Piggly Wiggly to Open Meat Market

March 1 will see a new market in Nogales. Piggly Wigly, according to Manager E. A. Sanders, will install on the above date on one of the finest equipped meat markets in the state. Local meat will be handled exclusively when available, which will add materially to the business and wealth of Santa Cruz county.

The new meat market will be installed in the company's store on Grand avenue, next to the taxi stand.

Associated Charities Does Much Good

A tabulated report issued by the Associated Charities of Santa Cruz county shows that much distress was alleviated during the year 1924. The total amount of money expended in behalf of the poor was $7,944.17.

The work is in charge of the Rev. O. E. Smith, who is assisted by Mrs. Bessie Parker.

Father Dies in Dallas, Texas

A telegram received Monday by W. H. Collie of Vaughn announced the death of his father, Reuben Collie, at the home of a daughter in Dallas, Texas. Mr. Collie was formerly Santa Cruz resident, having at one time been postmaster of Elgin. Two sons, William H. and Stone Collie, and a daughter, Mrs. S. T. Harrison, all of Vaughn, are the surviving relatives residing in this county.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend to the people of Patagonia our sincere gratitude for their assistance during the fire that recently destroyed our home. We also wish to express and thanks for the many useful articles of household effects given us at the "shower" immediately after the fire.

MR. AND MRS. H. H. McCUTCHAN AND FAMILY.

Tubac Federal Farm Loan Association to Meet in Nogales Tomorrow

Saturday, January 31, at 2:30 p. m., there will be a meeting of the directors of the Tubac National Farm Loan Association at the office of the secretary, Judge Frank J. Duffy. All members of the board are requested to be present, as business of importance will be taken up for consideration.

ECONOMIC PROGRESS SHOWN AT THE A. I. C. CONVENTION

Phoenix.—Arizonans are vitally interested in the economic progress of their state and in the work of organizations along economic lines which are furthering that progress, and general development, by enlisting the co-operation of all interests.

If any doubt of this remained after the remarkable public support given the "Trade at Home," "Use Arizona Products," "See Arizona First" and other movements during the past three years, it would have been cleared away by the annual convention of the Arizona Industrial Congress in Phoenix, Friday, January 23, which drew not only the largest but the most statewide representative crowd in the history of such public meetings in the state.

Nearly 500 people attended the opening session of the convention Friday morning. In the afternoon attendance reached a peak of 700. That evening 550 were served at the "Prosperity Celebration" dinner and dance, after more than 200 others had been disappointed by failing to obtain tickets in time.

The gathering was notable not so much for size, however, as for the fact that the attendance was drawn from all sections of the state, and from all branches of industry and all walks of life. Similarly, all sections and all industries were represented on the program, and the greatest value of the meeting lay in the mere fact that people from all interests got together, heard each other, and formed mutual understanding.

All the talks on the program were interesting as well as constructive. The only outside speakers were John T. Orr, president of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton Association; William Sproul, president of the Southern Pacific railroad; and F. P. Cruise, assistant general freight agent of the Santa Fe. Otherwise the day was strictly an "All Arizona" one.

Mr. Orr in his talk discussed problems of the farmer and their solution, declaring the latter must lie in co-operative organization. Orderly distribution, entailing warehousing and regulating the flow of products to market so that shortages and surpluses, with accompanying price fluctuations, can be largely eliminated. Standardization of quality and pack were also emphasized as essential.

The talks of K. D. Hellworth, president of the Arizona Pimaconotton Growers' Association, and G. M. Bridge of Somerton, president of the Arizona Farm Bureau Federation, also stressed the urgent necessity of co-operative organizations to standardize and regulate distribution. Mr. Hellworth also urged greater use of state and government agricultural agencies to make production more efficient.

Mr. Sproul, who interrupted a flying trip of inspection through the southwest to attend the convention with a party of high officials, pledged his railroad to continued co-operation with other industries in state development, and recounted progress of the Southern Pacific's new main line. Mr. Cruise also emphasized the railroad's desire to co-operate with other interests in all possible ways.

State Senator Wayne Thornburg of Kirkland, and C. Ronstadt of Tucson, who spoke of problems of the cattle industry, ably brought out the need of better marketing by co-operative organization; more suitable methods of financing the industry, and more efficient production by improvement in herds.

Service to the public was stressed by F. A. Nathan of Tucson, who showed the wholesaler's essential functions in the economic cycle; by H. T. Brooke of Prescott, who told of the retailer's problems; by George H. Todd of Phoenix, appearing as a manufacturer, and by Dr. John E. Bacon of Miami, representing the professional groups.

The importance of the mining industry to the state, and the aid it is giving other industries by diverting its huge purchasing power to Arizona channels, were described by Robert E. Tally, general manager of the United Verde Copper Company at Jerome, and T. H. O'Brien, general manager of the Inspiration Consolidated Copper Company, both of whom mentioned the value derived from creating better understanding among in-

ELGIN NEWS

A. L. Hanson, postmaster at Elgin, has changed the location of the office, which is now in the building occupied by the Elgin Mercantile Company.

Walker Belue is reported to be improving slowly at the home of his parents in Tucson. He had a severe attack of pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Collie were business visitors in Tucson Saturday. S. M. Beebe and family were shopping in Nogales Saturday.

E. W. Fanekopf was a Nogales visitor Sunday.

It is reported that Mr. E. R. Cady, formerly driller at the Elgin oil well prospect, is the proud father of a 9-pound son.

Word reached here that Joe McKinney's horse won the race in Tucson Sunday. More power to you, Joe. Do it again.

It has reached the writer's ear that Mrs. W. H. Collie, teacher of the Rain Valley school, has purchased a new piano. We are anticipating some good music.

Miss Ken, teacher of the Vaughn school, was seen riding horseback alone Sunday. What's the matter, Buzz?

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Hanson were Nogales visitors Friday and Saturday.

A. J. Stinson was reported to be in Nogales very ill. He was visited by many Elgin friends.

Mrs. A. C. Dalton and son, Howard, were in the county seat Monday.

O. J. Rothrock is very sick at his Elgin ranch.

W. F. Neil, mail carrier, is putting up some improvements at his ranch.

Miss Lois Reeves, one of the popular young ladies of Elgin, seemed to be very much disappointed because the moving of the postoffice delayed delivery of her mail.

T. B. Grace of Douglas was an Elgin business visitor Monday.

Willard Roath returned Monday from Los Angeles. He reported the country very dry.

re. S. M. Beebe was a Nogales visitor Saturday. She has not been well for some time and she consulted a physician while in the county seat.

Miss Virginia Dalton is on the sick list this week.

The mining industry will continue to be a great factor in Arizona's prosperity, they said, but conditions in the industry make it necessary to keep production costs to a fair level.

Improved conditions in Arizona banks, and the banks' service in assisting progress, were described by Carl W. Gibson of Phoenix.

Two of the effective talks of the day were by women. Mrs. George P. Kitt of Tucson, vice president of the Arizona Federation of Women's Clubs, scored with the crowd when she told how Arizona women, whose household expenditures represent the biggest purchasing power in the state, are helping other industries by trading at home, and then urged that Arizona products be more extensively advertised, so that they can be known throughout all sections. Mrs. H. C. Wood of Phoenix, former chief of the Home Economics division of the University of Minnesota, told how women can help increase the family income by expert household management.

A third woman presided over the afternoon session of the convention—Mrs. H. T. Southworth of Prescott, president of the Arizona department of the American Legion Auxiliary. Dr. C. H. Marvin, president of the University of Arizona, was chairman of the morning meeting, and pointed out the national recognition being given the "American Plan" of industrial co-operation as embodied in the congress.

The "Prosperity Celebration" dinner and dance was made a gala event, with a snappy program, one or two short talks, and a general evening of merriment winding up with a general dance.

SEN. J. J. COX INTRODUCES LAW TO PROTECT BANK DEPOSITORS' SAVINGS

Numerous members of the present legislature were elected on platforms favoring the enactment of a law guaranteeing depositors in state banks. Governor Hunt, in his message, recommended such legislation. Sen. J. J. Cox has introduced a bill requiring all state banks to guarantee their depositors. Two methods are provided in the bill. One plan is the establishment of a guaranty fund maintained by assessments on the banks, similar to the systems now in operation in Texas, Nebraska, Mississippi and other states. The other plan is for each bank to furnish a bond or other approved security for its depositors. The bill permits each bank to exercise its own option as to which of these plans it will adopt, but it must secure its depositors by one or the other of the methods.

Under the law now in force in Arizona, banks are required to furnish bonds or other approved security for public funds deposited with them, and apparently find it profitable to comply with the law, as few if any of them have been known to refuse to accept deposits of public funds and furnish the required security. The Cox bill seeks to give private depositors the same protection now provided by law for public funds, and also gives the banks the privilege of securing their depositors by the guaranty fund system now in operation in other states, if they prefer that method of security.

