GREAT ORE STRIKE IS MADE IN BIG JIM

Davis Says Big Jim Makes Real Strike

Mining Engineer Who Studied Big Jim Ground Says New Find Proves Permanence of Ores

(By H. E. DAVIS, Mining Engineer)

The Big Jim Mines Company has made a strike of major importance in deepening its main working shaft on its property in the Harehah mining district near Patagonia, Arizona.

At a depth of 233 feet the shaft entered a body of solid sulphide ore, and on October 14 had penetrated the ore body for a depth of 15 feet, and at the bottom of the shaft still being in solid ore, which was improving in mineral content.

The first 15 feet of this ore body averaged in mineral content 10 ounces of silver and 7 per cent lead per ton. At present market values of metals this is a value of $14.80 per ton.

This ore body is dipping downward and toward the west at an angle of 45 degrees. To use mining "talk," the shaft cut the "hanging wall" of the vein at a depth of 233 feet, and at 248 feet depth the shaft was still in ore, with the "foot wall" not yet in sight.

This is the same ore body which is exposed on the 160-foot working level some 70 feet to the east of the shaft. Measured from where cut in the shaft at a depth of 233 feet, to where exposed on the 160-foot level is 105 feet.

In other words, the strike in the shaft as proved that the ore body extends downward for a distance of 105 feet below where it opened on the 160-foot level.

It is also notable that whereas part of the ore in this body on the 160-foot level is oxidized or "carbonate" ore, the ore body where cut in the shaft consists entirely of sulphides.

A majority of mining men do not regard carbonate ores as being indicative of permanence and of resistance to depth. On the other hand, large masses of sulphide ore are accepted as more certain proof of permanence.

Hence, the strike made in sinking the shaft of the Big Jim has double importance. First, it has increased the known vertical extent of an ore body by 105 feet. Second, it has given indisputable proof that the ore bodies in the Big Jim are of a type which do go down, and may be expected to persist to great depth.

The full importance of the strike cannot be estimated until the shaft has passed completely through the ore body and the width and average value ascertained.

Although its full value is not yet known, the strike may be regarded as the most important event in the history of the Big Jim's Patagonia property, as it is the first important proof of the correctness of the theories of the Big Jim engineers that the large ore bodies in the old levels of the mine were but noters of far larger bodies of easily-milled ores extending to depth.

Vein Increasing in Width

At surface and in shallow tunnels driven in the mountain cut about the same level of the Big Jim shaft, and above that level, the Big Jim vein shows to be about four feet in width. On the 160-foot level it is considerably wider. And now at a depth of 233 feet the ore body itself has opened to a known width of 15 feet, with the total width of vein or of the ore as yet unknown. This is as expected and predicted by the Big Jim engineering staff.

Permanence Seems Assured

The ore itself is composed of solid masses of darkish quartz particles with a slight filling of "fancy" looking material, and quartz filled quite evenly throughout its entire mass with crystals of galena with good silver content, argentite, pyrite some chalcocite and some tetrahedrite. Above that level, the Big Jim crystals are thoroughly disseminated throughout the entire vein filling is regarded technically as proof of permanence to considerable depth, and of far higher values when the permanent water level is reached.

The mining technologist has learned through long study and experience that when mineral is evenly distributed in fine particles throughout all or a large part of the entire mass of vein matter the mineralization extends to greater depths than when the vein matter is mostly barren and the mineral is collected in large crystals along narrow zones in the vein.

The mineralization now showing in the deepest workings of the Big Jim harmonizes and agrees with the geology of the property as shown at surface and the upper levels.

Where is That Water Level?

On the 160-foot level of the Big Jim nothing showed but seepage waters, coming down through the rock crevices from the surface after rainstorms. At the present bottom of the shaft indications recognizable to the experienced miner are to the effect that the top of the permanent water level is being reached. This permanent water level, referred to by miners as the "ground-water level," may vary from one to fifty feet in a series of years. In this particular zone a permanent water level should be reached between 250 and 300 feet. The present shaft bottom appears to be at about the top of the highest water level.

Water and Ores

From a little distance above the water level to a short distance below the water level the engineer expects ores to be somewhat lower in value than they are further below the water level. The reasons are technical and would require long explanation which would be of no interest to any but the technical miner. The ores in the Big Jim new strike show the impoverishment to be expected at this particular zone, and yet they are splendid milling ores. A 16-foot body of $14 ore is regarded as a bonanza by any mining company equipped with a mill suited to convert such ores into concentrates or bullion.

Future Promise

The size of the new ore body as already shown, and the character of the ore itself indicate that as a mine the Big Jim has not as yet really started; that below the water level exist the real riches of the mine, and that ore bodies above the water level represent but the "skimmed milk," the "skimming" agencies having been oxidation and leaching, which have taken out a large part of the "cream" and redposited it down below the water level.

