THE FOUNDATION OF ARIZONA'S DEVELOPMENT

It might be truly said that the mining industry built Arizona, because this industry attracted capital in large amounts, which otherwise would never have thought of investing in this state.

The mining industry represents development and progress. It is the forerunner of greater things to come. Gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc and other minerals furnished the foundation for Arizona's development.

We, in Santa Cruz county, have more to offer the investor in mining than perhaps any other part of the west. Ours is practically an undeveloped country so far as mining is concerned. Yet mining has been carried on here for more than 200 years in a small way.

Let us encourage its development.

FOREST FIRE SEASON IS NEAR

Fire protection in the five Pacific coast and northwestern states for 1925, cost $3,500,000 for the 127,000,000 acres of federal, state and private lands served. The service was excellent, in that it kept the fire losses far below the anticipated limit, in an unusually hazardous year.

But this year, not only the west but other parts of the country start in to the spring with an abnormally light winter snow and heavy spring rainfall. Forests pean health and jobs for many persons. It is every man's business to protect the forests against fire. Men differ as to impending forest famine, but no one can doubt that it is imperative to protect our trees from useless destruction.

Help keep down the fires.

HERE'S A TEST

How many "dry" congressmen or senators to be elected this fall will come out on a "wet" platform at election time? We don't know of a single one, and I doubt if there are ten out of the whole lot. On the other hand, we wouldn't be surprised if the next congress would be drier than this. Do you know any "dry" ones who will be "wet"? How many private citizens do you know, yourself, who were "dry" but who are now "wet"?

Mussolini was shot through the nose recently in Italy. It may be a blessing to him if it will shut off his smell of the awful stink he's raising among liberty-lovers everywhere.

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS OF THE SANTA CRUZ COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS, Nogales, Arizona, March 1st, 1926.

The Board met pursuant to adjournment of February 1st. Present: Chairman James L. Finley, Members Robert A. Campbell and Hugo W. Miller, and Clerk A. Dumbauld.

WHEREAS, At a meeting of the Board of Supervisors held on February 1st, 1926, at which meeting bids for county printing were received and opened, Howard Keener, editor and publisher of the Santa Cruz Patagonian, submitted a bid of 45 cents per inch for publishing the minutes of the proceedings of the Board of Supervisors and 45 cents per inch for first insertion and 40 cents per inch for subsequent insertions for publishing all other official county notices and proceedings, the said Howard Keener be said Howard Keener was awarded the contract therefor and has executed and delivered to said Board of Supervisors said contract, together with a bond for its faithful performance;

AND WHEREAS, At this meeting of the Board of Supervisors it was brought to the attention of the Board by Supervisor Hugo W. Miller that said rate of 45 cents per inch for publishing the proceedings of said Board is in excess of the rate prescribed therefor by law, to-wit, 35 cents per inch, and the said Howard Keener has agreed in open meeting, in consideration of having been awarded said contract for publishing all other official county notices and proceedings for 45 cents per inch for first insertion and 40 cents per inch for subsequent insertions, to voluntarily change and lower the rate by his bid and said contract to said sum of 35 cents per inch for publishing the minutes of said Board;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, That the Chairman and Clerk be instructed and directed by and with the consent of said Howard Keener, to change the rate stipulated in said contract for publishing the

TULARAMIA MAY AFFECT MAN

The epizootic disease known as tularemia, "rabbit fever," or "deer-fly fever," which kills off wild rabbits in great numbers, may also be transmitted to human beings through the bite of blood-sucking flies and ticks and through handling or coming in touch with the blood and internal organs of infected wild rabbits, according to investigations of the United States public health service and the biological department of the United States department of agriculture calls attention to the prevalence of tularemia in order that, to prevent possible infection, persons exposed to the disease may observe precautions, such as wearing rubber gloves, rinsing the hands in antiseptic solutions after handling wild rabbits, and treating insect bites promptly with iodine. Many persons have become infected by dressing wild rabbits for the table or by cutting them up for fish bait or feed for poultry, swine, or other domestic stock.