The history of four disastrous years during which depositors in Arizona banks have lost millions of dollars, has impressed upon every one the necessity for some sort of protection for bank depositors. Banking is a modern necessity. The right to carry money on the banking business is a special privilege. In return for his services in supplying a public need, the banker is given the special privilege of lending, at profitable interest rates, the money of others which is left with him for safekeeping. Another receiving money for safekeeping, but not endowed with the banking privilege, would be guilty of embezzlement if he were to lend such money on interest for his own use and benefit. The banking business is legitimate only so long as the banker makes his depositors absolutely safe.

Senator Cox, who is an able lawyer, has given much time and attention to the preparation of his bill, and decided upon his final form only after submitting his plan to many of the ablest lawyers in the state, and after ample opportunity had been given at various public meetings for suggestions by bankers and their attorneys, and any other persons interested in the subject.

This bill is the only measure now before the legislature that offers any additional protection to depositors. A persistent campaign is being carried on against it, and every citizen interested in it should make his wishes known to his senator and representative before it is too late. The citizens of the state are entitled to have their hard-earned dollars fully protected.

WARNING AGAINST BOND ISSUES

Governor Baxter of Maine, in his message upon retiring, warns the people of that state against unlimited bond issues. He wisely objects to the prodigal practice of mortgaging the future for the benefit of the present, creating debts to be paid by future generations.

Large issues of tax-free state, city or county bonds are encouraged by those anxious to buy such securities, an those escape taxation. Such bond issues sell readily to those who have discovered this more or less safe and comfortable way of escaping federal and state taxes.

These mortgages upon the future must sooner or later be paid and some time a way will be found to put such securities on the tax rolls.

Elzie Bartell Dies in Bisbee

Elzie Bartell, well-known former resident of Parker Canyon, died Wednesday in Bisbee of pneumonia, according to word just received in Patagonia. He is survived by many relatives, among whom is a sister residing in Patagonia, Mrs. Lee Parker.

WEST NEEDS EXPANSION OF WOOL INDUSTRY

San Francisco.—The sheep industry is in need of great expansion so that it will be a part of the diversified activities of every farm in our western country. There is also need for promoting the manufacture of wool where it is grown, particularly in the west.

These were among the important points made by Paula Shoup, vice president of the Southern Pacific company, in an address of welcome delivered at the opening of the National Wool Growers' convention here recently. Mr. Shoup said:

"The industry you represent today has in excess of one billion dollars of capital invested in its manufactures, the amount being doubled within ten years, with an annual payroll of more than $236,000,000 and products reaching in value $1,400,000 annually.

"In 1924 California had a wool clip of about fourteen and one-half million pounds, worth at prevailing prices, I suppose, seven or eight million dollars. If that wool had been manufactured in the state it would have added another four or five million dollars to the income of the state. Our neighboring states, such as Oregon, Nevada, Arizona, and New Mexico, are also large raisers of sheep and producers of wool. Idaho, Wyoming, Utah and Montana each produce more wool than does California, their sheep industry having been devoted to a larger extent to that purpose. Oregon clips almost as much wool as does California and the Nevada output is about one-half that of California. New Mexico is midway between California and Nevada, with Arizona a little less than Nevada. But these nine western states I have named produce more than one-half of the entire wool clip of the United States. Yet, the number of manufacturers of wool in these states is negligible. There are only two in California, one at Eureka and one in southern California. In Oregon there are five. This is a sorry total out of more than one thousand wool manufacturers in the United States.

"So it would seem to me that with a consuming population in the territory west of the Rocky mountains that has trobled in this generation, with railroad and steamship lines to all consuming centers of the earth, with more than one-half of the wool production of the United States west of and including the Rocky mountains, there should be opportunity for greater manufacturing industry to be created on the Pacific Coast. Nor need it look toward the domestic markets, for as I have said, all the world that is able financially to do so uses wool. Here in the United States its use continues to increase and year by year the values of the wools above exports of wool continue to grow. We now import 200,000,000 pounds more wool than we did 20 years ago to meet our domestic needs.

"In the last ten years there has been no increase in the wool production of the world. Aside from Africa, there has been a falling off in the production of every division of the earth's surface, though the decrease in Australia has been very slight. It would seem apparent, therefore, that the industry now recovering from the strenuous efforts made in war time to meet a patriotic need has room for expansion in this country, and correlated with that expansion is a possibility of increased markets for mutton and lamb, particularly lamb as food. Indeed, I think no meat article of food has grown in favor as much as the ever present lamb chop.

"I am glad to share with you the feeling that the industry has brighter days in prospect. Wool indeed is selling at prices which must be gratifying to every producer and are hardly exceeded by those paid in the war time. Never was the essential need of the people for wool more clearly demonstrated than when the shortage of the last year or two was fully felt."

I am representing one of the strongest fire insurance companies in the world. Call and see me, or send in your old policy for renewal. Howard Keener, Patagonian office, Patagonia, Ariz.—Adv.

JAMES E. WEST, CHIEF OF BOY SCOUTS, TO VISIT ARIZONA

A national Arizona state conference of vital interest to the citizens, parents, boys and girls of our virile state will be held at Tucson February 5, when James E. West, chief scout executive of the Boy Scouts of America, will pay an official visit to take the leading part in a rally and convention of members of scout councils and delegates from every city in Arizona. Nothing is being spared by the Catalina Boy Scout council, backed by the Chamber of Commerce, Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions' Club and other civic organizations of Tucson to make this state convention one that will go down in history in the interests of our future citizenship.

Every one of the seven scout councils in the state have declared their intention to send a substantial delegation of men to attend on February 5, and in addition a large delegation of Boy Scouts of advanced rank, who will be awarded special degrees of Life, Star and Eagle rank on this occasion by their national chief, J. E. West.

Tucson will be in gala array as the city will be specially decorated in honor of the distinguished leader of this greatest of all boy movements.

A nomenclature of entertainment, special stunts and addresses has been arranged for the day by Paul W. Rebell and associates of the Catalina Scout Council; from some of the most prominent national leaders of the Boy Scout movement, and Arizona's leading men, who are backing the Boy Scouts of our state, including Dwight B. Heard and Alvin M. Davis, Arizona member of the regional executive committee, Boy Scouts Gov. C. W. P. Hunt, Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of the University of Arizona; Paul W. Rebell, president Catalina council, Tucson; Thomas Hendrix, president Roosevelt council, Mesa; Dr. C. E. Young, president Yavapai-Mohave council, Prescott; C. A. Clark, president Cochise county council, Douglas; M. G. Fronseke, president Grand Canyon council, Flagstaff; G. H. Ruggles, president Apache council, Globe-Miami; A. R. Heineman, president Yuma County council, Yuma; Rt. Rev. Daniel J. Gercke, Rev. George Andrews, Tucson, Rev. Dr. F. C. Seaman, Tucson; Rev. Julian McPeckers, Tucson; Stuart W. French, chairman regional executive committee, Pasadena, and Charles N. Miller, regional scout executive, Los Angeles, Calif.

In addition to Chief Executive J. E. West, it is expected that Mortimer L. Schiff and Charles Moore, vice presidents of the national council of Boy Scouts, will be in attendance. Many other delegates representing the business, civic, educational and religious interests of the boyhood of Arizona will be on hand to take an active part in the welcome of Chief West and on the deliberations of the convention.

POULTRY RAISING IS THIS MAN'S HOBBY

When Charles H. Crowell, editor of the poultry department of the Patagonian, isn't writing about chickens and ducks and turkeys, he puts in his time raising them. That's his hobby.

Mr. Crowell is one of the veteran newspaper men of Chicago, and long ago his hobby led him to leave the crowded city to seek out a place where he could have plenty of room to raise all the chickens he wanted. He found a place near Downers Grove, Ill., an deserted five-acre "plum." He doesn't pretend, however, to do business on a large scale, and at present his stock includes 150 White Leghorns and Ancona pullets, 15 Pekin ducks and four Toulouse geese. In addition to these he has them to look after seven German checked rabbits, a pair of guinea, three cats, three kittens, one dog and a pup. Before the holidays he had half a dozen turkeys, but, somehow, he says, these have mysteriously disappeared.

Mr. Crowell edits his poultry department in the light of his experience, and the Patagonian's readers may look to it for reliable information. If you are interested in poultry, you will always find something of value in his column.

EARLY SPRING MILLINERY; SPRINGTIME KNITTED MODES

JUDGING from the assemblies of hats now being reviewed by millinery dealers and bought for their establishments, the incoming spring is going to be a go-as-you-please season in shapes. No type has taken a dominant place in the modes, where many styles are represented, but a preference may develop later on. Just now a poke, a tricorn, a turban, an off-the-face or cloche with higher crowns, all claim attention with equal chances of becoming favorites.

