"Please don't interrupt," the sther said in a whisper as if Peter had clattered into some funeral service. "I am thinking."

When he had ceased thinking he looked up, snapped on his smile and stared at DeWolfe out of pale blue вуен.

"The operation will cost a great deal of money."

Peter waved his hand. "I think I better say-" began Smallwood, who appeared discouraged, He paused, he repeated: "I think I better say, however, that I will make a trial provided-"

Smallwood appeared surprised that any human being could have as much sense. He said: "The search will require several stenographers, a longdistance telephone bill of rather alarming size and possibly a price for the book far beyond its real value-several times the probable amount it would bring at an auction."

"Go ahead," said Peter. "May I say that the-your desire for a copy of this book must be extraordi-

"Oh, yes, most extraordinary. A week ago I would not have paid two dollars for it, Men have gambled away their lives on it. I can't tell how much I want it until I ger it. But to get it I will pay what it costs. And if you can locate a copy of the book-?"

"I would let you know at once." "Time counts. I would be grateful." Smallwood blinked. Only when his visitor was at the door did he say, with a switched-on smile: "Oh, by the way, must the volume be in perfect condition?" "It can be a bundle of debris as far as I am concerned," answered Peter. "But all the pages must be there."

The other man was reaching for the telephone instrument with his cold storage fingers as DeWolfe left the office.

From the publishers he went to one Manfred Eldegard at 6 Nassau street. Eldegard is a public accountant whose clients are the surety and bonding companies. The vice-president of one of these companies had said to De-Wolfe: "You are not familiar with auditing and accounting as I am. If you were you would know that accuracy, honesty, speed, reliability are qualities that can be hired in carload lots. It is easy to engage experts in figures. But the genius among accountants is the man who can read figures just as a planist reads music. That man is worth something because he can translate into the terms of life. There's one of those fellows that can make circles round the rest. Here's his letter head."

"Is he willing to take a chance on getting shot?" Peter had asked. "Shot?" the other had repeated with

"I may have to send him a long way off. I don't know what hazards there are." The official of the bonding company had looked at Peter incredulously but he had said, "You'll have to ask him or his wife. I understand that there are few witnesses for the state in criminal trials who have weathered as many blackmall and blackhand threats as M. E. as we call him." "Would he be more ready to keep his mouth shut for his client than to open it to the police for instance?" "My dear sir, when you engage Elde gard you buy a strip of his services. It's yours. If you don't want him to disclose anything there is no process server that can land him and if there were there is no district attorney Peter felt the sense of revolt against who would get anything out of crossexamination except evasions," Upon a confirmation of this opinion Peter had chosen this fat man with two chins, a pompadour of bristles above a broad flat face with little eyes, nose and mouth pricked into it as if by a point of a pencil; to him Peter. following the appointment her had made, stated his problem. "Where are these accounts?" asked Eldegard.

Peter put them upon the glass top of the desk. The little beady eyes of the fat man fixed a stare upon the Russia leather covers; he extended a large menty hand and caressed these books as if they were a delicacy brought to him to cook and eat-a pleasure of digestion-a mere morsel for a gourmand.

As he turned the pages marked by Peter he began to utter chu-chu, cho chu between his teeth, increasing its speed as if getting up steam as a locomotive puffs faster and faster when it leaves a train shed.

"What's this Credit Account X.D.?" as inquired under his breath.

"That's the one that occurs most

Eldegard drummed with his cushloned fingertips on the glass. "It looks that way," he announced, "the way you said."

"But you are not sure?"

often," said Peter.

"Only sure as a man is sure who finds watercress in his milk. To be sure we would have to check against the transactions in the local cotton exchange. Some of these are New Orleans houses. The X.D. was a private individual."

DeWolfe looked at the expert searchingly. He sald: "Do you see anything else?"

"Yes-some one has been here be fore us. Perhaps it was you, eh?" "No," replied Peter. "What do you see?"

"I see that some one who had a rea son has put copy paper and carbons under these pages and copied these handwriting entries by running a stylus over the original entries. Sometimes the carbon and paper went askew; that's why you see these little blue marks. Did you think it extraordinary that I observed that?"

"Oh, no," said Peter. "Not at all. How could I? It was the first thing that made me wonder about the story these figures can tell. When can you go?"

"Go? Me? In person?" "Yes. New Orleans-wherever the trall leads?"

Eldegard shook his head like a great Buddha with a pivoted neck. "Never," he said. "I'm too busy."

