

Where Gold Was Discovered in New California Field

Lured by the magic word "gold," scores of persons arrive at Kramer, Cal., daily and begin trudging across the desert country, carrying stakes and location notices. Mining engineers and the Herketrath brothers, whose strike recently stirred the desert into a veritable stampede, are said to have declared their "high grade" will run $3,000 a ton or more. This picture shows a crowd of mining engineers and prospectors at the shaft where gold was first discovered waiting for a bucket of gold ore to be brought to the surface. George Herketrath is standing next to the wheel.

Lots of Reindeer in Alaska if Beef Gives Out

Government reports tend to show that in the not distant future the supply of this country's beef will be insufficient for popular needs. Reindeer Week (April 5 to 10) was instituted for the purpose of familiarizing the American people with the new kind of provision. At this time there are no less than 400,000 reindeer in Alaska. Some of them are shown in a corral.

The TALE of KIDDIE KATYDD

by Arthur Scott Bailey

BENJAMIN BAT'S PLAN

OF COURSE, Kiddie Katydd was not always to be found in his favorite nook among the trees in Farmer Green's front yard. Quite often he went skipping about from tree to tree or from bush to bush, sometimes flying and sometimes leaping. It really made little difference to him which mode of travel he used. And he never stopped to think how lucky he was to be able to move so spryly with the help of either his legs or his wings.

Benjamin Bat's Dusky Shape in the Round, Yellow Disk.

He took his good fortune as a matter of course. There was Mr. Frog! He was a famous jumper; but he couldn't fly. And there was Mr. Nighthawk! He was a skillful flier, but he couldn't jump. Such thoughts, however, never entered Kiddie Katydd's head. He went cheerfully about his business—which was eating, principally—and jumped or flew as the mood seized him. Indeed, if it hadn't been for that queer fellow, Benjamin Bat, probably Kiddie never would have realized just what he could—or couldn't—do. Since Benjamin was another night-prowler like himself, Kiddie Katydd saw him often. It seemed to Kiddie that he could scarcely ever gaze at the full moon without catching sight of Benjamin Bat's dusky shape flitting jerkily across the great, round, yellow disk.

When Benjamin was astr in the neighborhood, Kiddie Katydd lay low or high—in his favorite tree-top. At least, he kept very still until the night was nearly gone, to give Benjamin Bat plenty of time to satisfy his hunger. For Kiddie found Benjamin Bat a much more agreeable companion when he had eaten his fill. Early in the evening, soon after he had waked up, Benjamin was positively ferocious. But the more he ate, the pleasanter he grew. And by the time faint streaks of light began to show in the east he could smile and crack a joke as easily as anybody else. Well, late one night—or early one morning—Kiddie Katydd and Benjamin Bat were enjoying a chat in the tree-tops, when Benjamin put a new idea into Kiddie's head. "We ought to have some sports right here in Farmer Green's yard," he suggested. "You're such a fine jumper that you could try your skill against Mr. Frog. And you're such a fine flier that you and Freddie Firefly ought to have a race. . . I'd suggest—" he added—"I'd suggest that the sports take place after dark, almost any evening." But Kiddie Katydd spoke up quickly and said that he wouldn't care to join in the fun until the night was almost gone. He said he was sure he could jump and fly better at that time. And that was quite true, because he knew that if Mr. Bat swallowed him early in the evening he wouldn't be able to take any part in the sports. "Very well, then?" Benjamin Bat replied. "But it will be the worst possible time for me." "What do you mean?" Kiddie Katydd inquired. "Do you expect to enter any of the contests?" "Oh, yes!" said Benjamin. "I'm going to hang by my heels from the limb of a tree. And since I'm never so heavy as in the evening, before I've had a chance to eat much, I'd prefer to have the sports begin after dark." But Kiddie Katydd said that there was no doubt Benjamin Bat would win in the sport of hanging head downward by his heels. And he told Benjamin not to worry.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