A spring hat needs nothing beyond the fact that it is a spring hat, to make it interesting; but Easter arrives

Zig-zag, shell, lightning, lace—no, this is not the key to a cross-stitch puzzle—simply a few terms describing some of the novelty stitches which are playing such an important part in spring knitted modes. It is at once obvious, at advance style showings, that many of the newer sweaters are declaring their chic through the medium of fanciful stitch. In the picture an unusual "lightning" stitch, to use a professional term, lends interest to a charming springtime knitted slipper done in jade and white.

With the ultimatum gone forth in the field of things knitted that novelty fully early in April this year, so that the choice of new millinery will be pressing for attention very soon. With so much diversity in shapes and such entrancing colors there is no excuse for unflattering headwear. It is amazing how much hats can do for their wearers and therefore they should be given as much or more time and consideration than anything else. Buy a hat first, and get one that does something for you besides cover your head. If a certain model proves wonderfully stitch is to sound a new note in the fashioning of spring garments, behold genius accepting the challenge, setting its machinery to perform wondrous feats in that direction. We see, for instance, in some of the smartest advance sweater-models, a lovely shell stitch as exquisitely wrought as if done by hand, yet it is the proud achievement of marvelous machinery. What's the use of patiently knitting and knitting? Why puri and puri and then plain stitch, and then all over again, according to directions, when, after all, machinery outwits our best efforts? Not even an expert of the knitting needle can attain the exquisite effects which are noted in the latest filmy lace. Knit scarfs and even dresses are now knitted by machine, to look like rare and costly lace. Of course, one expects these delicately wrought knitted dresses, sheer and lovely as they are, to be very expensive. On the contrary, they are really very reasonable. Their coloring is most intriguing, too. Pastel lavenbecoming be a little extravagant and economize in some other direction.

Only four of the new arrivals are shown in the group of hats pictured, but these are so different from one another in shape that they indicate the diversity there is to choose from. A pretty poke of fallie silk starts off the group, faced with silk in a lighter color and trimmed with workroom-made silk rose and foliage. Hats like this are shown in varied color combinations. Just below it at the right is a hat of silk and fine straw combined. It is an off-the-face shape of the tricorn variety and has a charming adornment of rings and scrolls made of the braid. To the left another hat of silk reveals a dressier type with fans of metallic lace and a huge silk rose embellishing it. A pretty tailored turban finishes the group, made of black satin piped with white and bearing a rhinestone and pearl ornament at the right side.

ders, orchids, blues and citron shades abound and some of the prettiest are pure white, or white with rainbow borderings.

Speaking of sweaters which make fancy stitch their outstanding attraction, sometimes the effect is emphasized by contrasting a body knitted in novelty stitch, with sleeves and trimmings done in conventional solid stitch. This combining of novelty with plain stitch is especially characteristic of the latest favorite, golf coats.

Hipbands are especially chosen as a vantage point for exploiting the scheme of contrasting fancy and plain stitch. Charming types of this sort stress plain knit blouse sweaters, with hipbands knit in colorful jacquard patterns. Still another decorative touch is added by bordering the ends of an attached scarf to match the fanciful hipband. JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Costa Rica filed her resignation from the League of Nations last week, transmitting with her message a check for back dues. No reason was given for the withdrawal but a league official said it was assumed the resignation was due to criticism of the country for failure to pay her assessments.

Cast upon the rocky shore of the west coast of Vancouver island near Victoria, B. C., by a heavy gale, the French sailing ship Raika is believed to be a total loss. The vessel carried a captain, mate and crew of ten men, all of whom are reported safe at Carmanah lighthouse. The men abandoned the ship in a lifeboat.

Premier Mussolini of Italy and Signor Federzoni, minister of the interior, have ordered seizure of Vicente Blasco Ibanez's brochure against King Alfonso and have commanded the prefects to hinder by all means its circulation in Italy, reports the Rome correspondent of Le Gaulois. This action was taken, the correspondent says, after a demand made upon the Italian government by the Spanish ambassador.

Another three million-dollar snow storm swept New York a few days ago, causing the marshaling of 417 ploughs and between 10,000 and 12,000 shovellers to keep the main thoroughfares open.

An overwhelming majority of Vassar students want more lenient rules regarding smoking, it was revealed when tabulation of a referendum was completed at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. One hundred and eighty-three girls went further and expressed the opinion that a place should be set aside by the college for smoking purposes. The referendum revealed that 433 girls smoke and 524 do not.

Gerald Chapman's secret of success in the underworld, the inside story of how he looted a mail truck of $2,400,000 in New York three years ago, the romance of his adventures as a crook de luxe, were locked within him as securely as he was locked in Marion county jail at Indianapolis, Ind., awaiting return to Atlanta federal prison. Chapman held his silence as thoroughly as he planned every move since he escaped twice from the Atlanta prison until he was recaptured in Muncie, Ind., a few days ago by a squad of detectives.

Philip K. Wrigley, not yet 30, will become president of the $5 million-dollar chewing gum corporation, succeeding his father, William Wrigley Jr., at the annual meeting of the stockholders next month. It is reported in Chicago. The elderly Wrigley will be named chairman of the board of directors.

Practically the entire Southeast was threatened with enormous property damage from floods rolling down the valleys after three days of constant rain. Engineer C. L. Dunham and T. F. Foster, a yardmaster, were killed and several persons injured when a Southern railway train went through a trestle over Mulberry creek, near Selma, Ala.

Senator Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey was implicated in the New Jersey rum scandal at the trial in Jersey City of twelve Weehawken police indicted for prohibition law violations when two government dry agents testified that the senator had served as a link between bootleg liquor buyers and William F. Griffin, alleged master mind of the conspiracy.

For the first time since 1874, when the Texas ranger forces were organized, the state of Texas is without protection of that organization in compliance with a perpetual injunction granted by the Fifty-seventh District Court of San Antonio. The order to suspend operations was sent to the five ranger captains by Adj. Gen. Thomas D. Barton, after a conference with Assistant Attorney General C. A. Wheeler. The orders instructed the captains to suspend all operations until further advice from the adjutant general's department.

BRIEF ARIZONA ITEMS

Yeggs who blew the safe at the high school at Yuma obtained approximately $3 for their trouble according to a check made here.

Frank Luke was chosen as the chairman of the State Tax Commission for the next two years at a meeting of the commission held in Phoenix.

Grading on the new Southern Pacific line between Picacho and Chandler will be completed in April, according to President William Sproule.

Graduate nurses of Yuma county have formed an organization. All trained nurses in the district will be registered and asked to become members of the association.

Preliminary application for the sale of the Safford Light and Power Company of Safford, Ariz., to D. E. Bent of New Mexico has been made to the Arizona Corporation Commission.

A bill to appropriate $100,000 for construction of a bridge across the Colorado river six miles below Lee's Ferry, Ariz., has been favorably reported in Washington by the House Indian committee.

Vernon Vaughn of Phoenix, state land commissioner for the past two years, was reappointed to serve in that capacity for another two years at a meeting of the State Land Board held in Phoenix. Following the action of the board, Governor Hunt then re-named Mr. Vaughn as ex-officio state water commissioner.

A rich gold strike has been made twelve miles northeast of Safford in the Lone Star mining district on prospects owned by Rimbert and Golding of Safford. This is free gold in quartz and assaying from $140 to over $600 to the ton, it is said. They have also found very rich gold ore in a greenish colored ore which was thrown out as worthless by some old time prospectors who started a tunnel on one of the claims more than twenty years ago.

There are 2,646 school teachers in the schools of Arizona, according to the second annual educational directory that has been prepared by C. O. Case, state superintendent of public instruction. The directory shows that the average monthly salary of the grade school teachers is $150 a month, while the average salary of high school teachers is $193.50. The daily average attendance at grade schools for the school year 1922-1923 was 46,229, and the average high school attendance was 8,412.

Gov. George W. P. Hunt in a special communication to the Arizona State Legislature outlined the result of his recent conference in Los Angeles with Gov. J. C. Scruggs of Nevada. It is mutually understood between the governors of the two states that the Colorado river development in either Arizona or Nevada must be with the permission of either state and the federal government, and that the development of the river running between Arizona and Nevada must be with a permit from both states and the national government.

Warden R. B. Sims of the Arizona penitentiary, charged with unlawfully aiding and abetting in the mutilation of the dead bodies of two men hanged at the state prison, was held to answer in the Superior Court after a preliminary trial had been held before Justice of the Peace S. W. Stillman at Florence. Warden Sims' bond was fixed at $500. Mrs. C. E. Howard, wife of a prisoner at the penitentiary, caused Warden Sims' arrest more than a month ago when she filed the charges alleging that the warden had caused the bodies of Paul V. Hadley and Theodore West to be dug up and their skulls removed.

Judgment has been entered by the Superior Court at Prescott by Judge Richard Lamson in favor of J. Andrew West and his clients against E. J. Wenberly and others in a case involving the collection of $7,870. An attachment and foreclosure of the defendant's property, known as the Black Diamond mine in the Walker district, was ordered.