PRIZES FOR ROPING AND RIDING AT THE COUNTY FAIR

The rodeo at the county fair, October 23, will begin at 3 o'clock, and a fine program has been arranged by Leo Zinsmeister, chairman of the rodeo committee. All the best riders and ropers of the county will compete for the prizes, which are as follows:

Riding—First prize $50, second $30, and third $20.
Roping—First prize $35, second $25, third $15.
Five dollars entrance fee will be charged for each contest, and all entries must be in by 1 p. m.

DEMOCRATS HOLD RALLY

Thursday night, at 8 p. m., members of the Democratic central committee and candidates for office on that ticket for county office came to Patagonia in the interests of the party's campaign. A splendid program of songs and addresses had been arranged, as follows:

Song, composed by Miss Gladys Walker and Andy Bettwy, sung by the "Candidate's Chorus."
Address by Judge Frank J. Duff.
Reading, "Her First Trip to the Butcher's," Mamie Bean.
Address, Judge Charles E. Hardy.
Vocal solo, by Mrs. Frank I. Welch.
The song by the Candidate's Chorus will be printed in next week's issue of the Patagonian, having been crowded out this week for lack of space.

PLENTY OF WATER

Prescott, Ariz.—Chino valley farmers are assured a sufficient supply of water for all irrigation and domestic purposes with the completion of a test well drilled by the Mormon church in that district. The well, sunk to a depth of 418 feet, has a tested flow of more than 1,000,000 gallons of water in 24 hours.

COPPER AT 14.40

New York—First quotations for copper by the recently organized Copper Exporters, Inc., representing leading producers of the metal throughout the world, placed the figure at 14.40 cents a pound. Cornelius Kelly, president of the Anaconda Copper Company, heads the organization.

$25,000 IN PREMIUMS AT STATE FAIR AT PHOENIX

Phoenix, Oct. 15.—Hailing the annual Arizona Free State Fair as one of the state's most effective advertising agencies, T. W. B. Anderson of Miami, president of the Arizona Press Club, this week called on the newspaper men of the state to give their complete cooperation so as to make the fair a bigger and better event with each passing year.

This year's fair, which will offer more than $25,000 in premium money, will be in full swing November 8 to 13. There will be more and bigger exhibits and the amusement and sport program will be the most pretentious ever offered in the southwest.

President Anderson's message to members of Arizona's "fourth estate" follows, in part: "To the Members of Arizona's Fourth Estate: You will shortly begin receiving news and publicity matter in promotion of the Twenty-second Arizona State Fair."

"May I urge that you publish as much of this matter as your space will permit."

"The State Fair is one of Arizona's most effective advertising agencies. Annually it attracts thousands of winter visitors to our state, giving them a comprehensive idea of our progress and development through the many exhibits from farms and mines."

"The fair is an Arizona institution and merits the complete cooperation of the newspaper men of the state in making it a 'bigger and better' event with each passing year."

CARL HAYDEN AND LEWIS W. DOUGLAS VISIT PATAGONIA

Continuing their spectacular campaign, Carl Hayden and Lewis W. Douglas held six meetings Wednesday including one at Patagonia, which was well attended.

Regarding the Colorado river development, which was touched upon by Mr. Hayden, he characterized that stream as a potential asset of Arizona.

He told of being blocked the passage in the house committee of the Swing-Johnson bill and he would fight with every resource at his command to prevent any construction of dams on the Colorado river until the rights of Arizona have been determined.

"We have an ownership in the bed of that stream because it is navigable, and therefore Arizona property to the center; we have an ownership in the power sites, recognized by California in its offer to pay to Arizona a royalty of $1 a horsepower per year; we are neither stubborn nor contentions, wanting only an 'even break' in this matter, and we want to see it justly and honorably at the earliest possible moment."

"We are willing to meet and treat with our neighboring states. We have at all times shown our readiness in that regard. We don't want any of the best of it, but we do not propose to be robbed!"

Mr. Douglas defined the Democratic policy with regard to the development of the Colorado, as one involving first an equitable division of waters, a determination of the ownership of power sites, and then a sane development from the upper reaches of the river down through the Grand Canyon, to stabilize the normal flow of the stream and thus increase the primary available horsepower.

The party included Frank Luke, candidate for reelection to the state tax commission, and James H. Kerby, candidate for reelection to the office of secretary of state, who made short addresses. Following the meeting here, which was attended by several Nogales Democrats, the party drove to the county seat, where a meeting was held in the evening.

SANTA CLAUS BOOTH AT FAIR

MINES AND MINERS

HARDSHELL ORE WIDENING

Seven feet of ore averaging 80 ounces silver and 29 per cent lead per ton!

That's the latest report from the strike in the old Hardshell mine which was first announced in the Patagonian last week.