TWO SPOONS IN A CUP

TWO spoons in a cup is a sign of a wedding. If, inadvertently, you put two spoons in your cup—or saucer—you will be married before the year is out. This widespread superstition is a remnant of the tree-worship of our far-off ancestors. Among unevlized tribes the world over tree-worship flourishes today; and today it exists among the civilized races in the form of current superstitions. Spoons were evolved from the chips of wood which our ancestors used for what might be termed "spoon-pur-jesses." The very word "spoon" is from the Anglo-Saxon "span"—pronounced "spone"—meaning a chip or splinter of wood. A spoon was part of a tree and several trees in the different mythologies were supposed to have a peculiar influence upon matters of love, marriage and birth. Elworthy says: "This ancient faith is still shown in the common custom in many parts of Europe of placing a green bough on May day before the house of a sweetheart." It was probably from the pine that our ancestors first fashioned their spoons and the pine was the tree-god (particularly the patron of virgins, Diana, the Greek Artemis, patroness of adolescent youth of both sexes, wore a chaplet of pine. Even if the material used was not always of the pine the chances were that it would be a tree-god of kindred significance. Naturally when the young tree-worshiper saw two chips in his dish where only one should be it was held as an omen of a coming marriage. Though the material out of which spoons are made has changed, the word itself has not. Nor has the superstition; it has descended to us along with the word.

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

By JOSEPH KAYE

At 21—Clara Doria, Famous Old-Time Prima Donna, Got the Thrill of a Debut at the San Carlo.

"I WAS at about this period that my teacher, Perroni, appeared one morning at our appointment in a state of great excitement. 'Something unexpected has happened,' he cried, 'something very important for you. The San Carlo people want you. Think what it means to sing at the San Carlo—the opera house which ranks highest in all Italy—and at this early stage of your career!' 'The San Carlo committee called on me next day and laid their project before me. I shall never forget my feeling of elation when I first appeared at that splendid opera house. The acoustical properties surpassed anything I had previously experienced. When I sang into that vast auditorium, instead of feeling that I must exert myself to fill it, my voice seemed to flow out itself with an ease that was a joy to me, returning to me so clear and resonant—seeming to rebound in power. I was in seventh heaven! All the circumstances of my engagement made me feel happy. My ambition was roused almost to the height of my artistic inspiration.—Clara Kathleen Rogers.

"TODAY—Clara Kathleen Rogers is an old lady of nearly eighty. She was one of the most famous prima donnas of her time and when she retired from active operatic work she settled in Boston and began to teach. She achieved great success as a teacher, too, and wrote several standard text works on singing, and composed much music. Professionally she was known as 'Clara Doria,' a name which will arouse many memories in old-timers.

Manchurians Bomb Temple of Heaven

The Temple of Heaven in Peking, originally built in A. D. 1420, when Peking became the capital of China, redecored by Emperor Chien Lung, and again repaired by the late empress dowager, is the mark at which Manchurian aviators have been aiming their bombs in their attack on Peking. The temple is a magnificent triple-roofed structure of perfect symmetry, covered with a wonderful blue and green tile design and capped, 90 feet high, with a golden ball, all springing from a triple tier of marble terraces, sculptured by noted artists. It is believed by the Chinese to cover the exact center of the earth.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

THE SQUARE BOOK

THE book in its present form of an elongated square or rectangle, is one of the amenities of modern life that we accept without question of whence it came or how it started. The history of the book in its various forms reveals the first books as inscriptions on tablets of clay or stone. Such were the "books" of the Babylonian contribution to literature, a library of which was unearthed in 1901 at Nippur, in what had been the Temple of Bel, destroyed in an invasion almost two thousand years before Christ. Next came the writings on papyrus which were followed by the manuscripts on parchment, many famous examples of which still exist. These were sometimes a score of yards long, rolled like modern maps on wooden rollers and kept properly arranged and catalogued in the closets and shelves of ancient libraries. The earliest example of the modern form of book known and still in existence is a copy of Virgil in the Vatican library. It belongs to the age of Constantine (272-337 A. D.) and is a relic of Roman handicraft. It is this period, not later than the Fourth century A. D., that is credited with the adoption of the book in the form in which we know it today, the "square" book or "libriquadrat" as it was called.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

