The Zinsmeister "dunde" ranch has completed building the reservoir and have let a contract for the building of the main building, which will be of adobe construction.

THE BUMBLE-BEE

Bumble-bees are with much more every day to the United States than all our gold mines. Yes, they are worth more than all our gold and silver mines together, even if you multiply the mines by two. You can raise the bumble-bee at about $300,000,000. Perhaps you did not know it, but we owe our clover hay crop to the bumble-bee. And our clover is worth more than $300,000,000 every year.

When Uncle Sam tried to introduce red clover in the Philippines he made a big discovery. Red clover would not reproduce itself in those islands.

It took considerable time to find out the reason, for that failure was absence of bumble-bees. These buzzing fellows are the chaps who fertilize red clover—distribute the pollen and so complete the yearly cycle of maturity. And no insect except the bumble-bee, with his abnormally long tongue, can do that little trick in a red clover field.

When Uncle Sam took a cargo of bumble-bees out to Manila the job of raising red clover hay in the Philippines was accomplished.—Exchange.

SCHOOL NOTES

Hettie Lee Dalton, Editor

Mary Louise Etchells, Argenta May, Alice Parker and Otella Portillo will soon be ready for B Class work.

All classes are improving in number combinations.

The Primary classes are learning recitations for Thanksgiving.

The Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth grades received their half holiday this week as a reward for 40 perfect half days.

Joan Evans and Louis Valenzuela were given honorable mention for their compositions on "Old Ironsides" in the contest which the Elks sponsored in this county.

This is report card week.

This week the Sixth grade had a test on the chapters about the Romans in history.

The two Primary rooms entertained each other with a Halloween program on Friday. A good time was had by all present. The Second and Third grades made baskets to hold their "treats."

The Second and Third grades are learning "The Star Spangled Banner."

The Third grade wrote some very good fables this week. Every one is written in a readable hand. Some are nicely done.

The Halloween party in the High school room was thoroughly enjoyed. Many of the old Halloween tricks were played, while several new ones were added. Tommy Cestello, with the help of Gordon Farley, amused and mystified all with their sleight-of-hand performance. Lois Reeves' uncanny knowledge of certain things was a source of wonder to many. After the games and tricks, punch and wafers were served.

In the High school the geometry and algebra tests averaged above 90 in both grades.

NATION-WIDE STUDY OF FOREST TAXATION BY GOVERNMENT

A nation-wide study of the forest taxation problem in relation to reforestation of privately-owned lands is being launched by the forest service, which has announced the appointment of Prof. Fred R. Fairchild of Yale University as director of the investigation.

A detailed study of forest taxation will be made in all principle forest regions to determine the effect of present tax laws on reforestation and timber holdings, and the conditions that must be met in any effort to readjust present tax laws to be fair to land owners and public treasuries.

The study is the outgrowth of a country-wide investigation of reforestation conducted by a special committee of the United States senate in 1923-24. This committee reached the conclusion that timber-growing would be greatly stimulated by giving land owners security against unjust and burdensome taxation during the growing period when young forests produce no income from which taxes can be paid.

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, in commenting upon the appointment of Professor Fairchild, declared the forest tax study of paramount importance to the reforestation of the country's 371 million acres of privately owned forest land.

"This tax study is one of the most important steps of recent years in forest conservation," said the secretary, "and the government is fortunate in securing Professor Fairchild, who is one of the country's foremost authorities on forest taxation, to direct the work."

Practical results, instead of theories, will be accomplished by the study, say forestry officials, who explain that in most states reforestation is discouraged by the danger of having young timber taxed over and over again before it reaches merchantable size. As a result of the study it is expected that the federal government will be able, under the Clarke-McNary act, to help the states in a national reform of forest taxation.

SUGGESTIONS TO FARM FLOCK HANDLERS

By L. C. Boggs, Extension Poultryman

Selling Eggs on Graded Basis

At this season of the year a great many pullet eggs are going to market. Some are being sold as such while others are mixed with the larger standard sized eggs. This is a poor practice because it makes a poor looking package and decreases the value of the better grade of eggs.

Many people think a pullet egg is one that has been laid by a pullet. It is not the age of the bird producing an egg that puts that egg in a certain grade. An egg is a pullet egg technically by virtue of its weight. Small eggs get this name because in most cases they are produced by pullets; however, properly matured pullets will, after a few weeks' production, lay standard sized eggs, while on the other hand some birds will produce pullet eggs through the entire winter.

In the large egg markets it is generally understood that a standard sized egg shall meet the following requirements: Twenty-four ounces per dozen with no single egg weighing at the rate of less than 2 ounces per dozen. Pullet eggs shall average 20 ounces per dozen with no single egg weighing at the rate of less than 13 ounces per dozen. Any egg weighing less than at the rate of 18 ounces per dozen is called a "pewee" and should be sold for less than is received for pullet eggs.

Every poultryman should have egg scales to make sure he is grading his eggs properly. The mistake that many are making at this time of year is to sell all eggs under 2 ounces as pullet eggs. In most cases the pewee eggs can readily be consumed at home. If at any time there are too many for home consumption they should be sold at a price below that received for pullet eggs. This method of selling will always strengthen a poultryman's market.

At the present time there are a great many so-called "processed" eggs on the market. These are eggs that were produced during the spring of the year, treated with oil and placed in storage to be sold in competition with high-priced fresh eggs at this time of the year. These processed eggs are a real menace to poultrymen in states where storage eggs do not have to be sold as such. Dealers will invariably sell these as fresh eggs at a few cents below the regular market price and the consumer is well pleased because these eggs are carefully graded for size and candle like fresh eggs. The only way to compete with such a situation is to carefully grade all eggs sold, thus giving the consumer full value for his money.

Selling eggs in sealed cartons with the producer's name on the outside also insures the consumer of a fresh home product and advertises the producer's eggs.

ARIZONA FREE STATE FAIR HAS ELABORATE AMUSEMENT PROGRAM ALL WEEK

Phoenix, Nov. 6.—The biggest program of sports and the most elaborate amusement offering ever crowded into a single wee kin Arizona is announced for the Arizona Free State Fair, opening next Monday, by the state fair commission today.

Four important football games are on the sports menu for the week. On opening day the Northern Arizona Teachers' College team meets the Phoenix Junior College team. On Wednesday, Armistice Day, the Phoenix High school team meets the El Paso Hi team. On Thursday is the biggest game of the year—that between the Phoenix Indians and the Tempe Teachers' College. On Saturday afternoon the Jerome High plays the Nogales High.

Horse racing will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon, and four races a day with 30 horses participating each day. The Governor's Derby at 1 mile will be held on Wednesday.

On Saturday the richest prize offering ever made to auto racers will be distributed to the winners of the four events on the fast mile track. The total purse is $2400, the 50-mile race bringing $1000 to the winner.

On the amusement bill at fare for the week is, foremost, the Theatrical fireworks displays each night excepting Saturday. Fifty numbers will be shown each night, including historical sets and plays, entirely in fireworks. The display will be different every night. On Friday afternoon, Children's Day, a display of daylight fireworks will be given.

Five of the finest acrobats and gymnastic acts of the country, several of the performing teams having been with Ringling's circus, are on the day and night program. Stanley's Equine Racers and performing horses are a day and night feature. On the Midway will be the largest carnival company in the country, the Bernardi shows.

The great exhibit of the American Mining Congress, brought to Phoenix for the annual convention to be held following the fair, will be on display at the Mines building.

A QUEER POSTOFFICE

In the Glacier national park there is one of the queerest postoffices in the United States. The mail is brought by auto from the railroad, some 30 miles away, to a certain log cabin. There it is hung in weather-proof bags on the outside of the cabin. People who live within a radius of five miles of the cabin come to the bags and sort out their own mail.

ARMISTICE DAY PROCLAMATION

Governor G. W. P. Hunt has issued the following proclamation, calling attention to Armistice Day, November 11, 1925.

