STATE FAIR TO HAVE MANY NEW FEATURES

With a number of the greatest outdoor acts in America booked for showing at the Arizona State Fair, the entertainment program for the six-day event to be held from November 9 to 14 will be one of the most popular features of this year's exposition.

Starting at 9 o'clock in the morning and lasting until midnight on each day of the fair, varied attractions will provide entertainment for the vast crowd expected at this year's free fair.

Horse racing with only Arizona horses entered will be a popular feature. Automobile races to be held under the sanction of the American Automobile Association will bring together the fastest cars and most daring drivers from all parts of Arizona. The automobile racing alone is expected to assure the success of the fair.

Several of the leading wire acts of the country will give both day and night exhibitions. Stanley's trick horses—four carloads of them—will provide additional entertainment.

The big feature of the night program will be the exhibition of the famous Thearle-Duffield fireworks. The exhibition will be identical to those presented at great eastern events. The sets and displays will be different on each night of the fair.

Four football games between the leading high school and college teams will be played during fair week. The annual Phoenix high school and El Paso high school contest will be one of the athletic features.

Bernard's Exposition Shows, one of the largest carnival companies in the country, will establish a "pike" in the fair grounds and will present both day and night attractions. Both the free admission features and the night activities are innovative.

ASK EXTRADITION OF VALDEZ

Tucson.—Extradition papers for the return to the United States of Louis Valdez, charged with the murder of his wife with a nice pick, and who is now being held at Nogales, Sonora, have been turned over to J. E. Anchondo, Mexican consul at Tucson, by Sheriff Walter Bailey of Pima county. The papers had recently been prepared by County Attorney K. B. Peterson.

After the documents are certified to by Anchondo, they will be returned to Sheriff Bailey, who will forward them to Governor Hunt, who in turn will send them to Governor Bay of Sonora.

TREASURER'S BOOKS TO RECEIVE COMPLETE AUDIT

At the regular meeting of the Board of supervisors, held Monday in Nogales, it was decided to engage auditors for a continuance of work on the books of the county treasurer, in order to bring them up to date and strike a new balance.

A recent audit brought the books up to 1921. The work of auditing the books for the last four years will cost approximately $4000, according to the supervisors.

The supervisors are planning to have the treasurer's books audited yearly in future.

SONOITA PIONEER DIES

M. L. English, pioneer of Santa Cruz county, age 70 years, dropped dead in the Sonoita valley Saturday afternoon, a victim of apoplexy. He was one of the oldest ranchers in the Sonoita district, having homesteaded his place years ago, adjoining the R. C. Larimore ranch. Recently he had been living at the ranch of G. P. Woodward. Mr. English had suffered from paralysis for about two years. He formerly lived at Rush Hill, Mo.

Big Majority Here for New Law

The Santa Cruz county board of supervisors Monday canvassed the returns from the recent election in the county and announced the vote on the compensation act was 222 for, and 54 against it.

Train Changes Schedule Monday

Saturday will be the last day for the Southern Pacific motor car between Nogales and Benson. It will be taken off and in its stead a mixed steam train will be placed on the run. The train will leave Nogales Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and on the return trip will leave Benson Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Many Cattle Shipped From Sonoita

Nine carloads of cows, calves and yearlings were shipped this week from Sonoita to the Los Angeles market. The Santa Cruz County Livestock Association handled five cars, and the balance were shipped by private parties. Present cattle prices are good.

SEED FOR MEXICO MUST BE FUMIGATED

According to new regulations put into effect by Mexico, all seed imported into Mexico at the port of Nogales must be fumigated with bluestone of carbon. It was stated Saturday by a commission broker.

Under these regulations, shipments of seed must be held in the fumigation room from 24 to 48 hours, and as this is the planting season it is recommended that shipments be made in plenty of time so as not to be delayed in reaching their destination.

Mexico Has Big Cotton Crop

Charles Kisselbach of the Nogales Commission Company has returned from a tour through the Altar district of Mexico and says that although a smaller acreage is planted to cotton this year than last, the crop will be as large as last year on account of this year's yield being larger per acre.

8-Pound Boy Blesses Rawsthornes

Announcements were received here Thursday of the birth of an 8-pound son to Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Rawsthorne of Globe. Mrs. Rawsthorne was formerly Miss Kathryn White of Sonoita and Tucson.

Patagonia.—Concentration mill being erected on Big Jim mine. Sinking will be resumed upon its completion.

Holbrook.—Jerome Nava, 17, will be deepened 500 feet.

SCHOOL NOTES

(Fidel Valenzuela, Editor)

Mrs. Carter's room had the best prepared music lesson that any room in school has had since school started. Mrs. Yost, music teacher, visited her room Monday and found almost every pupil knew perfectly all the work she has given since school started, besides being able to sing their songs. They have covered practically as much in musical facts as the upper grades.

Last Friday Judge W. A. O'Connor and Judge Charles Hardy of Nogales gave talks on "Old Ironsides" at the Opera House. The talks were very instructive and were enjoyed by the audience.

A. J. Stinson of Elgin has been employed to teach manual training in the Patagonia school.

A new Underwood typewriter has been installed in the high school.

This is report-card week, and all scholars are eager to see their monthly grades.

The schools of Santa Cruz County are to give a pageant representing the history of Santa Cruz County, at the County Fair at Sonoita, October 17. The pageant begins at 10 o'clock a. m. The Patagonia school is to show the life of the pioneers. Mrs. Yost is supervising Patagonia's part in the spectacle. Mrs. Sjoberg is general director, and Mrs. Carter is rehearsing those in the quadrille with the assistance of Mrs. Reeves. Mr. Buell plays the violin and Mr. Woodward is the caller. Mrs. Swyers is directing the costuming. Mr. Stinson has charge of the cabin the pioneers are to erect.

Some of the more industrious children in the Fifth grade have made nice paper pulp maps of the New England states, which they will paint Friday.

The Fourth and Fifth grades have enjoyed a dictionary game this week which encourages them in its use at other times.

Macario Saldate missed only one word during the month of September in his spelling.

REDUCED R. R. RATES FOR FAIR

Phoenix, Oct. 10.—Special round-trip rates of a fair and one-half have been announced by railroads from all points in Arizona, California, New Mexico and west Texas to the 1925 Arizona Free State Fair, to be held November 9 to 14, inclusive, at Phoenix.

The selling dates for the tickets will be from November 4 to 14 and the return limit will be November 19. A large attendance from points outside of the state is expected by the state fair commission in view of the fact that the great exhibition of mining machinery and processes of the National Mining Congress will be shown at the Arizona State Fair, which will be held a week previous to the convention of the mining congress in Phoenix.

Tucson.—Tucson-Vail road is to be straightened at a cost of $85,000.

ELGIN NEWS NOTES

Mark C. Turney was badly cut by barbed wire Saturday when he lost control of his car and ran into a fence. He received several bad gashes across his face and breast and was taken to his home for treatment.

Mrs. C. J. Trask of Patagonia motored to Elgin Tuesday to visit her mother, Mrs. O. J. Rothrock.

S. M. Beebe and E. W. Farrenkopf were business visitors Monday to Tombstone.

Mrs. E. W. Farrenkopf visited her mother, Mrs. C. A. Gardner, at Elgin Monday.

S. J. Goforth has returned to Elgin from Texas, where he had spent the summer. He says there is a serious drought in Texas this year where he had been visiting.

Dr. F. W. Allen of Tucson and Mr. Hicks of Long Beach, Calif., were Elgin visitors Wednesday.

Gus Yeary and his crew of road workers have moved camp to Elgin, where they are doing repair work on the county road.

Howard Dalton of the Gorder ranch was a visitor to Elgin Sunday.

Oliver Rothrock, game warden, went to the Mustang mountains Sunday in search of a couple of deer hunters.