INDIFFERENT READING

READING in a half-hearted way, going nervously and hurriedly through the pages of a book, or skimming the editorial and news columns of the newspapers, is becoming in the larger cities and towns a lamentable habit. Memories that were formerly replete, have become, under the spell of laxity, mere shells of their former selves, unable to hold with certainty what was read only an hour or so ago. To know a thing implies the remembrance of it. If you do not peruse an article, an essay or a stack of news with a determination of recalling it, or read merely in a listless fashion to while away time, you will find to your regret that your power of memory is on the wane. Such reading is of no material benefit, for you leave it without retaining a single idea or a useful thought which some day may be of great value to you in conversation or in your work.

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

By JOSEPH KAYE

You can't talk with clarity and with others what you read yesterday, or describe with fair accuracy the charmingly told story of last night's opera, which you casually read in this morning's paper?

When you sit at your desk writing to a musical friend, does the narrative come clearly, or is it so blurred that you cannot quote a single brilliant passage?

"Oh, memory!" you exclaim, "how you are falling!"

As a matter of fact, your memory is doing nothing of the kind. It is just as good, just as capable as ever, but through abuse it has become flabby and inert from want of exercise. Reading as you do, you fail to give memory a chance. If you will watch yourself the next time you make a pretense of reading, you may find that you do not read at all. You rush along, quite regardless of punctuation marks, skip unfamiliar words, jumble names and dates, and as likely as not, before you are half-way through the story you started with so much haste, you turn feverishly to another page, glances at a head-line or two, and toss the paper on the floor. And this is what you call reading!

Is it any wonder that memory rebels and leaves you in the lurch?

WHAT ARIZONA WANTS

(From California Cultivator)

We have endeavored to show on our front cover this week something of the extent of the storage possibilities on the Colorado river as it passes through the state of Arizona and the reason why the people of that state are opposed to a storage dam at or in the vicinity of Boulder canyon.

The upper picture is intended to show at a glance the location of the Glen canyon dam site and the Bridge canyon diversion dam, a combination that the Arizona people feel would be of real service to that state and at the same time not only adequately supply the water needs of California but do it better and more cheaply than will be possible with a dam at Boulder canyon.

The elevation and location with respect to distance from Yuma are shown in the lower picture and give further proof of the uselessness of the Boulder canyon project as far as supplying water to Arizona's millions of acres of fertile but at present arid lands are concerned, practically all of which are at an elevation too high to be irrigated by even a high dam at Boulder canyon without pumping the water several hundred feet.

While it may be practical to pump water 1400 feet to furnish a city like Los Angeles with its domestic water supply it cannot be done for agricultural crops therefore Arizona agriculture has little hope of deriving any benefit from the storage of water at Boulder canyon.

It is estimated that the average annual run-off from the Colorado river, when stored, will be sufficient to irrigate several million acres of land in addition to that possible of irrigation in the Imperial Valley and that now being irrigated in Mexico. With a dam at Boulder canyon only, this surplus must flow into Mexico where it will immediately be appropriated thus precluding the possibility of later building dams at higher elevations to care for Arizona's needs, for once this water has been appropriated and put to valuable use by the land interests in Mexico, we doubt if it could be taken away from them, even though they contributed nothing toward building the dams that make possible an equalized flow of the river.

While we have no desire to take away any of the waters now being used by these Mexican interests, we do not feel that we should spend millions to store water to irrigate more Mexican lands, especially when we have millions of a cres of equally fertile land in our own United States that need this surplus water.

Were it impossible to secure the additional water needed in the Imperial valley or even by the city of Los Angeles, in any other way we should, of course, feel that the building of the Boulder canyon dam was justified, but since there are other, and we are told, equally feasible projects capable of development on the river that will not only better supply all of these needs but will conserve the use of this surplus water for use within the boundaries of the United States, we cannot help but feel that they should be given due consideration.