Whereas, Armistice Day is inseparably linked with the aspirations of humanity for world peace, and the seventh anniversary of the close of the World War comes to remind us of the sacrifices made and of the sacred obligations resting upon us as Americans; and,

Whereas, Seven years ago the glad news flashed around the world that military despotism had been beaten, and joy burst forth upon a war-weary world; and,

Whereas, It is fitting and right that America should encourage and promote the world-wide observance of Armistice Day by emphasizing the duty of all to cultivate the spirit of peace and develop the institutions of world justice and world peace; and

Whereas, We should pay homage to those who offered their lives in the defense of our country, and it is altogether fitting that we should implore the help and guidance of the God of nations, to the end that mutual good will and mutual trust should prevail;

Now, therefore, I, George W. P. Hunt, governor of the state of Arizona, by virtue of the authority vested in me by law, do hereby designate Wednesday, November 11, 1925, a legal holiday; and I do earnestly urge that the day be marked by special services, and that all business and traffic cease wherever possible during two minutes' silence at 11 o'clock a. m. on said day by all persons irrespective of racial origin or creed, by our associates in the late war, and also by the former foe, all invoking during such silence the Divine blessing, to add to the dignity, solemnity and beauty of Armistice Day.

TEACHING FOREIGNERS ENGLISH

A series of articles are being written by Mrs. Hazel Sorrell of Calabasas for "The Arizona Teacher and Home Journal" published at Phoenix and having a general circulation in educational circles. The articles deal with methods of teaching foreign language speaking children to learn the English language through new methods.

A demonstration with the children Mrs. Sorrell is teaching was given at a recent county institute of Santa Cruz county rural teachers. The series of lessons is causing much interest in teachers' circles.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

EDUCATION WEEK
NOVEMBER 16-22

Federal, state and local officials from President Coolidge to mayors of cities, prominent leaders all over the nation, firms and associations of many sorts co-operated actively and wholeheartedly in arrangements for staging American Education week, set this year for November 16 to 22. The National Americanism commission of the American Legion, the United States bureau of education and the National Educational association, the three agencies sponsoring the demonstration, report a marked increase in interest in the week.

President Coolidge expressed his co-operation by agreeing readily to issue a proclamation calling attention to the observance. His example was followed by governors and mayors from one end of the country to the other. State superintendents of public instruction and other educational authorities, state and local, joined heartily in the work. Chambers of commerce and local clubs, as well as national, departmental and post officials of the Legion, were especially active.

The American Legion Auxiliary came forward to carry on a nationwide "Visit Your School" campaign for the week. The object was announced to be to acquaint the general public with the actual operations of the schools and to stir their interest in seeing the schools in action.

Many large concerns agreed to carry matter in their national advertising which would help to promote the week, especially Community and Health day.

Members of the American Bankers' association and the Association of Investment Bankers responded readily to a suggestion that they display window placards announcing the program for the week and emphasizing Conservation and Thrift day. Various teachers' agencies and other organizations co-operated.

Representative of the 175 national organizations which have co-operated from the beginning in putting on the week are such groups as the American Bar association, the Boy Scouts of America, the Daughters of the American Revolution, Kiwanis, Rotary, the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations, the American Red Cross and the Playground and Recreation Association of America.

Plans Poster Contest to Aid Training Camps

A national "art poster contest in the interest of citizens' military training camps" is being sponsored by the American Legion auxiliary. It was announced recently by Mrs. O. D. Oilphant, national president.

"The purpose of the contest," declared Mrs. Oilphant, "is to extend information concerning and to promote the citizens' military training camps conducted each year in various sections of the country."

Three national awards will be made. The prizes are to be $150, $100 and $50, respectively. Fourth and fifth-place winners will be given honorable mention signed by the committee on national award. These five posters will be chosen from designated entries from the states and territorial possessions of our country.

Commenting on the plan, Mrs. Oilphant said: "The auxiliary's sponsorship is the outcome of its wholehearted interest in the plans for national defense and the belief that privileges offered by these camps present to the nation an excellent opportunity for promoting Americanism and for the rearing of a citizen-soldier which will serve this nation in time of national emergency."

Fidac Seal to Be on All Membership Cards

Each 1926 membership card of the American Legion will have printed opposite the American Legion emblem the seal of Fidac, inter-allied federation of World war veterans, according to announcement made by James F. Barton, national adjutant.

"In this manner the three-quarter-million members in the American Legion will be members of Fidac in fact as in name," said Mr. Barton. "Wherever a Legionnaire may be, if he has his Legion card with him, he will be accorded the courtesies and privileges extended to members of Fidac."

Placing of the seal on the cards follows out the resolutions of the international congress of Fidac suggesting that all member associations have the Fidac seal on their membership cards.

Lesson on Displaying Flag

A picturesque demonstration of the proper manner to display the American flag was made at Spokane, Wash., recently, under the auspices of the local American Legion post. A command of soldiers from a nearby fort marched on a main street carrying banded flags and at a given command each soldier stepped to the side of the street and placed his flag in the proper position.

JIM'S SOME HIKER

Twenty years ago, when he was fifty, Jim Hocking announced that he would walk as many miles each birthday as he was years old. The other day he was seventy and he walked from the New York City line at Yonkers to Bear Mountain and back, a distance of seventy miles. His time for the walk was 14 hours 50 minutes, during which time he lost eight pounds in weight. He ate but eight ounces of raisin bread during the exploit but drank two and a half gallons of water.

Stolen Bell Goes Back to Finland

During the Crimean war the English forces looted the fortress of Bomarsund in the Aland islands and carried to London a big brass bell which has been in the Tower of London ever since. Now this is to be returned to the parish of Scarpans, Finland. A warder of the tower is shown taking the bell from its place among the old war trophies.

Prizes Are Offered for Memorials to Lenin

Though busts, statuettes and pictures of Lenin are more numerous in Russia than were icons before the revolution, the central executive committee of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics has announced $42,000 in prizes for the best designs for Lenin memorials in five cities. They will be erected in Moscow, Kharkov, Tiflis, Minsk and Leningrad. For each city prizes of $4,000, $2,500, $1,000 and two of $500 are offered. The winning memorial will be erected in a selected location and the other twenty designs may be used in other cities. The memorial may be a statue at least three times life size, a bas-relief at least one and one-half times life size or a building column, arch or other structure that will not serve a utilitarian purpose. Well-known Russian artists will be invited to compete and will receive a $500 honorarium for each sketch, in addition to possible prizes. All other persons in the U. S. S. R. may compete on equal terms.

Forest Fires Increase

The forest service says that forest fires increased to an alarming extent in 1924. In that year 92,000 fires occurred, sweeping 29,000,000 acres of land. Compared with the calendar year 1923, the 1924 figures represent an increase of 24,000 fires and, compared with the nine-year average, an increase of 45,000 fires, or nearly 100 per cent. In acreage swept by the flames the 1924 figures are only slightly larger than those for 1923, but are almost double the acreage figures representing the nine-year average. Money damage in 1924, estimated at $38,000,000, is $10,000,000 above the 1923 estimate and $18,000,000 higher than the nine-year average of $20,000,000.

POULTRY

TAKING ADVANTAGE OF HIGHER PRICES

The high egg market last fall was in the latter part of November. The records indicate that the tendency is for the high spot in the market to advance earlier in the fall. The problem of the person who is interested in making his poultry pay, is how to prepare to take advantage of these high prices.

Pullets which began laying late in October frequently lay during the entire winter. Pullets which are developed too early begin laying early in October and then begin to molt, and unless they are exceptionally well fed they will not begin laying again until spring.

If Leghorns are hatched before April 1 and are well grown they will likely start laying early in October. Under good growing rations a Leghorn will mature in about 200 days. Some growers can carry their early hatched pullets along more slowly and prevent them from laying much before the first of November. In order to do this they feed very little meat scrap and other high protein feeds and feed considerable ground oats and other bulky feeds which grow a good frame but which do not hasten the maturity of the birds.

The heavy breeds which are slower maturing will lay better in the fall if hatched earlier than April. February and March pullets of the breeds such as Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island Reds and Wyandottes will be about the right stage of maturity for November eggs if they are grown on a good ration.

One trouble with a good many producers is that they do not feed their pullets so that they mature quickly enough so as to start laying in the fall. In other words you have two sources of trouble in getting pullets to lay in November. One is the hatching of Leghorns too early and thereby having them go into a molt, thereby losing production in the winter from that source. The other trouble is on account of late chicks and slow development which results in the pullets not laying until the greater part of the winter is over and the period of high egg prices has passed.

Hens Should Be Fed So

That They Molt Quickly

The old hens should be fed so that they will molt quickly. Eggs will be high in price this fall and winter and we should feed the flock so as to obtain every possible egg, suggests D. H. Hall, extension poultry husbandman at Clemson college.

The molt is a natural thing and the hen must be allowed time enough for it. We can help them through the molting stage by feeding. The mash feeds are very beneficial in growing feathers, therefore, these hens should have all the mash they want. A pound of sulphur added to each 100 pounds of mash will also aid the hens in growing new feathers. Sulphur is also a mild tonic and aids in keeping the hen's body in condition.