The value of the gold, silver, copper and lead produced by mines in Arizona in 1924 was $98,216,000, a decrease from $104,301,200 in 1923, according to a statement given out by the Department of the Interior, based on estimates made by V. C. Helges of the geological survey. Though great progress was made in the construction and operation of new mills and a new smelting plant, the decrease in the price of copper and silver and a decrease in the quality of gold mined materially lessened the value of the output. The output of gold decreased from 86,121,121 in 1923 to $4,840,500 in 1924 as a result of an unusually large decrease in the production of gold ore in Mohave county and copper ore in Yavapai county.

Tombstone will soon have a modern municipal electric and ice plant as the result of the carrying of a bond issue at a special election. The issuance of the bonds was authorized by a vote of 124 to 4. The vote cast represented 90 per cent of the property owners in Tombstone.

The annual convention of the New Mexico Cattle and Horse Growers' Association will be held in Santa Fe, March 23 and 24. It was announced in Albuquerque a few days ago by the executive committee of the organization.

MILITIA HALTS HERRIN RIOTS

KLAN LEADER AND SHERIFF
BATTLE TO DEATH IN HO.
TEL AT HERRIN

FIVE PEOPLE KILLED

TROOPS RUSHED TO QUELL DISTURBANCE IN WILLIAMSON COUNTY, ILLINOIS

Herrin, Ill.—With militiamen again patrolling the streets of Herrin, order prevailed after the latest outbreak of klan and anti-klan warfare in which four men were killed, including S. Glenn Young, klan liquor raider, and Ora Thomas, deputy sheriff, recognized outstanding leaders of the two factions.

The two others killed in the revolver battle in a main street cigar shop were Ed Forbes and Homer Warner, both reputed klanmen and companions of Young.

Young died from a bullet wound through the heart, although he was shot also in the right breast. Those shots, according to reports, came from the two revolvers handled by Thomas. Thomas' body was removed to one undertaking establishment, and the bodies of the three others to another undertaking place.

Crowds thronged the two undertakers' places and the scene of the fight, viewing the shattered windows. Militiamen patrolled the streets and quiet prevailed.

Major Davis issued an order stopping the long procession of curious persons passing thru the undertaking establishment to view the bodies.

The body of Young was wrapped in a purple robe, said to designate a "knight" of the Ku Klux Klan.

Altho first reports said several had been wounded in addition to those killed, none were taken to the hospitals. Reports persisted that two bystanders had been grazed by bullets. These, however, could not be verified. When citizens entered the cigar shop a few minutes after an exchange of 40 or 50 shots, they found Young dead and Warner unconscious. Thomas slumped to the floor with bullet wounds in his body and died on the way to the city hospital.

Forbes lay dead on the sidewalk outside, shot thru the base of the skull. Warner died in the hospital about two hours later.

A company of militia, headed by Maj. Robert Davis, arrived from Carbondale, and took charge of the situation.

Eclipse study to Take Two Years

New York.—That an important crop of scientific data was reaped by astronomers and by students of physics, mathematics, chemistry, radio and of meteorology during the two scant minutes of darkness that marked last Saturday's total eclipse of the sun was predicted by scientists here. Altho it was said that it may require as long as two years to collate and analyze the enormous masses of data collected, already several phenomena have been brought to the attention of the scientific world.

Three Sentenced to Death

Greenville, S. C.—Jerry Hester, and his two sons, Charlie and Claude Hester, were convicted of the murder of J. E. Thackston, farmer and merchant. A motion for a new trial was refused by Judge Rice, who sentenced the three men to die in the electric chair February 27. Thackston was slain on December 19.

Port Slips Into Sea

London.—Port Alexander, on the west coast of Africa, has been submerged under the sea according to a dispatch received by the Sunday Express. The message was filed from Portuguese West Africa. It states that the town suddenly sank under the sea and that its sudden disappearance was complete. News from the vicinity is very meager, but heavy loss of life is feared. The population of the town of Port Alexander is understood to be composed chiefly of natives. However, there are Portuguese and Europeans who have been leaders in the trading community.

Girls' Slayer Denied Bail

San Francisco, Calif.—"Jazz Mad" Dorothy Ellington, 16-year-old girl, who shot and killed her mother, will not be released from jail on bail. Both Police Judge S. J. Lazarus and Juvenile Judge Frank Muraski declared that she had refused to entertain requests for bail for the mother-slayer and Alexander Mosin, attorney for Dorothy, was informed efforts in that direction would be fruitless.

Storm Sweeps Northwest

St. Paul, Minn.—A blizzard has been raging over the lower half of Minnesota. Parts of the Dakotas and the western part of Wisconsin also were affected. In some sections of western Minnesota trains and highway traffic was interfered with because of drifted snow. Temperatures fell rapidly toward the zero mark. Fargo, N. D., reported 10-below-zero weather. The snowfall there was light. Redfield, S. D., dispatches told of the worst snow storm of the season there.

AN OPERATION RECOMMENDED

Avoided by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Los Angeles, Cal.—"I cannot give too much praise to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me. My mother gave it to me when I was a girl 14 years old, and since then I have taken it when I feel run down or tired. I took it for three months before my two babies were born for I suffered with my back and had spells as if my heart was affected, and it helped me a lot. The doctors told me at one time that I would have to have an operation. I thought I would try 'Pinkham's,' as I call it, first. In two months I was all right and had no operation. I firmly believe 'Pinkham's' cured me. Every one who saw me after that remarked that I looked so well. I only have to take medicine occasionally, not but I always keep a couple of bottles by me. I recommend it to women who speak to me about their health. I have also used your Sanative Wash and like it very much."—Mrs. E. Gould, 4000 East Side Boulevard, Los Angeles, Cal.

Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised.

FARM POULTRY

GATHER EGGS OFTEN IN SEVERE WEATHER

Success in selling hatching eggs or in getting good hatching eggs for your own incubators to supply you with chicks for the baby chick trade is dependent upon gathering the eggs during the winter months at frequent intervals; but even market eggs require the same attention in order to get the best results.

In freezing weather the eggs may lie in the nest three or four hours before freezing, but there is no reason for subjecting them to such a temperature for any length of time. If they are to be used for hatching purposes, or sold for hatching eggs, you owe it to yourself or your customer to gather them as soon as laid, if possible. Any unnecessary exposure to the temperature will affect, more or less, the hatching quality and the vigor of the chick.

Where it is at all possible, especially in severe weather, it is advisable to visit the nests every 30 minutes and gather such eggs as can be gathered without disturbing hens on nests. So long as there is a hen on a given nest, the eggs under her are in no danger. Those who are fortunate enough to have double-walled and frost-proof houses are not in as much danger of loss as those whose hens are indifferent to the cold.

The ideal way to handle winter hatching eggs is to put them in the incubator the same day they are laid, says a writer in Successful Farming. However, this is not often possible, unless one has a large flock laying enough to fill the incubators. Some hatcheries remedy the situation by having small incubators and setting them every day or two during the season; or, where large machines are used, setting separate compartments.

Where this is impossible and the eggs must be stored a few days before placing in the machines or shipped to customers, it is best to place them in a clean and dry, but well-ventilated place, where an average temperature of about 40 to 45 degrees is maintained. A regular incubator cellar is good for this purpose; but do not place the eggs in a damp, poorly ventilated or musty vegetable cellar. If you do not have a clean cellar, it is better to place them on a ground floor where the room is heated sufficiently to keep it from freezing.

In storing eggs for hatching purposes, it is best to place them in flat wooden trays. Incubator trays not in use are good for this purpose, or trays may be made along that style. A cabinet may be made of a number of these trays nailed together which will be handy and serviceable.

Turn the eggs every day from the time they are taken from the nest until they are placed in the machine. This is to prevent the germ sticking to the shell and rendering the egg worthless for incubation purposes.

Get the eggs into the machine or under hens or off to the customer at the earliest possible moment. Every day that passes lessens the chances of the utmost success. Evaporation is the constant enemy of the held-over hatching egg, and the longer this progresses the less the chance of getting a strong, virile chick.

Scientist Finds Goiter in Minnesota Chickens

Two cases of that rarest of poultry diseases, goiter, have recently been diagnosed by Dr. H. C. H. Kernkamp, assistant professor of veterinary medicine, University of Minnesota. Both were in White Orplington hens which came from the same farm in Ramsey county.

In one of the specimens the thyroid gland had become so enlarged that it pressed against the trachea and inferior larynx and caused the former to become flattened. The heart had also become slightly displaced by the growth and the lungs were pressed against the walls of the thorax.

Records of the veterinary medicine division at university farm show that of 2,400 autopsies on poultry sent in from all parts of Minnesota for investigation and study the last six years, these two cases were the only ones of goiter observed in birds. Carpenter, a veterinary scientist of California, did not find a single case of goiter in 1,000 autopsies on chickens.