Tularemia is carried by jack rabbits, snowshoe rabbits, and cottontails and also by certain species of ground squirrels. In human beings the usual symptoms are headaches, chills, bodily pains, vomiting, prostration, and fever, followed by painful swelling and later supuration of glands. It is a disabling disease, incapacitating the patient for weeks or months and at times terminating fatally.

The control measures being directed by the biological survey against wild rabbits and other rodents in the western states for the protection of forage and other crops are not only accomplishing this object but also are safeguarding human health by checking the occurrence of tularemia.

PUBLIC OPINION REDUCES TAXES

"People speak of passage of the tax bill as a notable victory for non-partisanship," says the New York Times. "The real victory was won by public opinion. After more than two years of discussion of federal tax reduction, the conviction became so general that it was both desirable and feasible that no party could stand out against it. So both parties cooperated in framing and passing the tax bill."

"There will doubtless be futile attempts to extract party credit out of the achievement. Most of the real credit ought to go, not to either party, nor to any one set of political leaders, but to sound financial ideas and to the ability of the American people to grasp them and to insist that they be acted upon."

MASTODONS AND GLYPTODONTS IN SAN PEDRO VALLEY, ARIZ.

Two new mastodons and a new glyptodont, the fossil bones of which were found in rocks of Pliocene age in Arizona, are described in a report just issued by the department of the interior or Professional Paper 149-B of the geological survey.

Several years ago numerous vertebrate fossils were discovered in San Pedro valley, near Benson, Ariz., by Kirk Bryan of the geological survey. Later, J. W. Gidley of the United States National Museum, cooperated with Mr. Bryan in making a large collection of these fossils, and a preliminary account of the fauna with descriptions of the rodents and rabbits by Mr. Gidley was published as Geological Survey Professional Paper 131-E, now out of print.

Among the large animals in this fauna are two elephant-like mastodons and a peculiar armored mammal, a glyptodont, related to the modern armadillo, which are described and figured in the report now published.

The skeleton of one of the masto-donts (Stegomastodon Arizonae) has been mounted after the restoration of the missing parts, and forms a striking exhibit in the National Museum at Washington. The total length of the mounted skeleton is about 14 feet. A very effective mount has also been made of the glyptodont (Glyptotherium Arizonae) by using parts of three individuals. Its huge carapace, resembling a turtle shell, is over 5 feet long.

NEW REPORT ON HYDROLOGY

"Contributions to the hydrology of the United States, 1925," just published by the geological survey of the department of the interior, is one of a series of annual reports that includes short papers on the water resources of different parts of the country. It contains a paper on water power and irrigation in the Madison river basin, Montana, a paper on the chemical character of the ground water of the northern Great Plains, a preliminary report on the geology and water resources of the Mud Lake basin, Idaho, and an index of analyses of natural waters in the United States. All these papers have previously been published as separate, but are now issued in a single volume, designated Water-Supply Paper 560. A copy can be obtained by writing to the director of the geological survey, Washington, D. C.

Passing the 24th Year of Actively Serving

Upon Wednesday of this week falls the twenty-fourth birthday of the J. C. Penney Company, for it was on April 14th, 1902, in a small village in Wyoming, that the first step was taken to lay a foundation for a business structure that in little less than a quarter of a century was to grow into an institution of country-wide dimensions.

Mr. James C. Penney now, as then, stands at the helm. To his inspiration, to his mastery, to his eminent direction, to his unalterable faith in the application of the principles of the Golden Rule in business, is due today, and has been due from the beginning, to a large extent and in a far-reaching way, the success of the Company which bears his name.

But surrounding him and working elbow to elbow, other men, well equipped and versed in business pursuit, have contributed large measures of discriminating activity. Along the ranks, from executives to the hundreds of co-partner-managers of the Stores as well as the thousands of sales-people, the same ideals of service as ruled Mr. Penney continue to dominate every move.