During the molting period, the hens need a large amount of grain feed for the upkeep of the body. The molt is a severe drain on the hen and a good strong body, with plenty of extra energy should be kept by the hen. The hen is also laying up surplus energy for next year's laying. The best feed, care, and attention should be given them at this time. It will always pay you to send your hens to roost with a full crop each night.

Potassium Permanganate Good as Water Purifier

Dr. S. Erikson of the Mountain Grove (Mo.) experiment station has carried on experiments to determine the value of permanganate of potash as a purifier of water for poultry, and has found that it is very efficient. The germs of cholera and of other intestinal diseases are destroyed in a few hours. The quantity to use is 14 grains per gallon of water. This quantity can be measured with sufficient accuracy with a ten-cent piece as measure, about 14 grains being carried on it. Permanganate soon loses its strength, which is indicated by loss of the purple color. When this occurs a new solution should be made up. Erikson's experiments show that small chicks are not injured by drinking permanganate water over a period of nine weeks. It can be safely used when sour milk is being fed, but it is not recommended to be added to milk.

Poultry raisers should not place dependence on permanganate as a cure for any disease. Its use is not intended as a cure but as a destroyer of germs that gain entrance to the drinking water from sick birds, thereby lessening the chance of the disease spreading in the flock.

Egg-Eating Habit

The habit or vice of egg eating is difficult to break, once it has been established. It usually starts from the birds getting a taste of a fresh egg when it is broken. Sometimes fresh egg shells thrown to the chicks without being heated gives them a taste of the raw, fresh egg. Darkened, large, roomy nests, the frequent removal of eggs and the immediate removal of any broken shells are the most dependable methods for breaking up this trouble.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

IMMATURE CORN IS GOOD FOR SILOING

Weather conditions such as hail, drought, or frost sometimes prevent corn from reaching maturity. Under such circumstances the crop should be siloed, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Such corn should, if possible, be siloed with some that is mature. Silage from immature corn is sourer and more laxative than that from the mature crop. However, if proper care is exercised in feeding such silage, no ill effects should result.

If frosted corn is cut promptly, the stalks may contain enough water so that it may be siloed without the addition of water. If the corn has become too dry to pack well, considerable water will have to be added when siloing. The frosting of corn causes only a small loss in feeding value, the greatest loss being occasioned by the falling off of leaves in handling and the possible spoiling of part of the silage owing to its failure to pack and keep properly.

Sometimes there is a delay in filling the silo, and it is necessary to cut and shock the corn. Then again on other farms the silo capacity will not take care of the entire crop at one filling. This surplus corn has to be shocked and is available for refilling the silo later on. Such dry corn fodder may be siloed successfully, but it is necessary to wet it thoroughly so that it will pack well in the silo. Water may be added by allowing a stream from a hose to flow into the blower while filling. The surface of the cut material should also be sprinkled as it is distributed in the silo. Corn fodder silage is less palatable and of somewhat lower value than corn siloed under the usual conditions. Owing to the large quantity of water required, siloing corn fodder is advisable only on farms having a water system.

Water Supply for Dairy Cows of Big Importance

The milk cow, of all animals, requires an abundance of pure water. Water constitutes more than three-fourths of the raw material used by the cow in the manufacture of milk. Stale or impure water is so distasteful to her that she will not drink a sufficient quantity for maximum milk production. Furthermore impure water may impair the health of the cow. The water supply, therefore, demands the dairyman's most careful attention. During the winter, when cows are stabled the greater part of the time, it is important that they be watered at least two or three times a day unless water is kept before them constantly. It is advisable to supply water to cows at a uniform temperature, preferably 15 to 20 degrees above the freezing point. When water stands in a tank on which ice often forms, it usually pays well to warm it slightly. This can be done by a tank heater, by live steam, or by hot water from a boiler. If a boiler is used for running a separator or for heating water to wash and sterilize utensils, steam from it can readily and cheaply be used to warm the water.

Barley Is Nearly Equal to Corn for Dairy Cows

Barley is a good feed for dairy cows and nearly equal to corn. Some feeders hold it is quite equal to corn if it does not constitute more than 60 per cent of the total portion of the ration. Corn is a very good feed. It is low in lime, a little heavy, and for this reason should be lightened with some feed like bran and fed with some legume hay like clover or alfalfa for the purpose of supplying an adequate quantity of mineral substance. Bran is a good feed to use with either barley or corn, or both, because it is bulky, has a slight laxative effect, and lightens the mixture. It lacks lime but it is rich in phosphorus.

Dairy Hints

Charcoal is recommended as an absorbent of foul odors in the milk room. It should be freshly powdered.

For heavy milk production, or for fattening young growing animals, the feeding of grain on pasture is doubtless the most economical method.

A hooded or small-top milk pail protects the milk from dust and dirt falling from the body of the cow, and makes possible the production of a much cleaner milk.

No one wants to produce milk from a sick cow, nor subject the rest of his herd to infection from such a source.

Alfalfa hay is at the top of the list of roughages for the dairy cow, because of its high protein content and its palatability.

Cows should be groomed daily with a curry comb and brush to keep them in better physical condition and to protect the milk from dirt, loose hair etc.

Different Today

Percy V. Pitcairn, the well-known eugenicist, said in a Denver lecture: "When the laws of eugenics are lived up to, all our babies will be beautiful, inheriting the beauties of their fathers and mothers. "It's different today. "Who does your baby take after?" I said to a friend of mine. "Well," said my friend, reddening a little, "my wife's people tell me he gets his bow legs and pug nose from my side of the house. Anyhow, I know darn well that his cross eyes and pigeon breast have been the trademark of his mother's family for three generations."

Helpful Habit

A Chicago newspaper writer went out to investigate Hollywood. She was greatly surprised when she discovered how many of the picture people were happily married, had children in the public schools, and were active in building up the community. "I always thought," she confided, "that marriage was supposed to interfere with art, but this does not seem to be the case at all." "It doesn't interfere at all," replied a Los Angeles writer, "if you marry often enough."—Los Angeles Times.

Her Rheumatism Vanished!

After two years of agony, this woman thanks Tanlac for restoring lost health

For two years, Mary Arpentigny, had rheumatism in her right arm and hand so bad she couldn't lift a comb to her hair. Indigestion made matters worse.

Finally her brother urged her to try Tanlac and improvement came with the first bottle. "Now," writes Mrs. Arpentigny, "my appetite is fine, my indigestion is gone and every sign of rheumatism has left me. I only hope others will profit by my experience."

*Authentic statement; address on request.

More people have been helped back to health by Tanlac than by any other tonic. Physicians testify to that. Our files are crammed with letters of grateful thanks from every part of the world. Isn't this evidence enough for you?

WHEN WILL THE PUBLIC ASK FOR WORL DWAR STORIES?

When will the American reading public be ready for the great wealth of stories and articles about the World War? Why don't these stories attract the public now?

Publishers would like to know the answer to these questions. It has been practically decided from many experiences that readers up to and including the present time care very little for fiction or fact stories about this great conflict. One answer is that too little time has elapsed, and that the public still remembers too much about the actual awfulness of the war to want to read more about it.

Publishers agree, however, that some day this attitude will change, and stories of this war will enjoy a great run. It is to that time that they look forward to find new authors among the men who knew the war at first hand. Men in the American Legion will unfold tales of great adventure and weird happenings, and readers will demand to know everything. Then the real stories of the war will be told.

By the way, are you keeping in touch with these former fighters?

Read the American Legion department in every issue of The Patagonian.

BIG AUTO RACING PROGRAM FOR ARIZONA'S FREE STATE FAIR

Phoenix, Oct. 29.—The greatest automobile racing program ever prepared in the southwest under American Automobile Association sanction will bring together the fastest cars and the most daring drivers in Arizona for the crowning event of the Arizona
Free State Fair and the final event of fair week festivities.
Prizes totaling $3400 will be paid the winners of the four racing events to be held on Saturday afternoon, Noember 14, on the mile track at the state fair grounds.

Drivers from Douglas, Yuma, Phoenix and Holbrook have entered cars in the events, and such well-known Arizona speed demons as John Carminetti, Jimmy Owens, Jimmy Thomas, John Randolph and Charles Gold-trap will display special racing cars for the first time on Arizona tracks.