Ernest Knight suffered slight injury Saturday when a rope holding the ladder in his sled broke and precipitated him into the pit.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hanson entertained a number of friends at a dinner party Sunday in honor of Mr. Hanson's mother, Mrs. P. A. Hanson, who celebrated her 78th birthday that day. After the dinner the party went to the home of Mrs. P. A. Hanson and enjoyed a musical program and ice cream.

A number of Elginites attended the dance Saturday night at Patagonia.

Mrs. Eva Barnett entertained some friends at a dinner party last week.

Everybody is mourning the loss of the daily S. P. "bug," which ceases its daily trips on the 10th.

Elgin was visited by a good rain last Sunday.

GRAND CANYON POPULAR WITH TOURISTS

Phoenix.—The 1925 travel year ending September 30, has broken all records in the history of the Grand Canyon National Park. Visitors to the number of 134,053 made the trip to the park this year, compared with 108,256 last year, an increase of 25,797 persons.

Records show that 69,281 people arrived by rail and 64,541 people in 19,910 automobiles. Two thousand ninety-six of these cars and 7114 people being registered on the North Rim.

Cars were registered from every state in the Union, District of Columbia, Hawaii, Panama, Mexico and Canada, with California leading the list. For the first time in the history of the park, travel by private means exceeded that by rail for five consecutive months—May, June, July, August and September. There were also 30 foreign countries represented by rail travel in the park the past year.

The Grand Canyon National Park, with its unexcelled scenic grandeur, good roads, trails and most excellent climatic conditions the year round, has proven to be an ideal recreational ground for both east and west bound travel the entire year.

New Idea in Husbands

The late Gene Stratton-Porter, the noted novelist, looked on marriage too lightly.

"I was once lecturing about birds to a class of girls," she confided to a New York publisher last year, "and when I came to the ostrich, I observed:

"The ostrich sees very little. On the other hand, it digests everything." "A girl with bobbed hair stopped powdering her nose long enough to giggle:

"Gee, what an alien husband an ostrich would make!"

THE START OF THE REVOLUTION

The difficulties between England and her American colonies which led to the Revolutionary War and the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of which will be observed next year by the Sesqui-centennial International Exposition at Philadelphia, can be traced back to 1733.

In that year the British parliament passed the first of a series of acts which so tried the patience of the colonists that they began thinking of separate political existence.

The first act, passed in 1733, was known as the Molasses Act. It placed a tax of sixpence a gallon on molasses. It was followed by the Sugar Act of 1764, placing a tax on sugar, and a year later by the Stamp Act, which ordered a duty on all legal documents, pamphlets, newspapers, advertisements and almanacs.

The Stamp Act was repealed in 1766, and in 1767 the passage of the Townshend Act placed a tax on tea, glass, paper and painters' materials. This act particularly incensed the colonies. It provided that some of the proceeds would pay the salaries of colonial governors and judges, and ordered the trial of cases growing out of collecting a revenue to be heard before judges without the presence of juries.

At this time Connecticut sent a representative to England to protest against "Taxation without representation." Virginia passed a resolution against the acts and Patrick Henry delivered his famous speech, "Give me liberty or give me death."

The people of the colonies suffered under these various forms of taxation but boycotts against taxed articles became widespread. Then, on December 16, 1773, a party of men disguised as Indians boarded a British vessel in Boston harbor and emptied its cargo of tea into the bay. On October 16, 1773, Philadelphia had its own tea party in the state house square, at which strong resolutions were adopted, refusing to pay the tax on tea. At that meeting a committee was appointed to wait on Captain Ayres of the ship Polly, and instruct him not to attempt to land his cargo. It was on December 27 that the Polly arrived in the harbor and Captain Ayres was met by a crowd of 8000 excited people. He was given to understand that he must take the ship back to England after one day's grace allowed him to obtain food and water.

LESTER KNOCKS OUT BENSON'S PRIDE IN SECOND ROUND

Benson, Ariz., Oct. 6.—Pat Lester, Tucson heavyweight, knocked out Horace Moore of Benson twice in the second round of their scheduled 16-round battle here last night, getting first a referee's decision and second a promoter's decision. In the semi-windup, Mickey Obregon, Tucson flyweight, gave away 22 pounds and beat Tiger Miller of Tucson.

Lester had an easy time with Benson's colored boy, flooring him every time he could get close to him. Moore went down three times in the first round, and had been floored twice in the second, when Referee Mandell stopped the fight. Before the crowd had left their seats, however, one of the promoters jumped into the ring and announced that the fight must continue. The men opened up again and Lester put his man down for good in about 30 seconds.

In the preliminary, Eddie Jones of Tucson took a decision from Young Martinez of Benson.

NATURALLY

Superintendent Paulson of the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League was discussing rather sorrowfully the New Jersey rum-rung scandal.

"We can't expect prohibition to work at once," he said. "With the next generation it will work, but this generation—"

Mr. Paulson heaved a sigh. "It's enough to make a man lose his head," he went on. "A zealous prohibitionist lost his head the other night," he said. "With the next generation it will work, but this generation—"

"Whiskey has killed more men than bullets, and yet there's many a fool right before me tonight that would rather be full of whiskey than belated."

Improving on History

I just finished hearing a Politician, one of the Washington Boys, talk on Abraham Lincoln. The only thing I could picture in common between him and Lincoln was that they had both been in Washington. When a Politician ain't talking about himself he is talking about Lincoln. Lincoln has had more Public men speak of his good qualities, and fewer copy any of them, than any man America ever produced. His famous address was only about two hundred words long. No Politician has ever been able to even copy his briefness. In fact that is the last one of his qualities that they would try to copy. Lincoln said more in those 200 words than has been said in the entire City of Washington in the last 10 years, and here is a quality that no historian or speaker has ever brought out before. At the completion of the Gettysburg speech, he wisely refused one of Grant's Cigars, and borrowed a sack of "Bull" Durham from an Ex Southern private, rolled his own, got on his horse and went back to Washington.

Famous Perfumes

Attar of roses is not produced commercially in the United States. It is chiefly produced in Bulgaria and in France and to some extent in India. Attar of roses is used principally for perfumery purposes, the water remaining after the oil distillation being called rose water. This latter product is largely used for culinary purposes.

Fall of Holy Sepulchre Feared

British officials in Palestine express apprehensions lest the Holy sepulchre, shown above, cave in from the gradual weakening of the walls due to age and to the innumerable offerings of pilgrims. "Hungry Hearts"

I had been writing and starving for years. My stories, which appeared in the magazines from time to time, had been gathered together and published in a book called "Hungry Hearts." Although reviewers praised it, my royalties were so small that it brought me little money and almost no recognition. People who read a book little know what small reward there is for the writer while he is still unknown—of his often solitary, starved existence. A book read in one evening may have taken the author years and years of the most agonizing toil to create.—Anzia Zelevska, in Heart's International-Cosmopolitan.

THE HOMESTEADS

SYNOPSIS—Lured by his four-year-old playmate, Jean Lane, Frank Hall, aged six, ventures on the forbidden wall of a dam, in a small Ontario town. He falls into the water and is saved from possible death by clinging to Jean's outstretched arms. Next day Jean informs him that because of their adventure of the day before he is in duty bound to marry her. He agrees when they are "grownups." With Jean's brother John, also aged six, Frank begins school. Two years later they are joined by Jean and Frank's sister Marjorie. A little later Jean confides to Frank, in verse, her hope of some day becoming "Mrs. Hall." He accepts the "proposal." Frank is fourteen when his mother dies. The boys are eighteen when John's father is killed in an accident. Two years later Frank's father and John's mother are married. Disappointed with conditions, and ambitious, the two boys make plans to go to Manitoba and "homestead," the girls agreeing to go with them. They set out. At Regina they meet "Jake," who agrees to find them satisfactory homesteads.

Jake threw a querying stress on the word sisters, but it was against all nature to be offended at him. Had we resented his remark he would have laughed our seriousness out of court. But we decided to see some of the adjoining sections.