E. F. Bohlinger, in charge of operations on the Hardshell, states that the ore body, which was five feet wide last week, now has opened to seven feet in width with no diminution of values, and that he is not sure as to whether this seven feet is the full width of the ore body or not.

The find is estimated by Mr. Bohlinger to be about 300 feet vertically beneath the surface, although much less than that depth below the collar of the shaft through which operations are being conducted. The drift from the shaft runs into the hill, so that vertical depth below surface is gained quite rapidly.

For some weeks Mr. Bohlinger has been drifting along a high-grade vein of rich ore, some of it showing the finest horn-silver specimens ever seen in this district. About a week ago the high-grade suddenly opened to five feet in width, and now it is seven feet of clear ore. Values reported represent large channel-groove samples cut across the entire face of the drift.

Excess where horn-silver or nodules of estival galena show, the ore shoots look like mere reddish-yellowish "rock" to the novice or to the trained mining man. Constant assays are necessary to maintain knowledge of the actual values.

Engineers who have looked at the ore body state that it indicates a splendid deposit of rich sulphides in the vein below the water level. The present work is above the water level, in the carbonate zone.

Henry J. Grohs Here

Henry J. Grohs of Whittier, Calif., is spending some time in Nogales and Patagonia, and was an interested visitor at the Big Jim mine on Thursday.

He pronounced the strike in the Big Jim as the "real thing." Mr. Grohs is operating a fine-looking prospect some miles west of Washington Camp, and is looking over the Patagonia district for other properties. He is "sold" on the district and predicts that Patagonia eventually will become a most important mining center.

John W. Kelly Returns

John W. Kelly of Los Angeles and Randsburg, Calif., millionaire mine operator, is expected in Patagonia today. Mr. Kelly recently purchased the Gringo mine, is interested in other properties in the Patagonia district, and has stated that he expects to start intensive development work in the district this fall. He had expected to be here some weeks ago, but unfortunately suffered a broken arm, and this delayed his arrival.

Hosey Mine Running Two Shifts

The old Hosey mine recently taken over by F. Albert Morrison of Los Angeles, is now running two shifts, unwatering the mine and checking up on the timbering on the old shaft, which was found to be in excellent condition. The water has been pumped down to the 300-foot level, and as soon as some slight repairs are made in the shaft, to guides, ladders, etc., work of crosscutting from the 300-foot level to a vein which on the upper level yielded some 40 to 50 carloads of shining ore, will be started. The work is in charge of Mining Engineer J. R. Hubbard, an old associate of Mr. Morrison when both gentlemen were operating in the old camp of Goldfield, Nev.

Running Crosscut at Chief

On the Chief property, being financed by B. W. Brodersen, two shifts are at work running a crosscut from the 80-foot level of the main working shaft. The old Chief shaft was lost and the old Morrison shaft, then but 35 feet deep, was made the main working shaft, enlarged, timbered, and sunk to about 90 feet. The present level corresponds with the 100-foot level in the old Chief shaft.

The present crosscut is being driven to get the downward extension of an important ore shoot, the top of which was cut by an exploration crosscut at about 35 feet below surface.

The property was brought to the attention of Mr. Brodersen by H. E. Davis, local mining engineer, and now it is reported that Brodersen is negotiating for the control of the World's Best and the Henry Ford properties, which were studied considerably and regarded with favor by Mr. Davis.

W. D. Davis Takes Option on Mine

With the present strike on the Big Jim and the news that the Morning Glory is preparing to resume operations, probably starting in November, it is significant that W. D. Davis, former mayor of Dallas, Texas, has secured a lease and option on the Blue Noon extension property, which covers the ground between the Big Jim and the Morning Glory, and which, according to an engineering report by H. E. Davis, is traversed by the mineralized shear zone upon which both the Big Jim and the Morning Glory are located.

FIFTEEN FEET OF SOLID SULPHIDES ARE CUT IN SINKING THE MAIN SHAFT

Strike Regarded as Most Important Development in History of Big Jim's Patagonia Operations, and Proves Theories of Its Engineers Were Absolutely Correct

BULLETIN: Just as this paper was being placed on the press, President Keating of the Big Jim informed us that in mucking out the last round of shots in the shaft it was found that 30 inches of ore had been cut assaying 52 ounces silver and 31 per cent lead per ton, with the footwall of the bonanza shoot not yet in sight. This is in addition to the 15 feet of rich milling ore described below. How much greater the strike will be no one knows.

Big Jim Mines now is adding daily to the magnitude of a strike which may be regarded as the most important made in the Patagonia district since the strike on the "Three R" property years ago.

In sinking its main working shaft deeper a body of solid sulphide ore of splendid milling grade was encountered at a depth of 233 feet. The shaft now has penetrated this ore body for a depth of 15 feet, and there is no indication as to how much thicker the ore body will be.