14-MILE FENCE TO MARK THE NOGALES-TUCSON ROAD

A 14-mile fence is included in the plans of the state highway department for the construction of the new Nogales-Tucson highway cutoff which is now under way, according to officials of the highway department. The fence will be four or five strands of barbed wire with the posts approximately five feet high.

deeds to the right-of-way along the road were given to the state by the owners of the land adjoining and one of the terms of the gift was that the state should build a fence at the edge of the right-of-way. The fence will be four or five strands of barbed wire with the posts approximately five feet high.

Who Won the War?

England and France, smoking ready made Cigarettes fought two and a half years and couldn't make the first down on Germany. Germany smoking old tow lines off Ships, Sawdust, Cabbage leaves, Horse Blankets, and second hand Gun Powder couldn't make the grade. But when Americans arrived with no equipment and no training, but plenty "Bull" Durham, and Nerve to burn it with, in two weeks the French were trading Legion of Honor Medals for a sack of "Bull." One sack was worth two quarts of Iron Crosses. Englishmen have even been known to sacrifice their afternoon tea for a puff of "Bull" Durham. Even after the war an American private, occupying the Ruhr, went into a German Restaurant and asked for a glass of Milk. He couldn't make the Waiter understand so he drew the Picture of a Cow, and a Milk Pail. The Waiter immediately returned with a Bucket of Beer and a Sack of "Bull" Durham Tobacco. That Private was a better Artist than he thought he was.

MINERALS FROM SWEETS

Many persons eat things they do not like for the sake of getting needed minerals in the diet. It is well, therefore, to know how to supply minerals in attractive form. Cookbooks have for many years carried recipes for a kind of confection known as Paresian sweets, made by finely chopping and mixing equal weights of dates, figs and shelled walnuts. This mixture is usually formed into caramel shaped pieces or into balls which are rolled in sugar to reduce their stickiness. Or it can be spread between slices of bread, and if it happens to be graham bread the product is a sweet sandwich in which mineral is added to mineral. If we compare a sandwich made of 1 ounce (two small slices of graham bread) and 1 ounce of the mixture mentioned above—or, in fact, almost any combination of nuts and dried fruits—with a sandwich made from the same amount of white bread spread with butter and sugar, we find that the former has more than six times the calcium, more than twice the phosphorus, and, best of all, since iron is hardest to find among foods in common use, more than four times the iron. This one sweet sandwich, in fact, supplies one-tenth of all the iron needed by a grown person in the course of a day.

LITTLE LADIES IN WARM ATTIRE; PARIS SHOWS GENIUS IN HATS

ADDED to the usual staple shades used for coats, the live, warm colors of this season are chosen for young girls—the wine and copper tones, new blues, greens and reds. They are all particularly cozy looking in suede cloths and pile fabrics, and velveteen is a popular addition to the latter group. It is a featured material in both coats and dresses and is often used in combination with other goods—nothing is prettier in the warm brown and strong blue tones, or in the new, deep maroon, called "Black Prince." Kasha is among the popular,

What has made them what they are today and which of their several charms has contributed most to the tremendous success of those small velours and felt hats that fill so much of the millinery horizon? They are the darlings of the mode and fate has been kind to them; for their success is not transitory—they are here to stay for some time.

Paris reveals its genius in the group of six chic hats, in fine velours or felt, that are at once so simple and so superior. It takes a good grade of soft velours, or felt, to get the best lighter-weight clothes and there are several smooth-surfaced weaves available among the goods mentioned—all suited to the dressier styles in coats for children. Heavier and coarser cloths are used for utility coats.

Nearly all the dressier coats boast a fur collar and fur is generously used on garments for girls in the last half of their teens. The coat shown in the picture is typical good style for younger misses, and speaks for itself. It is made of suede cloth in a warm brown shade—with hat to match. This pretty affair has an ornament at the front, set with a dark topaz jewel—the millinery sort—thus paying tribute to the fashion, set by Queen Mary, of wearing a jewel on a plain hat. The coat-and-hat-to-match idea deserves effects—that is the most becoming lines and most pleasing colors. Even so, hats of this kind are not extravagant in price and they stand much wear. Just at present there is a fad for gold in collars, appliqued figures and other trimmings, on felt and velours hats, but the variety of ways for adorning them is endless. In the hat at the upper left, two slashes are cut in the crown at the right side and one at the left. Folds of satin emerge from the lower slash and form a collar across the front, disappearing in the slash on the left side. Another slash allows three folded ends to escape, and lest we forget to notice this bit of artistry, small embroidered figures are placed by the slashes. The soft velours hat at the right is among the most becoming models, with its irregular, upturned brim. It has a narrow gold collar and a fancy gold pin thrust in the brim. A dignified, square-crowned black felt, at the center of the group, displays any other decoration than a band of felt about the crown crossing at the front, where an ornamental pin holds it in place. A small, flat cluster of bright feathers is added to the hat at the right with collar of self-colored belting ribbon. A similar hat at the left has tailored loops of ribbon under a fold in the brim, and two ends of it looped against the side crown. A velours hat with velvet brim facing finishes the group. Of all brim movements this has proved most popular. Two small gold ornaments are placed where the brim is caught to the crown.

Group of Paris Hats.

The success it has made, having the chic that belongs to ensembles. Coats for girls from sixteen to twenty employ more lavish fur trimmings and feature the season's new style points, in flared skirts, fabric details in trimming, new styles in collars and revers, and even the introduction of side plaques of fur and pyramid cuffs. But these are all discreetly used—especially for sweet sixteen—whose charm is dimmed whenever she is overdressed.

In the JUNGLE

With Cheerups and the Quixies
By Grace Bliss Stewart

RAFFY FINDS HIS TONGUE

ONE warm sunny day, Cheerups was sitting on the ground in the jungle and looking lazily up into the great trees. He was looking to see if any fruit were growing handy. "I'll send Softfoot or Brighteyes up to get it if I find some," thought he. Then suddenly he spied a long gold-colored face, all covered with brown spots, and two big solemn eyes looking down at him. Cheerups was most too astonished to breathe. "Gracious, that's a new kind of fruit to me!"

'So You've Lost Your Tongue, Have You, Raffy?'

Then, as his eyes traveled slowly down, down, over about eight feet of neck and along about ten feet of body and leg, he had the surprise of his life.

"It's an animal!" cried Cheerups out loud. "But it must be the tallest one in the world."

Then the funny head at the top of the long neck began to nod. Up and down it nodded and nodded.

"Well, I must have said the right thing that time," murmured Cheerups. "But why doesn't he talk, instead of nodding in that silly fashion? He probably thinks I can't hear so far away. What he needs is a telephone."

"That's Raffy Giraffe, Mr. Cheerups," called Jack the Monkey, who was sitting up in the tall palm tree eating dates. "He can hear what you say out he can't talk. He hasn't any voice. Raffy, and Boomer Kangaroo who lives in Australia, are the only animals in the world who can't make a sound. Funny the way men talk about dumb animals, isn't it? I guess nobody in his right senses would call me that," chuckled Jack with a chuckle.

"So you've lost your tongue, have you, Raffy?" inquired Cheerups kindly. "That's a pity!"

Then, quick as a flash, out of Raffy's mouth shot the longest, slimmest tongue Cheerups had ever seen. It was so twisty and slender that it looked as if it could wrap around anything and tie in a bowknot.

Cheerups just couldn't help laughing. He laughed and laughed. To think of having the longest tongue in the world and not using it for anything! It was too funny. Then he caught sight of the sad look in Raffy's eyes and realized that what seems funny to one person may be no laughing matter to another.

"I'm sorry," sighed Cheerups. "Something is wrong somewhere, and I'd love to help you, but how can I when I don't know what is wanted?"

"I can tell you," chirped Jack the Monkey. "I have watched Raffy a lot. He has the longest neck in the world. There isn't a reacher anywhere who can compare with him, but when he is eating leaves in the tops of the trees, there are always a few just a little beyond him and those seem to be the very ones he wants most. He ought to be satisfied with those he can get, but I know he isn't, by the look in his eyes. Isn't that so, Raffy?"

"WHAT'S IN A NAME?"

JEANNETTE

THOUGH originating in France, from where most of our saucy little feminine names come, Jeannette has been formally naturalized and its birthplace is generally forgotten. It means "grace of the Lord" and has its earliest origin in the old Hebrew Joanna, a name bestowed upon the holy woman of the Gospel.

When Joan came into fashion in England and named the daughter of Edward II and other members of royalty, France formed Jeannette in accordance with their national habit of making a diminutive. Jeann had already been popular there and Jeannette and Jeanne, which seem to have been used almost interchangeably, became instantly in vogue.

