Reduction of Non-Coms of the Army
Due to shortage of appropriations, there will be no appointments of army non-commissioned officers for a number of months. No non-commissioned officers will be reduced in their present grade, but no non-commissioned officers will be reappointed in grade to fill an original vacancy or promoted to a higher grade until this deficiency has been made up. It is estimated that 4347 men will be affected by this policy.

THE NEW GENERATION

By Bertin Braley

"Youth's never been old," says Augustus J. Hall. "And therefore, of course, cannot savvy at all. How middle-age feels or how middle-age thinks. And that's why—it's logic, and simple enough—The young folks regard us as fusty old ginks. And look on our counsel as out-of-date stuff, which mostly it is! Once again let me state Youth's never been old, but the old have been young. And middle-aged fogies once splendidly flung Their gaze to the world in a fashion elate. And if they will try They can, in their hearts, as in seasons long by, Be youthful—and thus, with the past's re-creation Get wise to the ways of the New Generation!"

"The New Generation—it isn't so new, It's acting about as I once did—and you, Expect that it's bigger And fitter, and stronger With health and with vigor That seem to last longer And keep it young later than youth in our time! And, say, in my prime, I couldn't keep pace with my athletic son And as to my daughter—my wife at her age Wasn't one-half as husky—or one-half as wise! These lads and these lappers must pass through a stage Of trying their wings, but I somehow surmise Although they may flounder and flap in their flight They'll reach, in good time, to a splendid height. Than ever we got to—for, take it from me—The world as we've made it is not such a WOW! We can't blame the young folks for think that we Are hardly the models to pattern by now. The Old Generation had better sing small. The New Generation—here's luck to them all! Oh, Lord, to be young!" says Augustus J. Hall.

Youth of Nation Tops Death List in U. S. Auto Fatalities

YOUTH pays the heaviest toll in annual automobile fatalities. From five to fifteen years is the period when the greatest number of fatal accidents occur, for both sexes. The chart shows the age distribution of automobile deaths for men and women as given in the latest mortality figures prepared by the government. These figures, says the Stewart-Warner Safety Council for the prevention of automobile accidents, emphasize the need for more playgrounds and increased safety education among school children. Complete statistics are not possible, as only 85 per cent of the United States keeps mortality records. About 22,900 a year is generally conceded to be the annual number of automobile fatalities. For 8,621 males known to have been killed in one year there were only a third as many women, or 2,843, in spite of the fact that the male population is only 4 per cent greater than the female. This chart does not take into consideration the 600,000 Americans who are injured annually by automobiles. Such figures are not available except in certain states, but that boys and girls again make up the bulk of such casualties is indicated by the records of New York state kept for the first nine months of 1925. Here 11,708, or practically one-third of the 38,292 injured, were under fifteen years of age.

THE RAILWAY LABOR BILL

The situation in the anthracite industry, lends special interest to the impressive step which has just been taken by the railroads and their employees to provide for the peaceful settlement of labor disputes, states the current issue of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York.

A bill agreed upon by representatives of the companies and the unions has been introduced into congress by Senator Watson, chairman of the interstate commerce committee of the senate. The bill provides for the abolition of the Railroad Labor Board and the creation in its stead of a federal board of mediation, to consist of five members appointed by the president.

Under the provisions of the measure, the Survey continues, all disputes shall be first considered in conference between the parties directly interested. If no agreement is reached the federal board may be called in by either party or may intervene on its own motion. If it fails to bring about an adjustment, it shall endeavor to induce the parties to agree to arbitration. The decisions of the arbitrators shall be filed in the appropriate federal district court and shall become a judgment of that court, binding upon the parties.

If the parties to the dispute refuse to agree to arbitration, and if the board of mediation believes that the controversy threatens seriously to interrupt interstate commerce, the board shall notify the president, who is authorized to create a special board to investigate and report to him within 30 days. For a further period of 30 days after this board has reported, it is agreed that no change, except by mutual consent, shall be made by either party in the conditions out of which the dispute arose.

It is further provided that no employee shall be deprived of the right to quit work at his will and that no court process shall be used to abridge that right.

Limitations of Proposed Board
The bill has been criticized on the ground that it would replace the Railroad Labor Board by a body in which the public would have no direct representation. Inasmuch as wage levels are an essential feature in the fixing of rates, it may be reasonably urged that the users of railway transportation should have a voice in wage settlements. However, the force of this argument is somewhat weakened by the fact that neither the present board nor the proposed one has any mandatory power.

Wage levels are, and would continue to be, subject to the voluntary acceptance of both parties. A more important consideration is the fact that the proposed mediation board would apparently have no authority to summon witnesses—an authority that, in the experience of the Railroad Labor Board, has made it possible to bring to light many pertinent facts which could not otherwise have become known except in consequence of action in the courts.

The effect of the proposed measure on the question of strikes and injunctions is not entirely clear. The stipulation that neither party may make any change in the conditions out of which the dispute arose within 30 days after the report of the president's board could hardly be interpreted as an agreement not to strike. On the other hand the specific reservation of an individual employee's right to "quit at his will" need not imply the right of employees collectively, through their labor organizations, to take concerted action to obstruct interstate commerce.

Whatever may be the merits or defects of the bill as it now stands, it apparently represents a sincere effort on the part of the railroads and the unions to approach common ground in the adjustment of labor questions. While it does not, of course, purport to carry any guarantee against strikes, it guards against precipitate action and allows public opinion, which has been, and will probably continue to be, the consumer's strongest weapon, to exert its full influence. It is undoubtedly a step in the direction of industrial peace.

PATAGONIA CHOSEN AS SITE FOR UNION HIGH SCHOOL

At the election held last Saturday to choose a site for the new Union High school, Patagonia received the majority of the votes, thereby assuring the high school for this town. It was a wise selection, as all roads in the district center here, and transportation costs for pupils from outlying districts will be less in consequence.

Election Returns

Following are the returns of the election, held February 20, to choose a site for the new union high school:

District	Patagonia	Sonoita
Patagonia No. 6	194	0
Sonoita No. 25	5	12
Vaughn No. 27	1	8
Elgin No. 27	1	8
Lockiel No. 9	0	12
Harshaw No. 7	8	0

Total 123 31
No election was held at Red Rock No. 22, Rain Valley No. 26, Parker Canyon No. 11, Mowry No. 16, Alto No. 17, Washington Camp No. 12, Canillo No. 10.

It is now necessary for the county school superintendent to appoint a board of education for the union high school district, whose duty it will be to call a bond election to raise funds for carrying out the financial obligations attaching thereto.

Qualifications of Bond Electors

As there may be a doubt in the mind of some as to the qualifications of a voter at a bond election, James V. Robins, county attorney, has outlined, in brief, the law governing in the case, which is as follows:

To be eligible to vote at a school bond election, a person must have paid in his own name a county or state tax upon property located in the high school district, other than poll, road or school tax. These taxes must have been paid during the period of one year immediately preceding the election, and must be taxes that became payable during, and not delinquent before, said year.

A married person need not have paid his taxes, but must have been the owner of community property during said year, and as evidence of their ownership must exhibit to the election board a tax receipt or an assessment notice. The community property owned must be located in the high school district. An unmarried person (single, divorced, widow, widower, etc.) must have paid his tax as stated above.

PATAGONIA'S CLIMATE "UNSOLD"

Your town would be as large as Tucson today if outsiders knew what a fine climate you have, said a mining man to the editor of The Patagonian, in a conversation one day this week.

There is only one practical way in which the local climate can be given publicity. Advertising in periodicals and newspapers will do the trick. But who is going to pay for the advertising? Our community isn't peopled with wealthy men and our merchant are too busy making money for themselves in their private business to give the matter of "selling" our climate and wonderful scenery to the people of other parts of the country.

It costs money to advertise. The local newspaper does what it can but we have carried the burden of trying to put Patagonia on the map so long without much assistance from local merchants or others vitally interested in the upbuilding of Patagonia that we have lost heart in the endeavor to help those who won't bear part of the financial burden in advertising their wonderful resources.