At the mine Thursday, Superintendent Peterson of the Big Jim stated that the lower part of this 15-foot ore body is considerably richer than the upper part, but that the average for the entire 15 feet is 10 ounces of silver and 7 per cent lead per ton. That means at LEAST 15 feet of easily milled ore worth $14.80 per ton at present metal prices—and that's a whale of a thing in any man's mining country where the lucky discoverer has a mill right on the ground especially constructed to handle just that kind of ore.

Mining Men Enthusiastic

Thursday the new find was inspected by President Keating of the Big Jim; Henry J. Grohs, mine and mill operator of Los Angeles; Mining Engineer J. R. Hubbard of Tucson, now in charge of the Hosey mine, and H. E. Davis, mining engineer.

They were unanimous in the opinion that the strike is one of magnitude as it is; that the very character of the ore is such as to indicate a large body of ore as well as persistence of ore to great depths in the property, and that the strike is the biggest thing in the history of Big Jim's Patagonia operations to date.

Doubles Property Value

"Big Jim is today worth intrinsically twice what it was before this character of ore was opened," said Engineer Hubbard, "and the fact that sulphides of this character have been opened bears out the theories of a number of engineers as to what the future holds for intelligent operators throughout the entire district. While the early day operators may have been 'stumped' by complex sulphide ores, the perfection of selective flotation has entirely removed the handicaps under which former operators worked. This strike is a very important event."

New Ore Being Milled

The ore which is being taken out of the shaft as it is being sunk through this new find is being put through the mill in order to save rehandling. It is seldom that in sinking a main working shaft a zone is reached where there is no waste, but all the rock from the shaft is run through the mill, but that is what is going on at the Big Jim right now.

Why "Pete" Grns

The new ore body was first cut on the easterly side of the shaft, incidentally it was explained that the ore body enters the shaft from the easterly side, and dips downward toward the west at an angle of about 45 degrees.

When the ore was first blown into it showed as a zone about a foot wide on the bottom of the easterly side of the shaft. Superintendent Peterson began work on the shaft, and it is believed that the foot-wide "strange" had widened to about half the width of the shaft. "Pete's" grin grew wider. And when a couple more rounds showed the entire shaft in solid sulphide ore, full of gleaming little crystals of galena, and little spots of argentite, "Pete's" grin grew to a laugh, and his pronouncements were: "Boys, we've got the world by the tail. I knew it was down there, but wasn't looking for it so soon or so much of it. If it don't get any bigger I'm satisfied. It's big enough as it is."

And that's the feeling all around the Big Jim mine right now. Every body from the "super" down to the newest Mex mucker is wearing a grin that won't come off.

Strike's Real Significance

The real significance of this strike, however, is not the mere addition of a few thousand tons of ore to the reserves, but is the width and the character of the ore body.

Although the strike is just about the top of the water level, where engineers would expect values to be rather lean, the values are of splendid milling grade. The ore body is wider than it is nearer the surface.

The character of the ore has changed from a mixed sulphide and carbonate ore to a solid sulphide ore, the metallic particles being distributed evenly through all the vein filling. This is indication that the ore bodies in the Big Jim do go down. Further than that, it indicates that the ore is many other similar mineralized fractures and contact zones in the Patagonia district will be found to persist to depth. Once the outside mining world becomes convinced that the ore in the Patagonia district do persist to greater depth, money to open mines will come pouring into the district.

Big Jim Mill Grinds Away

The mill at the Big Jim now thoroughly "ground" to handle the mineral ore, is steadily grinding away although on account of the work in the shaft ore can be hoisted to run the mill only one shift per day. A splendid recovery is being made by the flotation units, and the "plot" concentrator table, run only to keep a check on the flotation units, is practically clean the very thin black streak showing across the table being almost entirely iron and manganese.

More Concentrates Ready

In the storage shed behind the mill, in the storage plant is a huge stack of concentrates, and about October 25 another carload of concentrates will be shipped. This will be the fifth shipment of concentrates.

Shaft Going Much Deeper

The main working shaft of the Big Jim will be driven down to 350 feet, with a sump below that point. Working levels will be opened at 250 feet and 350 feet.

The present bottom of the shaft is regarded as being just at the top of permanent water level, and it is believed that a little of the water now coming into the shaft is ground water rather than seepage water.

The history of development in this section of the district shows that present operations should be very near the water level, and that in deeper operations the flow of water will not be a handicap, but that, on the other hand, it will be welcomed, as it will give a steady and dependable water supply for milling operations.