Jeanne or Jeannette of Flanders, as she was called, was the famous heroine of the Hundred Years War. Jeannette La Pucelle of Orleans ranks with the great of France. Jeanne de Valois, daughter of Louis XI and discarded wife of Louis XII, was another famous woman bearing the name. The French sent one step farther and have a Raffy nodded his head, switched his tail and swayed his long neck back and forth. It was evident that Jack had told him something exactly.

Cheerups was thinking very hard indeed. Then joyfully he shouted: "Why, of course, it's your tongue that can do it. If you can't talk with it, it ought to be good for something. Your tongue is long and slender, and you can stretch it out for those leaves. It has prehensile or grasping power, too, like the tails of the South American monkeys. You can pick a single leaf or even a blade of grass with it. It can be made short or long, wide or narrow. Now isn't that a gift to be happy about? There's another thing. Raffy: Sometimes the trees feed on are rough and thorny and hurt your tender nose, so just close your nostrils to protect them. You can do it, I know."

Raffy looked delighted. He closed his nostrils immediately to see if he could. Then he ran out his long tongue and licked off a leaf high up in the Breadfruit tree. Then he looked at Cheerups with eyes full of gratitude, licked up his heels, switched his tail joyfully and ran off through the jungle.

"But remember," called Cheerups after him, "that the things which are out of reach are often no better than those just at hand. I hope he heard it," murmured Cheerups thoughtfully. (© by Little, Brown & Co.)

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

APPLES AND SEEDS

MANY are the methods practiced today by the superstition of divination by apples, apple seeds and apple parings. They are nearly all in the nature of "projects," or love-charms.

The most general of these in this country is, perhaps, the throwing of a whole apple paring on the floor after swinging it three times around the head in the belief that it will fall in the shape of the initial of one's future wife or husband. Then there is the naming of apple seeds and divining with them in various ways: the eating of an apple at midnight before a glass while one holds a lamp and repeats an appropriate rhyme with the expectation of seeing one's true love peep over one's shoulder; and the "bobbing for apples" on All-hallowe'en. Doubtless the reader can recall many more.

The apple superstition in all its forms has its root so far back in mythology that its primal origin is lost but mystic qualities have always been attributed to this fruit since the days of Tammuz. Perhaps its origin was in the fact that the apple tree is the tree upon which the mistletoe is most often found and the mistletoe was always regarded in antiquity as a direct emanation of the gods—which is "another story."

Our modern use of the apple in love divination comes directly from the myth of Hercules who recovered from the Hesperides the golden apples which had been given by the Earth-goddess to Juno, the patroness of marriage, at her nuptials. Hence an apple instead of a ram was often sacrificed to Hercules and hence today we seek to know the name or face of our future wife or husband by means of apples, apple seeds and apple parings. Among the NOTABLES

LA VALLIERE

LA VALLIERE, favorite of Louis XIV and one of the greatest beauties of the French court, is so often pictured as an adventuress and a deliberate coquette, that few know her real character.

Her name was Louise Francois de La Valliere. She was born August 6, 1644. Her mother brought her to Paris when she was sixteen, after she had been fairly well educated and brought up with the royal princesses as a child. A kinswoman got her the appointment of maid of honor to Henrietta, who was Louis' sister-in-law. There was some scandal about these two, and, as a blind, Louis XIV was told to pay marked attentions to some other woman—since a princess must never have a bit of gossip whispered about her. La Valliere then was a pure-minded, religious girl, willing to serve her mistress by involving her own good name. Louis, at first forced to pay her attention, soon developed a real love for her, and she, too, fell very much in love with him. All through the time of her connection with him, she refused to tell what she knew about the Princess Henrietta and her love affairs.

La Valliere had many enemies and one of them—Montespan—finally took Louis away from her. A little later, she was allowed to enter the Carmelite convent, where she spent the rest of her life, and we can imagine her entirely satisfied that her life of turmoil and intrigue was at an end and the peace of the convent hers until death. For, the court life of Louis XIV was artificial and hectic, and poor La Valliere, like many other women of her day, was a victim of the times, rather than an example of them. The Safer Way

Two Highland farmers met at market, and one said to the other, "What's come over Donald lately? I haven't seen him for weeks."

"Och, have ye no heard?" replied the other, "Fuir Donald got three months in jail for stealing a cow!"

"Och, the big fool! Why did he no' just buy it an' no' pay for it?"—Tit-Bits.

ARIZONA NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

The first issue of the Arizona Alumni, official organ of the Alumni Association of the University of Arizona, has made its appearance last week.

Prepared by the geology class of Arizona, a large geological map now hangs in the room of the Douglas commerce chamber, for free inspection by mining men.

Production from the Peerless mines of Stockton hill, near Kingman, is to start at once is the good news that E. E. Campbell brings back with him from a conference with his associates.

It is reliably reported from Snowflake that the potato crop in that vicinity is an almost complete failure, the yield being less than 10 per cent normal. The extended drought is blamed.

The greatest entry list in the history of the Copper State Kennel Club's dog show insures the success of the exhibition to be held on November 11 and 12 in connection with the Arizona Free State Fair at Douglas.

The fourth conference of the Methodist Church South for Arizona closed in Prescott with announcement of appointments of ministers for the coming year. The next annual conference will be held in Bethel Church, Phoenix.

An application for development of the "highline canal" project in Arizona, involving costs estimated at 250 million dollars, has been filed with the federal power commission at Washington by Fred J. Colter, who represented his action to be on behalf of the state of Arizona.

Small shipments of copper ore from the Magma-Chief mine that show an average of 30 to 40 per cent copper, are being made, it was stated by E. H. Mead of Reno, Nev., who heads the Magma Chief Copper Company. The mine is sixty-five miles from Tucson in the direction of Florence.

The Epitaph, published at Tombstone by the Giragil brothers, received honorable mention as one of the twenty best weekly newspapers published in the United States, at a recent contest held in the journalistic school of the University of Illinois. There were 200 entries from forty states.

Millan Yukich, wanted in Auburn, Calif., to face a charge of murder, walked 126 miles across the desert and along the Colorado river into Mexico to escape capture, only to wander into San Luis, Sonora, near Yuma and stray across the international boundary without realizing he was in the United States.

Under the newly organized tennis club of the University of Arizona, of which Kirk Rangeland of El Paso is president and Harold Love of Safford manager, a tennis tournament will be held on the campus in the near future. The Tennis club now has active control of the university courts, and is sponsoring organized contests between the students. This is the first year that tennis has been organized at the university.

With a number of the greatest outdoor acts in America booked for showing at the Arizona State Fair, the entertainment program for the six-day event to be held from November 9 to 14 will be one of the most popular features of this year's exposition. Horse racing with only Arizona horses entered will be a popular feature. Automobile races to be held under the sanction of the American Automobile Association will bring together the fastest cars and most daring drivers from all parts of Arizona. The automobile racing alone is expected to assure the success of the fair.

If the desires of Governor Hunt, State Historian George H. Kelley, Mr. and Mrs. Fremont Older of San Francisco and Timothy O. Rlordan, the prominent and pioneer citizen of Flagstaff, are accepted by the public, the name of Coal Mine canyon on the Hopi Indian reservation in Navajo county will be changed. By agreement of these parties, reached after considerable correspondence, the name of this canyon in future will be "Awatobi."

Of interest to the club women of the state is the year book of the Arizona Federation of Women's Clubs, edited by the president, Mrs. J. H. Westover, of Yuma, which is just off the press. Beginning with the front cover, which is simple in design with a single panel showing a desert scene giving prominence to the cactus, the state flower, the book is crowded with valuable information. The introductory pages contain the collect of the club women of America written by Mrs. Mary Stewart of Colorado, and the club litany written by Mrs. S. M. Foght of Tucson and adopted by the club women of the state.

Not being afraid of death, but fearful that she would be buried alive, Lottie Henderson, who ended her own life by drinking carbolic acid at Glendale, left a parting appeal to the hotel proprietor that he be certain that she was "good and dead" before being buried.

A new department of the Prescott commerce chamber will provide strangers with information regarding Prescott. In this same department, a representative of the Arizona Automobile Club will maintain local headquarters.

ACHES AND PAINS ALL OVER BODY

Mrs. Proctor Reports Great Benefit by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Where the Luck Came In Little Billy tripped over the edge of the carpet and dropped the dish of tapoca he was carrying. Picking himself up, he remarked, cheerfully, "That's lucky!"