Sixteen appealed to Jack. We could have taken the west half, and so, working together, we would have had a mile furrow. The gully also touched sixteen, and would have given us the same advantages as Jake claimed for the sections he had recommended. However, we found him very fixed in his preference for Fourteen and Twenty-two, and finally we accepted his arguments, and set out to make a more detailed survey of the land. The gully angled between the two quarters, taking scarce an acre off either of them. A jolly stream, brown with the grass of its banks, gurgled along its bed.

I knelt down to try the water; there was the taste of snow, but there was also the harder, sharper note of spring water mingled with it.

"Runnin' water like that is worth a thousand dollars on any man's farm," Jake declared. "An' come up this way. Wait till I show you somethin'."

The "something" proved to be a widening in the valley, where was a considerable growth of small willows and poplars. "Fence posts and firewood," said Jake, "an' on railroad land, too, that won't be sold for years. You'll have 'em all cut down before then. That timber's worth another thousand, or half that, anyway."

I thought of the great pine back on the old farm in Ontario, and the "timber" looked to me like gods and switches. None of it was tall enough to reach out of the little valley and show a green tip to the bald surface of the prairies. But we were not in Ontario now; we were in a land where even a three-inch tree was not to be despised.

"An' here's somethin' more," he said, setting an example for us by walking stealthily on his pudgy legs through the clumps of willows. At the other end of the wooded space we found a little pond opening out, and a score of wild ducks drowsing placidly on its smooth surface.

"An Englishman," Jake remarked, when we had turned back, "would take this farm for the duck pond alone. They're the dandiest people ever was fer wantin' to kill somethin'. He don't care if his farm is all sand or wallows, 's long as there's somethin' to shoot, the Englishman don't. But fer a Yankee it mus' be every acre wheat land. He don't care fer nothin' but the long green." Jake paused as though to think over these national characteristics.

"Let's find a badger hole," he continued, and we had little trouble in locating one. "Now look at this. This hole goes down five, six, seven feet, maybe more, in the ground. Look what his ribs has kicked out. Fine, loamy, sandy soil, not too light an' not too sticky, all the way down. That goes plumb to kingdom come. Course, the 'op is a little darker, on account of the grass roots, but it's all soil. None o' yer down-east three inches-o'-muck-an'-a-rock-bottom to that."

Jake took a fresh chew of tobacco and looked out over the greenish-brown prairie.

"I have it figured out like this," he went on, "an' my fingers is right; this land is worth more than any gold mine between hell an' Whoopoo. When you take the gold out o' a mine you ain't got nothin' left, but you can take gold out o' this mine next year, an' the year after, an' the year after, fer ever an' ever, an' there's still as much there as when you started—if you farm it right."

Our inspection satisfied us in every particular. Jake explained, as we already knew, that we would have to build separate shacks on the two quarters, to comply with the law about sleeping on the land claimed. "But you can build one stable in the gully fer the live stock," he added; "the government don't care where they sleep, Jus' so's the homesteader himself is sufficiently uncomfortable."

We smiled over his interpretation of regulations which, as we knew, were necessary to prevent the wholesale blanketing of the free lands by people who had no intention of living on them.

"Now we better pick a second an' a third choice, Jus' in case someone slips in ahead o' us on this," said Jake, and we spent the afternoon driving about and making fresh locations. Much of the land was already taken up, Jake told us, and although there were as yet no signs of settlement we would see a great change by fall.

We camped on Fourteen that night, and Jack and I were filled with plans for our shacks and our stable. The shacks would be up on the prairie level, on opposite sides of the gully, in full view of each other, and about a hundred yards apart. The stable would be in the gully, close to the road allowance, sheltered from the winds, and convenient to water. The crossing of the stream was passable, but would stand improvement.

Early in the morning we started back, and after three full days in the democrat we found ourselves one evening swinging up the now strangely familiar streets of Regina. The raw prairie city of 1904 already almost seemed like home. We were like travelers returning from strange lands to scenes of old recollections. We had been away just seven days, but in that time we had swung far out into the universe; we had drunk of the air of God's new creation; we had been strangely conscious of the company of our souls.

In the morning we went with Jake to the land office; Fourteen and Twenty-two in the township where we had decided to locate were still open, and we had no difficulty in filing our claims. We returned to the stable with Jake.

"What's the damage?" Jack demanded.

Jake expectorated profusely, spread his feet, and scratched his head. "Seven times seven is forty-nine; fifty dollars fer locatin' makes ninety-nine; I guess she's ninety-nine, boys; gosh darn it, we might have made it a hundred."

We paid him the ninety-nine and Jack threw in another. "We'll make it an even hundred," he said. "Come out and see us when you get a chance; we may have a bite of fried coyote for you."

"Oh, I'll be along, I'll be along," said Jake. "I'll blow out there often."

We shook hands with Jake and turned away with a strange feeling of cutting ourselves adrift. We had not known how quickly an attachment may grow—on the prairies.

CHAPTER IV

If we thought we had finished with Jake it was evidence that we still had much to learn about our guide's business qualities. Jake had a follow-up peculiarly his own, and that afternoon he came steaming into our presence as we sat in the bare lounge room of the hotel, making a list of necessities on the back of an envelope.

"I been chasin' you fellows all over hellangone," he announced, with a profuse expectation to facilitate speech. "I got a fistful o' luck fer you. Chap down at the stables—trouble o' some kind or other—wants to sell his horses; as pretty a team o' bays as ever switched a tail in flytime, an' I can put you next."

"That's good of you," said Jack, "but we've just figured that we can't afford horses. It's a case of horses and no cow, or oxen and a cow, and the vote at the moment stands unanimous for milk to our porridge, even at the risk of our characters. They tell us that even a good man swears when he drives oxen."

"That's wrong," Jake corrected. "A good man don't drive oxen. He may be good before he drives them, but not while he drives them, nor immediate afterward. It's agin human nature. I've seen profanity on some o' the ox trails o' this country so thick it lay Jus' like a fog on the prairie. Oxen has started more fellows on the wrong road than any other critters—'cept women."

"Well, we're going to take a chance with both," was Jack's answer. "You don't happen to have a hard-up friend who would part with a yoke of oxen, for a consideration, do you?"

Jake scratched his tousled hair meditatively. "Come to think o' it, I believe I do," he said at length. "I jus' remember a chap who was talkin' o' sellin' his oxen t'other day. As sleek a yoke as ever switched a tail in flytime; gentle an' strong, an' speedy as a scart rabbit. I reckon I could get you a special price on 'em, pretendin' it was meself that was buyin'."

"And a cow," I ventured. "Have you a cow on your bargain list?"

"Jake has everything on his bargain list that we may happen to need," said Jack. "Everything from a cow to a cookstove. It's all right, Jake; we don't mind your little graft so long as you play the game half fairly, and see that we get at least fifty cents' worth on the dollar. Buying on our own judgment we would probably get less than that."

So it was arranged that Jake was to be our purchasing agent, with a sort of gentleman's understanding that he might cheat us a little in consideration of his services in preventing other people from cheating us a great deal. The arrangement, I believe, worked out to our advantage. Jake undoubtedly bought our supplies for less than we could have bought them, even after providing his secret commissions. Moreover, he knew what was essential and what was not, and he saved us valuable time.

When at last our outfit was complete I presented a picturesque and somewhat pathetic turnout. On our wagon we had built a temporary box of boards, and on this were piled our trunks and personal effects, a plow, a stove, food supplies, a tent, a crate with hens and another with a young pig, while over all roosted, if I may use the term, the two girls. The cow we tied behind, while Jack and I walked as a sort of flank guard on either side of the oxen. These two phlegmatic creatures rejoiced in the names of Buck and Bright, and stolidly pursued their destiny at a pace of two and a half miles an hour. Their resignation in adversity was sublime; in fact, we soon found it impossible to invent any adversity to which they were not resigned.

With such an outfit our progress was much slower than it had been with Jake and his "flyin' ants," but it was an experience of unbounded freedom and delight. The days held bright and warm, as it was still too early for the May rains; the nights were cold and starry, with a tang of frost toward morning; the dawns were a rush of color, and the sunsets indescribable.