Height for Perches

Dropping boards should be level, and the perches arranged about six inches above them. The perches should be on a level, also, and of 2-by-2 material. They should be fastened to 2-by-4 supports that are hinged at the back end of the house so that the roosts can be raised out of the way while scraping the dropping boards.

Damp Sawdust Is Bad

Damp sawdust is not very desirable to use as insulation in a wooden walled poultry house, not only because the dampness is likely to increase rather than decrease, and is bad for poultry, but because damp sawdust has only a small part of the insulating value of dry sawdust. If the coal cinders were crushed into fairly uniform small pieces, it probably would work very well for insulation, but the ordinary cinders are too coarse to have much value for insulation.

"OLD-SALT" TALES

By CAPTAIN IRA PERKINS

(Copyright.)

"Minute"

"THERE are many good names for him," said Captain Ira, as he stroked the velvet-smooth muzzle of Tommy Radnor's new pony. Meanwhile, the other nine boys of the club had gathered around and were admiring the sleek little fellow. All sorts of names were suggested. Finally, Robby Treat asked the captain if he didn't know of some famous pony after which Tommy's might be named.

"Yes, several of them," replied Captain Ira. "There was one in particular. They waited for the captain to start. But he stayed silent for a time. Reaching out for a clover blossom he pulled it from the stem. Then he plucked out a thumb and finger full of the little pink petals and sucked the honey-sap from the base of them. There was a far-away look in his eyes.

"Boys," he said at last, "I'm about to tell you of a famous pony. But he was a pony who never had his name in any printed story and he was not cited in any dispatch book. His fame now lives as a happy memory in the hearts of several thousand men. It is really a story of a half dozen parts. I'll only tell you of the one which I know best, today. Some other time, if you like, I'll tell the others.

"It was while the big war was going on. I was in command of an old P. & O. liner, which had been converted into a horse transport. Four trips we had made and, despite all the talk about submarines, our most exciting moments had been when a horse had broken loose now and then and started a ruckus between decks.

"The fifth trip across began as uneventfully as the others. The only out of the ordinary thing had been the antics of a small bit of horseflesh which the hostlers had nicknamed, on account of his size, 'Minute'.

"How Minute ever won past the inspectors, I can't say. He was under size something like five hundred pounds. The shoe he wore was as dainty as a woman's wedding ring, in comparison to the average. After he'd known you for two minutes, he'd be nuzzling through your pockets for sugar lumps. And if you let him loose, he'd follow anywhere. One calm day I sighted him strolling along the forward hurricane deck, apparently with his mind made up to mount the bridge and visit me as soon as he could find the way up.

"From then on he was the ship pet. I had a stall rigged out for him in an unused runway between two cabins. Things went so far that the ship's tailor fashioned him a set of four soft rubber boots, so that he could walk the deck without slipping.

"Then the unexpected happened. Out of a clear sea, one night, a submarine popped its periscope. Next thing, a torpedo crashed into us. We started to sink. I had the lifeboats lowered. Our wireless sputtered a continuous S. O. S. for help. In about twenty minutes my ship slid gently into the sea, almost as though she were glad of the long rest which awaited her.

"It was a very dark night and, at my command, the boats had rowed away as fast as they could from the ship's side, so they would not be engulfed with her when she went under. Thus, after the ship had gone down, I found myself floating in the chilly sea, hampered from active swimming by my clothing, and with little hope of being able to keep on top until I should be picked up.

"There was a snort in the water beside me. 'It was Minute, as I found out later. Then, with a thankful heart, I seized hold of his mane. He was a strong swimmer and bore me easily until one of the boats found us. I was hauled aboard.

"Since the boat was a good-sized one and could easily bear his additional weight, it was decided to try and save Minute also. I'll never forget how patient he was, just as though he knew the danger he was in and that we would have trouble saving him. 'A makeshift tackle was at last put together and he was dragged aboard. You would have laughed to see how he looked with his feet waving free in the air and laced fast on them the ungainly rubber boots which the tailor had made for him.

"Later we were picked up and Minute was delivered to the army in France."

After the captain quit speaking, Tommy thought a bit. Then he said: "Do you mind if I call my pony 'Minute'?"

"No, indeed," replied Captain Ira. "And some other time I'll tell you more about Minute and his exploits in France."

Lamps Show if Factory Machinery Is Working

In a canning factory having seven food-packing machines the manager has installed a little device near his desk to indicate whether or not all seven are working properly. The device consists of a panel on which seven miniature lamps are mounted, each of which is connected to one of the machines, so that every time a can passes to the filling machine it causes a lamp to flash. As long as the lamps keep flashing, the manager knows that everything is going well, but if any lamps fail to flash it is a signal to him that he is perhaps needed in the factory to untangle some difficulty. A switch is, of course, provided so that the current can be turned on or off.

Silencing Automobile-Door Noises

Squeaking automobile doors can sometimes be silenced by cleaning the rubber bumpers and the parts they touch with gasoline, wiping dry and powdering liberally with talc dust. Oil should never be used as it ruins the rubber. If the door rattles, see if the rubbers are pressing against the door. If not, readjust them with the setscrew, or by forcing small pieces of inner tube under them with a screwdriver. New bumpers may be needed. A few minutes' attention now and then will eliminate the annoyance.

Newspaper Pages Flashed by Radio Is Prediction

Transatlantic transmission of photographs and newspaper pages by radio is a development likely to become a reality in the near future according to Maj. Gen. J. G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America. Two-way talk by radiophones he also regards as an imminent possibility. A ticker that will actually print words on paper from a central broadcasting point, thus greatly amplifying present news-distributing agencies, is another of the objectives of radio-research engineers, and control of airplanes, submarines and other ships from a remote land station is, he believes, a possibility certain to be realized in view of the astounding progress already made in radio accomplishments.

Preventing Snow from Sticking to Shovel

It is usually somewhat difficult to use a metal shovel for scooping snow as the snow has a tendency to stick to it. This trouble can easily be prevented by first cleaning the shovel so that it is absolutely free from dirt, heating the metal part, and then covering it with melted paraffin or wax. When the paraffin is cold, the shovel can be used, and it will be found that the snow will not stick. Of course, this will last only as long as there is a film of wax on the shovel, but it is surprising how long it takes before this film is worn off. Wooden shovels may be treated with grease or rubbed with soap.

Ventilating the Kitchen

In the construction of many houses the kitchen is built without much thought or consideration for the cook. The storm windows usually do not permit much ventilation and no pipe is provided to carry away the smoke and fumes from the gas stove. A good method of providing proper ventilation is shown in the drawing. A wooden box incorporating the storm window is built around the window on the outside. This box is made about 5 in. longer than the storm window, which is allowed to rest on the lower edge of the box, thus leaving a 5-in. space at the top. A right-angled wooden damper is made to fill this space; it is hinged to the upper end of the storm sash, and long enough to rest on a length of angle iron screwed to the upper edge of the inside sash. Opening or closing the inside sash automatically opens or closes the damper. Whether the damper is open or closed the space between the two windows is practically tight all the time. The box itself can be used as an iceless refrigerator during the cold months, small shelves being built on the sides so as not to shut off any light, if the box is made wide enough for this purpose.

CHAPTER XV—Continued

But still she ran, summoning all of the reserve of strength and will-power which was hers to command. The sky was brightening to the climbing moon. She must round many a sweeping curve of the river, pass under many a sheltering, shadowing tree before she dared slow her steps.

When she felt that she was overtaxing herself, she dropped from the wild pace she had set herself into a little jogging trot. When her whole body cried out at the effort demanded of it, she slowed down to a brisk walk. She was shot through with pain, her throat ached, she was growing dizzy. But on she went stubbornly. It was a full hour after the last sound of pursuit had died out after her that she flung herself down at the water's edge to drink and bathe her arms and face in the cold stream. And, even then, she chose a spot where the shadow of a great pine lay like ink over the bank.

The moon was high in the sky, the world bright with it, when Judith left the valley into which the canyon had widened and made her way slowly upward along a timbered ridge to the west. Of Quinlan and Mad Ruth she now had no fear. Their chance of coming upon her was less than negligible. She could creep into a clump of thick-standing young trees and, even if they should come, could watch them go past. But as they had dropped out of her world, another matter had entered it. The mountains had befriended her; they had opened their arms to her and that was all that she had asked of them. They had mothered her, drawing her into hiding against their bosom. But it was a barren, barren breast. And already she was hungry, darling to eat but sparingly of her handful of bread and meat.

From this ridge, finding an open crest, she stood looking out over the world. Mile after mile of mountain and canyon and cliff fell away on every side. She sought eagerly for a landmark: to see yonder in the distance Old Baldy or Copper mountain or Three Fools' peak, any one of the mountains or ridges known to her. And in the end she could only shake her head and sigh wearily and slip down where she was to fall asleep, thanking God that she was free, asking God to lead her aright in the morning.