Future Development

THE CAMPAIGN OF INFORMATION

The things which we do not understand are the ones which fool us. It is easier to trust to luck than to acquire information. A large part of human energy is expended in caring for the mistakes of others. Poorhouses are filled because of waste, extravagance and ignorant spending. Hospitals are filled because people disregard commonest rules of health and safety. Courts are filled with those whose troubles are largely of their own making. Asylums are filled because people knowingly break laws of health and nature. Penitentiaries are filled with men who commit promiscuous crimes. To help eliminate much grief and suffering, industry is today carrying on educational campaigns to show people the folly of being uninformed, careless and indifferent to rules of health, business and safety. Insurance companies are striving to show the irreparable waste of life and property which results from preventable fires and accidents. Public utility companies have been leaders in safety-first campaigns in the home, on the street, and in the investment field where savings are spent.

Railroads are constantly working to eliminate grade crossing accidents. In order to improve service and prevent delays in communication, telephone companies invite telephone users to call at the nearest central stations, and inspect the complicated system of wires and signals which are maintained to complete their telephone calls. And so it goes through a long list of industries, including lumbering, mining, manufacturing, etc. Private enterprise is endeavoring to provide

NEWS and PROGRESS No. 7

ECONOMIC SIGNIFICANCE AND SERVICE OF THE AMERICAN NEWSPAPER AND NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING—From latest volume in Manhattan Library of Popular Economics, republished in serial form through courtesy of Bank of the Manhattan Company, New York.