At nights we pitched the tent and made down blankets for the girls, but Jack and I slept under the stars. We were roughing it, but every muscle in our young bodies was vibrating with the tense new life of the open. When the girls called us to breakfast of fried bacon and potatoes and steaming coffee and milk from our traveling dairy we were more happy and more hungry than anything we had ever known to be possible.

And the girls! We saw them growing browner every day, but with their sunburn they seemed to take on a strange new charm and competence. They treated the whole experience as a high adventure, and after cramped hours on the top of "the ark" they would race like wild things across the prairies, their hair flying in the breeze, and a vagrant wind tossing the skirts about their shapely limbs.

They had taken the precaution to provide themselves with sunbonnets, but the prairie sun is an impetuous lover, and their cheeks and lips showed the mark of his caresses. He was a rival who did not pique my jealousy, for in his embrace I saw the woman Jean bursting forth from the bud of girlhood in a beauty that kept my blood a-tingle.

There was just one note that bothered me. It was sounded a day or two after we left Regina in some covert remark which Marjorie made about Jean's Mounted Policeman. It seemed that while Jack and I had been away land hunting the girls, too, had been doing a little prospecting. Regina was the headquarters of the mounted police, and the fine figures of these young riders and the plains with their scarlet tunics and trim gold-ribbed riding trousers and clanking spurs had turned more heads than Jean's before and since. It seems the girls were walking along a business street when they saw a young policeman coming at a short distance, and they happened to stop to admire something in a window while he approached. He also stopped to admire, and Marjorie said something—which Jean would not have done—and a conversation started up, and the policeman seemed to prefer

Jean, perhaps because she had not spoken first. At any rate he saw them safely home, and dallied over his responsibility and the gate post until they said they must go in. He called the next night and wanted to take them to a "show," but they would not go; at any rate, Jean would not go.

"But you went walking with him," Marjorie challenged.

"He asked you, too," said Jean, her pretty face coloring. "You started with us, and then went back."

"I saw how the land lay, or the wind blew, or whatever it was. I had nothing to do at home, but I knew I would be busier there than walking with you and your policeman."

"Marjorie! How can you—"

"And he told her he would call on her after we were settled."

"He did no such thing! He asked me where we were going to settle, and I told him I didn't know, and he said he hoped he would be patrolling there. He's going to be sent out from barracks soon, and he said it would be safer for me—for us—if someone were patrolling our district."

"Not for you, dear," said Marjorie, meaningly, and there was a little sting in her words which brought me into action.

"I believe you're jealous, Marjorie," I said, in tones intended to be severe. "And aren't you?" she retorted. "You ought to be."

The truth is, I was. Jean had always belonged to me so absolutely that I had never thought of the possibility of a rival. Even now I did not think of such a thing seriously. It was true that there was no engagement between us, unless the word of a man of six and a woman of four can be taken as binding, but I looked on Jean as mine, nevertheless, and I resented the action of the mounted policeman in seeking her acquaintance. I resented, too, the fact that she had gone walking with him, and I told her so at the first opportunity.

It came that afternoon. Jean said she was tired riding, and got down to walk, on my side of the wagon. We trudged along for some distance in silence, save for my occasional words of rebuke and exhortation to the oxen.

"You're cross at me," she said at length.

"I'm not." Why I said that I can't imagine. I was, and wanted her to know it.

"I didn't mean to offend you," she went on. "Marjorie was just a little bit—spiteful."

"I know she was," I agreed. "But you shouldn't have gone walking with him."

"Why?"

"He was a stranger. You didn't even know his name."

"I do now. It's Harold Brook. Besides, in this country, you don't have to know people's names. You just speak anyway."

"Oh, do you?" I said, sarcastically. "So I see."

"Don't be cross," she coaxed. "See, I can beat you to that badger hole. One—two—three—"

She was off like the wind. For a moment I hesitated, then joined in the race. But she had too much start, and besides, she was almost a match for me. She reached the little mound first, and as she turned she answered a little from her course, and I happened to plunge into her. To save herself from falling she seized me about the neck, and her hair brushed against my face.

We walked back slowly, arm in arm, and I had a sense of being very much of a brute. . . . Jean had wound me around her little finger.

There are certain thrills of accomplishment, certain epochs of development, which come only once in a lifetime. One of these is when a young man writes his first check, or first turns his key in his own door, or first sees his name on an office signboard. But the greatest is when he first looks upon land he can call his own. True, this land was not yet ours, but it was pledged to us if we carried out our part of a very simple agreement, and already we had a proprietary interest in it. We showed it to the girls with the pride of a mother displaying her first born. We were desperately anxious that our choice should be justified.

We waited for their verdict, but neither spoke. "Well, what do you think of it?" Jack asked at length.

"It looks all right," said Marjorie. "I suppose it is as good as any. But I don't see how you are going to tell it from other people's land. It's all alike."

"What do you say, Jean?"

But Jean was looking at the sunset, where the Master Artist was splashing pastels of bronze and copper against a background of silver and champagne. "Wonderful, wonderful," she murmured.

"Fourteen is Frank's and Twenty-two is mine," Jack explained. "We'll pitch the tent for the girls here, and Frank may do as he likes, but I'm going to cross the gully and sleep to-night under my own vine and fig tree, so to speak. My six months' residence begins tonight!"

"Fig tree!" Marjorie exclaimed. "The trees around here are just about high enough to tickle your ear—when you're lying down."

"You haven't seen the trees yet," said Jack, knowingly. "Now, let's pitch camp."

We dragged the tent close to the brow of the gully and pitched it on the spot where we had planned that my shack should be. We also unloaded part of our equipment so that we could make use of it in the housekeeping operations. It was with great zest that we carried our cookstove to the door of the tent and strung up two or three lengths of pipe. In a few minutes Jack appeared from somewhere with an armful of wood, and as the darkness settled down we gathered about a fire on our own farms, for the first time in our lives.

And so we chattered on, saying nothing of moment, but feeling the great joy of possession welling in our hearts. It was a day and a night to be lived over many a time in memory. For the first time in our lives we were drinking of the wells of possession—the enchanted streams which draw men and women into the wilderness to live and die on the outskirts of civilization.

We had finished supper, and the gray gloom of twilight was crawling slowly up from the east when a sharp, whistling rustle almost above us brought the girls to their feet with a start.

"What was that?" Jean exclaimed.

"It was almost like a bullet."

"Nay, nay," said Jack, indulging in a very sorry joke. "It is a ducklet."

"A ducklet? What ducklet?"

"That, my dear sister, was the whistle from the wing of a wild duck, darting into the darkness at a couple of hundred miles an hour. He had just got his eye on you."

"More likely on the gun," said Jean, for we had included a cheap shotgun among the articles considered indispensable. "Wait until Frank gets after him."

I was greatly flattered by Jean's wholly unwarranted confidence in my marksmanship and eager to justify it at the earliest moment.

"No time like the present," said I, picking up the gun and filling my pocket with cartridges. "Besides, we have a surprise to show you."

So we started out in the gathering darkness, I going first, as became the bearer of the gun; Jean at my heels; Jack and Marjorie a little in the rear. Down the steep edge of the gully we worked, and then along by the marge of the brown sown water which rippled happily over beds of bending grass.

At a short distance we came to the spot where the valley broadened out and the little grove of trees had found its place of shelter from Chinook winds in winter and prairie fires in spring and fall. The air was full of the sweet scent of bursting willow buds and balm-o'-Gilead, and as we picked our steps as noiselessly as we could the slightly stirring limbs above us wrought their dark tracery against the blue and starry heaven.

"Oh, Frank! You never told me of this! How wonderful!"

"Wait until you see the pond," I whispered, as one who keeps the best to the last. "We did not select Fourteen and Twenty-two without a reason."

There was no path between the slim, close-growing trunks of poplar and halm, and we had to make progress as best we could. . . . Jack and Marjorie had fallen considerably behind.