The stars watched over her, a pale, worn-out girl sleeping alone in the heart of the wilderness; the night breezes sang through the century-old tree-tops; and Judith, having striven to the uttermost, slept in heavy dreamlessness.

With the cool dawn she awoke shivering and hungry. Her hair had tumbled about her face, and sitting up she braided it with numb, sore fingers. She looked at her hands; they were stained with blood from many cuts. Her skirt was torn and soiled; her stockings were in strips; her knees were bruised. But as she rose to her feet and once more searched the riddle of a crag-broken world, her heart was light with thankfulness.

Last night the one friend she had with her was the North star. Today she would seek to push on toward the west. In that direction she believed the Blue Lake ranch lay, though at best it was a guess. But going westward she could follow the course of the bigger streams, and soon or late, if her strength held, she would come to some open valley where men ran stock. Now, she would go down into the little meadow lying a mile away yonder and seek to find something to eat. If she could but dig a few wild onions, wild potatoes, they would keep her alive. West she would go, if for no other reason than because thus she would be setting her back squarely upon the cavern where Quinlan and Ruth were.

The sun rolled into a clear sky and warmed her. She made her way down the long flank of the mountain and into the tiny meadow. For upward of two hours she remained there, nibbling at roots which she dug up with a broken stick, seeking edible growths which she knew, finding little, but enough to keep the life in her, the heart warm in her breast. Then she went on, over a ridge again, down into a canyon and along the stream which rose here and flowed westward. By noon she was faint and sick and had to stop often to rest, her legs shaking under her. Again she made a scant meal. She had stumbled on a tiny field of wild potatoes and ate what she could of them, thinking longingly of a match for a fire. The match which Ruth had dropped she still had, but she carefully reserved it now, thinking how perhaps a trout, caught in a pool, might save her life.

In her already half-starved condition and with the demands constantly put on her strength, she would grow weaker and weaker if help did not soon come. But she was still filled with the glory of freedom.

It was a heart-weary, trembling Judith who late that afternoon made her way upward along another ridge, seeking anxiously to find from this lookout some landmark which she had sought in vain last night. In her blouse were the few roots she had brought with her from the field discovered at noon. Lying in a little patch of dry grass, resting, she watched the day go down and the night drift into the mountains, filling the ravines, creeping up the slopes, rising slowly to the peak to which she had climbed, seeping into her soul. Never had the passing of the day seemed to her so majestic a thing, truly filled with awe. Never until now had the solitude seemed so vast, so utterly, stupendously big. Never until now, as she lay staring up into the limitless sky, having given up the world about her as unknown, had she drunk to the lees of the cup of loneliness.

So great was the weariness of her tired body that as she lay still, watching the stars come out one by one, she was half-resigned to lie so and let death come to find her. It seemed to her that here in the rude arms of Mother Earth a human life was a matter of no greater consequence than the down upon a moth's wing. But she rested a little and this mood, foreign to her intrepid heart, passed, and she sat up, again resolute, again ready to make her fight as long as life beat through her blood. At last she took the one match from her pocket. She scarcely dared breathe when, with dry grass and twigs piled against a rock, her dress shielding them from the wind, she rubbed the match softly against her boot. A sputtering flame, making the blue light of burning sulphur, died down, creating panic in her breast, then flared, crackled, licked at the grass. She had a fire and she knew how to use it!

When a log was blazing, assuring her that her fire was safe, she rose swiftly and went in search of the tree she meant to burn. She found a giant pine, pitch-ozing, standing in a rocky open space where there was little danger of the fire spreading. Fagged out and eager as she was, she had not come to the point of forgetting what a great forest fire meant.

She went back to her burning log, for a blazing dry branch which she carried swiftly to the tree. Then she piled dry grass and dead twigs, logs as heavy as she could carry, bits of brush. The flames licked at the tree, ran up it, seemed to fall away, sprang at it again, hungering. Now and then a long tongue of fire went crackling high up along the side of the tree. Judith went back to a spot where, in a ring of boulders, there was another grassy plot, threw herself down and lay staring at the tongues of fire which were climbing higher and higher.

Some one would see her beacon. A forest ranger, perhaps, whose duty it was to ride fast and far to battle with the first spark threatening the wooded solitudes; perhaps some crew in a logging-camp, than whom none knew better the danger of spreading fires; perhaps some cowboy, even one of her own men—perhaps Quinlan and Ruth? She then would hide among the rocks until they had come and gone. Even now, against the sleep falling upon her, she drew farther back through the tumbled boulders. Perhaps, Bud Lee.

She went to sleep beyond the circle of bright light, tired and hungry and striving against a returning hopelessness.

Throughout the Night the Tree Blazed Unseen.

ness, her young body curled up in the nest she had found, a cheek cuddled against her arm, wondering vaguely if some one would see her fire and come—if that some one might be Bud Lee.

CHAPTER XVI

Bacon, Kisses and a Confession

Throughout the night the tree blazed unseen. Judith's eyes were closed in the heavy sleep of exhaustion. The flames roared and leaped high skyward, burning branches fell crashingly, to lie smoldering on the rocky soil, the upstanding trunk glowed, vivid against the sky-line.

In the early morning at least two pairs of eyes found the plume of smoke above the still burning giant pine. A man named Greene, one of the government forest rangers, blazing a new trail over Devil's ridge, came out upon a height, saw it and watched it frowningly across the miles. It called him to a hard ride, perhaps to a difficult journey on foot after he must leave his horse. He turned promptly from the work in hand, ran to his cabin, swung up and sped back to his cabin, to telephone to the nearest station, passing the word. Then with ax and shovel, he began his slow way toward the beacon.

Bud Lee, from the mountain-top where he and Burkitt had taken Hampton, saw it. Lee judged roughly that it was separated from him by four or five miles of broken country, impassable to a man on horseback, to be covered laboriously on foot in a matter of weary hours.

Lee and Greene approached the signal smoke from different quarters. Lee from the west, Greene from the northeast. They fought their way on toward it with far different emotions in their breasts. Greene with the desire to do a day's work and kill a forest fire in its beginning, Lee with the passionate hope of finding Judith. Lee reached his journey's end first.

As he came pantingly up the last climb he discharged his rifle again and again, to tell her that he was coming, to put hope into her. And, because he was a lover and a lover must be filled with dread when she is out of his sight, he felt a growing anxiety. She had lighted the fire last night; what might have happened to her since then? Had she been wandering, lost all these days? If nothing else, then had she waited here half the night and in the end had gone on plunging deep into some canyon hidden to him? Would he find her well? Would he find her at all?

Suddenly he called out, shouting mightily, and began running, though the way was steep. He had seen Judith, he had found her. She was standing among the scattered boulders, her back to a great rock. She was waving to him. Her lips were moving, though he could not see that yet, could not hear her tremulous:

"Oh, thank God, thank God!"

"Judith," he called, "Judith!"

Now, near enough to see her distinctly, he saw that her face was white, that the hand she held out was shaking, that her clothes were torn, that she looked pitifully in need of him. But at last, when he stood at her side, one of the old rare smiles came into Judith's tired eyes, her lips curved, and she said quietly:

"Good morning, Bud Lee. You were very good—to come to me."

"Oh, Judith," he cried sharply. But no other word came to his lips then. The brave little smile had gone, the whiteness of her face smote him to the heart. And now she was shaking from head to foot, and he knew why she had not stepped out to meet him, why she had kept her back to the rock. He thought that she was going to fall, he saw two big tears start from the suddenly closed eyelids, and with a little inarticulate cry he took her into his arms.

"If you had not come, Bud Lee," she whispered faintly, "I should have died, I think."

Very tenderly he gathered her up so that her little boots were swung clear of the flinty ground and she lay quiet in his arms. He stood a moment holding her thus, looking with eyes alternately hard and tender into her face. He wanted to hold her thus always, to watch the glad color come back into her cheeks, to carry her, like a baby, back across the weary miles and home. And, oddly, perhaps, the thought came back to him and hurt him as it had never hurt him before, that he had once been brutal with her, that he had crushed her in his arms and forced upon her lips his kiss. He had been brutal with Judith, when now he could kill a man for laying a little finger on her.

"I have been a brute with you, a brute," he muttered to himself. But Judith heard him, her eyes fluttered open and into them came again her glorious smile.

"Because you kissed me that night, Bud Lee?" she asked him.

"Don't!" he cried sharply. "Don't even remember it, Judith."

"Do you know so little of a girl, Bud Lee," she went on slowly, "to think that a man can so easily—find her lips with his unless—unless she wants to be kissed?"

He almost doubted his ears; he could hardly believe that he had seen what he had seen in Judith's eyes. They were closed now, she lay quiet in his arms, it seemed that she had fainted, or was asleep, so very white and still was she. He had forgotten that he must carry her to where he could lay her down and bring water to her, give her something to eat. He just stood motionless, holding her to him, staring hungrily down at her.

"Are you going to play—I'm your baby—all day, Bud Lee?" she asked softly.