As the mining man said, we have the best all-the-year-round climate to be found anywhere. Health-seekers would find prolonged life and ideal conditions here, and advertising would acquaint them of the fact that we are fortunately located in the matter of healthful climate, good schools, fine water, beautiful scenery and summer night so delightfully cool as to induce restful sleep and drive away that "tired feeling."

Our Chamber of Commerce and Mines should be revived and started on a campaign of building up the community by letting the rest of the country into the secret of our fortunate location from a health-giving standpoint. Let's go.

COST OF GOVERNMENT

Cost of federal, state and municipal government in the United States shows a grand total of $10,252,000,000 for the year 1924, compared to $2,919,000,000 for the year 1913.

These statistical facts are compiled from the official records of government, by the National Industrial Conference Board.

A more vital fact is also shown in the decrease of $385,000,000, or 10.6 per cent, in federal expenditures for 1924, while state and local governments increased their expense by $492,000,000, or 7.6 per cent.

In spite of the large reductions possible by the federal government in lopping off war expenditures due to state and local extravagance there was a net increase for 1924 of $107,000,000.

The problem presented by a steady increase in state and municipal tax rates concerns every individual, whether or not he is a property owner. All must pay the increase.

High cost of government contributes directly, as must be admitted, to the high cost of living generally.

In the practice of greater economy in the cost of government the beginning must be at the top, working downward—rather than at the bottom working upward.

MAINTAIN AMERICAN STANDARD

There are over three times as many automobiles in use in the United States as there are in all the rest of the world. On January 1 nearly 20,000,000 autos were in operation in this country. Less than 6,000,000 were in use in all the rest of the countries together.

In this country a major proportion of the autos are owned by working class folks. In no other nation is ownership of an auto common among those who toil. In other countries, the auto is a general proposition, but the worker and his family may envy the rich the possession thereof.

The common people of America should place a very high value upon this distinction. It is made possible by the superiority of the so-called American standard of living over those of other countries. The Ameri-

Motor-Driven Roller Skates Run on Rough Ground

Propelled by small acetylene or gasoline-burning motors, roller skates devised by a German engineer are said to develop considerable power and will run not only on pavements but on rough surfaces as well. Controls are operated through connections reached with the hands. The engine is built on principles discovered by making small motors for airplanes.

New Steel, Hard Yet Pliant, Takes Razor Edge

Many of the qualities of the celebrated Damascus steel are said to be found in a modern product which an Ohio man has developed by a secret process. He combines iron and carbon in such a way that the resulting steel will bend, keep an edge of razor sharpness, is tough and can be driven through other steels without breaking. A bar of the material, fifteen inches long, was tempered to five different degrees, one end of it being hard enough to cut glass, a section was sharpened like a razor and would cut dry hair without honing or stropping, while other parts in the same bar would cut off a spike under blows of a hammer, would spring or could be bent backward and forward with the thumb and forefinger without breaking. Vanadium is an important element used in the preparation of the steel.

Salmon Travel Hundreds of Miles a Week

That salmon travel amazing distances in short periods is indicated by the journey of one fish which was liberated at the southern end of Nova Scotia last June and was caught less than a month later in the Malsie river, Quebec. Identification was made by means of the silver tag which had been placed in one of the salmon's fins when it was first captured. Its journey was between 800 and 1,200 miles long. By means of the tags, valuable knowledge is being gained as to the habits of salmon and other fish.

Snubbers for Ford Car Made at Home

After he had broken three front springs in one summer, an autoist looked around for a cheap means of preventing further breakage. The remedy he finally devised consisted in riveting snubbers, made from an old belt, around the front axle and the frame of the car. The belting was of four-ply canvas, 5 in. wide, and was cut in two, overlapping the splices 4 in. The illustration shows the installation clearly.

er politicians are swivel-chair reformers who never walked in a furrow and could not tell when end of a horse collar goes up. Most farmers are trained all their lives in economy, but all other lines of business and industry are more highly organized than the tillage of the soil.

On no line of relief to agriculture has there been more accomplishment than in promoting better farm loans, but the fact remains that the great bulk of financial relief has come through the farm mortgage banks of our country.

CHILD LABOR MOSTLY ON FARMS Economic necessity and a waning interest in school work are the chief reasons why the great majority of boys and girls leave school at an age when it would be better for them to continue their education, according to a report on "The Employment of Young Persons in the United States," published by the National Industrial Conference Board.

COMMUNITY SPIRIT (Editor's Note.—The following editorial was sent us for publication by one of our subscribers who probably thinks Patagonians should read it, and profit thereby.) There is such a thing as community spirit. It is both an intangible element and a cashable quantity. Intangible because it cannot be measured bartered and sold in commercial reckoning but flows in never-ending stream until its source is stopped or destroyed; cashable because of the results shown in bringing about the fulfillment of the community's ambitions to advance and prosper.

It is being freely predicted that the tariff is to be made a leading political issue in the forthcoming campaign. The tariff should be as free from partisan politics as the tax question. Our lawmakers, in many instances, seem to be the last persons to realize that the American people are past the kindergarten stage in understanding questions of public interest.

It is silly to try to fool our people with the political fairy tales of the past. The nation wants economy in government. It wants tax sanity and it wants a businesslike administration of the tariff and all other questions, in the interest of American workmen and American industry.

CHEAPER MONEY FOR FARMERS Cheaper money is undoubtedly one of the basic needs of agriculture, just as much as better business methods. Many professional first-aid-to-farm-

Mixing Concrete in the Wheelbarrow

A simple and easy method of mixing concrete by hand in a wheelbarrow is shown in the illustration. Fig. 1 shows a batch of dry material consisting of four shovelfuls of gravel, two of sand and one of cement. Fig. 2 shows the first operation, working the material to the front of the barrow, with a round-pointed shovel. Fig. 3 shows the same batch after it has been worked back again in the same way and some water has been added. The material is worked to the front again, leaving it in the position shown in Fig. 4, and then again backward. It is now thoroughly mixed and will keep itself in the position shown in Fig. 5. This method has been found entirely satisfactory.

Repairing Leaky Eaves Trough It sometimes happens that a section of eaves trough rusts through in one place, while the rest of it is still in good condition. This can easily be repaired as follows: Cut a piece of canvas large enough to cover the hole, coat it with tar and press it down over the hole. Then coat the patch with tar on the inner side and let it dry. The trough should, of course, be well cleaned and dried before applying the patch.

To prevent exposed black pipe from rusting, cover it with a grease made of 1 lb. lard, 1 oz. gum camphor and 1 oz. black lead.

Ben Bernie has Nothing To Do But Sleep After 18 Hours Hard Work Daily

New York City.—The busiest man in New York City is Ben Bernie. Ben is neither a big business man on Wall Street nor a ditch digger. He is New York's premier orchestra leader, and his working day averages sixteen hours of harder labor than any hod carrier. "I have a friend," says Bernie, "who wonders what I do with my time. He thinks conducting an orchestra is a sinecure. Some day I am going to take him through one of my days. I got up at seven, eat breakfast, and execute the business of the day. Then I rush to a recording session. After that, it is time to play for the afternoon show at the Rialto Theatre. We rush there. When we finish, we go as quickly as possible to the Roosevelt Hotel and play for tea dancing and dinner. Then back we scurry to the Rialto for the night show, and finally furnish music for supper dancing at the Roosevelt. We get off at about one in the morning. Bernie's popularity comes chiefly from his introduction of a new interpretation of dance music. He gained fresh laurels with the super-popular "Kinky Kids Parade." His music has become the rage on Broadway and Park Avenue alike.

Wheat Crop of 1925 Shows Lowest Average Since 1904

Table with columns: 1925 WHEAT PRICES AND RECEIPTS. Includes sub-tables for PRICE PER BUSHEL AT CHICAGO and WEEKLY TREND OF CASH WHEAT PRICES AND RECEIPTS. Price per bushel at Chicago ranges from $1.35 to $1.95. Receipts range from 2,000,000 to 24,000,000 bushels.