"Isn't it your office force that is busy?" asked DeWolfe, throwing his cigarette into the bronze ash tray. Besides, as for the money-that is for you to say. Whatever is necessary to get your services."

"It isn't money," Eldegard answered. "If I'd paid any attention to money I wouldn't be worth fifty thousand today. No, it's Laura-Mrs. Eldegard. We've got a screened-in porch; we play checkers every evening."

"And so on," said Peter describing with a phrase the whole texture of a great fabric of companionship each thread of which was a homely commonplace, the whole a magic cloth of

"I intend to," said Peter solemnly. Eldegard burst into uproarlous laughter. Say!", he exclaimed with a manner of speech that like all other natural expressions of this fat man had been a rock of Gibraltar against which the assaults of culture had bounded off. "Say! I'd like to tackle this." He slapped the back of one of the Russian leather books us one would slap a friend on the back.

"It's a story!" he said. "A fascinating trail." "I think it is a story-a true story,"

DeWolfe agreed. "A thriller." Eldegard considered,

"Blessed if I don't ask ma-ask her if I can go.' He spoke as if it were a permission te go to the swimming hole or the circus. "Thank you," said Peter. "I recognize the presence of good sportsmanship. I never expected to see it in the field of auditing."

Eldegard picked up the two books. He said: "Leave 'em with me, and telephone me tomorrow, and I'll let you know what mn says,"

"I'll telephone tomorrow," said Peter.

CHAPTER XV

On Sunday evening, after he had dined early with Colby Pennington, in one of the great deserted dining rooms in a certain New York club, the rut-running life of his own kind.

From Pennington, with his naturally brilliant mind, shackled in religion, in politics, in morals, in taste, by those schools of petty imitation misnamed Society and Respectability and Precedent, DeWolfe that evening had drawn a new draught of disgust. Poor Pennington, industrious, irreproachable, successful! For all his pains no nearer God; for all his labors no near- and I thought I would drop in with er to mankind. Even his restraints had not enlarged his soul; Peter was certain that if the lawyer would only ommit one good dashing highway robery ae would be a better man. He wondered what this successful professional man would say if he knew that under Peter's thigh a hard object was pressing into the flesh as they sat in the great hall with their coffee and watched club members slide here and ling that applause is undeserved. The there alone, like dysperite ghosts; he wondered what Pennligron would do permission to inspect the prize, Off if he pulled out this automatic pistol is he was tempted to do, and stirred paper. When he said good-night to Penlington, there was still enough daylight for a walk alone to one of the little parks over near the East river. He remembered that, in France, his hearing as well. idea of the most wonderful moment in the world, the sharpest contrast to the gigantic nobilities and the colossal triviality of war, was a moment on a lamp, New York park bench with children of the tenements still playing in the lusk, perhaps with an organ and a nonkey thrown in for good measure. Since then how life had changed for him. When he sat down the children in the dusk-the realities-faded away and were lost in unreal pictures of haps with her great dark eyes turned gone behind it.

He felt an extraordinary restlessness-like that which comes upon those who have been deprived of some drug and are in torture while it goes slowly out of the system. He who wished not to wait, was waiting. He felt the dread of unknown calamities. And with this haunting sense of hovering crisis, he turned back to his apartment.

There Peter tried to read, experiencing that irritating lack of concentration which comes to all readers whose minds steal away from the page allowing the eyes to travel on alone like independent animals photographing mere type without ideas, until whisked back by their master to the place where they had ceased to read and begun only to move arcoss the

His free hand hung listless as if it were just out of refrigeration. He wore a sult of pale gray, the pattern of which was so delicate that it might have been only the fancy of weak eyes. Smallwood looked as if he were something that had stood out through a rainy season.

"Here I am," he drawled. "You don't mean-?" exclaimed

Peter. The other man in answer placed the package under his arm on Peter's long Jacobean table. The motion was alest surreptitions.

"Yes, I did find one," he drawled. Not so far away either.' He looked up inquiringly into De-Wolfe's expressive face, now swept by many emotions like puffs of wind scurrying across the surface of water. "That's great!" Peter exclaimed.

'It's great. "Oh, how kind of you to say so," Smallwood sald. "I found this today

Peter turned to the man drawn se quaintly by the painstaking priest nearly two centuries ago, "lest others ur wided by the hand of God become lost."