Then, suddenly, the still waters of the pond burst upon our view, and at the same moment, as though the very heavens conspired to set the stage to the best advantage, a blood-red moon sent its first platoon of light sweeping down from the northeast and splashing burnt-orange and ochre across the slightly ruffled surface of the pond. We stood for a time as mortals transfixed, watching the great red globe drawing swiftly into the blue above, until its light painted Jean's face and mine. In the moonlight her fine features were wonderful, irresistible. . . .

We were brought to earth by a flutter and splashing in the water. Two ducks, sweeping swiftly down out of the darkness, alighted not a dozen yards in front of us, and directly in the line of light. I drew my gun to my shoulder, and even as I did so their murmured gruntings, shrill almost as the lisp of water on a gravelly shore, came to our ears, and they began to swim slowly about in graceful little circles. There was even a motion about the head of the male, as he brought it close to that of his mate, that was surely nothing short of a caress.

"Don't, Frank, don't; you mustn't!" Jean exclaimed suddenly.

Her arm darted out in front of me, seized the barrel of the gun and drew it swiftly to one side. I had been taking a most deliberate aim, to justify the high opinion already referred to, but at Jean's sudden interference I pressed the trigger, or, as I always claimed, it pulled itself against my finger, and went off. There was a loud report, and the sound of shot harmlessly lashing the water.

"Did you get him—did you get him?" shouted Marjorie and Jack, rushing down upon us.

"No, I didn't get him," I explained. "I didn't even try to get him. I just wanted to see how far the gun would carry."

"I wouldn't let him," said Jean. "It would have been a—just a horrible thing to shoot one of those poor creatures, the very first night we were here! How beautiful they were, and how—how loving!" She said the last word with a bashful, falling inflection that was wonderful to hear.

"It's much more horrible to have no wild duck—ducklet I mean—for to-morrow's dinner," said Jack.

"And those cartridges cost ever so much; what is it?—three or four cents each," Marjorie remonstrated. "Well, let's go back."

We returned to our camp and started to make ready for the night. But Jack, true to his promise, gathered up his blankets, waded the cold stream, and slept under the stars of Twenty-two. We had begun our "period of residence."

Setting up housekeeping under these conditions would seem to be the wildest sort of an adventure. What next?

Lacks the Greatest Joys of Life

Many Wives are Childless Because of Ill Health. Read How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Mrs. Benedict

MRS. MARY R. BENEDICT
815 PAYSON STREET, KEWANEE, ILLINOIS

Kewanee, Illinois. — "When I was married about a year and a half I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because of ill health. I did not have any children. I now have two healthy little girls and I am sure I would not have had them had it not been for your medicine. Last spring and summer I got all run down, irregular, and I had awful headaches, and my back and side hurt me so that I could stay up only a short time. My limbs would get so tired and ache till I could cry. I started to take the Vegetable Compound again and used the Sanative Wash, and it was not long till I was relieved. Now I do all my own work and help others. I sure praise Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines to any one I meet that is suffering from similar troubles. I think if mothers with girls would give it to them when they come to womanhood it would make them stronger. People who have known me all my life are astonished to see me now as I was always sickly when in my teens until I started taking the Vegetable Compound."—MRS. MARY R. BENEDICT, 815 Payson Street, Kewanee, Ill.

Has a Beautiful Baby Girl Now

Bridport, Vermont. — "In the first place I wanted a baby, but none seemed to come to me. I just love children and my husband is away all day, so I was not happy at all. A doctor told me I could not have a baby until I went to a hospital. But my sisters said, 'Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and you will be O.K.' I was nervous, had organic weakness, with backache, sideache, headache and no strength. I had been in bed nearly a week when I began taking the Vegetable Compound. It was all that ever helped me and I just wish you could see my beautiful baby girl. I am fine now, and so is she. I am still taking the medicine as it keeps me well. You may be sure I am recommending the Vegetable Compound and always will."—MRS. A. W. HOWE, Bridport, Vermont.

PERSONAL LIABILITY FOR FIRE CARELESSNESS

Personal liability for damages arising from fire on account of the alleged gross carelessness of another will be given its first test in the courts of Georgia as a result of the filing of one of the few suits of its kind, in the Bibb county superior court. The petition, instituted by the Macon Cabinet Works against the Southern Box and Basket Company for damages of $17,000, is of particular interest for the reason that insurance companies and officials and citizens of Macon are working in conjunction to reduce the normal burning ratio of Macon.

Mass meetings of civic bodies and citizens have been held to correct conditions that will result in increasing insurance rates if not abated, and the city courts are invoking fire hazard laws and assessing heavy fines for their violation.

When the public once awakens to the fact that property owners, who carelessly of willfully permit fire hazards to exist on their premises, cause thousands of dollars of useless expense to other citizens in the shape of necessarily higher insurance rates, there will be a more general demand for fines and penalties to be charged against such property owners who are responsible for loss by fires.

In the present case the defendants were notified to clean up their property. All notices were ignored and accumulations of trash were permitted to exist with resulting fire losses to adjoining property. This case deserves national attention and should form the basis for legislation relating to personal liability for negligence in maintaining fire hazards.

IF YOU WISH LOW TAXES, CURB THE TAX EATERS

"As certain as death or taxes," runs a homely old proverb. Congressman W. C. Hawley of Oregon, speaking on the tax question, recently said:

"Taxation is the most brutal thing in the world. If you don't pay your taxes along comes the sheriff and sells your accumulations of years. If you do not have the money to pay your taxes, and lose everything you have, you get little or no sympathy from your friends or neighbors. Therefore, I say, taxation, being as brutal as death, should rest as lightly as possible upon the shoulders of the citizenry."

Most of the taxes we pay are self-imposed, for expenditure in our own immediate locality—school, city, road, county taxes. Every man may choose largely for himself whether his taxes are to be high or low, constructive or confiscatory. The more we demand from the public treasury, the higher our taxes will go.

GOOD NEWS FOR CITY WORKERS

The net return of farmers for the year 1924-25 is placed at $2,712,000,000 by the department of agriculture, compared with 1,992,000,000 for the previous year, a net cash increase of $720,000,000. The survey included all kinds of classes of farms.

Nearly $750,000,000 added to the income of a single class of Americans means much in increased purchasing power and this reflects better times in many other lines of industry and trade. When the farmer has funds with which to purchase, factories far removed from the farming regions become busy, and wages go into the pockets of city workers who otherwise might be out of jobs.

Things work out about equal after all. The thin man has more to laugh about, but the fat one more to laugh with.

Aircraft Board Hears Col. Mitchell on Weakness of America's Air Defense.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WITH 800 pounds of "ammunition" in the shape of documents and undaunted by his approaching court-martial for insubordinate utterances, Col. William Mitchell appeared before the aircraft board last week and repeated and elaborated on his charges that obstinacy and inefficiency of high army and navy officials have rendered the United States utterly deficient in air defense. He read a prepared statement in nine sections, the main points of which are thus summarized:

Development of air power has made it the chief weapon of national defense, navies and armies becoming subordinate and auxiliary to it. As airships can destroy any surface ships, the submarine becomes the backbone of the navy. The army, unchanged in constituent elements, will function as the last line of defense when the air and sea forces have failed to stop the enemy, or offensively only when control of the air permits transport of troops at sea. Anti-aircraft guns are ineffective and always will be, crippling only a very small percentage of planes. The United States has no air forces worth mentioning and if involved in war today would need from three to five years to develop an adequate air force properly equipped. Great Britain could invade America with a thousand planes in eight or ten days and a few days later would reach the heart of the country; and Japan could invade America by way of Alaska. In future wars the nation losing control of the air will capitulate to desolation by unrestricted air attack. An adequate air and submarine force would make this country invulnerable to attack, and the cost would be but a fraction of that of the army and navy at present. Finally, the United States should have a department of national defense, comprising the navy, army, and air force, and a department of aeronautics, comprising military and civil aviation and aircraft manufacture.