THE 1925 wheat market has been one of many surprises for the growers of both winter and spring wheat, states the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. Owing to unfavorable weather conditions last winter, which caused a large abandonment of winter wheat acreage due to the winter killing of nearly ten million acres, or 22 1/2 per cent of the area sown in wheat, the total crop production in 1925 reached only 869,865,000 bushels as compared to 862,827,000 bushels the year before. With the exception of 1917, this is the heaviest abandonment of wheat area on record. The final harvest averaged only 12.8 bushels per acre, which is the lowest average since 1904. Spring wheat, which looked very promising at first, also lost heavily through injury from rust. The yield per acre was cut down to 12.9 bushels, which is 3.3 bushels below the 1924 average. The carry-over of wheat from 1924 was moderate. From 625,000,000 to 650,000,000 bushels are required for domestic consumption. Exports up to the end of December were nearly 60,000,000 bushels, and the remaining exportable surplus is small. Both winter and spring combined production totaled 103,262,000 bushels less than in 1924, making it the smallest wheat crop since 1917 in terms of production, and in proportion to population, the smallest wheat crop since 1890. Because of a belief in a world shortage, wheat prices early in 1925 reached a high level, going up to $1.93. When it became evident that the apparent world shortage had been exaggerated, the market declined rapidly and went as low as $1.49 in April.

Be a Milk Tippler, Says Dr. Schireson

Peaches and cream complexion of American women have their foundation in a milk diet, according to Dr. Henry J. Schireson, famous Chicago dermatologist and facial plastic surgeon. "Babies and children have complexions of angels for the reason that they are fed largely on milk. Milk used externally or internally is a beautifier. Anna Held, I believe, was the first actress who adopted the milk bath. While this was a novelty at the time, and her press agent undoubtedly made the most of it, the principle in itself was sound. But a beauty secret of even more value is the daily quart of milk taken as a part of the diet.

"The milk-fed girl is easily distinguished by the velvety texture and the healthy color of her skin. Milk is a wonderful body builder, because it contains every structural element. It is, in a way, an elixir of life. "Authorities agree that milk is the most nearly perfect food but it is an extremely delicate one as well. Heat sufficient to kill all bacteria is the essential of absolutely pure and sterile milk. One of the advantages of evaporated milk, which is simply fresh cow's milk with sixty per cent of the water removed, is that it is entirely sterile and is more easily assimilated than ordinary market milk. "Milk is mentioned forty-seven times in the Bible. The promised land of the Israelites was said to flow with milk and honey and Ovid graded milk as second only to nectar, the drink of the gods."

The TALE of KIDDIE KATYDID

By Arthur Scott Bailey

FREDDIE WANTS TO TELL

AS SOON as Kiddie Katydid mentioned the word music, Freddie Firefly began to dance and shout. "There!" he cried, "You've just the same as told me that I was right. If you sang your 'Katy did, Katy did,' she did, she did," you would call it singing. But since you make that ditty by rubbing your wing covers together, it is music. And you just referred to it as such!"

And He Flitted Away, Feeling somewhat Peevish.

die Katydid could persuade Freddie Firefly to keep the news to himself. "You won't say anything about this little matter, I hope," Kiddie began. "Won't I?" said Freddie Firefly. "Why, I just couldn't help telling people what I've learned! It's the biggest bit of news that I've known since I've lived in Pleasant Valley. And I must get word of it to old Mr. Crow somehow."

"Why Mr. Crow?" Kiddie Katydid inquired anxiously. He knew that the old gentleman was a great gossip. "You might as well put this in a newspaper as tell old Mr. Crow about it." "Ah! That's just the point!" cried Freddie. "Mr. Crow is a newspaper. Perhaps you didn't know it; but every Saturday he flies over Blue Mountain to the pond where Brownie Beaver lives and tells Brownie all the news of the past week."

"Then for pity's sake, don't let him hear of this!" Kiddie begged. "But nothing could have stopped Freddie Firefly. "You're too modest," he said. "It's a shame to be able to make music the way you do and not let the neighbors know it. Why, the first thing you know you'll be one of the most famous people in this whole valley."

He was pondering over his difficulty, which bothered him not a little, when a terrific croaking from the direction of the swamp reached his ears. It was the final chorus of the Frog family's nightly singing party. And it promptly put an idea into Freddie Firefly's head. "I'll hurry right over there and speak to Mr. Frog, the well-known tallor," he said to himself. "He knows old Mr. Crow. He sees him almost every day. And he'll be glad to give the old gentleman a message."

The Hotel Stenographer

"Who hooked your marbles, Kelly?" asked the Hotel Stenographer. "I got trouble at home," answered the House Detective gloomily. "I haven't had a kind word from my wife for a week. I should get a divorce."

"Don't divorce her, Kelly," advised the girl. "Kill her. That's the fashionable way of getting rid of wives in these days." "It ought to be easy for you, too. All you got to do is to go round to the florist and buy her a bunch of flowers and send 'em to her. Be sure and put in your card, Kelly, for if you do not she will be afraid to show them to you. When she opens the box and sees the flowers with your name on them she will drop dead and you can use the flowers at her funeral service."

"Or send her a box of candy. If she opens a box of candy and finds your card in it she will be so surprised her jaw will drop down and she will swallow the first piece without chewing it. It will choke her and then you will have a well sweetened dead wife." "Kelly, like every other married man, you are so tight that if you wink your eye wiggles. Why don't you try a bit of kindness on her and spend a little of change? If the shock does not kill her, the atmosphere will change instantly. It pleases a woman ridiculously to know that while her man is downtown he actually remembers her even if there isn't a button off the back of his pants or a hole in the toe of his sock."

"If you treated your wife to that Peacock Alley smile and from-the-hips-how you use on the women around this hotel she would actually like you, Kelly. Instead of enduring you with a sigh like you were a sore tooth or a wash bill." "Kelly, if a man treated his sweetheart like he treats his wife matrimony would disappear from our fair land. If he treated his wife as he does his sweetheart, divorce lawyers would have to start working for a living."

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At 21—Edgar Rice Burroughs Was an Army Cavalry Man.

"MY POSITION in life on my twenty-first birthday was that of a private in Troop B, Seventh United States Cavalry, stationed in Arizona. "My ambition at that time was to become an officer in the cavalry branch of the service, as I had recently failed in my entrance examinations at West Point and enlisted for the purpose of obtaining a commission by working my way up through the ranks. "I had many other ambitions in youth, ranging from ownership of a candy store to heavyweight championship of the world, none of which I achieved and none of which, I now realize, would have been as satisfactory as my present vocation.—Edgar Rice Burroughs."