He carried her swiftly away from the ring of boulders and to a little grassy, level spot where he put her down with lingering tenderness. Judith had not been angry with him all these months! Judith had let him kiss her because she wanted to be kissed—by him!

He raked some coals out of the ashes, hastily set some slices of bacon to fry, cursed himself for not having brought coffee and milk and sugar and a steak and a flask of whisky and enough other articles to load a mule. He ran down into the canyon and brought water in his hat, swearing at himself all the way up that he had not brought a cup. He put his arm about her while she drank; kept his arm about her, kneeling at her side, while he gave her a little, crisp slice of bacon, held his arm there when she had finished, watching her solitously.

"The two nicest things in the world, Mr. Man," she said, with a second attempt at the old Judith brightness, "are half-burnt bacon and Bud Lee!"

Then, because, though he had been slow to believe, he was not a fool, and now did believe, he kissed her. And Judith's lips met his lingeringly. Judith's two arms rose, slipped about his neck, holding him tight to her.

The faintest of flushes had come at last into her cheeks. He saw it and grew glad as he held her so that he could look into her face. But now she laid a hand against his breast, holding him back from her.

"That's all now," she told him, her eyes soft upon him. "Just one kiss for each slice of bacon, Mr. Lee. But—I'm so hungry!"

For a little there was nothing to do but for Judith to rest and get some of her strength back. Lee made of his coat and vest a seat for her against a rock, sat at her side, his arm about her, made her lean against him and just be happy. Not yet would he let her tell him of the horrors through which she had gone. And he saw no need of telling her anything immediately of conditions as he had left them at the ranch. Time enough for that when she was stronger, when they were near Blue Lake.

Greene, the forester, came at last up the mountain. He noted the isolated tree, nodded at it approvingly, made a brief tour around the charred circle, extinguishing a burning brand here and there.

"What sort of a fool would want to climb way up here to start a fire, anyway?" he grumbled.

Then, unexpectedly, he came upon the happiest-looking man he had ever seen, with his arms about an amazingly pretty girl. Not just the sort of thing a lone forest ranger counts upon stumbling upon on the top of a mountain. Greene stared in bewilderment, Bud Lee turning a flaming red. Judith smiled.

"Good morning, stranger," said Lee. "Fine day, isn't it?"

Judith laughed. Greene continued to stare. Lee went a trifle redder.

"If you two folks just started that fire for fun," grunted Greene finally.

"Why, then, all I've got to say is you've got a blamed queer idea of fun. Here I've been busting myself wide open to get to it."

"Haven't got a flask of brandy on you, have you?" asked Lee.

"Yes, I have. And what's more I'm going to take a shot at it right now. If nobody asks you, I need it!"

Now, Lee heard for the first time something of Judith's adventure. For, recognizing the ranger in Greene, she told him swiftly why she had started the fire, of her trouble with Quinlan, of the cave where Quinlan had attacked her and of Mad Ruth. Greene's eyes lighted with interest. He swept off his hat and came forward, suddenly apologetic and very human, proffering his brandy. Insisting with Lee upon her taking a sip of it.

Yes, he knew Mad Ruth, he knew where her cabin was. He could find the cave from Judith's description. Also, he knew of Quinlan and would be delighted to break a record getting back to his station and to White Rock. White Rock was in the next county, but so, for that matter, was the cave. He'd get the sheriff and would lose no time cornering Quinlan if the man had not already slipped away.

"I don't know you two real well," said Greene, with a quick smile at the end, "but if you don't mind, pardner," and he put out his hand to Lee. "I'd like to congratulate you! I don't know a man that's quite as lucky this morning as you are!"

"Thank you," laughed Judith. She rose and shook hands too. "We're at Blue Lake ranch for the present. Come and see us."

"Then you're Miss Sanford?" said Greene. He laughed. "I've heard of you more than once. Greene's my name."

"Lee's mine," offered Lee.

"Bud Lee, eh? Oh, you two will do! So long, friends. I'm off to look up Quinlan."

And, swinging his ax blithely, Greene took his departure.

"There are other things in the world besides just cliffs to stare at," said Judith. "And I would like a bath and a change of clothes and a chance to brush my hair. And the bacon doesn't taste so good as it did and I want an apple and a glass of milk."

So at last they left the mountain-top and made their slow way down.

As they went Lee told her something of what had happened at the ranch, how Carson would hold off the buyers, how Tommy Burkitt was assuming charge of Pollock Hampton. And when they came near enough to Burkitt's and Hampton's hiding-place, Lee fired a rifle several times to get Burkitt's attention. Finally they saw the boy, standing against the sky upon a big rock, waving to them. From Lee's shouts, from his gestures, chiefly from the fact that Judith was there, Burkitt understood and freed Hampton, the two of them coming swiftly down to Judith and Lee.

Hampton's face was hot with the anger which had grown overnight. He came on stiffly, chafing his wrists.

"These two fools," he snapped to Judith, "have made an awful mess of things. They've queered the deal with Doan, Rockwell & Haight, they've made themselves liable to prosecution for holding me against my will, they've—"

"Wait a minute, Pollock," said Judith quietly. "It's you who have made a mistake."

Briefly, she told him what had happened. As word after word of her account fell upon Hampton's ears, his eyes widened, the stiffness of his bearing fell away, the glint of anger went out of them. And when she had finished, Hampton did not hesitate. He turned quickly and put out his two hands, one to Lee, one to Burkitt.

"I was a chump, same as usual," he grunted. "Forget it if you can, I can't."

They went on more swiftly now, the four of them together, Judith insisting that that last sip of brandy had put new life into her. In a little while, seeing that Judith did in fact have herself in hand, Bud Lee, with a hidden pressure of her hand left them, hurrying on ahead, trying to reach Carson, or some of the men in Pocket valley and to get horses.

As he drew nearer the ranch Lee saw smoke rising from the north ridge. Again he could turn his thoughts a little to what lay in front of him, wondering what luck Carson had had in his double task of fighting fire and holding off the buyers.

At any rate, the Blue Lake stock had not been driven off. The bawling of the big herds told him that before he saw the countless tossing horns. Then, dropping down into Pocket valley from above, he found his own string of horses feeding quietly. Beyond, the cattle. At first he thought that the animals had been left to their own devices. He saw no rider anywhere. Hurrying on, he shouted loudly. After he had called repeatedly, there floated to him from somewhere down on the lower flat an answering yell. And presently Carson himself came riding to meet him.

Carson's face was smeared with blood; one bruised, battered, discolored eye was swelling shut, but in his uninjured eye there was triumphant gladness.

"We got the sons-o-guns on the run, Bud," he announced from afar. "Killed their pesky fires out before they got a good start, crippled a couple of 'em, counting Benny, the cook, in on the deal, chased their deputy sheriff off with a flea in his ear, an' set tight, holding our own."

"Where'd you get the eye, Carson?" demanded Lee.

Carson grinned broadly, an evil grin of a distorted, battered face.

"You want to take a good look at ol' Poker Face," he chuckled. "He won't cheat no more games of crib for a coon's age. I jus' nacherally beat him all to h—l, Bud."

"Where are the rest of the men?" Lee asked.

"Watching the fires an' seeing no more don't get started."

Venetian Glass

Venice has long led the world in the manufacture of beautiful glassware. Glass works were early established in that city and the taking of Constantinople in 1204 gave the Venetians the opportunity of acquiring additional knowledge of the art. During the fourteenth century beads, false stones, and imitations of jewels, rather than cups and the like, seem to have been the chief productions of the Venetian workman. Venetian glass is usually of extreme thinness, being nearly always blown, and there is an endless variety to be found in the shapes and in the application of color. Glass-blowing, like throwing clay on the potter's wheel, induces beautiful curved forms and strength of substance.

Kisses

The safest time to kiss is midnight. The most dangerous time is early in the morning, germs having accumulated during the night. As the hours roll by germs are gradually eliminated from their favorite nest—mouth and lips. Even at four in the afternoon kissing still is risky.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Mail Bandit Gives New His Rifle

Probably the most unusual gift to be received by a cabinet officer was the rifle sent to Postmaster General Harry S. New by Brent Glascock and his wife Avis. Glascock was the "brains" of the Roundout (Ill.) mail robbery last June and he is now languishing in the Ft. Leavenworth penitentiary under a 12-year sentence. The gun bears a silver plate with the inscription, "Presented to Postmaster General Harry S. New by Brent Glascock and Avis Glascock, 1924." Rush D. Simmons, chief of the post-office inspectors, is standing at the left of the picture with the gun case.

Famous Forts in U. S. History

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

(G. 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

The Training School of American Generals

It is doubtful if any other post in the United States has known as many of our famous military leaders as Jefferson Barracks, Mo. When Jefferson Davis became secretary of war in 1853 he determined to form a regiment which would be the best in the army. Remembering the tradition of the army, which, from the close of the War of 1812 had sent to Jefferson Barracks the most promising young officers in the army, he organized at that post the Second cavalry, later known as "Jeff Davis' pet."