The mission of the land, sea and air forces, said Mitchell, should be definitely stated by law. That is:

"The army to be charged with the defense of all land areas;
"The navy to be charged with the defense of all sea areas, on or under the water beyond the control of missile throwing weapons from the shore or effective aircraft operations from shore bases;
"The air force to be charged with the complete defense of operations and the aerial attack of all enemy targets on sea and land."

To the self-asked question why the air service is in such plight, Col. Mitchell replied:

"Because air matters are entrusted to the army and the navy which are handled and governed and dominated by non-flying officers. They not only know next to nothing about aviation, but regard it merely as an auxiliary of their present activities and not as a main force in the nation's military equipment. Their testimony regarding air matters is almost worthless, sometimes more serious than this."

Next day Col. Mitchell continued his attack and criticized the navy for the Shenandoah disaster and the failure of the Hawaii flight. Then he was questioned at length by various members of the board and finally Chairman Morrow asked Admiral Fletcher of the navy and General Harbord of the army if they desired to put any questions to the witness. To the surprise of everyone, both declined to do any cross-examination. Mitchell himself was evidently disappointed.

IN THE naval court of inquiry at Lakehurst, Capt. Anton Heinen, former German Zeppelin pilot who instructed the crew of the Shenandoah, expressed the opinion that the wrecking of that airship was primarily caused by the failure of the officers in charge to heed danger signals that were "shrieking out loud." Specifically he blamed Commander Lansdowne, saying: "In my opinion the ship ran deliberately into the center of the storm for at least half an hour after danger signals had been shrieking out loud. With the ship having sufficient power for steering way, she easily could have got out of danger. I stand ready to prove this from the evidence presented to this court."

Captain Heinen criticized certain structural changes in the Shenandoah, and said he had heard from many members of the crew that they mistreated the airship because of her condition.

Lieut. J. B. Anderson, aerologist on the Shenandoah, testified that Commander Lansdowne disregarded his advice to change the course.

ANOTHER misfortune befell the navy in the ramming and sinking of the submarine S-51 about twenty miles from Block Island. Struck by the steamship City of Rome, she sank immediately and of her crew of 33 men only three were saved. Every effort to save the men imprisoned in the vessel's hull was made, but in vain, largely because of stormy weather and swift tides. After several days divers brought up the bodies of two of the victims, and operations to recover the others and to raise the submarine were continued. Blame for the distressing accident has not yet been fixed.

GERMANY accepted the invitation of the allies to a conference on a security pact, and this week the foreign ministers are assembled in Locarno, Switzerland, discussing the terms of the proposed treaty designed to give lasting peace at least to western Europe. The Germans sought to stipulate that their country should be purged of guilt for the war, but this was firmly refused by England and France. Probably the request and its rejection were designed to satisfy the nationalists in both Germany and France.

DISTINGUISHED statesmen from thirty-six countries are in Washington attending the sessions of the Interparliamentary union. The conference was opened Thursday with addresses by Secretary of State Kellogg and Senator McKinley of Illinois and a response by Baron Adelswaerd of Sweden, president of the council of the union. Silly friends of various factions in foreign lands took advantage of the arrival of certain of the delegates to exhibit their silliness. For instance, Gen. Richard Mulcahy of the Irish Free State was mobbed, both at his landing in New York and on his visit to Philadelphia, by Irish republic sympathizers; and the Italian delegates who are Fascists were attacked by anti-Fascist Italians in New York.

NO SETTLEMENT of the French debt was reached because M. Caillaux was unable to offer terms that the American commission would accept, and the negotiations have been suspended indefinitely. The French mission returning to Paris. However, a temporary arrangement was proposed by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and this was carried back by M. Caillaux for submission to the French parliament, which probably will agree to it gladly. This plan is that France shall pay the United States $40,000,000 a year for five years and that at the expiration of that period the discussion of the definite funding of the debt shall be resumed. The sum suggested amounts to 1 per cent interest on the total French debt with accrued interest. In reality the payments by France would be increased only $20,000,000, as she has been paying a like sum annually as interest on the A. E. F. war stocks she purchased in 1919.

M. Caillaux could not commit himself on the American offer, because, he explained, he was vested with full powers to reach a conclusive settlement but held no mandate to sign a temporary makeshift agreement. But he assured Mr. Mellon he would support the plan before parliament.

Caillaux's final offer, which was found unacceptable, was that France should pay $40,000,000 annually for the first five years, $60,000,000 annually for the following seven years, and $100,000,000 annually for the next 50 years, thus spreading payments over 68 years. To this was attached a "security clause" providing that France might at any time reopen the question and attempt to show that the terms should be revised owing to her incapacity to carry them out. This was objectionable to the Americans, especially to Senator Smoot, and rejection of the offer followed. Senator Borah took a hand in the affair by going to the White House and warning the President not to permit the American commission to grant to France easier terms than were granted to Great Britain. Both he and Senator Smoot told Mr. Coolidge there would be violent opposition in the senate to any such settlement as Caillaux proposed. Mr. Borah was highly displeased, also, by the makeshift plan of Mr. Mellon.

TSCHITCHERIN, soviet foreign minister, balked in his attempt to persuade Germany to stand with Russia against western Europe, is now said by Baltic diplomats to be trying to unite Russia, Poland and Turkey in an anti-English bloc. He was in Warsaw recently and induced the Poles to instruct their delegation in Moscow to begin negotiations for a political agreement. This is worrying the Baltic states considerably. Tschitcherine then went to Berlin to discuss a Russo-German trade treaty.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE JARDINE is getting tired of waiting for the Chicago board of trade to take steps to prevent manipulation that causes wild price fluctuations. Last week he issued another warning, saying: "A failure on the part of the board to take these steps immediately will leave me no alternative but to inaugurate action looking to suspension or revocation of the designation of the Chicago board of trade as a contract market."

COMMUNISTS of Great Britain fared badly in the national congress of the Labor party in Liverpool, and the more conservative elements carried out their expressed determination to rid the party of the Reds entirely. Chairman Cramp in his opening speech declared the Communists were a hindrance to the labor movement and traitors to its tradition. The Reds met their first defeat when the congress by a tremendous majority refused to reverse a vote of last year by which members of the Communist party were excluded from membership in the constituent Labor party. Former Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, J. H. Thomas, leader of the railway men, and the chiefs of the miners all took severe whacks at the Reds, and the latter brought on their final and conclusive defeat when they demanded that MacDonald apologize to Russia for the action of his foreign office in making public the notorious Zinovieff letter just before the last election.

YOUNG Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., had a walkover in the Wisconsin election to fill the vacancy in the United States senate caused by the death of his father. His majority over the field was about 2 to 1. E. F. Dittmar of Milwaukee, who was the only "regular" Republican candidate after Roy P. Wilcox had been forced out by the national organization, ran second but never threatened the winner. The votes for the others were negligible.

GOV. AL SMITH's campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1928 was actually launched at a big picnic of the Cook county, Illinois, Democracy in Chicago. The popular New Yorker in his speech especially attacked the economy record of the Coolidge administration and promised to do much better in that line if he were sent to the White House. He made a great hit with the 100,000 persons who heard him.

OVER the protest of Chairman O'Connor, the federal shipping board rescinded the resolutions designed to divorce the Fleet corporation from the board and readopted a resolution of 1921 under which the board keeps full control over the actions of the corporation. President Palmer of the corporation is likely to resign, for it is understood he accepted the office on condition that he have certain authority. Chicago business men are asking that the shipping board be abolished.

The Phoenix city commission recently made its first payment of $3,000 on its new air port. The new airport will be 160 acres, a short distance from the city, and the total price asked is $35,000. The $3,000 payment is for a two-year option on the field and can be applied to the purchase price if the city decided to buy the field outright.

The North Star at Kingman has started its first shipment of ore from the Pioneer to the Tom Reed mill, this trial lot being thirty-five tons, which is expected to carry values of over $20 per ton in gold. The trial run is being made from the No. 1 tunnel and the apex of the vein and is preliminary to the opening of stopes in that part of the mine where the vein is.

