastures as you drove down or walked down to the bay.

It was just a funny old, old name that had stuck. But some people didn't think it was a pretty enough name for so lovely a spot and they called it Silver Sands.

None of the people who had loved it for years called it anything else but Cow Bay. Maybe the name was foolish and maybe it wasn't a very beautiful name.

But if you've always had a name for a place you become attached to it and even if it isn't just the right name, you don't want to change it.

Cow Bay was really a gorgeous spot. It had a great wide, wide beach, and it was very, very long. From one end of the beach to the other the surf rose and fell, tumbled in foamy white tumblers and came dancing up on the sunlit sand.

The water was always so deep and gorgeous blue. The foam so white and fluffy and as it came rushing in on top of the waves the sun danced a rainbow dance through it.

Behind the beach was a forest of low fir trees. It was quite far away from any place except some farms and people did not gather there in large numbers.

So, when you had a picnic there, you felt as though you almost owned the sky and the sea and the beach and the forests—there was so much of all.

"Some day you'll go to Cow Bay. That's a promise." This was what John's father said.

"Some day we'll have a picnic at Cow Bay and you'll go, too." This was what they said to him.

Then the days began to get warm and they planned to go to Cow Bay. They planned the picnic they would have. John's family were going and some friends of the family and another little boy was going so John would have someone just his own age with whom to play.

They would have lunch there and afternoon tea. There would be milk for John and his friend instead of afternoon tea, but they would have it in the afternoon, so they could call it afternoon milk. There would be cookies at this meal, too.

It was splendid to see the lunch basket being packed with all the delicious sandwiches which John's mother made.

It was fun to start off in the motor. First they went through the town where John lived.

Then they took a ferry and it was great fun to ride upon a boat right in the car and then stand still while the boat carried them all across the water to the other side.

At the other side they started the car again and went through a small town, then through some woods and beyond some farms to Cow Bay.

There it all was, the blue, blue sea stretching away, way out as though it knew it had all the room in the world, the banks at each far end of the great wide beach, the surf, the clear, clean salt air mingled with the fragrance of the forests—oh, what a heavenly place it was.

They ran races, they went in wading, they went swimming, they ate, they rested, they had their pictures taken, they went in wading again and swimming again and ate again, and they came home after a wonderful day the same way they had gone.

But when they got home there was just one thing John couldn't understand.

They had said they were going to Cow Bay "some day," and now they had gone on Tuesday.

Why hadn't they gone "some day" as they had said instead of Tuesday? And then they explained to John that "some day" meant any day upon which people did the thing they had planned to do "some day."

AFTER HER BABY CAME

Mrs. Hollister Unable To Do Her
Work for Six MonthsTells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
Restored Her HealthMRS. HENRY HOLLISTER
WYANDOTTE, MICHIGAN

Wyandotte, Michigan.—"After my baby was born I did not do my own work for six months and could hardly take care of my own baby. I always had a pain in my right side and it was so bad I was getting round shoulders. I would feel well one day and then feel so bad for three or four days that I would be in bed. One Sunday my mother came to see how I was, and she said a friend told her to tell me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So the next day I got a bottle and before it was half taken I got relief. After I was well again I went to the doctor and he asked me how I was getting along. I told him I was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and he said it did not hurt any one to take it. I am always recommending the Vegetable Compound to others and I always have a bottle of it on hand."—Mrs. HENRY HOLLISTER, R. F. D. No. 1, Box 7, Wyandotte, Michigan.

Another Woman's Case

St. Paul, Minnesota.—"I have a little girl three years old and ever since her birth I have suffered with my back as if it were breaking in two, and bearing-down pains all the time. I also had dizzy spells. I had read several letters of women in the newspapers, and the druggist recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to my husband for me. As a result of taking it my back has stopped aching and the awful bearing-down feeling is gone. I feel stronger and do all of my housework and tend to my little girl. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills for constipation. I have recommended these medicines to some of my friends and you may use this letter as a testimonial if you wish. I will be pleased to answer letters of other women if I can help them by telling them what this medicine has done for me."—Mrs. PRICE, 147 West Summit Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota.