TWEED TOPCOATS FOR SPRING; TOTS' DRESSES CIRCULAR CUT

WHO would be without a handsome tweed topcoat in midseason or springtime? A stylish coat under which one's every sort of frock may be worn, spells economy, comfort, utility and smart appearance all in one breath. With the popularity of colorful tweeds comes a new interest for coats developed of this fabric. Prominence is given to both straightline models and cape coats while the majority are fur-collared. In the smart tweed coats attention is focused on color, for it is color which sheds a glow over all spring fashions. All the dusky pastel shades are given prominence but the rose tones, especially bolts de rose and Antoinette rose, are outstanding. Even the tans take on a rosy hue, and as hitched to the sleeves down their entire length. Just to give home dressmakers, who are in the midst of spring sewing, a hint of the new circular-cut treatment for little frocks, this wee tot had her "petticoat" taken. Is it not cunning, this diminutive frock which this tiny girl is wearing, which while it sacrifices none of its childish charm, yet somehow manages to acquire the new smart circular flare? Observe, too, if you please, that the sleeves extend from the neckline and that is another very stylish feature. Of course a touch of embroidery adds another note of charm. The handmade yarn tassels and cord at the neck are also a pretty detail. The knickers, which are a part of every tiny child's dress nowadays, are for gray, every message from Paris strengthens one's enthusiasm for it not only for coats but for entire costume ensembles to the minutest detail and accessory. Soft shades of green are very highly regarded and it is said that for spring gobelin blue will take the place of gracklehead, which as every one knows was so popular during the winter months. Many of the tweed coats are made up with touches of solid-colored flannel, blending or contrasting the characteristic shade in the tweed. This border treatment with a fur collar and handsome ermine lining bespeaks a spring wrap of distinguished and correct style. The modish tweed coat in the picture carries all the points of proper mode. As to the length of the topcoat, to be sure there are those of extreme trend of mind who will insist on a wrap which is conspicuously strictly tailored, which fact the more accents the decorative details of the frock. Most commendable materials for a dress made after the fashion of the one shown here are flannel, wool Jersey, fine cotton poplin or gabardine. These fabrics come in all the new and delectable colorings such as navy, sand, gray, rose, peach, blue, gobelin and lavender-blue, flame color and the new wild honey shade. Another fabric which is making a pleasing impression is rayon-alpaca. Then there is lincene and real linen, cotton broadcloth and satene, the latter in colors and in black to be added to the list of solid-colored fabrics which make up into tailored smock effects with real satisfaction. A further emphasis is placed on circular effects, in wee little skirts which ripple full about the hemline. Very new for even small children are short, but the average woman prefers a garment eleven or twelve inches from the floor. A charming accessory to the spring tweed coat is the vivid scarf and this season these gay neckpieces will be an outstanding feature in street attire. Among novelty coats for spring there is evidence of plaid being very popular, and especially black and white shepherd plaid. These plaid models are frequently styled with capriotes. Latest news from Paris foretells the popularity of buttons for trimming. For instance, detachable cupes are those circular skirts made of solid-colored rayon-alpaca, with a plaided or striped overblouse which also is rayon-alpaca. After making several of these tailored smocklike frocks as shown in the picture do not neglect to add a smocked peasant frock or two of fine voile done in colorful threads. The vogue for using several pastel colors together is carried out in the designing of children's dresses. Patches of uni-colored voile or tulle are applied on another round back ground. Modern Food Makes for Unsound Teeth

Return to food conditions much more primitive than those at present in vogue will be necessary if the ravages of dental diseases are to be checked. This is the lesson derived by Dr. T. D. Campbell of Adelaide university, Australia, from an exhaustive examination of teeth and jaws of Australian aborigines which he finds are strikingly large, well-formed and healthy. "There is in every respect," Doctor Campbell says, "a very marked difference between the well-formed Australian dentition, and the ill-formed, disease-stricken masticatory outfit with which modern civilized peoples are burdened."

Due to the fur-wearing fads in the temperate countries, Eskimos have gone in for fox raising on a large scale. They are concentrating on white foxes. By MILDRED MARSHALL. Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel.

SHIELA

THE Irish, to whom Shiela undoubtedly belongs, prefer to spell the graceful name, Sheelah. Either form is correct and the fortunate bearer of the name, growing weary of one version, may turn to the other without fear of affectation. Shiela means "blind." It comes from the old Roman and is popular in Italy in modern times in the guise of Zilla or Cella. Its earliest origin was among the Coelian gens, founded by the Etruscan general Coelus Vivenna, who also named the Coelian hill. The wives in Venice adopted Zilla in honor of this war hero and the name spread to Naples where it appeared as Lillola. Just why it should have appealed to the Irish is not clearly understood, unless they, like the French, believed that it had some connection with the heavens, or sky, whose Latin term is "caelum." Thus a blue-eyed Irish girl might easily have been called Sile or Sheelah under the romantic Keltic idea that the sky was reflected in her lovely orbs. Curiously enough, Shiela spread throughout England. It is very popular there today, but it is rarely spelled Sheelah. The turquoise is Shiela's talisman gem. It is believed to bring her true love and a happy marriage. Monday is her lucky day and 6 her lucky number.

THE WHY OF SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

THREE BROTHERS

ASK any man totally ignorant of his ancestry for any distance back, and the chances are ten to one he will tell you: "There were three brothers came over, one settled in such a place" and then he gives the place of settlement of the three. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred this is not true and moreover the man has no actual reason to suppose it so. But he firmly believes it. The three brothers' ancestry is in fact a superstition which seems to be thoroughly ingrained in the human race—for what reason it is hard to say; probably its source lies in the old magic of arithmancy. Nations as well as individuals and families look to the "three brothers" as the source of their existence and have done so as far back as history and tradition can take us. Perhaps the Biblical story of the three brothers, sons of Noah, who continued the human race after the flood, may account in some measure for the persistence of the three brothers legend today. But it must be observed that Hesiod speaks of three brothers, the offspring of the union of earth and heaven, from whom the human race is descended; and the ancient Germans declared that their various tribes were all descended from three brothers. And so on illustrations might be multiplied. In fact from most ancient times men and nations when of untraced origin have been accustomed to begin the legend of their genesis with the words: "There were three brothers."

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Congress Fairly Liberal in Appropriations for the National Defense.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

UNLESS congress changes its mind, the army and navy, and especially the air services, are to be well provided for in the appropriation measures. Last week the senate passed the naval supply bill carrying in round figures $321,000,000, this total including $26,000,000 for aircraft and naval aviation. The same day the war department appropriation bill went through the house. This measure carries $339,500,000, of which $15,250,000 is to be expended for aviation. Incidentally, this house bill provides for a lump sum appropriation of $70,000,000 for rivers and harbors work.

These two measures are intended to carry the army and navy only through the next fiscal year which begins July 1, but the house committee on naval affairs recommended the adoption of a five-year naval aircraft building program which calls for the construction of 1,000 new planes at a cost of $85,000,000. Administration leaders were confident this would be passed during this session. Rear Admiral Moffatt's plan called for the expenditure of $250,000,000 in five years, but the more conservative program was all the committee cared to recommend in view of President Coolidge's position on economy.

The committee proposes the construction of 235 airplanes at a cost of $12,285,000 in the fiscal year 1927 in addition to 78 planes at a cost of $3,300,000 under other legislation. In addition the committee proposes the construction of two rigid airships costing $8,000,000 to be begun prior to July 1, 1927, and an experimental metal-clad airship costing $300,000.

The pending naval appropriation bill contemplates the expenditure of not more than $9,000,000 on new aircraft in the fiscal year 1927. Under the program recommended the requirement for 1927 would be between $13,000,000 and $20,000,000. Representative French, in charge of naval appropriations, said that the additional amount of from $4,000,000 to $11,000,000 would not be appropriated for 1927 unless the budget bureau should recommend it. This puts the realization of the naval aircraft construction program up to the Executive.

INSPECTOR GENERAL HELM-LICK'S investigation, ordered by Secretary of War Davis, disclosed that two officers of the army air service had been guilty of "obscene activities in attempting to influence air service legislation." Maj. Henry H. Arnold, information officer in the office of Major General Patrick, chief of the air service, was declared the more culpable and in addition to being reprimanded he will be transferred by General Patrick to a station less pleasant than Washington. Maj. Herbert A. Dargue, chief of the war plans division of the service, escapes with a reprimand. The severer discipline is imposed on Major Arnold because he has been long conspicuous in the propaganda for a separate air service. He is described by many officers as having been "the eyes of Colonel Mitchell" in the air service during the months which intervened between Mitchell's removal from the post of assistant chief of air service and the close of his court-martial.

The intimations that the inquiry would involve General Patrick were shown to be unfounded when he was permitted to assist in it and to announce its findings.

TWO of the army's most eminent aviators, both of them members of the round-the-world flight, have announced that they are about to resign from the army in order to attempt to fly over the North pole this summer. They are Lieut. Leigh Wade and Lieut. E. H. Ogden, and they will be first and second in command of the expedition, respectively. They and their associates are backed by a group of alumni of several big universities, and will use five Douglas planes equipped with 220 horse-power motors. They plan to start from Seattle June 8 and to establish their main base at Point Barrow.

Alan Cobham, British aviator, has just accomplished the feat of flying from London to Cape Town, South Africa, being the first to do this in one plane. Starting November 16, he passed in his route over the deserts of Egypt, the swamps and forests of central Africa and the great karoo of South Africa. Much of the way he had to fly at a very great elevation, and he had many narrow escapes, especially over Victoria Falls, where his engine stopped.

CONFEREES of the house and senate devoted the week to the tax bill, but the results of their labors were uncertain. Messrs. Green and Garner of the house were firm in their determination to retain the estate tax knocked out by the senate. They said there was no chance for adoption of a conference report providing for the complete repeal of this tax, and that the house would not yield on this point.