DISTRIBUTING THE NATION'S GOODS

THE American newspaper is, by its very nature, a local institution, its own community's mirror, voice, market place and leader. But, just as America is a national community, composed of thousands of local centers, so the American press as a whole is a unit, formed by nearly 24,000 local papers which reflect the national life. In this capacity newspapers together perform a nationwide economic service comparable to that performed by each for its own community. Connected up for the transmission and exchange of news they form a national market place in which knowledge of the goods of any locality may be found. The many units of this huge nation are not self-contained, but interdependent. This is because of the desire in which different sections specialize. California and Florida produce many times the quantity of oranges which they can consume. Filled as are the streets of Detroit with automobiles, these are but a small fraction of the number made in that city's great plants. The several shoe manufacturing centers must find millions of feet for their shoes in thousands of other communities. Typewriters from northern plants are used in southern offices, while cotton from southern fields helps to clothe the operatives who make the typewriters. So it is with innumerable other products. It is a process of ceaseless interchange by which each community gets whatever it may require, wherever it may be produced. Accordingly, every reader has a natural interest in many products of other regions as they are made known to him through the columns of his local newspaper. How prodigious is the volume of newspaper advertising in facilitating this process is disclosed by the fact that of the $750,000,000 used in such advertising in 1925, nearly one-third was paid by producers of goods which are distributed throughout the nation. Any one who begins to list the various kinds of goods purchased by him in the course of a year is likely to discover with surprise how much of an "ultimate consumer" he has become. At the same time, he probably will realize that many of his purchases are of goods already familiar to him through advertising. One naturally assumes that a producer takes pride in an article which he deems worth advertising, and one expects that the quality associated with a certain name or trademark will be the same wherever the product may be found. Moreover, experience has shown that the price is likely to be lower on a widely advertised article than for a similar but unadvertised one. In instances where the price has been found to be lower, the advertiser began to widen sales, the great economies of quantity production lowered costs and reduced prices, so that the sums invested in printer's ink were not added to but subtracted from the amount paid by the consumer. Visit where he will, the traveler will find in the show windows of almost any town the same makes of safety razors, toilet powders, cold remedies, hand cameras, men's hats and clothing, women's wear, shoes and other commodities, with which he was familiar in his home town. Indeed, it may be hard for him to realize, in the face of such display, that he actually has traveled at all. This, of course, signifies that the distribution of a great number of products has become well-nigh universal. Distribution is a matter of large concern to us all, yet it does not mean merely the placing of goods on sale in many stores. Goods may stagnate in stores; they will gather dust and become unsaleable if the "ultimate consumer" does not consume. Distribution implies the moving of goods from the store. It is a process of motion, of flow, and it is the constant circulation of goods and money through producers, distributors and consumers that brings prosperity, men tell no tales." After keeping this up for 10 years it brought me quite a lot of money. I had a large chest of gold and silver and jewels. I decided to bury my treasure, as all good pirates do. I took my first mate and a worthless crew and my treasure to a small desert island. There I buried it and we sailed for home again. While sailing along my first mate and I had a good plan made up. A vessel was sighted and we took a lot of dynamite and blew our ship up, but we got to what we thought was safety in a lifeboat. The boards and pieces of the boat flew all around us. One hit my mate on the head and killed him. The vessel that was in sight saw the explosion and came to the rescue. Seeing that I was the only survivor, they took me on board and landed me in port. There was not a soul alive that knew where my treasure was hidden. Well, anyway, I had it all planned that they shouldn't, and even my mate would have had to die. I have made a map of the treasure and am going to set it afloat in the ocean, and here is hoping you will be the lucky one and find it. I only got the treasure because I wanted adventure. My merchant ships are still bringing a good income, enough to live on until I die. Then they will go to my sailors, for I have no relatives. (Vernon Lewis) The girls in Home Economics are planning how to provide for their "adopted" families with an income of $130 a year. Some of the girls have "adopted" a imaginary family of our and some of six. They are making clothing budgets so that they can clothe their families on 20 per cent of their income. The budgets, which seem so found difficult to make because they wanted to spend too much money, were finished Wednesday. Thursday they started studying marketing and making food budgets. Saturday they will go to Nogales to study marketing and price conditions. (Emma Nye) Friday, October 9, was a day of great excitement among the high school pupils. The girls had been wearing overalls for some time and it seemed to annoy the boys because several wore lariat necks with a cut fringe around the bottom. Thursday the girls, however, laughed at the pants legs that showed below the skirts. The next day Lee Farrell, Gordon Farley, and Fidel Valenzuela borrowed some clothes and each came to school escorted by a boy. Paddy carried Lee's books, while Tommy Costello helped Gordon and Ernest Reagan escorted Fidel. They did not remain in the costumes very long, however, and gave various excuses for changing into their own clothing. (Howard Dalton) The boys of the Patagonia Union High school farm shop class have appointed Fidel Valenzuela as farm shop custodian in order that the tools of the shop may be properly taken care of. The pupils of the class may lay the tools down where they might be damaged. The custodian is to call the student's attention so that the tools may not be damaged. (Fidel Valenzuela) HAVE YOU YOUR TICKET? The masquerade ball to be given on Halloween gives promise of being one of the largest and most entertaining ever given in Patagonia. This dance will be given by the Junior class of P. U. H. S., the money derived therefrom to be used for the acquisition of athletic equipment. Although the tickets have only been on sale for about a week, almost half of them have been sold and the remainder are going fast. Prizes will be given to the prettiest woman and the funniest man. The hall will be decorated with witches, black cats, and jack o' lanterns, with black and orange trimmings. The committee on arrangements promises you that a real witch will be in attendance to sell her wares and to prophesy the future. Plan to attend the dance and "dance and be merry." Tickets, which are $1, may be purchased from any high school student. (Gordon Farley) A first class lesson on how to use a pick and shovel was given by Professor Zimmerman to the boys on Tuesday from 11:15 to 12 o'clock. Professor Zimmerman took all the boys to the basketball court, where he began his instructions by showing "Paddy Ryan" the proper manner to manipulate a "muck stick." Paddy then took charge of the aforementioned implement and proceeded to follow instructions to the dot, although at times he felt the need to express himself concerning the "muck stick" and the professor as well. As the noon hour slowly approached all the boys assured Mr. Zimmerman that they had enjoyed the lesson immensely and expressed their desire to go back the next day, as this was entirely a new art to them. School Constitution After the election of the student officers it was decided that a constitution should be drawn up for the students. In a special assembly a committee was appointed by the president of students, Gordon Farley, consisting of Olive Douglas, Lois Reeves and Fidel Valenzuela, for drafting the constitution. The constitution is to be enforced by the student body for the betterment of the school. This will give the pupils self-government. News Items The High school orchestra, which meets twice a week, is progressing rapidly. It was joined by five members of the grammar school last week, making a total of 17 instruments. The orchestra has been playing two late pieces: "Sweet Child" and "I Wish You Were Jealous of Me." The new books, Jenkins, have arrived, so orchestra will begin practice in them this week. The orchestra now consists of 3 violins, 3 mandolins, 1 saxophone, 3 clarinets, 2 guitars, 3 banjos, the piano and drums. The members from the grammar school who joined the orchestra are Raymond Kin, Ralph Riggs, clarinet; Jack Pierce, Mary Costello, guitar, and Thelma Wilson, banjo. The freshman class, as a meeting last Friday, organized and elected their class officers. They chose Billy Anderson for president, Nellie Kearney for vice president and Margaret Fortune secretary-treasurer.