Greek Industry Helped

Industry in Greece has received a great impetus from the keen merchants and traders who have migrated from Asia minor and Constantinople since the conclusion of the war between Greece and Turkey, and one of their thriving industries is the manufacture of carpets.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

WALTER P. CHRYSLER'S TRAFFIC TALKS

ONE OF THE WORLD'S BUSIEST CORNERS

© Keystone.

This is Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street, New York, one of the world's busiest corners.

Note that although traffic is moving north and south only pedestrians are traveling in all directions.

Signs on the sidewalks of all four corners read:

"Pedestrians: Cross at Crossings. Await Signal."

If the pedestrians would heed that advice many serious traffic problems would be solved.

Motorists are required by law to observe traffic regulations. Pedestrians should observe them also for their own safety and protection.

Unofficial figures completed recently by arithmetical calculation indicate that the population of the United States will be 113,500,000 by July.

This represents an 8,000,000 increase since the 1920 census, when 105,710,620 persons were living in this country.

MEXICAN KILLED IN DUEL WITH S. P. OFFICERS

Bisbee, May 5.—One Mexican was killed and another probably fatally wounded in a pistol duel with special agents of the Southern Pacific at Benson, 60 miles northwest of here, shortly after 2 o'clock this morning, when the railroad officers found them in a box car. A third Mexican escaped, but is believed to be wounded.

The Mexicans had broken the seal of the car and two of them were inside when the officers appeared. The third man was acting as sentry and opened fire on the officers. The wounded man was identified as Jose Vasquez, but the dead man was known only as "Tony the King" to the Mexicans at Benson.

DON'T DOPE YOUR BATTERY

(By President of Greer College of Automotive Engineering)

In the old days, gasoline economizers were ultra in style with the get-rich-quick fiends. They were much more common than they are now. One could buy them in powder, tablet or liquid form and probably administer the min homopathic or allopathic doses—for the effect was just the same.

As long as the car owner was very careful to have the carbon removed from the engine cylinders, the valves ground and the carburetor adjusted an then apply the so-called economizer to the fuel tank, he was certain to get greater mileage per gallon of gasoline. And no wonder!

The same thing applies to the present-day storage battery 'rejuvenators,' 'recharging solutions' and what not that are being sold as mysterious compounds and wonderful discoveries which recharge your storage battery in 20 minutes. Any battery service station can do the same thing by doping a battery with strong acid—but they know the harmful effects of such treatment.

The surprising thing is the willingness of many people to pay fabulous prices, $3 to $5 being asked for a single application of these 'dopes,' when most storage battery service stations would do the same thing for 25 cents.

There is nothing mysterious about pouring strong acid solution into a discharged battery and having it operate in 20 or 30 minutes afterward. Any service station can do that, but the normal way to recharge a battery is to pass a current of electricity through it and avoid injuring it or shortening its life. The quick way is to pay $3 to $5 for about 25 cents' worth of strong acid—and suffer the consequences.

FIRE WHISTLE BLOWN BY LIGHTNING HITTING ON WIRES

Douglas, May 5.—The city fire whistle, which sounded in a continuous manner for some time Tuesday night, caused much alarm in the city and had police and fire department officials baffled for several minutes. It was learned later that lightning had struck a wire, causing the automatic fire alarm system to be set off. The fire whistle, which works automatically in conjunction with the box alarms, did not separate the blasts as usual when an alarm is turned in from a box, but blew continuously for a period of time.

$2,000,000 A YEAR SPENT ON RAT POISONS AND TRAPS

Figures recently collected by the U. S. department of Agriculture show that a little more than $2,000,000 is expended annually in the United States on products sold for rat control. Although this is a comparatively small item compared with others in the list of losses chargeable to rats, it is one that can be measured with a reasonable degree of accuracy.

Letters were written to all concerns in the United States which were listed as being engaged in the manufacture of preparations or devices to combat rats. Reliable figures were received from 22 manufacturers of chemical poisons, from nine manufacturers of bacterial viruses, and from four trap manufacturers. A compilation of the figures received showed that approximately $1,350,000 is expended annually for chemical poisons to combat rats. The amount spent for bacterial rat viruses is about $500,000. The records of money spent annually for rat traps were incomplete, but indicated an expenditure in excess of $223,000, which brings the total to about $2,000,000.