Federal Judge Hand in New York decided last week that the federal tax on gifts is unconstitutional when it is applied to donations not made in contemplation of death. The government will appeal, and unless the Supreme court reverses the decision Uncle Sam will have to return several millions of dollars already paid into the treasury.

BOTH the house and senate took steps toward amending the Constitution so that the inauguration of the President and vice president would take place in January instead of on March 4 and so that a new congress would meet two months after its election instead of thirteen months as is the case now.

The senate, by a vote of 73 to 2, adopted Norris' resolution proposing that congress shall meet on the first Monday in January and that inauguration day shall be the third Monday in January. Blessie of South Carolina and King of Utah voted in the negative. The house committee on election of President and congress favorably reported a resolution proposing that congress meet on January 4 and that the Executive be inaugurated on January 24. Both resolutions provide means to insure the choice of an Executive in case no candidate receives a majority of the electoral votes.

RATHER unusual in the United States was the disaster that befell the little Highland Boy mining camp near Bingham, Utah, last Wednesday. The settlement, at the foot of Sap Gulch, was overwhelmed by an avalanche of snow and about seventy persons perished. Fires started in the crushed frame buildings and many of the victims were horribly burned. The slide began two miles from the camp and more than a mile above sea level.

ALL the row about the contents of Cathcart resolves itself into this: The titled English woman when examined at Ellis Island admitted that she eloped several years ago with the earl of Craven, leaving her husband in England, and thus admitted "moral turpitude" as it is considered in the American immigration law. Secretary of Labor Davis therefore finds it necessary to order her exclusion from this country, sustaining the ruling of the Ellis Island immigration officials. He says this case is mandatory under the law and that he has no discretion. Furthermore, he asserts the contents is not the first person excluded for the same reason. The National Woman's party, and other groups of women who have been and are protesting against the barring of Lady Cathcart, are moved not so much by sympathy for her as by the fact that the earl of Craven already had been admitted to the United States—and they insist on equality of the sexes. The earl, to avoid possible deportation, has fled to Canada.

SETTLEMENT of the coal strike having been ratified by the miners and the five-year contract being signed, mining was resumed Thursday throughout the anthracite region.

Thousands of workers went back into the pits, and the 125 producing companies planned to spread their product so that a little would go to everybody rather than all to a few. The maximum output will be reached about the end of the month.

Wilkie of Phoenix was named secretary. Prescott was selected as the midsummer meeting place of the association.

The Industrial Employment Survey report issued from the office of the U. S. Department of Labor Employment Service at Denver states that as is usual in Arizona during winter months, the influx of tourists and migratory workers has caused a moderate surplus of all classes of labor, except skilled metal miners. The surplus of skilled labor is mostly of carpenters, agriculturists in the Salt River and Yuma valleys, and in the Tucson districts, were busy during January in connection with cotton picking (practically completed) and in the gathering of the lettuce crop; several thousand workers were provided employment in connection. General farm labor supply and demand are about evenly balanced. A slight shortage of skilled mine labor is reported from Ajo, with a slight surplus apparent at Jerome. All producing mines in the copper districts are working full time. Much development work is in progress in several of the metal mining districts, particularly the mine properties having lead, zinc, and silver deposits. Operations have decreased in the woods and mills particularly in the Flagstaff lumbering district. Sawmill and logging camp workers are, at present, in excess of demands. Industrial plants continue to maintain steady operations, cotton gins and lettuce packing sheds working overtime. Building is holding up very well. Work on the Horse Mesa dam, and lining of the Eastern Auxiliary canal is progressing rapidly. Grade work on the $15,000,000 mainline railway east and west through Phoenix is about completed, and the laying of steel has commenced. Building labor of all classes ample. Considerable highway work is under way in many sections of the state. Railway employment in maintenance-of-way and bridge departments shows a slight increase, railway labor supply sufficient to fill requirements.

FRANCE'S demand that Poland, Spain and Brazil be given permanent seats in the League of Nations council when Germany is admitted is still worrying the other league members, for there is fear that Germany will withdraw her application for membership if Poland is admitted on equal terms. France asserts she wants Poland admitted to the council so she (France) will be freed from the duty of supporting Poland and thus will be able to cultivate better relations with Germany.

CAPT. GEORGE FRIED and his brave men of the liner President Roosevelt, rather embarrassed by the fuss that has been made over their rescue of the crew of the Antioch, were given a royal reception in New York. The big guns of Fort Jay fired a salute, the air was full of planes and the streets were crowded with shouting people as the city officials greeted the heroes. Next day congress voted them the thanks of the nation. Modest Captain Fried says: "I'm awfully grateful, but it was just part of our job. And, anyway, you can't say too much for the men who actually manned the boats. They did it—not I. But they, too, feel they only did what was expected of them."

ONE of the attacks on Secretary of the Treasury Mellon by his political enemies, which also was an attack on the Department of Justice, has fallen through. Mr. Sarzent's department reports that after full investigation it has reached the conclusion that contempt proceedings against the Aluminum Company of America—in which Mr. Mellon is heavily interested—cannot by any possibility be successfully maintained.

JUSTICE STAFFORD of the District of Columbia Supreme court has sustained the validity of the conspiracy indictments against Albert R. Fall, Harry E. Sinclair and Edward L. This action of the court, unless a special hearing is granted, means that the defendants will have to stand trial under the criminal indictments which charge them with conspiracy to defraud the government of the United States by bribery, deceit and bribery.

George H. Kelly, state historian, announces that a new volume of Arizona history is now being printed. This volume will be ready for delivery early in March, this year.

Hendrick D. Atkin of Prescott was elected eighth eminent grand commander of the Grand Commandery of Arizona Knights Templar at the meeting of that body in Tucson.

Officials and laymen of the Arizona Baptist church numbering several hundred and coming from all parts of the state were in attendance at the laymen's banquet held at the Y. M. C. A. in Phoenix.

To complete an unimproved gap of 60 miles in the Tucson-Ajo highway, the Pima county board of supervisors at a special meeting held in Tucson voted to appropriate $40,000 for the construction of this link.

One of the largest business transactions in recent years in the Salt River Valley came to light in Phoenix with the announcement made by Joe T. Melzer and Thomas Clements that they, with other prominent business men, have closed negotiations for taking over the Arizona holdings of the Phoenix Flour Mills.

George O. Brisobol, Phoenix chief of police, was unanimously elected president of the Arizona Peace Officers' Association at the closing session of the semi-annual convention in Douglas. J. E. Wilkie of Phoenix was named secretary. Prescott was selected as the midsummer meeting place of the association.

The Industrial Employment Survey report issued from the office of the U. S. Department of Labor Employment Service at Denver states that as is usual in Arizona during winter months, the influx of tourists and migratory workers has caused a moderate surplus of all classes of labor, except skilled metal miners. The surplus of skilled labor is mostly of carpenters, agriculturists in the Salt River and Yuma valleys, and in the Tucson districts, were busy during January in connection with cotton picking (practically completed) and in the gathering of the lettuce crop; several thousand workers were provided employment in connection. General farm labor supply and demand are about evenly balanced. A slight shortage of skilled mine labor is reported from Ajo, with a slight surplus apparent at Jerome. All producing mines in the copper districts are working full time. Much development work is in progress in several of the metal mining districts, particularly the mine properties having lead, zinc, and silver deposits. Operations have decreased in the woods and mills particularly in the Flagstaff lumbering district. Sawmill and logging camp workers are, at present, in excess of demands. Industrial plants continue to maintain steady operations, cotton gins and lettuce packing sheds working overtime. Building is holding up very well. Work on the Horse Mesa dam, and lining of the Eastern Auxiliary canal is progressing rapidly. Grade work on the $15,000,000 mainline railway east and west through Phoenix is about completed, and the laying of steel has commenced. Building labor of all classes ample. Considerable highway work is under way in many sections of the state. Railway employment in maintenance-of-way and bridge departments shows a slight increase, railway labor supply sufficient to fill requirements.