Date and citrus groves in the Yuma valley and on the Yuma mesa are in better condition than ever before, according to Dean John J. Thornber of the University of Arizona College of Agriculture, who has just returned from a short vacation in southern California, stopping over in Yuma en route for home. Land preparations for the planting of winter vegetables are also in progress.

The United Republic has started a crew of nine fixing up camp at the Century property, in the Walapai mountains, where work on the mines is to be soon under way.

The third large deal involving mining property in this territory, negotiated with the aid of the chamber of mines during the past few months, was that of the Marconi group of mines at Twin Buttes, which recently passed into the hands of Attorney A. A. Worsley and a group of associates under an option and lease agreement. Mr. Worsley, it was stated, represents a group of sixteen mining men of Globe who are headed by James J. Quinto in the transaction.

The three-cent gasoline tax was collected on 2,429,304.83 gallons of gasoline in August, and the revenue raised for good roads was $72,879.15, according to a report made public in Phoenix by Secretary of State James H. Kerby. One-half of the total collected, or $36,439.58 was turned over to the state treasurer to be placed to the credit of the State Highway Department, and the other half was sent to the treasurers of the various counties to be applied to road funds.

Arrangements for transfer of the capital stock of the Flagstaff Electric Light Company from the local owners to Paul C. Dodge & Co., of Chicago, have been completed in New York City. All the stock was transferred, the original owners retaining no interest.

At an enthusiastic meeting of Holbrook golf devotees it was decided to organize a golf club, limiting the membership to fifty, $10 initiation fee, and $10 a year. A nine-hole course will be built on a mesa overlooking Holbrook.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Co-Operation in China

The remedy for the woes of China and the safeguard against these perils are in principle simplicity itself. Time and again it has been demonstrated that when the Chinese, whether in the capital or in the provinces, know that the powers are really earnest and united upon a common course of action, they bow without reserve to the demands made upon them. It is not creditable to the statesmanship of the principal powers concerned that they have not managed to preserve this unity in essentials when dealing with China.—London Times.

POULTRY

COST OF RATION IS BIGGEST ITEM

A very important factor in any ration is the matter of cost. The best ration is one that will give the largest returns, cost considered. This does not mean the largest returns or the cheapest ration. The biggest income may be secured from a ration that is so high in price that it is impracticable to use, while the cheapest ration might bring about such low production as to make it unprofitable.

From the farm poultryman's standpoint the question of feeding is largely a question of economically supplementing the home-grown feeds. Two general types of feeds come under this classification: Those that are supplied to the fowls and those the fowls pick up by ranging over the farm.

In the majority of cases there are two problems: One, the supplying of protein or flesh-forming foods, and the other of giving the proper variety to the ration. This is more particularly true when the fowls are confined than when they are picking up considerable of their feed by foraging over the farm. When foraging they eat more scratch feed and less mash than will properly balance up their ration if they are allowed to choose as they may. Therefore, they must be encouraged to eat the mash by making it as attractive as possible and also by limiting the amount of the scratch feeds which are supplied, especially during the morning feeds.

The cost of the ration is the biggest item of expense in poultry production. The greatest opportunity for a saving lies in the feeding. The big item that the majority of people need to pay more attention to is that of balancing up the food by the use of some of the animal proteins and supplying additional variety. Too much scratch grain and not enough mash to properly balance the ration is the mistake made by many flock owners.

Market All Fowls That Molt Early in Autumn

"Most hens stop laying when they begin to molt," says E. L. Dakan of the poultry department at Ohio State university. "A hen must be a consistent layer to make a high record, and an early molting hen is not a consistent layer."

"The time of the molt is the best indication of the past year's performance. This rule can be used in culling all breeds and varieties, but is of special importance with such breeds as the Orpingtons and Minorcas that do not have the yellow skin."

"The hen that molts early, under normal conditions, will not lay as many winter eggs as the hen that molts late. Neither will she begin egg production earlier in the spring. No definite date can be set as to early molt, but as a general rule the first hens in the flock to molt should be sold, and the last to molt should be kept for breeding purposes."

"Hens may be thrown into an early molt by starving while laying heavily, by irregular feeding, by roosting in a house that is poorly ventilated, or by anything which tends to check egg production."

Fattening on Range

Some feeders have tried confining the turkeys while they are being fattened, but with little success. When confined to a pen, they may eat heartily for a few days but afterwards lose their appetites and then begin to lose flesh. A certain amount of liberty and range is necessary to keep them hungry and in good, healthy condition. Where this is combined with a good feeding ground, as is the case when they are allowed to run in a cornfield that has been hogged off, results are more than likely to be gratifying.

Poultry Hints

Ducks or geese will eat all the grit they require without putting it in their feed.

Turkeys should not be fed at first. Growth should come first and fattening should not begin until in November if the birds are to be wanted for the Thanksgiving market.

A novel and easy way to make wet mash is to pour a little milk in the mash hopper at noon. Just enough liquid should be used to moisten what the birds will clean up.

Make a bred-to-lay hen's home life happy and comfortable with proper housing and feeding, as well as the other surroundings, and she will try to do the best justice and let you enjoy the profits therefrom.

Only a laying hen is worthy of her feed.

Whether or not it pays to raise capons depends very much upon the market. People who eat capons are very particular people and birds not only have to be well raised, but well finished.

Green feed increases the fertility and hatchability of eggs. It has been found. Hens should have access to pasture, or be fed silage, sprouted oats or some other good green feed.

MODES IN YOUTHFUL FROCKS; KNITTED COSTUME POPULAR

WHEN the feminine world grows restive in its search for something new to add zest to even the most satisfactory modes, stylists always recommend a journey into new fields and a decided change of scene. This fall they took womankind firmly by the hand and led her to the realm of fuller frocks, higher and more defined waistlines and greater elaboration. In frocks—this is all they can do. The question now occupying their minds is—"Will she or will she not take kindly to these innovations?"

The edict of fashion for fuller frocks has been generally accepted but in tailored and utility dresses this greater fullness is not allowed to interfere with straight, slim lines. Therefore it is introduced by means of plaits that lie flat and are pressed or stitched down. There is considerable enthusiasm for greater fullness in afternoon and particularly in evening dresses, where it is introduced in many ingenious and graceful ways. But the utility dress has not said good-by to the simple, straight line and has not been introduced as yet to the high waistline. As for elaboration, it has developed an acquaintance with varied new neck treatments, but remains loyal to extreme simplicity in other details. A very good example of the youthful, everyday dress, such as the college or business girl will rejoice in, is shown between season perplexities, since nowadays knitted costume so handsomely answers the question "what to wear?" It is a fact when it comes to the problem of suitable attire, the knitted arts are proving equal to every demand of time, occasion and the elements. Just now interest is divided between elegant knitted ensemble costumes, two-piece suits, two-piece jumper frocks, one-piece dresses and crowning glory of all, wondrous full-length coats than which nothing more attractive in the way of wraps has ever been devised.

To enumerate all the lovely garments created by knitted stylists for the present and coming season's wear.

Youthful, Everyday Dress.

impossible, but here are a few items to be had for the buying, and that at an astonishingly small outlay of money considering their chic, charm and general practicality.

For early autumn wear what more satisfying and apropos than one of those simple one-piece knitted frocks such as are so conspicuously a part of the advance fashion program? There is that fine simplicity about these correctly styled dresses which bespeaks refinement and gentility. They come in such interesting colors, too, such as pencil blue, navy, mellow greens, and the new wine, fuchsia and red shades.

Colorfulness coupled with novelty patterning characterize both suits and here. It is developed in navy blue twill or rep, or in plain flannel or other dependable wool cloths, with vestee and collar of corn crape de chine. A bit of flat lace on the sleeves and belt, and a tie of velvet ribbon, in a bright color, complete its engaging but simple story. It has little points of difference in its construction from the frocks of yesterday. Greater fullness is introduced in the front of the bodice, giving the skirt portion a little extra width, the sleeves are long and the skirt is lengthened by several inches.