"The Pirate" (By Owen Borking)

I was born on the rocky coast of Denmark in the year 1945. My mother died when I was small and so I was left to the raising of my father. He was a trader on the waters and owned several large ships. I always longed for sea adventures and wished that I was a pirate. At the age of 14 I was helping my father with his trade. On one of our trips a pirate vessel overtook us and began firing at our mast. My father didn't put up a fight, for he knew that it would be useless. The pirates boarded our vessel and threw their guns on us. They took the cargo, and while they were all busy I slipped over the side of the ship into the water and swam to the pirate vessel. I went up the ladder and when on deck I slipped to the storehouse and found a large can of oil that was used for lights. After getting the oil I went below deck and poured it all over the floors and walls. From my wool sweater I ripped a large piece of yarn and put one end in the oil and the other I lit. I knew it would take about 15 minutes for the oil to ignite after burning the yarn. I slipped out of a window back into the water and swam carefully to my father's vessel and hung onto the side out of sight of the pirates. I waited for about five minutes and I saw one of my father's sailors, who let a rope down to me. After getting on deck I hastened to my father and told him what I had done. He soon had the ship out of gunshot and by then the pirate vessel was shooting out flames and big gusts of smoke. The men could be seen lowering lifeboats and pumping water. The bottom burned out of the ship and after half an hour she sank. My father ran the vessel up to the side of the lifeboats and commanded the pirates to throw their guns overboard and to come on deck. They did so, and as each came up he was thoroughly searched. The vessel was light and by the next morning we reached port. The pirates were taken into custody and my father received $5000 reward for the pirate captain, John Silver, with only one leg, and another $5000 for the crew. My father put this money in the bank for me, and by the time I was 21 I had enough money to buy a number of merchant ships. The ships were all well armed and I pretended to be a trader, but in truth was a pirate. I never raided small ships, but only large, valuable ones. The people thinking me nothing but a merchant kept me posted when a ship going out of port with a valuable cargo. I secretly went after this ship and after plundering it I sank it with the crew, for my motto was: "Dead

WHO PROFITS MOST?

Metal, oil and lumber, three of the great natural resources of the west, are indispensable to American family life. Each of these three industries has been carried on by a type of men who recognized no obstacles. Each industry has to cope with the forces of nature in their most destructive forms. It takes big men to pioneer and develop such industries; to give the public constantly increasing and better service, employes better working conditions and good wages, and the government a constantly greater proportion of total income in the form of taxes. Our prime industries, which are the mainstay of our prosperity in all sections of the country, should receive every possible encouragement at the hands of the people and the government, for it is the people and the government who profit most by the successful operation of such properties. A DESERVING CANDIDATE In passing on the several candidates offering themselves for election in this campaign, the voters will do well to give Mrs. Grace A. Farrell, candidate for re-election as School Superintendent of the County of Santa Cruz, their most careful consideration. She has shown wonderful ability in dealing with the many problems of the office, and has established a record of systematic efficiency that has attracted the educational fraternity throughout the state and ranks favorably with the most advanced superintendents in the state. Mrs. Farrell is the widowed mother of six children depending entirely upon her individual efforts for their means of sustenance and training, a situation which should appeal to every voter who appreciates such motherly efforts. Many mothers in like positions, and even those more fortunate can appreciate the great responsibility, the hard grind that such service demands. To overlook this deserving woman when casting your ballot would be inhuman. To support her would be a most commendable act. Just Like 'Em "Even a policeman cannot arrest the flight of time." MOSES HONORED IN HIS DEATH

LESSON TEXT—Deut. 34:1-12. GOLDEN TEXT—Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

1. Moses Views the Promised Land From Mount Pisgah (vv. 1-4).

At the Lord's bidding Moses ascended the mountain from which he got a view of the promised land. He obeyed, though he knew that he was to die there (Deut. 32:50).

11. The Death and Burial of Moses (vv. 5-9).

His death (v. 5). Though he died in the vigor of manhood, his work was done. He did not die before his time.

III. The Successor of Moses (v. 9).

Joshua, who had been the minister of Moses during all the years of the wilderness journey, now became the military leader of the Israelites.

IV. Encomium Upon Moses (vv. 10-12).

In this eulogy Moses is given a place at the head of the Old Testament prophets. With the exception of the Greater Prophet (Deut. 18:15-18), of whom Moses was a type, he stands as the greatest prophet of Israel.

Faith

What a wonderful ship is faith. She discovers worlds beyond anything found by Columbus. What a freight she carries. Riches beyond the treasures of Solomon's ships of gold.