FRANCE'S demand that Poland, Spain and Brazil be given permanent seats in the League of Nations council when Germany is admitted is still worrying the other league members, for there is fear that Germany will withdraw her application for membership if Poland is admitted on equal terms. France asserts she wants Poland admitted to the council so she (France) will be freed from the duty of supporting Poland and thus will be able to cultivate better relations with Germany.

CAPT. GEORGE FRIED and his brave men of the liner President Roosevelt, rather embarrassed by the fuss that has been made over their rescue of the crew of the Antioch, were given a royal reception in New York. The big guns of Fort Jay fired a salute, the air was full of planes and the streets were crowded with shouting people as the city officials greeted the heroes. Next day congress voted them the thanks of the nation. Modest Captain Fried says: "I'm awfully grateful, but it was just part of our job. And, anyway, you can't say too much for the men who actually manned the boats. They did it—not I. But they, too, feel they only did what was expected of them."

ONE of the attacks on Secretary of the Treasury Mellon by his political enemies, which also was an attack on the Department of Justice, has fallen through. Mr. Sarzent's department reports that after full investigation it has reached the conclusion that contempt proceedings against the Aluminum Company of America—in which Mr. Mellon is heavily interested—cannot by any possibility be successfully maintained.

JUSTICE STAFFORD of the District of Columbia Supreme court has sustained the validity of the conspiracy indictments against Albert R. Fall, Harry E. Sinclair and Edward L. Doherty in the oil-lease scandals. This action of the court, unless a special hearing is granted, means that the defendants will have to stand trial under the criminal indictments which charge them with conspiracy to defraud the government of the United States by bribery, deceit and bribery.

NOTABLE deaths of the week include those of Henry Holt, New York publisher, and Archbishop J. P. Clephak of Poland, who was once sentenced to death by a Russian tribunal but was released and came to America last November.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Sick bodies made strong

"I was wasted to a skeleton, ready to cash in. Tanlac quickly built me up. A year ago I had the flu ran me down. Tanlac again came to the rescue. I'm strong and vigorous now." Miss Clara Jepsen, 1303 So. 15th St., Burlington, Iowa.

After a spell of Grippe or flu, when your system is all run down and your legs are so weak they can hardly hold up your body, start right in taking Tanlac. It's wonderful how soon you really do improve! Tanlac salts right in and puts the system in fighting trim. It cleans the blood, revitalizes the digestive organs, gives you an appetite for solid food and makes you feel like a new person. Nothing will turn the trick quite as fast as Tanlac, made after the famous Tanlac formula from roots, herbs and herbs. Buy a bottle today and get started back to full strength and vigor. Take Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation.

Air Traffic Tabulated

Air traffic is becoming so common in Europe that it is possible for the curious to ascertain definite facts about the volume of air travel. The British Imperial Airways in the year from April, 1924, to April, 1925, made 6,750 flights, covered 1,335,512 miles, carried 18,724 passengers and delivered 1,058 tons of freight.

MORE MYSTERY

SYNOPSIS.—Traveling by canoe on the Mississippi, on his way to Biloxi, in the early days of the settlement of Louisiana, William Brampton, English spy, known to Indians and settlers as the "White Indian," sees a Natchez Indian post a declaration of war against the French. For his own purposes, he hastens to Biloxi to carry the news to Bienville, French governor. Brampton meets an old friend, Joe Labrador, Indian half-breed, who warns him Bienville has threatened to hang him as a spy. Brampton refuses to turn back. He falls in with Jules and Basile Mattors on their way to Biloxi to secure wives from a ship, the Maire, bringing women from France. At Biloxi Brampton protects a woman from a sergeant's brutality. She tells him she is Claire Dahlsgaarde, picked up in a raid in Paris. Evidently well bred and educated, she is a mystery to Brampton. He intervenes to prevent a man, English, known as "Old Six Fingers," following her to New Orleans. A Frenchman, Francois Narbonne, slightly demoted by stories he has heard of the riches of the New World, introduces himself. Bienville accuses Brampton of treachery, but the latter secures a respite from death by revealing the Natchez declaration of war. He is to await the arrival of a former companion, Damaon the Fox, who will exonerate or condemn him. Damaon has documents proving Brampton an English spy. Brampton receives a message from Claire, begging him to help her reach the English settlements. Brampton trusts Narbonne with a note to Claire promising to meet her at New Orleans. He plans his escape. After a struggle Brampton wrests the incriminating papers from Damaon and escapes from Biloxi. He meets the Mattors and they go to New Orleans in a sailing racket. At the landing place Brampton again encounters Joe Labrador, whom he sends to bring Claire to him.

"The three Orilliant brothers? Can I trust them?"

"Two are here now. They are loyal to France," was the discouraging answer.

"Then there is no one I can approach under the seal of secrecy?"

"No one, monsieur. I must do your errand. Who is the man you wish word taken to?"

"You are to find Mademoiselle Dahlsgaarde, but just arrived from Biloxi. No one is to know you come to find her. You will say to her the three words, 'the White Indian.' Then lead her here if she is still inclined to go with me."

"A woman from the wife-ship! One of those women!" he groaned. "God of the white man! But you will make faces through a nose. With a price on your head—"

"I see I must do my own errand," I broke in. "When my friend believes evil of me he does evil in doing my business."

"Be still, my friend. You annoy me! I will find this woman with the outlandish name. I will speak the words. If she is fool enough to come with me I will bring her here to this dead village."

"She will come. Remember the need of secrecy. She had best wander to the edge of the settlement before you join her. There are those who would follow her. Even now there is one there, perhaps, a man with two fingers gone."

"Ha! The squat beast! He has been to the bayou."

"And one Francois Narbonne. Neither he, nor anyone, must know of the girl's departure. Now good luck and much speed, as the morning nips see us far on our way."

"Holy saints! It is like the White Indian to break his neck to help a French wench. He could find no woman to help in all his years on the river until now. Very good. God in his wisdom sees it to let monsieur play the fool. Why should I try to stop you? I go."

And he had faded into the darkness before I could give him a fitting reply. Of course there was something of madness in my project from the Canadian's unlighted point of view. I was reluctant to admit to myself even this much, but after reviewing the happenings of the last few days and remembering how few words I had spoken to mademoiselle, and how entirely ignorant I was of her antecedents—unless I retain my first estimate based on her soft hands and obvious poverty—I agreed that my old friend had cause to be displeased with me.

But what could I do after she had written that she surely would die unless I could help her make the coast? Refuse because she had made mistakes? Then how many of us would be licensed to ask for help? Pass her by because, very possibly, she had been frail in her virtues while living in an environment where virtue would find it most difficult to thrive? Then what man could be lenient enough to listen to poor mortals' agonizing pleas? Strumpet or virgin, she was enticed to her chance, and I would do my best for her.

"Is it you, monsieur?" Labrador's anxious voice roused me from my thoughts.

"It is I. Where is the girl?"

"At your elbow, Mr. Brampton," came the answer in excellent English, and a soft hand touched mine. "Those men outside the cabin with lights! Are they looking for me?"

"No, mademoiselle. But it's well we were going. Lead the way, Joe."

"But you are traveling away from the river, monsieur!" she protested, dropping back into French.

"Only to swing back into it a few leagues above here. If you are to come with me you must trust to my judgment absolutely. I will say I think you are foolish to come."

"But not foolish to trust to you, monsieur," she murmured.

"Good heavens, no! If you have the slightest doubt about your perfect safety with me—except we fall victims to a common danger—go back to your cabin at once."

"I have no doubts. You are saving me from destroying myself, monsieur," she whispered; and confounded me by beginning to sob.

"You'll betray both of us before we are a league from this spot," I warned. "Say your prayers! Make vows! Do something to hush your weeping! Faster, Joe!"

The good fellow quickened his pace, and I took the girl's hand in mine and we fairly ran for it until we came to the hidden canoes. Then Labrador said:

"I will go ahead. If you hear a night-bird call twice you will know I have met danger and then you must hide by the shore until the bird calls but once, meaning the trail is open again."

With this understanding he drew some distance ahead and led the way down the bayou. The girl crouched low in the pirogue behind me.

We moved slowly along the black water, and between lazy thrusts of the paddle I tried to talk with her.