His mother was indignant. "What's lucky, I should like to know?" she asked.

"Why, it's lucky I don't like tapoca," replied Billy.

Paying Visits

SYNOPSIS—Lured by his four-year-old playmate, Jean Lane, Frank Hall, aged six, ventures on the forbidden wall of a dam, in a small Ontario town. He falls into the water and is saved from possible death by clinging to Jean's outstretched arms. Next day Jean informs him that because of their adventure of the day before he is in duty bound to marry her, she agrees when they are "grownups." With Jean's brother, John, also aged six, Frank begins school. Two years later they are joined by Jean and Frank's sister, Marjorie. A little later Jean confides to Frank, in verse, her hope of some day becoming "Mrs. Hall." He accepts the "proposal." From that time Jean and Frank are inseparable. The boys are eighteen when John's father is killed in an accident. Two years later Frank's father and John's mother are married. Dissatisfied with conditions, and ambitious, the two boys make plans to go to Manitoba and "homestead," the girls agreeing to go with them. They set out. At Regina they meet "Jake," who agrees to find them satisfactory homesteads. He does so, and the two friends file claims on Sections Fourteen and Twenty-two. Jake sagely advises the adventurers in the purchase of supplies, and in a wagon drawn by a yoke of oxen, and with a cow, the four arrive at their future homes. Construction of "shacks" and the making of a garden are their first occupations. A young Englishman, who, with her three-year-old son Gerald, has taken up a claim. Frank and John leave the homesteads for a time to do harvest work for wages on a longer-established farm. They encounter Jake, who tells them of his adventure into matrimony. After two months' absence they return to their homes. Jean's enthusiastic welcome encourages Frank.

"We must get Spoof after her," said Jack. "He'll drag her out. Now that we have real society in our community a beautiful young widow must not be allowed to 'waste her sweetness on the desert air.'"

We spent a whole day conjecturing about the new arrivals, and marveling over the strange assortment of humanity out of which it was the business of fate and our lucky stars—no one else seemed to trouble about the matter—to lay in these prairies the foundations of an enduring civilization. Then we settled down to what little work remained to be done. We found our oat crops harvested, and for that we had to thank Spoof and Jake, who had taken that bit of neighborly service into their own hands. We made the stable snug, banked up the shacks with earth, and lined them inside with brown paper which we had brought from town for that purpose. We cut firewood on our little park by the pond, being careful to destroy nothing but trees which were already dead or were too crowded for growth.

Before we had completed these jobs Spoof paid us another visit. We saw his tall figure looming up across the brown grass one afternoon early in November. He shook hands with a warm, firm grip. He was brown and rugged, and the prairie winds were leaving their mark on his fine English complexion. In the warmth of his grip, in the sparkle of his eye, in the leaviness of confidence in his conversation, there was something about the fellow that was decidedly likable.

"Thought I'd just drop in on you, strangers," he commented. "Have a good autumn's work? I hope you did. I ventured to inquire a few times while you were away, just in case the young ladies might need some help—a man around the place, don't you know? I found them most disconcertingly competent. About the only service I was able to do was to shoot a rabbit for them; one of those big white fellows. Jolly good eating, I should say."

"How long ago was that?" Jack interrupted, sharply.

"Oh, not so long; in fact, they spoke of saving him for your homecoming."

"Aha! And again, Aha! Come along, you conspirator!"

We seized Spoof by the arms and marched him into the house. Marjorie and Jean were there; although we had two houses the girls were nearly always together in the one on Fourteen. Jean declared that Marjorie was much the better housekeeper of the two, and she came there for lessons.

We thrust the somewhat bewildered Spoof into their presence.

"We have discovered your duplicity," said Jack, sternly, addressing the girls. "We now know the secret of Marjorie's marksmanship."

"Oh, by Jove!" Spoof exclaimed. "I seem to have messed things up. I'm afraid you will think me an awful rotter, Miss Hall. Really—turning to Jack—'really, it wasn't I that shot the billy hare at all!'"

"You're only getting in deeper," said Jack. "Fess up, and stay for supper."

Spoof did, both, and a jolly night we had, playing euchre after the supper dishes were cleared away. But before he left he recalled that an errand of mercy lay at the bottom of his visit.

"I dropped into Brown's the other day," he said. "Mrs. Brown is a bit fed up. Starting out of the window, and all that kind of thing. Poor old Brown is quite useless; worse than I am, if that is possible, but his wife has quality in her that will count, if she doesn't go under first. She needs you two girls over there now and again, just to put a bit of sunshine in her soul. Now just hitch up the oxen tomorrow and slip over to section Four and jolly her out of the dumps."

"Well, suppose we do," Jack agreed. "But how about you keeping up your end of the social service? Why wish it all on to us?"

"I don't follow you. I have already been to the Browns."

"But not to Mrs. Alton's, so far as we can learn. Mrs. Brown may have no monopoly of loneliness."

Perhaps it was only imagination, but it seemed to me that Spoof's face, usually so frank and open, suddenly became a mask. But he came back quickly and easily.

"I could hardly do that, don't you know? It would not be quite the thing."

"Why not?" said Jean, as ingenuous as ever.

"Why, it would hardly be the thing—it's not in accord—"

"You mean it isn't done," I supplied.

"Exactly. But of, course I know I'm a greenhorn yet, even though I am beginning to ripen in spots. That reminds me, I've had another letter from the governor. He wants me to shoot him a young chinook."

"A chinook?"

"Yes. When I wrote him a recent treatise entitled 'An Incident in a Hay Field, or, How About a Check for a Hundred Pounds?'—you will remember the time—I covered the ragged edge of my purpose with a dissertation upon the prairie climate. I told him that it consisted of a melange of everything from Naples at its best to Norway at its worst—from sleepy kittens purring in the sun to wild sea-tigers raging through the jungle. From climate I moved to grass by easy stages, and from grass to hay, and from that to the matter of one hundred pounds. On the way I explained that this part of the country is not really in the chinook belt, although occasionally one came down this far. So now I am commissioned to shoot for the governor a young chinook. He thinks the skin would look a bit of all right on the library floor, don't you know?"

"And, of course, you will shoot one?"

"A request from one's immediate paternal ancestor, accompanied by a draft for a hundred pounds, is not to be lightly disregarded."

"Let me think," said Jack, and for a few moments we remained silent to give his mind elbow room.

"I have it!" he suddenly exclaimed. "Has your governor ever seen a badger?"

"Not likely except possibly at the zoo."

"We must take that chance. You must shoot a badger, Spoof, which we will formally christen a chinook, and send it to your governor in time for Christmas."

"I think it is wicked to do that," said Jean, whose sympathies were always with the underdog. "No doubt Mr.—Mr. Spoof, senior, is a delightful old gentleman, and it isn't fair. Fancy someone from America visiting him and Mr. Spoof goes shooting off the chinook which his son shot on the banks of the Saskatchewan. 'Chinook nothing!' says the visitor. 'That's a badger, as common as rabbits, almost, and I would describe your son as another prairie animal, smaller than a badger, with two stripes down its back.'"

"Oh, listen to Miss Prim!" Marjorie interrupted. "Who would think she had a letter from her mother asking if she was canning any buffalo beans?"

It was not until Spoof's tall form had dissolved out of view in the starlight that it occurred to me now skillfully he had changed the conversation from the subject of Mrs. Alton. It was something to think about.

We did as Spoof suggested. Early the next afternoon we hitched Buck and Bright to the wagon and wended our slow way southwestward, Jack and I taking turns in the exclamatory exercises by means of which the oxen were kept in motion. The prairie now was very brown and bare, and only the more hardy gophers remained about to whistle saucily at our curly-all lumbering by. The dazzling sunshine seemed to have lost its force, and there was a presage of coming winter in the air. We dropped into silence save for the noises of our locomotion.

"The world seems to have died," said Jean after a long period of thoughtfulness.

The expression was an appropriate one. The world was, actually, dead. Every blade of grass was a stark little corpse, swaying ghostly to the stir of the cold air. Soon the shroud of winter would be woven about them, flake by flake, mantling them all in its cold, white tomb.

"But in the spring it will live again," Jean continued, after a pause. "That is the life eternal."

Jean was a strange girl. Her thoughts went on and on, reaching out, and out. She seemed to live always on the verge of the infinite.