At the end of twenty minutes of study DeWolfe stood erect and drew in a deep breath. These pages then were those which Parmalee had sought and found, the same as those which he had torn out of the book; they had been associated with some strange call. Was the call to that region or was the call something that followed his search for this quaint old volume and its possession?

To Peter it appeared now that one more piece of material was needed to fill the pattern. He had been reluctant to seek this piece but now there was too much confirmation to allow any thing to stand in the way.

He could not wait; he took his hat The evening was now filled with moonlight, so clear, upon white cloud banks on a purple velvet sky, that it invited all to walk leisurely under a spell of silvery calm that even transformed he rectangular prisms of the city and the deep streets between. Peter knew nothing of the moon; he pursued one end, blind to all else.

After hurrying on foot for two locks he succeeded in stopping an empty taxicab that was clattering southward on the avenue.

"Take me there," he suld to the driver, putting a card in his hand.

The car turned about as if it had forgotten something uptown and after ten blocks on the asphalt, swung through a cross street to the car tracks upon which it purred like a brush on velvet until it turned around a hospital on a corner and found a block of old-fashioned brownstone bouses.

Up the long steps of one of them. Peter climbed, looking for a doctor's sign, and finding it there he rang the capacity." The other man got up: Peter could now see that he was a tall man who had neglected to shave that morning. He guessed that the practice of this physician did not flourish, but he sensed at once the vanity of the man the moment his second field of skill had been mentioned.

"Yes, I do a little of that, too," the octor said with fraudulent modesty. "I should say so," replied Peter. Who do you suppose sent me here?" "One of my lawyers, perhaps,"

"The district attorney. The doctor was plainly pleased. He ald, "Well, handwriting has been my hobby, Mr. DeWolfe, for nearly twenty-two years. Peter ejaculated one wordt "Exact-

"All nere!" exclaimed DeWolfe look- | ly!" He was nervous and he could not conceal it.

"Well?" said the doctor.

From his memoranda book DeWolfe ook out two pieces of paper. One of them was that with the symbol of the feathered serpent and the two words The Sign" which once had been in the possession of Jim Hennepin; the other was the check drawn by Compon Parmalee to the order of his wife, Brena Selcoss Parmalee, which she had indorsed. He placed this indorsement up and not down as he put the two pieces of paper side by side upon

"Huh!" said the doctor, bending ver them.

Peter looked up at him sharply, "That," said the doctor, putting a quare-ended forefinger upon the ords "The Sign."

"What?" asked Peter. "It is an excellent example of an ttempt to disguise penmanship." DeWolfe felt it necessary to contract his muscles to hold in an exclamation that had tried to leap from

"That is not the problem," said he. "What is it?"

"The problem is whether the same hand wrote the words on these two sleces of paper. Did they?"

"Did they?" repeated the doctor cornfully, "Did you expect an answer that-at once-in a minute? Upon the specimens you have brought? My stars! Man! There are only two words on this piece."

"I thought it would not require nuch time-"

"Much time!" exclaimed the doctor. Well, it wouldn't require much time. It requires measurements, it requires the microscope to pick out the arcs. That is all. I could get at it tomorrow norning and in a few hours-"

The other swallowed again. "It isn't worth a thousand dollars." "It is to me," said Peter earnestly.

At half-past four in the morning, when Peter was staring out at the first color in the eastern sky, filled with strange chill of a sleepless night, his telephone rang at last. He had his answer.

At half-past four in the after noon five days later Brena Selcoss walked into the office of Colby Pennington. She had come directly from the pier on the North river. Her face was white, her sensitive lips moved uneasily as if seeking to suppress emotions of their own. Pennington was moved by her presence

"I am a friend of Mr. DeWolfe's." she said. "I have sent a wireless addrassed to him here. I have been on envelope. "Are you Miss Selcoss?" he asked, Well, Peter DeWolfe sent you a cablegram-something about advising you to delay your coming. You had started. Too bad. Just now Mr. DeWolfe is out of town."

"Out of town?" "Why, yes. He went a few days go. He had something to inves We rather expected to hear from him. He went off in a hurry-some hurry and flurry. I believe he had received

Absolutely Replete With Thrills

When Ople Read, the writer, was a printer down in Tennessee many years ago he worked on a small weekly paper and boarded with the keeper of a small general store. "My host," said Read to me, "was the most inveterate checker player in the state, and his wife was the best cook that ever lived in any state. The house was right next to the store and the place where worked was just across the road. One day the dinner horn blew, and I broke for the store to pick up the old man and hustle for the table. I was as hungry as a bear, and as l came across the road I could smell fried chicken and other good things; and I fairly dribbled at the mouth.