"Lo, the Poor Indian!"

"AN OSAGE SCALP DANCE", Painting by Stanley, 1845

Romance of the Osages and Oil.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
HENRY ALEXANDER POPE, some two hundred years ago, wrote the lines "Lo, the poor Indian! whose untutored mind sees God a cloud, or hears him in the wind"; he little realized that he was giving to the English language an expression which was to become a classic characterization of a whole race of men. For American sentimentality has made "Poor Lo" and "Indian" synonymous terms, seemingly unconscious of the ironical fact that it has been the American people—the white usurpers of the land occupied by the original Americans—who are principally responsible for the "poor" half of the expression.

So "Poor Lo" became a part of our currency of speech until the modern history of the Osage Indians seemingly proved the falsity of this as of many of our other "rubber-stamp" expressions. But recent developments down in the Osage country in Oklahoma, where oil wells have been putting a golden stream of material wealth into the laps of these Indians, now suggest that perhaps the "Poor Lo" designation is not so inapplicable after all. For the Osages' millions have brought death to some of them and sorrow to the others in the realization that they have yet much to learn of the bitter lesson of the white man's greed.

The "Osage murders," which have occupied so much space in the newspapers lately, have aptly been called "one of the blackest chapters in the history of the white man's dealings with the American Indian." They are the result of what appears to be the effort of a well-organized band of men to destroy with bullet, poison and bomb the heirs to some of the Osages' rich oil lands. This effort already has resulted in nearly a score of murders, and government officials who are investigating the case predict even more sensational disclosures as their case against the men already indicted for the crime develops.

In this centering the attention of the nation upon this tribe of Indians, whose sudden rise to wealth within the last decade has kept them constantly in the limelight, these murders serve to recall some of the early history of the Osages which, in contrast to their later peaceful record, was one of much war and bloodshed. The name Osage is a corruption by the French of Wazhazhe, their name for themselves. The Wazhazhe, or Osages, were the most important southern Siouan tribe of the western division, and their original home was along the Ohio river. But in the constant shifting of Indian population on account of tribal wars and the nomadic traits of the red men, they eventually crossed the Mississippi probably about 1500 A. D.

The first mention of the Osages in written history is in Father Marquette's map of 1673 which shows them located along the Osage river in Kansas and Missouri. In 1701 there, another French explorer, found them living near the Arkansas river, and he numbers them at 1,200 to 1,500. In 1714 they were helping the French defeat the Foxe Indians at Detroit, and three years later the tribe received its first official visit from the French. Du Tisne, a French officer, visited a part of the tribe which was then living along the Osage river, and records the fact that this village had 100 cabins and 200 warriors. All of the early French travelers comment upon the warlike qualities of the Osages who were the inveterate enemies of the great Iroquois confederacy and who were held in terror by the Caddoan tribes of the southwest. Although they were constantly at war with the Illinois, at one time the warring tribes patched up a sort of truce, and when the Iroquois descended upon the Illinois from the east, the latter sought refuge for a time among their new-found friends, the Osages, across the great river.

The first Americans to come into contact with these people were Lewis and Clark. By this time the tribe seems to have been divided into two main groups, the Great Osage and the Little Osage. The American explorers state that in 1802 the Great Osage, under the leadership of a chief named Big Track, had migrated to the Arkansas river, and in 1804 they found this subdivision, numbering 500 warriors, in a village on the Osage river. The Little Osage, then only a half as numerous as the Great Osage, were occupying a village six miles distant, but a group, known as the "Arkansas band," 600 warriors strong, was located on the Vermilion river, a branch of the Arkansas.