Is there a hint of frost in the air? A prophecy of winter in the cool autumn breeze? Summer frocks and turbelows had a memory? Too early for winter-weight cloth and fur? Why be cast down with "betwixt and be-

This One Has Stood the Test of Time

Unlike hen's eggs and society drapings, good jokes sometimes improve with age. Or at any rate they do not get old fashioned with the rapidity that an egg does.

Here is one which at intervals I have been hearing for years. It seems to me it gets better with each telling. I wonder if the reader will agree with me that its antiquity does not affect its excellence.

According to the most popular version, the thing is supposed to have happened in a remote courthouse of Missouri. A resident of the Ozark mountains whose reputation was none of the best, had been on trial on the charge of horse stealing. The jury promptly returned a verdict of guilty without recommendation for mercy. Taking into consideration the past record of the offender, his honor on the bench said:

"It is my intention to sentence you to at least eight years at hard labor in state's prison. Now then, before sentence is formally pronounced, I shall listen to anything you may have to say in your behalf."

He paused for a reply. After a moment of consideration the offender spoke:

"Well," he said, "I don't know ez I've got any thing to say only this—it strikes me that you folks 'round this here cote house air purty tole-erble d—n liberal with other people's time."

Better Than Believing in Santa Claus

Two typical wayfarers of the Bowery, penniless and tattered and with their feet half out of their wrecked shoes, were limping through one of the crooked streets of Chinatown. One of them found a small vial containing cocaine which, presumably, had been dropped by a dope fiend.

The tramps had heard many times of the stimulating and invigorating effects of this drug. Also, from association with habitués they knew the common method of taking it. They decided to experiment.

The finder uncorked the vial, poured a quantity of the white crystals into the palm of his hand and sniffed the stuff up his nostrils. His companion finished the bottle.

The effect was magical and almost instantaneous. They straightened their bent figures, drew their rags about them and stepped out briskly. Presently one of them spoke. There was a bloom in his cheeks and his eyes glistened:

"I've about decided," he said, "to make a few investments. I'm going to buy all the diamond mines in South Africa and after I've done that I'm going to buy all the gold mines in Australia."

His transformed partner made answer:

"Hold on," he said, "I don't know that I'm prepared to sell 'em!"

The Wail of a Suffering Soul

Once upon a time there was presented in a New York theater a historical drama by a new dramatist—a play so bad that even the critics didn't have the heart the next morning to tell the whole truth about it. At the end of the third act, when the suffering audience were writhing in their seats, a stout man who had been patronizing a bootlegger began to utter loud cries. A number of kindly disposed persons took up the chorus and in another minute the misguided playwright had responded to what he thought was a curtain call and was standing before the footlights bowing his appreciation and mumbling inarticulate words of thanks.

When the stout man had withdrawn himself the author's companion turned upon him angrily.

"What in the world did you mean," demanded the friend—"yelling for 'Author! Author!' like that?"

"I wasn't yelling for him," answered the fat man with much indignation, "I was yelling for ether!"

"Don't Speak Till You're Spoken To"

Roy McCardell, the humorist, went abroad. On the way across he grew quite chummy with Louis Tracy, the English novelist, who was returning home after a visit to America.

One morning in the smoking-room when the voyage was almost ended, Tracy passed and bowed to McCardell. A serious-looking Englishman witnessed this exchange of greetings and, after thinking the thing over for a time, approached McCardell.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "but you seem to know that gentleman who just passed. He and I are sharing the same stateroom, and this morning he got up first and by mistake put on my boots. He's wearing them now. Do you know him?"

"Yes," said McCardell. "That's Louis Tracy."

"Tracy, the novelist?" said the Englishman. "I admire his works immensely. I wonder if I might meet him!"

Ask Dad— See If He Knows

Father and mother are always thinking of your welfare—there isn't a thing within reason they wouldn't do for you.

But they may unknowingly have been risking your life every day.

When you are at dinner tonight with dad, ask him this question:

"Dad, is our school firesafe?"

Perhaps he won't be able to answer—he may not know.

Ask dad if he knows that somewhere in the country a schoolhouse burns every day. Ask him if he knows that one-third of all the schoolhouses in the country are nothing better than firetraps—maybe your school is one of them.

Of course dad knows that buildings can be built that will not burn. They are being built everywhere, every day.

If your school is firesafe, you're lucky. If it isn't, ask dad what he is going to do about it. You have a right to know.

The highest type of firesafe construction is concrete. Our illustrated booklet "Concrete Schoolhouses" contains a wealth of information on firesafe construction with which every parent ought to be familiar. Write today for your free copy.

CAMERON URGES HIGH TARIFF ON FOREIGN COPPER

Washington, D. C., Oct. 10.—The American copper industry is menaced by South American and African competition, Senator Cameron of Arizona said in a statement issued today. He declared that a tariff of at least 6 cents a pound should be placed upon copper to protect domestic industry against low production costs, including cheap labor, among our competitors.

While the United States is consuming the greatest amount of copper in its history, he stated, copper producing districts of his state are running on 60 per cent production basis and next year will decrease to 50 per cent, with a falling off each year until some relief is obtained. He asserted that the copper industry was unable at the present time to obtain the financial aid it needs because large amounts of money are being loaned in foreign nations' business interests.

"People are discussing the situation daily," he said, "and to a man almost are advocating a tariff on imported copper and are willing to support any remedy that will protect our copper industry." Not only in Arizona, but in copper areas of the west they realize that they cannot increase tonnage and the grade of local copper reserves or bullion without injury to their communities. The only way left for them is to employ methods adopted by the iron, lead, zinc and aluminum industries when they were confronted with identical conditions, namely through the medium of a tariff.

NOGALES BOY GETS HIGH SCORE IN NATIONAL RIFLE MATCH

Fort Sam Houston, Texas, Oct. 10.—The 8th Corps Area C. M. T. C. Rifle Team won for the third successive time first place in the National C. M. T. C. match which closed September 20 at Camp Perry, Ohio. Second place was taken by the 9th Corps Area, the 7th Corps Area being third. Harry N. Renshaw of Nogales, Arizona, was high man on the 8th Corps Area team with a score of 285 out of a possible 300, the total team score being 2642 out of a possible 3000. Renshaw has established for himself an enviable record for shooting. As a member of the 1924 C. M. T. C. team he was high man and won several individual prizes. This year he won first place in each, the Chemical Warfare and Scabbard and Blade matches, and third place in the Individual Civilian Club Members' match. Other members of this year's team who competed on the 1924 team are Willard Griswell, Dallas, Texas; Carl L. McCafferty, Poteau, Okla.; and Thomas O. King, Lubbock, Texas. These men also won first, third and thirteenth places, respectively, in the national individual rifle match. The other men who composed the team and who, on their first attempt at shooting in a national competition, helped to win for the third time the "minute man trophy," are: George W. Parker, Nogales, Ariz.; Earl T. Etter, Hardesty, Texas; Charles Ashens, Ames, Okla.; Joe Kraemer Jr., Ft. Worth, Texas; Donald M. Taylor, Palestine, Texas; Hansel P. Willis, San Antonio, Texas; alternates, Lewis Bullette, Dewey, Okla.; Edward H. Hicks, Dallas, Texas.

MINIMUM WAGE LAW ARGUED BEFORE SUPREME COURT

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—The right of states to fix a minimum wage by law, especially with regard to women, was argued today before the supreme court of the United States in a case from Arizona.

Counsel for the state contended that in the exercise of police power, Arizona could protect the health of its citizens by prescribing working conditions, extending such protection, contract, and that the minimum wage be said, nothing was more important than that women should receive what the state determined was a sufficient wage to provide the necessities of life. Counsel for A. Sardell, an Arizona statekeeper, who has obtained an injunction from the federal court in the District of Columbia had decided the question.