"The husband was sitting at the back of the store playing checkers with another old chap, These two were the checker champions of the county. I told him dinner was ready and begged him to come on, because knew his wife wouldn't put the dishes on the table until he showed up; but he was right in the middle a close game and he only shook

That dinner was bound either to scorch or get cold-and maybe do both; but there sat that old pair of fossils silent as mummies and still as the grave. Neither of them moved an inch for fifteen minutes. Finally my host scratched his head for a couple of minutes-it seemed hours to mereached over deliberately, picked up counter, held it poised in the air for another minute and then put it back in its original place and said, half to himself: 'Well, this is excitin' !

"It was at this functure," said Read, "that I hauled off and kicked his blamed old checkerboard clear out of the front door!"

One Little Yea Among the Noes

During the Republican National onvention of 1920 the leaders behind the scenes, fearing Senator Hiram Johnson might kick over the traces in the event of the nomination of a Presidential candidate displeasing to him, repeatedly made overtures to the Californian to take the second place on the ticket. Invariably John son declined the proposition. Toward the last he showed signs of temper,

At this critical period the stage managers invoked the offices of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., as an inter nediary. They counted on the friendship which had existed between Johnson and young Roosevelt's father. Johnson was as briskly emphatic in stating his position to roung Colonel Roosevelt as he had been in his language to earlier emissarles.

Nevertheless, right up to the elevorth hour the bosses trusted Johnson might be induced to change his mind. Three of us, all newspaper correspondents, were in Johnson's room at the Blackstone hotel in Chi cago on the night before the ticket was named, when Johnson's secretary came to say that Colonel Roosevelt was on the telephone, desiring to speak with him. Johnson took down the receiver, and we heard him say

Settlement of Belgian Debt Shows Leniency on Part of the United States.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PROVIDED congress is satisfiedand there is no reason to believe it will not be-the funding of Belgium's debt to the United States has been arranged. The agreement was signed by the members of the two commissions last week at a dinner given at the Belgian embassy by Ambassador Baron de Cartier de Marchienne. It is in accord with the advice given by President Coolidge when Secretary Mellon and Senator Smoot conferred with him, and the Brussels government authorized its representatives to Belgium is highly pleased with the arrangement, and should be. In the first place, a distinction is made between the obligations incurred during the war and the sums borrowed after the armistice for purposes of relief work and reconstruction. The principai is all to be paid in a period of 62 years, but on the war debt of $171,-780,000 Belgium is not required to pay any interest, either accrued or in the future. The interest rate on the post war debt is to be 31/2 per cent after the first ten years. During the first decade arbitrary amounts have been fixed on the interest payments, graduated on an easy scale. On the war debt account the first payment of capital, which will be due June 15, 1926, will be only $1,000,000, $4,000 and $8,000, and 5 instead of 6 scalded to death by steam. Left Jury to Choose

Right Line of Defense An English publicist, commenting upon President Coolidge's recent explanation that the prevalence of crime in the United States just now is due rather to carelessness than criminality, contends that this apology would have greatly appealed to the redoubtable advocate Codd of "Codd's Puzzle" fame. Codd's client, as the story goes, was accused of stealing a duck, and the serious point against the client was that the duck was found in the man's pocket. Codd put forth seven distinct and separate defenses, viz.: First, the man had bought and paid for the duck; second, he found It; thirdly, it had been given to him; fourthly, it flew into his garden; fifthly, he was asleep and someone put it into his pocket-and so forth, of this latter land is desert and unfit He was asked on which of these de- for agriculture and without mineral fenses he wished to rely, but replied that he had put them all before the jury and the jury might choose any one of them. The jury did not choose, but it acquitted the prisoner. - San

One Horse Town, Good-Bye!

Any community whose streets are not durably paved is going to be known as a "one

When that time arrives, Prosperity says, "Gobd-bye, old friend. Good-bye

People start moving away. Bank deposits fall off. Business in general begins to take a slump, and the place is no longer"on the map."

Contrast all this with the city that is well paved.

It steadily forges ahead over its hard, even streets. Automobiles, busses and delivery trucks, operate efficiently and economically regardless of season or weather.