On November 10, 1808, the first treaty between the American government and the Osages was signed at Fort Clark, near Kansas City, Mo. In it the Indians ceded all of their lands except those comprising the present state of Oklahoma north of the Canadian and Arkansas rivers. But this treaty was only the beginning. Later sessions—at St. Louis, June 2, 1825, at Fort Gibson, I. T., January 11, 1830, and at Canville, Kan., September 20, 1865—gradually cut down their holdings until of all the vast territory which the Osages once claimed, and to which they held a precocious title by force of arms, but little remained.

Although the relations of the Osages with the Americans, from the beginning were more peaceful than those of many western tribes, these warlike people did not give up their lands complacently. Evidently they were troublesome enough a century ago, for one of the provisions of the treaty made in 1825 was that the Osages were to refrain from molesting the trade with the Southwest, which was just then beginning and which was destined to make the historic Santa Fe trail, which ran through the Osage country, a great trade artery.

One of the finest of the canvases painted by the celebrated artist, John Mix Stanley, is "An Osage Scalp Dance." The artist, who visited the Osages in the early forties, says of this painting: "On returning from the scene of strife, they celebrate their victories by a scalp-dance. This picture represents the scalp-dance of the Osages around a woman and her child; and a warrior in the act of striking her with his club, his chief springing forward and arresting the blow with his spear."

However, the United States never engaged in a general war with the Osages, and it is noteworthy that they were more often our allies in wars with other tribes than our enemies. It was a band of Osage scouts who guided General Custer to Black Kettle's camp of Cheyennes in Oklahoma in the winter of 1868, and took part in the much-discussed Battle of the Washita which greatly weakened the power of the hostiles.

JACKSON BARNETT

The lands which the Osages now hold were given them when a reservation was established for them in Oklahoma by an act of congress on July 15, 1870. The land was hilly and regarded as almost worthless; so much so, in fact, that another tribe to whom it was first given, refused to live on it. So the Osages, who, by this time, seem to have lost their warlike qualities and who seemed unlikely to protest, were given this tract of approximately a million and a half acres. By an act of congress on June 28, 1906, this land was divided among the Osages, then numbering nearly 2,000 persons. At this time the tribe had to their credit in the United States treasury more than eight and a half millions of dollars in treaty money, yielding an annual income of nearly half a million dollars. They also drew about $100,000 a year for pasturage leases, so that their total annual income per capita was approximately $265. Even at this time, the Osages were known as the richest Indians in the United States.

When Oklahoma statehood was declared in 1907, the Osages continued to live a peaceful existence comparatively untouched by outside influences. Then along in 1912 and 1913 oil was discovered on their lands, and almost overnight the Osages became rich beyond their wildest dreams. Then, too, their troubles began. Unaccustomed to this great wealth, the Indians fell prey to all kinds of white tricksters. The culmination of their troubles was the series of mysterious murders which began in 1922 and which have recently been exposed. Apparently unable to get as much of the Osages' wealth—and the wealth of the Osages is constantly increasing; the last announcement was that the 2,227 headrights in the tribe will pay $2,400 each for the first quarter of 1926 instead of $1,400 as was expected!—by trickery as he desired, the white man has resorted to violence.

So although their wealth has brought the Osages considerable happiness, it has brought them sorrow, too, just as it did Jackson Barnett, the Creek Indian, whose philanthropic and matrimonial troubles were so prominent in the newspapers only a short time ago. But out of all their troubles may come a better day, not only for the Osages but for every Indian in the United States. The Osage case now seems likely to be a history-making one, for recent agitation in the press and in congress over the Indian question in general may soon result in some sweeping changes in the whole conduct of Indian affairs, and "Poor Lo" may soon gain the tardy justice which his friends believe he has so long been denied.

The TALE of KIDDIE KATYDID

By Arthur Scott Bailey

KIDDIE KEEPS PROMISE

OLD MR. CROW flew into a terrible rage when he found, the next morning, that his committee had not called on Kiddie Katydid during the night. And when Chirpy Cricket told him that the weather was too cold for anybody to stay out late, Mr. Crow said, "Nonsense! What about Mr. Frog?"