To us it is not so much a question of whether the land to be benefited by conserving the waters of the Colorado river is in California or Arizona as it is that we think the farmers of the United States should receive these benefits rather than the people of a foreign country.

If you can't boost this mining camp, don't knock it. It's going to boom!

NATIONAL EGG DAY PROCLAIMED

The National Poultry Council of the United States of America issues the following proclamation designating May 1, 1926, as "National Egg Day," and poultry producers and the allied industries are uniting in this national program to pay homage to the American hen:

"Fully realizing and appreciating the great magnitude to which America's poultry industry has developed during the last decade; appreciating its great economic importance in our national scheme of human food production, and appreciating the almost universal interest which our people have, either in the production or consumption of eggs, the National Poultry Council, which is a delegate organization representing the production and allied branches of the poultry industry, has, by proclamation, set aside May Day, 1926, as 'National Egg Day.' The National Poultry Council is organizing state and national committees to develop and promote appropriate observances of 'National Egg Day.' This day will be celebrated in the various states as the respective state committees see fit.

try industry, has, by proclamation, set aside May Day, 1926, as 'National Egg Day.' The National Poultry Council is organizing state and national committees to develop and promote appropriate observances of 'National Egg Day.' This day will be celebrated in the various states as the respective state committees see fit.

"It will be a day in which to pay homage to an industry that stands fifth among our agricultural pursuits as measured by the value of products produced. It will be a day to spread the message of the peculiar, protective properties possessed by eggs in our human diet. It will be a day in which every branch of the poultry industry can preach the gospel of the importance of poultry husbandry and poultry products in the everyday practice of feeding our people.

"It is decreed by the National Poultry Council on this 10th day of February, 1926, as follows:

"WHEREAS, The egg occupies a position of great distinction and one of peculiar merit and usefulness in the diet of our people, being extremely rich and well balanced in digestible food nutrients, and being of great value as a protective food through the high vitamin content which it carries; and

"WHEREAS, More people are directly interested in the production and consumption of eggs than any other single food commodity; and

"WHEREAS, The poultry industry of the United States has reached a position of great magnitude, being one of our leading agricultural pursuits; and

"WHEREAS, The value of the products produced by the American hen for the current year is estimated to be approximately a billion and a quarter dollars;

"THEREFORE, The National Poultry Council of the United States, representing every phase of egg and poultry production, including the allied branches, does hereby set aside and proclaim Saturday, May 1, 1926, as 'National Egg Day.' The National Poultry Council further asks all interested citizens, companies, corporations, associations and organizations to participate fully in the celebration of 'National Egg Day.'

"The National Poultry Council asks the fullest cooperation and support from every interested agency with the national and state committees which are being organized to develop and promote appropriate observance of 'National Egg Day.'"

LOCAL SMELTER COMPANY MAY ERECT PLANT HERE

Thursday evening E. H. Evans, E. F. Bohlinger, William Fessler, Val Valenzuela Jr. and Howard Keener, representing the Arizona-Kuenzel Smelter Company went to Nogales to confer with Fred W. Kuenzel as to the possibility of securing some of the Kuenzel smelter burners to be used in demonstrating their efficiency in a local plant. Following the demonstration it is hoped that the company can erect a small demonstration smelter in Patagonia for the purpose of making tests on ores from the surrounding mountains. If these tests are successful, the company will likely begin business, which has been delayed owing to inability to secure delivery of a burner at an earlier date.

Mr. Kuenzel as sold his controlling interest in the Kuenzel patents to the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, he says, and following the installation of the burners in a large steamship at Los Angeles harbor he will bring some burners of Patagonia and give the local company a practical demonstration of their efficiency.

The successful operation of the new patent will make possible the erection of small smelters at isolated mines where the ore is of too low a grade to return a profit if shipped as it is taken from the ground, and make otherwise worthless properties valuable assets.

Howard Keener, at the Patagonian office, will acknowledge your legal papers, put the Notary's Seal thereon—and has for sale all kinds of legal blanks.