Business is good, and keeps getting better. Modern, fire-safe buildings spring up. New industries are attracted to town. Plants and factories are working full time. Trade at the stores is brisk, and everybody's busy.

In short, permanently paved streets and roads are one of the very best investments any community can make. You can enjoy the tonic effect of well paved streets by helping your local authorities to find ways and means to build more of them.

DISASTER PREVENTED BY INSUR-ANCE STABILITY

Former President H. A. Smith of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, in commenting on the 1924 fire loss of $548,000,000, said:

"That this enormous destruction causes no ripple on the commercial sea speaks well for the stability of stock fire insurance, but such a waste, if unchecked, nevertheless threatens our economic life.

"If business men in every community would take up the fire waste problem and apply practical business methods to its solution, this country in another twelve months would see a material reduction in this needless economic loss which continues to be a heavy drain on our national

A TAX REPEAL BOOMERANG

The plan to abolish federal estate axes would in actual practice destroy he ability of states to levy inheritance taxes because of the competition which would develop between the states in the way of encouraging the repeal of state inheritance tax laws. This would encourage the migration of capital and capitalists from states which levy inheritance taxes to those nich do not levy inheritance taxes. Also the repeal of the federal estate tax would deprive the federal government of its only means of securing OFFICIAL NEWSPAPER OF SANTA revenue from tax-free securities now exempt under the federal income tax

Making Perspective Sketches

Sketching buildings and other objects in true perspective is usually difficult for the beginner, but can easily be done with the aid of a piece of clear glass. It is held against a tree or post or in any other way, and the outlines of the building are traced on the glass with a grease pencil. Of course, the glass must not be moved after the work has been started, and the worker must also keep his position exactly behind it while the sketch is being made. After the outline has onds after inhaling deeply, is considered, been completed it is an easy matter to fill in the details.

The campaign was proceeding with full speed ahead and gave promise of early reaching the goal set for it. With such a large proportion of the states "over the top" or nearly so, the campaign resolved Itself into Independent efforts in local communities.

Early in the campaign several states had entered the $100,000 class, Among those which had contributed that amount or more were: New York, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Texas, California and Connecticut. Some of these had contributed several times the amount.

A check for $6,000 from the department of Panama was presented to Commander Drain in the presence of the executive committee. The presentation, made by National Executive Committeeman Fred de V. Sill of Panama, occasioned an enthusiastic demonstration. Panama set herself a quota of $2,500, .

The Rocky mountain group of states completed their campaigns with large oversubscriptions. The fund was oversubscribed by each of these states by nearly 50 per cent.

Among novel methods taken by various posts for raising their local quotas, honors so far go to Richard W. Townsend post at Auburn, Cal., and the post at Hickville, N. Y. Members of the west coast post made up a carload of fruit valued at $650 and shipped it off to market. The town's quota was $450. The New Yorkers made a house-to-house canvass, collecting tons of old papers. A substantial part of the local quota was made up in this way.

Florida Again Will Lead the Legion Parade

The Department of Florida, Ameribe extended first choice in hotel accommodations at the national convention of the Legion in Omaha, October 5 to 9, according to an official announcement from national headquarters here. It is the second consecutive year Florida has won these privileges. At St. Paul last year Florida led all departments in the parade.

These coveted preferences were won by the Floridans for having on June 15, 1925, "the greatest percentage of membership as figured against the average membership of the department for the years 1921-22-23-24." The ruling, as regards position in parade order, seating arrangements and hotel accommodations was made at the January meeting of the national executive committee. Florida with a percentage of 134.92 will lead the parade, while close on her heels will tread Mexico in second place with a percentage of 112.87. # World's Largest Boiler

The largest steam boller in the world is being installed in Pittsburgh, Pa., by a heating company. There are six miles of four-inch steel tubing in the beating and condensing apparatus, with a heating surface of about threefourths of an acre. The boller is rated at 3,000-horsepower by the ordinary system of rating, but is capable of operating continuously at three times this capacity and for short periods at four times this rate. When at full load it evaporates 200 tons of water per hour.

The Only Difference Is Important!

A merchant in New York, who, like ourselves, does not believe that so-called "sales" safeguard the interests of the public, says that "the only difference, in our opinion, between an ordinary every-day hold-up and a teduction sale is, that in the first you pull a gun on a stranger whereas in the second you pull it on a friend."

"What a store loses in a sale," this merchant says, "Is paid for by the excessive prices charged regular patrons. We simply don't do business that way."

Nor do we!