"Why must you go to the English settlements? Have you friends there?"

"I have no friends anywhere, except that you be my friend," she whispered. "But why to Virginia, or the Carolinas instead of Canada?"

"This country, it is terrible, monsieur," she muttered evasively.

"You did not tell Sieur de Bienville that you were picked up in a raid?"

I thought she did not intend to answer, but after a long pause she slowly said:

"What would be the good?"

And now she was speaking English with only the faintest of accent. I began to believe she was bilingual and used either tongue without being conscious of shifting.

"But if you could prove to his excellency—"

"I can prove nothing," she passionately hissed. "I have told you I have no friends. Shout the name of Dahlsgaarde from one end of France to the other, and none would be interested."

"Pardon; no one except your people."

"I am alone. An orphan."

"But your friends—at least those with whom you worked."

My voice became confused. I felt her soft hand rest for a moment on my hand as I held the paddle motionless.

"No, it is not the hand of a girl who has worked," I sorrowfully admitted.

With a jeering little laugh she said: "Monsieur Brampton would prefer doing good deeds for the good."

"You are in trouble. I wish you well for your own sake. I will help you if I can. But one cannot help without wishing to know something. I could help you more intelligently if I could understand something of the nature of your trouble."

"There is nothing to learn. I came over on the immigrant ship. I am Claire Dahlsgaarde, as homeless and friendless as if I had dropped from another planet."

"Tell me this, did you protest when the police seized you and bundled you aboard the Maire?"

She astounded me by sadly confessing:

"I wanted to come. I lied when I told you I was taken in a raid. I went alone to the ship just before it was to sail and asked to be taken along."

"Good heavens! If you only had known—"

"I should do exactly the same if it were to be lived through again to-morrow, monsieur. You must either set me ashore, to make my own way, or accept me as you find me—nameless, friendless, a walf."

Why nameless when she was Claire Dahlsgaarde, I asked myself. But I did not ask her.

"I will not think evil of you. I wrote you from Biloxi—when it was doubtful if I could even save myself—that I would take you to the seaboard; I only hope your troubles will end when you get there."

"That was nicely said," she murmured, pausing between the words as if fighting to control herself. "If we get to the English towns—I will find some work. I will be a servant—any thing."

I thought of her soft hands; I already appreciated the refinement of her manner. No; I did not believe her troubles would be ended when she reached the English towns and she would be forced to make her own way. Our servants were supplied from the blacks, or ne'er-do-wells shipped to the plantations from England. As a servant she must abide with her class, and her very softness and her mental qualities would make her an object of scorn among her mates.

Between dips of the paddle I wondered if she would not have fared better to have remained in the valley and accepted a husband from among the women-hungry. This alternative was abhorrent to me almost as soon as I had considered it. I had told myself on the sands at Biloxi that she was entitled to her chance; and certainly a lonely cabin in some miserable lagoon, with a sluggish creature who lacked even the stability of an Indian hunter for a mate, constituted no "chance." Yet for the life of me I could see only a squalid outlook for her did we win across the eastern mountains.

The whole business discouraged analysis; and when Labrador gave his signal from the darkness ahead, and repeated it, I found my mental reaction to be refreshing. It meant danger, but that was more or less tangible. With a thrust of the paddle I had the pirogue snugly under the willows and was cautioning my passenger to be very quiet.

"Tonnerre! But who are you to treat me like this?" loudly demanded Labrador's voice. "Take your dirty hands from my face. To see if you know me? And who the black devil are you?"

This time I heard the murmur of a response and Labrador called out no more. The peril was obvious. Again I warned the girl to make no sound. We were kneeling on the marshy ground, and my hands held the pirogue from rustling against the reeds if the newcomers passed close enough to agitate it with their paddle strokes. Now they were sending little ripples into the swamp-grass, and by ear alone I told when the first craft passed our position.

From the number of paddles I judged it to be a long pirogue. Now it was above us and I was preparing to embark when there came a sound of other paddles, two of them. When directly opposite me a man spoke, and had I my musket by my side I should have been tempted to shoot at him through the darkness, for there was no mistaking the voice of Damaon the Fox.

CHAPTER VII

Up the River.

So the chase had turned from east to west and the Fox was hot on my trail. I thanked my medicine I had lost no time in meeting the girl. Until the Fox could reach New Orleans and make sure I was not hiding there the pursuit would be indirect.

Taking the girl by the arm, I assisted her into the pirogue and pushed off. We barely more than drifted with the sluggish current until I heard the soft dip of a paddle ahead. Then I allowed my own blade to betray me, and Labrador's voice was calling:

"Good evening, Messieurs."

"It is I," I whispered as the pirogue grated against his canoe. "I saw them and him."

"Sacree! He held a pistol to my throat while he paved over my face with his dirty paw to see if it was you. But my talk satisfied him I know nothing. He goes to la Nouvelle Orleans."

"He thinks I am there. Did he say anything to show how sure he is?"

"Nothing, except to tell his pirogue Choctaws that the trail would be picked up when they left the bayou."

"He'll find no trail," I said.

"He'll find a woman is missing. And there will be some signs left," declared Joe, now using the Choctaw trade jargon that the girl might not understand.

But I did not fear any such results. There was nothing known in New Orleans to connect me with the girl's disappearance. The settlers would testify that the girl was very sad, that she slipped out of a cabin and did not return. It would be believed that she had wandered away and fallen into the river, or become lost.

As for finding any signs of our passing to and from the Indian village the chances were his Choctaws would destroy any traces in tracking back and forth during the night. But the long river-road was the logical one for an escaping English spy to take, once it was known he had not made for Pensacola; and I believed the Fox would make haste to cut me off from gaining the mouth of the Ohio.

The close air of the bayou was being freshened by a breeze from the lake. It was like emerging from a hot tunnel. Labrador's canoe slipped under the bushes, and came to a stop, and as I drew almost of him he announced:

"I return to la Nouvelle Orleans, my friends."

In the Choctaw jargon he added, "If they go north I shall trail them."

"They will go north," I assured him. With that we parted, he to paddle up the bayou, while I took the girl into whatever dangers Fate had stored up for us once we quit the Iberville for the Mississippi.

I could not get used to mademoiselle. If she had impressed me as being slight and frail of physique on Ship Island she now seemed little more than a child. For she had followed my advice, and had shifted from her funeral black gown to a garb more suitable for rough travel. From an Indian crane she had purchased some boot-leggings, a short skirt of fiber bark, stained white and red—the sacred colors of the Natchez—and completed her attire with a blouse of linen she had brought overseas. Her yellow hair was drawn back and arranged in braids. Her face would have been boyish if not for the sensitive mouth and the sadness of her eyes.

"And this river flows from the great river?" she asked for the tenth time as we made our way up the Iberville.

"It is merely a mouth of the Mississippi at high water. It flows into Lake Maurepas, where we camped and I showed you the cross cut by Iberville a score of years ago."

She was silent for some time, and then proved she was observing by saying:

"Monsieur does not look behind him. Now, I look back every few minutes, thinking to behold the savages."

"There is nothing behind us to fear, little one. It is when we strike into the Mississippi that we shall keep our eyes very wide open."

"It is terrible, this great river that we seek," she murmured.

She was behind me on the bundle of blankets. I heard a suspicious sound and glanced back to find her striving to muffle a sudden outburst of sobs by lying face down on the blankets.

"Hush!" I sternly commanded. "The great river is our good friend. It is so big and wide we can hide from our enemies without leaving it."

"I hate it!" she fiercely whipped back, lifting her head and glaring angrily at me through her tears. "I hated it while at the cabin of Marlot and his family. I wish we could travel afoot, overland, to the coast. Why must we go the long way around when we could travel overland?"

"To save time," I told her with a smile. "We haven't time to go the shortest way. There are more than ten thousand warriors between the river and Carolina. There are a scant four thousand of these who will admit any feeling of friendship for the English. We must go nearly to the coast before we will be free from the red danger; for there are no settlements in the valley of Virginia. In the valley of the Shenandoah the Carrawbas and Cherokees go north on the war path against the Five Nations, while down that path come the Iroquois of the Five Nations to take southern scalps. I do not say those things to add to your uneasiness, Mademoiselle Dahlsgaarde, but to indicate how widespread is the danger-zone, and to show the need of traveling by water as far as possible."