Kiddie Told Him He Couldn't Join the Orchestra.

"That was a hard question to answer. And Chirpy Cricket was so afraid of angry Mr. Crow that he promptly hid himself among the roots of a clump of grass. Now, the fact that Mr. Frog had been away from his shop the night before set Mr. Crow to worrying. "That slippery tailor has been up to some mischief," Mr. Crow declared.

"What's in a Name?" By MILDRED MARSHALL
HENRY III OF FRANCE
Born September 19, 1551.

HENRY III was one of the strangest kings who ever governed—or attempted to govern, the beautiful country of France. He used to dress himself in women's clothes, and he hid in the cellars of the palace when it thundered. His voice and his manner were so effeminate that even the people of those days, taught to reverence kings, quite despised him. His pets were only little dogs.

(By George Matthew Adams)

one that I'd like to sing for you. It's about one of the Katydid family; and I'm sure you'll enjoy hearing it." But Mr. Crow wouldn't stay there any longer. With a loud squawk of rage he scurried away. He was sure, then, that Mr. Frog had tricked him. That night Mr. Crow's committee called on Kiddie Katydid. It was a fine, warm, moonlight night. And as they drew near Farmer Green's place they could hear Kiddie's shrill music, even while they were still a quarter of a mile away.

"He plays better than ever," said Freddie Firefly. "I wish Mr. Crow could hear him." And they hurried on, believing that everything was going to turn out all right, in the end. "Mr. Crow will be sorry, tomorrow, that he scolded us," said Chirpy Cricket.

But the committee met with a sad disappointment. When they invited Kiddie Katydid to join the Pleasant Valley orchestra he told them that he couldn't. "Why not?" Freddie Firefly asked. "I've promised somebody that I wouldn't," Kiddie said.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT By F. A. WALKER
WHAT THE WORLD NEEDS
WITHIN the hearts of all humans are found anger, antipathy, envy, desire of power and a love of dominion over others.

As we drift down the tide of years we discover with a great reluctance these animal traits within ourselves. In our conceited superiority to our dust-made brothers and sisters, we try to hide these ugly things, but in spite of our subtle efforts they suddenly flare up like a hastily struck match and burst into flame, scorching our souls and making us miserable, sometimes to the end of our lives.

That we should waste time in trying to conceal our common feelings from others is regrettable, of no avail to the world or to our proud selves. We ought, in the beginning of our intimacy with these faults proceed to overcome them.

Florence Gilbert

"This popular leading lady in the 'movies' was born in Chicago in 1904. She won a beauty contest when a child and doubled for Mary Pickford. Later she worked in comedies in which she scored a hit. She is a blonde with blue eyes, is five feet two inches tall and weighs 114 pounds.

The Hotel Stenographer

"KELLY," said the Hotel Stenographer, "there is a place in the Great Perhaps that was mighty well press-agented by a guy named Dante. "Some real estate game?" asked the House Detective.

"Well, I would hardly call it that," answered the girl. "All people call it differently, depending on their religion, but its real name is what you say when you drive out in the rough. It is the ultimate abiding place of the people who preface the dirt they are going to scatter with five words.

Ancient Nursery Tale
The seven-league boots are introduced into the nursery tale, "Tom Thumb," which is from the French "Le Petit Poucet," by Charles Perrault, written about 1630. The story, however, is probably of Anglo-Saxon origin. There is in the Bodleian library, at Oxford, a ballad about Tom Thumb printed by John Wright in 1680.

Invention Safeguards Navigation

Samuel K. W. Haines of Oakland, Cal., has just completed a projectograph by which he hopes to make safer the navigation of sea and air at night during fogs. The machine is said to combine the most powerful light known to science and the most efficient projector of its kind made. The new device projects powerful rays which penetrate the fog like gigantic needles.