At length we were at Brown's. The rickety shack, smaller than either of ours, presented a sad and forlorn appearance. Three little faces were crowded in a single window that covered our approach. Brown himself was busy building a stable of sods, and succeeding very badly in his work. He could scarcely be distinguished from his building material, but when he saw us he shook himself, as a dog shakes off water, and came up, touching his cap.

"We are your neighbors from Fourteen," we announced ourselves. "May we go in?"

"You may, and welcome," he said. "The wife will be a bit fuddled. I'm not the most presentable myself."

Then Jean did a great thing; one of those wonderful things that no one but Jean seemed to think of. She clambered to the side of the wagon and held out her arms.

"I'm all dirt Miss," Brown protested. "I'm all earth and sand." But he came slowly forward to her outstretched arms, and when his hands reached hers he took her and gently helped her down.

"Thank you, Mr. Brown," she said.

But Brown was looking at her and at us with eyes that had suddenly gone misty with a mist not of the sods or of the sands. Two little pools of water gathered and streaked a slow, dusty course across his grimy face.

Inside we found Mrs. Brown a bit fuddled, as her husband had predicted. At first she merely stood wringing her hands, but when Jean and Marjorie kissed her, and then kissed the little Browns, the veil suddenly lifted and she was all kindness and hospitality.

What a day it was, after we began to get acquainted! Marjorie and Jean had brought some homemade candy, and in a few minutes the little Browns were smeared and happy and slipping gently about looking into the faces of our girls as though they verily believed them angels.

It was dark and starry when we hitched the oxen to the wagon, and shook hands all round, and kissed the children all round, and the girls kissed Mrs. Brown and Mr. Brown forgot himself and kissed the girls and Jack and I almost kissed Mrs. Brown and we drew slowly away waving our hands and watching the five figures framed in the doorway against the yellow light of the oil lamp on the opposite wall.

Our experience with the Browns encouraged us to cultivate the acquaintance of our other neighbors and as the short, bright days of November wore by the long-hanging sun often saw our ox-wagon wending slowly across the prairies, and the north star and the great dipper were the silent witnesses of its return to Fourteen. Sometimes, too, the great magician of the North would light his minute candles, and we would creak homeward in the weird light of their flickering battalions meeting on the stage of the universe.

Smith, the Scotsman, and Burke, the American, received us with undivided attention, and that strange sense of common interest which is the most priceless thing about pioneer life; and of the rich qualities of human nature which seems inevitably to dry up in the more complex civilizations. Ole Hansen entertained us for a full hour in the stable before his buxom Olga consented to admit us into the house. When at last we were granted that privilege there was evidence of hurried scrubbing of floors and faces.

"My wife bane all the time just on the jump," Ole explained apologetically. "Some time Ay tank by d—n we have too many kids, eh?" It appeared that Ole was beginning to harbor some modern ideas about the size of families. His opinion that six was "just a nice commence" was being shaken. The housing problem was coming home to him and bearing its inevitable fruit.

No such radicalism had yet filtered into the mind of the Russian, who, for the sake of convenience, we continued to call Sneezit. He met us stolidly where the trail wound down the bank of the gully near to his dugout. He wore a long sheepskin coat, with the wool still on it, high boots drawn well up on the thigh, and a bushy, black beard. He regarded us in silence, and at length Jack spoke.

"We are your neighbors. We have come to call on you. We hope you are well."

The lips under the black mustache parted slowly, showing a set of strong, regular teeth.

"No much Anglesh," he remarked.

We clambered down and shook hands. This seemed to assure him of our friendly intentions, and when we managed to make it clear that we wanted to visit his house he led us to it without hesitation.

It was merely a cave dug out of the side of the gully. The front was roughly built up with stones and sods, and a crude door, made of pieces of packing boxes, afforded admittance. The only light was from an opening in the door, which could be closed when the weather was too severe.

Sneezit went first and addressed some words in Russian into the gloom. We followed, encountering in the door the fumes of the place's bad ventilation.

It was some time before our eyes became accustomed to the darkness, but presently we discerned a woman stooping, indicating a long bench which had been set for us. Across the cave was a drove of children, their eyes peering and shining like those of wild animals. Indeed it seemed that eyes were the most noticeable thing in that very humble little home.

Presumably there were mouths as well; no doubt Sneezit and his wife had reason to know that there were mouths as well as eyes.

As soon after our return from harvesting as our duties permitted it we paid another visit to Mrs. Alton. Sandy saw us afar off and swept down upon us like a tornado. Apparently he had known us at the first glimpse, or the first sniff, whichever was his source of information, for there was no question this time about our welcome. His barking and tail-wagging accompanied us all the remainder of the way to the little box that Mrs. Alton called home.

The widow had had time to dress since we have in view—that is one of the advantages of prairie life—not set out in the immigration booklets—and it was a dainty and spick-and-span Mrs. Alton that greeted us when our wagon lumbered up to her door.

"I said, 'It's our friends from Fourteen and Twenty-two'—you see how I am picking up your practice way of numbering your farms instead of naming them—I said, 'It's our friends from Fourteen and Twenty-two' as soon as I heard Sandy's first bark. That was before you were in sight, so far as my poor eyes could see. But Jerry, who was up in the wagon playing teamster, cried, 'I see dem, Mudder; oxes and Mith Lane.' He's crazy about Miss Lane."

"Jerry is a young man of discrimination," I said, scoring for once. But my wit was lost in the wild and panting hug which Jean was bestowing upon my rival.

"So he's Jerry now," said Jean, releasing her embrace enough for speech. "That sounds like getting down to earth. Ever so much more chummy than Gerald."

"Do you think so?" Mrs. Alton queried. "And I vowed that, whatever came, I never would call him Jerry. Too reminiscent of Jeremiah, and lamentations, and all that sort of thing that I wanted to get away from." Mrs. Alton stopped short as though she had said more than she intended then brightly took up the thread again.

"I vowed I would leave my lamentations behind," she continued. "I take it that this is a country where there is room for everything but regrets."

It was evident that Mrs. Alton's benevolence was filling a good part of her mind, so Jean deftly switched the conversation back to the boy, and presently was conducting a foot-race to the chicken shed with herself, Jerry and Sandy as the competitors. Sandy won.

We had tea, of course, and after Jerry had gone to bed and Sandy had lain down with his chops on the floor between his paws and his tail thumping the boards occasionally in approbation Jack got out our much-worn deck of cards and we initiated Mrs. Alton into the mysteries of peder.

With a beginner's luck she and Jack were much too successful for Jean, and when it was time for us to go we insisted that she must visit Fourteen some night soon and give us a chance to return the drubbing.

"I should so like to, but I can't leave Jerry," Mrs. Alton explained.

"But Jerry must come, too," we countered. "Jerry and Sandy, and if necessary, the cow and the chickens. Now you simply must, or some night we'll come over and kidnap you by force." But Mrs. Alton would give us no definite answer.

There was no such hesitation at Jake's. Jake met us in the yard, hatless, coatless, vestless, although the temperature was flirting with the freezing point.

"Welcome!" he exclaimed. "I suppose you've come to console with me in my affliction?"

"What affliction?" we inquired, half misled by Jake's manner, for he was an expert in simulation.

"She's inside—an' in possession. It's fortunate for me this country runs so much to outside, fer that's all I've any claim on."

But by this time Jake's wife appeared in the door. "Come on in, girls," she cried, "and never mind that blatherskite. He goes around half-dressed, keeping himself warm thinking on nonsense. I tell him some day he'll freeze his hair, and that's his finish, for I won't stay married to a bald man, whatever happens."

"Tut tut," returned her spouse. "Where Bella Donna is put, she stays. That's her strong point."

It was an afternoon of much badinage we spent at Jake's, but under the surface there were evidences that our former land guide regarded his wife with a sort of awe which he tried to obscure from public view by a smoke screen of raillery. Bella, it was apparent, was a woman of character, and although Jake could scarcely be described as plastic in her hands, his recasting was only the harder on him on that account. He was in the mills of the gods, and they proposed to make a job of it.

"I don't know whether she'll make me a good wife or not," he confided in me, "but I reckon she's set on makin' me a good husband."

But Bella's house was clean, and Bella's table was well set, as pioneer tables go, and Bella was a living concentration of energy such as Jake needed to spur him into purposeful activity. It was Jake's weakness that he would drop a job any day to perpetrate a joke.

"He thinks he's a joker," said Bella, acidly, absent this characteristic of her husband, "whereas he's only a joke. There's a big difference."

We left that night with assurances from Jake and Bella that they would visit us twice a week all winter—a promise which they almost kept.