"Forgive me. You are very wise," she sighed, raising her big eyes to stare into mine. "I have seen so little of life, I am so ignorant."

I faced to the front and scowled at the bend ahead. For the time I had fallen beneath a spell and had forgotten she was not an unsophisticated child. Her plea of ignorance did not harmonize with the mystery behind her, nor with the disturbing testimony of her soft hands coupled to poverty.

"I have said something which displeases monsieur?" she finally asked.

I flashed a mechanical smile over my shoulder, shook my head, and explained.

Claire may be interesting, but she is a terrible handicap on a trip like this. What will she do next?

BUYERS AND SELLERS CONFERENCE MARCH 19 AT PHOENIX

Phoenix, Feb. 26.—Plans for another big Buyers and Sellers conference of purchasing agents, producers, manufacturers and distributors to be a climax of Trade at Home—Use Arizona Products week this year have been completed by the Arizona Industrial Congress. The conference will be held in Phoenix on Friday, March 19, and attendance will be statewide.

The Buyers and Sellers conference will bring together the producers, distributors and large buyers of Arizona products for informal discussion of each other's problems and ways of increasing the use of the state's products through standardization and co-operation. Its most important function will be to renew old contracts and establish new ones between the three groups contracts established at past meetings having been a big factor in diverting enormous sums to Arizona trade channels in the last four years.

The conference will be attended by the purchasing agents of the mines, railroads and other large concerns operating in the state, by manufacturers and jobbers, and by farm bureau and other producers' representatives. Sessions will be held at the Adams hotel, with a dinner for the outside guests and their wives in the evening, and probably a golf tournament the following day as an entertainment feature. The Phoenix Merchants and Manufacturers Association is cooperating in local arrangements. Trade at Home—Use Arizona Products week, set for March 15 to 20, will be more widely observed in the state than ever before, according to reports coming to the industrial congress, and chambers of commerce and other civic bodies in a number of cities will use the week for an intensive educational campaign to bring out the advantages of keeping business at home throughout the year.

Congress Junction—Octave mine contemplates installation of new machinery.

Kirkland—Zonia mines will ship two carloads of ore per week to Hayden smelter.

BRAVES PRISON BARS FOR FEW CHOCOLATE BARS

Eugene, Ore., Feb. 26.—Twenty-three chocolate bars and a ham sandwich constituted the principal loot of a sweet-toothed burglar who recently raided a Southern Pacific all-day lunch car en route from Portland to Coos Bay. Half a dozen doughnuts, six rolls of clove lifesavers, six packages of chewing gum, a carton of cigarettes and a dollar's worth of nickels completed the robber's haul.

This, railway officials claim, is the first lunch car robbery in railroad history. The car was one of several recently designed to supply meals to day coach tourist passengers at popular prices and represents an innovation in railroad catering.

Ho wite robber, who must have boarded the car here at about midnight, escaped undetected is a puzzle to which the police are striving to supply an answer.

BIDS FOR HIGHWAY BRIDGE

Phoenix, Feb. 19.—Bids for the new bridge on the Phoenix-Prescott highway were called for today by W. C. Lefebvre, state engineer. The bridge will be located in People's Valley. The bids will be opened at 2 p. m. March 8.

The completion of this bridge will constitute the final length of the highway between Phoenix and Prescott. Federal aid project No. 72-2, where the new bridge will be constructed, is now practically completed and the building of the bridge will not delay traffic, as a detour will be maintained at this point.

Wickenburg—Tonopah Belmont Development Company continues to open up ore on 300-foot level of Washington mine.

Oatman—Splendid headway is being made in sinking of working shaft at United Western mines.

Phoenix—Mineral Basin Copper Co. places 60-ton mill in operation.

Kirkland—J. P. Kelmef reports discovery of 2-foot vein of lead ore.

FREAK FASHION NOTES FROM HOLLYWOOD

Colonel Dougherty in Phoenix
 "Good morning, Gloria. Are my knee muffs on straight?"
 "They're just perfect, Kathleen, dear. Now do you mind seeing what time it is by my garter watch?"
 That's the way the modern movie ladies are greeting each other these February mornings on the thoroughfares of smartest Hollywood, according to a curious camera man, who produces photographic evidence of some amazing cinema styles.

Here are the very latest fashion hints from the movie lots, as reported by an investigator:
 The latest in shoes has your sweetheart's portrait on the buckle. Kathleen Bennett is responsible.
 Dorothy Mackall, the First National star, is popularizing knee muffs. This fad promises comfort during the winter months to many suffering knees. It has already spread to New York.

Gem-studded suspenders are also on the program for this winter. Women, by wearing them, will bring them back in style, they tell us.
 And if you would be ultra smart, wear a white stripe in your hair. Kathleen Key of the Metro-Goldwyn company was the first to adopt this fad.

Joan Crawford is wearing the new heliograph stockings, which have a different design embroidered on each knee. If she puts her heart knee forward you are in favor. The leicle on the other knee is a repulse—if she lets you glimpse it.
 And you're not in the running at all, according to Sally O'Neill, unless you have at least one pair of laced stockings for special occasions.

An ostrich feather hip ornament for the dancing frock conceals rouge, lipstick and powder puff very cleverly. Waterproof colored wigs for bathing are the latest on California beaches.

The flapper group has adopted the pantalette as a necessary complement for above-the-knee dresses.
 And then there's the garter watch—really no nuisance at all, as you need not even raise your skirt to see it! This seems to have won many friends around the cinema city.

There you are! If you're not in style this spring, on't say we didn't warn you.

Feminine Film Artists Have Adapted and Adopted the Pantalette

Colonel Dougherty in Phoenix

Col. A. J. Dougherty, apartment commander of the American Legion and commanding officer of the 25th Infantry at Nogales, was in Phoenix February 17 to 20 conducting meetings of the executive committee of the American Legion and a conference of all commanders and adjutants of Arizona posts of the Legion. Capt. G. F. Macdonald, as commander of the Frank Luke Jr. post of Phoenix, has also been in attendance at these conferences.

HOW TO GET INTO JAIL

By Edwin Greer
 (President Greer College of Automotive and Electrical Trades, Chicago)
 "But, judge, I hadn't been parked a minute before the cop came along and—"
 Or—
 "There must be some mistake. I was out only 20 minutes and the motorcycle cop said I was doing 40 miles an hour."
 And so on, day after day, in police courts comes these explanations from motorists.
 Conservatively estimated, some 10,000 automobiles are tagged daily in the United States. All these violators must go to court and "tell it to the judge." And, gosh! what tall tales are told. Once in a while, however, someone, usually a man, comes to court and admits his guilt, causing the judge to choke and gasp for breath.

Three hundred cases a day in a big city is a low figure. Usually it is 500 a day, and the city's treasury is richer by several thousands of dollars. While judges are necessarily "hard boiled" they are just—extremely so. If you can supply a good excuse you can get away—perhaps. Here is one way, but look out they don't check up on you.
 Judge—"What was the occasion for your speeding?"
 Defendant—"Well, Judge, I was taking the wife to the hospital. Er— an emergency call. Yes, Judge, I'm a father now."
 - But "taking mother-in-law to the railroad" doesn't work any more. And neither do pretty wives get away with anything. Their plea that someone pushed their car near a fire hydrant is old stuff. In Los Angeles any one doing over 40 miles an hour is automatically scheduled for a jail sentence.

This means women as well as men. As I write this article there are three women in for 19 days each. And between you and me there is going to be three women who will drive carefully later on. As for the men receiving jail sentences—wow! Were I the judge I'd sentence them to a month each in the emergency hospital so they could see the result of their reckless driving.
 Here are a few ways to get into jail:
 Go faster than 35 miles an hour on city streets.
 Drive on the wrong side of the street.
 Drive through a safety zone.
 Pass a standing trolley.
 After all, traffic regulations are not new. Every one knows just what they consist of. Be reasonable and keep out of jail.