POULTRY FACTS

HATCH GOOSE EGGS WITH INCUBATORS

Goose eggs can be hatched with incubators even to better advantage than with hens for various reasons. Where hens or geese are used, they are apt to break the eggs, and again let them chill. The first eggs from your goose will arrive while the cold weather still continues, and must be picked up early in the morning before they become chilled; geese invariably lay in the very early hours of the morning, or late at night, says a writer in the Rural New Yorker.

Keep eggs in a moderately warm location—around 50 degrees in cold weather. When you have sufficient number to put into the incubator it should be started. Goose eggs, like hens' eggs, hatch best when fresh, not more than ten days old. Place your incubator in a moist, but not too damp cellar, as goose eggs will require much more moisture to hatch than is the case with hens' eggs. Run the machine at as near 103 degrees as is possible from start to finish. Turn eggs twice daily after the beginning of the third day. Always turn goose eggs by hand; handle them with much care. Stop turning on the twenty-fifth day. Goose eggs should be cooled half an hour each day in a temperature not below 60 degrees; if the cellar seems below this temperature, remove the eggs to proper point.

After the third week, sprinkle warm water over the eggs once daily. When goslings begin to pip, if you notice shells are dry and hard, there isn't enough moisture, and unless this is supplied, they will stick in the shells. Keep the eggs quite moist while hatching, by adding a pie plate of wet sand to the bottom of machine.

Leave goslings in incubator until all are thoroughly dry, usually 36 hours. Remove them to a box in the kitchen by the stove, unless a brooder has already been provided for. Goslings are easy to raise, and grow very rapidly. Water them in a vessel which cannot be overturned, nor into which they can get their feet. Keep them dry at all times. Feed sprouted oats, gravel, fine cracked corn, or any of the dry mixed chick feeds, but do not neglect always to keep water before them. Change this often; don't let it get dirty.

Mature geese may be plucked, or "plucked" once every six weeks after the laying has ceased. Remove only the breast feathers—do not take the down. A little experience will tell you when they are "ripe." Do not take feathers that have blood in the quills.

Poultry Undernourished Under Farm Conditions

Poultry, of all farm stock, is most likely to be undernourished under practical farm conditions. Due to the nature of their digestive tract, their rations must be composed largely of seeds and seed by-products, feeds ill-balanced with respect to minerals, proteins and vitamins. As compared with other animals, the requirements of poultry for some of the vitamins are relatively so intense that their rations should be supplemented by feeds known to be rich in these factors. Vitamins are manufactured by plants only. Green plant tissues are with few exceptions the best sources of vitamins known, being rich in all these factors.

Young chicks are especially susceptible to a lack of vitamin in the ration and will develop the disease known as "leg weakness," including impaired appetite, an anemic condition of the comb and wattles, drooping wings, ruffled feathers and unsteady gait. Prevention of leg weakness is assured by giving the chicks ready access to green feed such as green cabbage or lettuce leaves, fresh alfalfa or clover or sprouted oats. If green feed is not available, 3 to 5 per cent of cod liver oil in the mash may be used. In the maintenance of health and normal development in the flock the importance of vitamins is undoubtedly much greater than is realized. Rations deficient in vitamins will give rise to digestive disturbances and other forms of vague ill health which can be prevented by supplying the necessary vitamins and adjusting the balance of the food.

Poultry Notes

The hen that cackles the loudest is not always the greatest layer.

A hen will eat from one to two pounds of oyster shells per year.

More eggs follow a ration that contains the minerals required by a hen than can follow simple grains.

It is generally considered proper, in fact, the best form, to refer to pure-bred poultry as being standard bred.

Because of plenty of room in the poultry house and less competition in getting feed, it seems to be more profitable to have too few hens than too many.

Washing soiled or dirty eggs does not make them more salable. In fact, washing an egg lessens its keeping qualities by opening the pores so that expiration is more rapid.

He's Not Clever

"What have you been doing, Edward?"

"A clever wife never asks what her husband has been doing."

"But a clever man may ask if his wife—"

"Oh, my dear, a clever man never has a wife."