The colonel of the regiment was Albert Sidney Johnston and its lieutenant-colonel was Robert E. Lee, destined for fame as two of Davis' greatest Civil war generals. At the same time there was organized there the First regiment of cavalry with Edwin V. Sumner (later a Union general) as colonel and Joseph E. Johnston (of Bull Run fame) as lieutenant-colonel. In fact these two regiments gave to the Union and Confederate armies no less than 30 generals, among them such men as John Sedgwick, W. J. Hardee, W. H. Emory, George Stoneman, E. D. Baker, "Jeb" Stuart, George H. Thomas, Wesley Merritt, Earl Van Dorn and Kirby Smith.

But these are not the only distinguished names on Jefferson Barracks' roll of honor. There, too, appear Henry Leavenworth, Henry Atkinson, Stephen W. Kearney, John C. Fremont, Braxton Bragg, James Longstreet, Ulysses S. Grant, William Tecumseh Sherman, Philip Sheridan, Winfield Scott Hancock and Nathan Boone, a son of the famous Kentucky pioneer.

Jefferson Barracks also saw organized the original "rough riders" long before the days of Theodore Roosevelt and San Juan hill. During President Van Buren's administration the Seminole Indians became troublesome and the President asked the governor of Missouri to raise two regiments of mounted Missourians, frontiersmen all, to serve against the Seminoles. From all parts of the state these horsemen poured in to St. Louis and under the leadership of General Gentry and Col. John W. Price they were organized at Jefferson Barracks and acquitted themselves brilliantly in Florida.

Jefferson Barracks was established in 1820, as Cantonment Adams (in honor of President John Quincy Adams), and during its existence of nearly a century has been an important military rendezvous in all of Uncle Sam's wars from the Mexican to the World war.

The Fort That Was Built on a "Scrap of Paper"

On September 3, 1813, a young lieutenant of the American army, Thomas Hamilton, found himself in a desperate predicament. Outside Fort Madison, a little fortification on the Iowa shore of the Mississippi river, swarmed hundreds of hostile Indians who had been besieging him for nearly a month. Any attempt to escape would be perilous but to hold the fort meant the massacre of his men. If the savages carried the fort by assault, starvation, too, faced them, for their provisions were exhausted.

So Hamilton ordered a trench dug down to the river's edge where boats were moored. That night they crept down to the water, undiscovered by the enemy because of the blackness of the night and a high wind which was blowing. When the last man left the fort, he set fire to it and as Hamilton's force paddled out into the current of the Mississippi the buildings roared into flames. The Indians pursued but Hamilton had too much start and he reached St. Louis in safety.

Thus ended the brief history of a fort which was built upon a "scrap of paper." In 1805 Gen. James Wilkinson sent Lieut. Zebulon Pike to select a post between St. Louis and Prairie du Chien, Wis. Pike chose a place on the west side of the Mississippi some 40 miles above the mouth of the Des Moines river. A treaty made with the Sac and Fox Indians the previous year had specifically prohibited the government from building forts on the west side of the river. As in many other cases, the government regarded this treaty as a "scrap of paper" and in 1808 Lieut. Alpha Kingsley of the First Infantry began building the fort, completed it the next year and named it Fort Madison in honor of President James Madison.

Lieutenant Hamilton came there in September, 1812, with a force of 50 men and immediately afterwards the fort was attacked by 200 Winnebagoes, who were aided by a young Sac warrior named Black Hawk, who was on his first warpath against the Americans. From that time Fort Madison was repeatedly attacked and besieged, until at last Hamilton abandoned it. It was never rebuilt and all that remained for many years to mark its site was a stone chimney which survived the fire. The chimney later crumbled and fell but a few years ago it was restored by the women of the city of Fort Madison which grew up on the site of the old fort. It now stands as a monument to a thrilling episode in Iowa history as well as to the tragic sequel of a broken promise.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

LEGION MEN HELP HOLD FRIENDSHIP

In the work of the American Legion a very important part is played by its members and posts and departments located in the possessions of the United States and in foreign lands. These men and organizations act, in their constant contact with people of other nations, as unofficial representatives of the United States. They do much to promote and to cement the friendliest relations between the mother country and the country of their adoption.

Particularly important work has been done in this direction by the department of Panama. To the men of this department it has been given to foster the most cordial relations with the peoples of Central America. One high Central American official has gone so far as to say that these men, acting unofficially, have done more for friendly relations and real understanding between those countries and the United States than have all the official representatives of the government.

The commandship of the department of Panama is thus one of the most important links in the chain of Legion officers. That post is now held by William Byrne Boggs. Boggs was born January 11, 1892, at Frametown in West Virginia. At the age of nineteen he enlisted in the Coast Artillery corps. Upon the declaration of war with Germany, he was commissioned and assigned to duty in the adjutant general's department as assistant adjutant general for the Panama canal department. He was discharged from service June 30, 1919. He was married to Miss Esther Rye of Minneapolis, Minn., on May 1, 1917, at Cristobal, Canal Zone. They have two children, Dore, aged six years, and Carol, aged five.

The new commander has been active in the work of the Legion in Panama since its organization. He is a member of Panama Canal post, No. 1. He was for three years a member of the post executive committee, two years a member of the department executive committee and one year an alternate national executive committee. He is at present employed as assistant surveying officer in the executive department of the Panama canal.

Illiteracy in Alaska Proves Serious Problem

Illiteracy constitutes a grave problem in Alaska that will require serious consideration in the process of its solution, declared H. L. Faulkner, authority on education, speaking before educators in the United States.

Mr. Faulkner spoke under the auspices of the American Legion, department of Alaska, which is sponsoring a campaign to reduce illiteracy in the territory.

"Illiteracy is a subject of particular gravity in Alaska at this time," said Mr. Faulkner, "for within the past month from 800 to 1,000 illiterate men and women in the First division alone were taken to the polls on election day and voted as a machine. In the First division today illiterates are sitting on grand and petit juries and on city councils; helping to make and enforce, or preventing the making or enforcement of laws they cannot understand."

Gave Job to Legion Man

Governor Friend W. Richardson of California thinks well of the advice of Legionnaires. He asked the advice of Legion men in picking a man to fill the position of secretary to the Veterans' Welfare commission and recently had this to say about the Legion's choice: "I gave the job to a young man whom I had never seen in my life, but who had been recommended to me by the Legion and he has delivered the goods 100 per cent. I think the boys are running that department of the government in good shape and without partnership."

Your doctor advises internal cleanliness

HE WILL tell you that the first results of constipation—headache, sleepless nights, biliousness, backache, etc.—warn that the body is flooded with intestinal poisons. In time these poisons may cause the breakdown of health and lead to serious disease.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. For sale by all druggists.

FACTS ABOUT THE RANGE

In this state a large percentage of the range cattle are raising on forest reservations and the cattle industry called Mountain States is vitally affected by the regulations enforced by the forest service.

Several years prior to the war, when the cattle industry was prosperous, the grazing fee for cattle ranging on forest reservations was fixed at 35 cents per head. This charge under then existing conditions could be easily met by the cattlemen and they had no cause for complaint, but since that time the grazing fees have been gradually increased until the charge is now $1 per annum per head for all cattle grazing on these

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which quickly Relieves by local application, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which assists in improving the General Health. Sold by druggists for over 40 years. E. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

counties understand the conditions under which the cattlemen are laboring and there have been but few, if any, sales for taxes, the authorities allowing these taxes to remain in default but the forest service demands cash for these grazing fees and the cattlemen have no the cash to pay.

TAX REDUCTION POPULAR

The National Industrial Conference Board shows by a careful survey that there is nothing more unpopular than any proposition to increase federal, state and local taxes.

This statistical body shows that during 1921-23, inclusive, while state and local taxes increased nearly 15% federal taxes decreased more than 27%.

While federal taxes were reduced $1,000,000,000 in three years, states and political subdivisions have been borrowing and spending heavily.

In 1919 these subdivisions borrowed $691,000,000; in 1923, $1,063,000,000; during 1924 over $1,300,000,000.

Correspondingly, state and municipal subdivision taxes have increased from $2,956,000,000 in 1919 to $4,449,000,000 in 1923, and probably exceeded five billion dollars in 1924.

But the tide has turned and many states and localities have reduced their levies and are proposing further reductions.

The cost of education doubled between 1918 and 1923, costing $1,520,000,000 for public schools alone in 1923.

PENSION ALLOWED WIDOW OF FOREST SERVICE LOOKOUT

Albuquerque, N. M.—Mrs. Victor Ortega, La Madera, N. M., whose husband was killed by lightning June 30, 1924, while serving as a forest service fire lookout man, has been granted the maximum amount of compensation allowed by law for the support of herself and children, according to District Forester F. C. W. Pooler, who has just been advised of the grant by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission.