But not all our visiting was with our new neighbors. Most of it, as you may suppose, was back and forth between Fourteen and Twenty-two. Spoof counted on to make a fifth spoke in our circle every Sunday, and the banjo lessons, neglected during our absence, were now taken up in earnest. It gave me a little orthodox shiver to think what my strict Presbyterian parents would have said to Jean picking so perverted an instrument as a banjo on a Sunday afternoon, and blending her voice with Spoof's in "The Road to Mandalay."

But I was little happier when they visited us twice a week all winter—a promise which they almost kept.

But I was little happier when they visited us twice a week all winter—a promise which they almost kept.

But not all our visiting was with our new neighbors. Most of it, as you may suppose, was back and forth between Fourteen and Twenty-two. Spoof counted on to make a fifth spoke in our circle every Sunday, and the banjo lessons, neglected during our absence, were now taken up in earnest. It gave me a little orthodox shiver to think what my strict Presbyterian parents would have said to Jean picking so perverted an instrument as a banjo on a Sunday afternoon, and blending her voice with Spoof's in "The Road to Mandalay."

MY FAVORITE STORIES

By IRVIN S. COBB

The Withdrawal of the Candidate

When Miss Annie Oakley, the famous rifle shot, was traveling through the country giving exhibitions of her skill at theaters, she reached a small town in Texas; and her manager inserted an advertisement in the home paper for a smart colored boy to assist in the performance. Applicants were instructed to apply at the stage door of the local opera house at 1 p. m. sharp.

When the manager arrived he found the passageway congested with little negroes, each eager to testify to his smartness. He made a selection, picking out a spry boy of about twelve. He took his applicant inside and stationed him near the wings.

"You will stand right here and not move," he said. "When the curtain goes up, Miss Oakley will come out and talk to the audience for a few moments. Then I will balance a small apple on your forehead and the lady will go over on the other side of the stage yonder and shoot it off."

The candidate grabbed for his hat, his eyes wildly rolling in search of the nearest path to safety.

"Mistah," he demanded, "who's goin' to shoot whut apple offer whose haid? Me, why I wouldn't let mah own mammy shoot no apple offer mah haid, let alone it's some stranger's!"

And he was gone.

The Ways of the Army

A green recruit was having his first experience at doing sentry duty at one of the southern cantonments in 1917. Toward him through the darkness came a captain.

"Halt! Who goes there?" demanded the greenhorn.

"Officer of the day," came the answer.

"Beat it bo, before I run you in," said the sentry. "What the h—l would the officer of the day be doin' hangin' 'round at night?"

This story is matched by one that I had from a retired chaplain, who vouches for its authenticity:

"The officer of the day was inspecting the guard."

"What are your orders?" he inquired of a drafted man.

"Sir," said the sentry, in his newly acquired military manner, "my orders are to be vigilant."

"What does vigilant mean?" said the officer.

"I don't know," said the sentry.

"Call the corporal of the guard and we'll find out," said the officer.

The corporal of the guard came, and saluted.

"Corporal," said the officer, "this man here doesn't know the meaning of the word vigilant. Suppose you tell him."

"It means, sir, to be alert," answered the corporal promptly.

"And what does alert mean?" said the commander, anxious that the lesson should be driven home to the pupil.

"I don't know," said the corporal.

"To realize what the antiquity of this one is you first must look up the date of Gen. Tom Thumb's death and then hark still farther back to the yet more remote period when that little man was at the height of his fame."

Under the management of P. T. Barnum, the most famous of all our dwarfs was touring the country. Between engagements he stopped over Sunday at a country hotel in New England.

A lady of the neighborhood called and sent up her card with the request that she be permitted to meet the general. The message was received by a member of Barnum's staff, who happened at the moment to be in the general's room. This person, who was six feet tall and broad in proportion and something of a wit, asked that the lady be shown up.

Presently, she knocked at the door and he answered it.

"I am looking," she said, "for Gen. Tom Thumb."

"Madam," he said, "proceed to look."

"Surely you are not the celebrated midwife?" she cried.

"Certainly I am," he answered.

THE MOTOR BUS

The rapid extension of the use of the motor bus is one of the most interesting and significant features of the development of the country's transportation system in recent years, states the current issue of the Quarterly Trust Company of New York. It was inevitable that the phenomenal popularity of the automobile should provide a field for its extensive use as a common carrier, along with its major service in private transportation.

Many problems of organization, public regulation, taxation, and relations to other means of transportation have been created by the bus, the Survey says further. Gratifying progress in their solution has been made. And, while new phases of these problems are constantly emerging, there is a growing unanimity of opinion concerning the possibilities and the limitations of bus service.

Bus Has Come to Stay

Experience clearly demonstrates that the bus has come to stay, that in both city and suburban passenger transportation it has a large field for usefulness. In some measure it has displaced other carriers. The cumulative results of experience, however, have found expression in a rather general belief that the welfare of the traveling public requires a co-ordination of the services of buses with those of other agencies, particularly the electric railways, rather than the general supplanting of the earlier agencies by the newer.

From the standpoint of production the passenger bus represents an increasingly important phase of the automotive industry. Official production and registration figures for buses, as distinguished from other passenger cars, are not available. It is calculated on the basis of careful surveys that about 12,500 buses were put in service in 1924 and that at the beginning of this year 52,925 were in service in the United States and Canada. Later revisions indicate that the number of school buses was probably underestimated and that 60,000 would represent a closer approximation for the total of all kinds of buses. The number of passengers carried last year, it is estimated, was more than 2,500,000,000.

Competition and Cooperation

The early successes of bus operation led to the belief in some quarters that the new means of rapid transit would rather generally supersede electric railway cars. Now, however, the prevailing opinion of operators of both agencies seems to be that each can and will survive, and that the public will be best served by the development of each agency, specialized for the particular service it can render most economically. What portions of the total city, suburban and intercity transportation each will retain can be determined, of course, only by further experience. Recent developments include a growing tendency to coordinate the two services.

The most effective, and for the public the most advantageous, coordination of buses and electric railways is dependent, of course, upon a recognition of the necessity for unified transportation service. As in the case of other public utilities, unlimited competition necessarily proves burdensome to the public. Regulation as a safeguard against possible abuses of monopoly is a recognized means of protecting those who bear the cost of the service. The prevailing tendency toward the utilization of buses and electric cars under common management gives assurance of further progress in the provision of adequate service.

MIGHT HAVE WON

Darwin could have won that evolution case if he had introduced as exhibits some of the birds who do cute little tricks, such as stepping on the gas, rocking the boat and trying to beat the engines to crossings.—Exchange.

LEGAL ADVERTISEMENTS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF ARIZONA, IN AND FOR THE COUNTY OF SANTA CRUZ

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL PROPERTY—No. 1092

THE STATE OF ARIZONA, Plaintiff, vs. C. F. VON PETERSDORFF, et al., Defendants.

Under and by virtue of a special Execution and Order of Sale for delinquent taxes issued out of the Superior Court of Santa Cruz County, Arizona, in an action wherein THE STATE OF ARIZONA was Plaintiff and the respective persons hereinafter mentioned were Defendants, upon a judgment rendered on the 17th day of October, 1925, in favor of said Plaintiff and against said respective Defendants for the foreclosure of said tax liens on, and sale of, the respective parcels and land and real estate in Santa Cruz County, Arizona, described on the list appearing hereafter, in satisfaction of the respective amounts of said taxes thereon for the years specified, with interest thereon from date of said judgment at the rate of ten per cent per annum, and the interest, fees, penalties, assessments, and costs, and costs of suit shown on said attached list, with accrued costs, and the years for which the respective amounts of said taxes are unpaid, the persons, defendants in said action, against whom said respective liens were ordered foreclosed, the respective pieces and parcels of land and real estate in Santa Cruz County, Arizona, against which said respective amounts of said taxes were assessed for said years, together with the respective amounts of said taxes, interest thereon to date of said judgment, four per cent penalties, fifteen-cent fees for making back tax books, and costs, being as shown on the attached list thereof appearing immediately after this notice.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that I will, on the 23rd day of November, 1925, at 10:30 o'clock A. M. of said day at the front door of the Court House in the City of Nogales, Santa Cruz County, State of Arizona, separately sell at public auction, for current lawful money of the United States of America, said respective pieces and parcels of land and real estate belonging to or assessed in the name of said respective defendants, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the said judgment against the same, with interest and costs, with accruing costs, to the highest bidder, for cash.

Dated this 17th day of October, A. D. 1925.