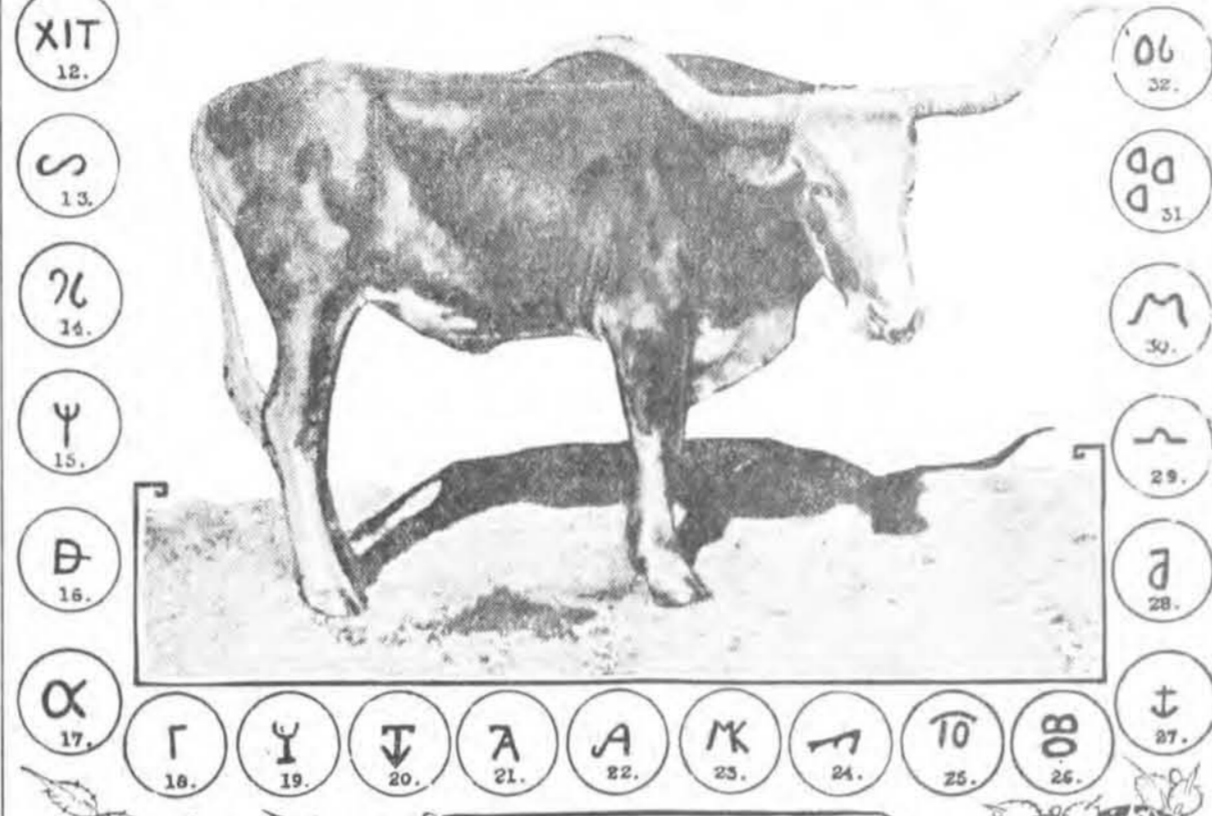

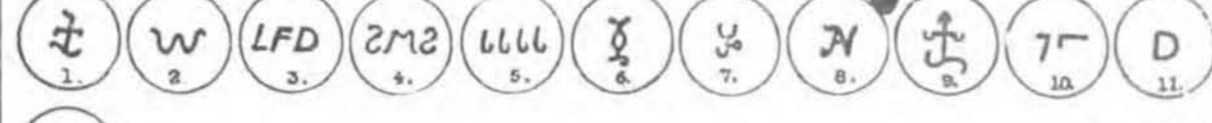

Looking Into the Future

When we look into the long avenue of the future and see the good there is for each one of us to do, we realize after all what a beautiful thing it is to work, and to live to be happy.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Shining and Singing

You may sing "O for the wings of a dove!" but it is better to shine in the ways of God. Shining is the best kind of singing, and makes the singer sing to purpose.—Prophetic News.

Saving the Longhorn

ABOUT four years ago there appeared in a newspaper in San Antonio, Texas, in the heart of the cattle country, an item headed "The Passing of the Longhorn," which read as follows:

The Texas longhorn is no more. To-day this noble creature has taken its place along with the other outstanding figures of the romantic pioneer days of early Texas.

Whether or not there was any direct connection between this valedictory and the action taken recently by the Texas Folklore society is unknown, but the fact remains that it was a statement of what was in the minds of many Texans—the fact that a picturesque animal and one which had played an important role in the history of the Lone Star state was in danger of extinction.

It is interesting to note that Texas not only is making an effort to save the longhorn from extinction, but that it is preserving its memory in another way. Without branding, successful operation of the cattle business would have been impossible, for Mexican cattle thieves and dishonest ranch owners would have got away with the herds in short order.

Not long ago a newspaper dispatch stated that a herd of 2,000 Texas longhorns had been shipped from south Texas to Kansas, but old-timers, who should be in a position to know, declare that it is doubtful if a tenth of that number of genuine longhorns could be found if a census were taken.

Just where the longhorn originated is unknown. Tradition has it that they descended from the original herd of Spanish cattle which stocked the ranch of Hernando Cortez, conqueror of Mexico, on the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, nearly 400 years ago.

Explained, however, that practically all of the "outsiders" resided in Mississippi for many years before their elevation to the governorship. Gov. Adelbert Ames, the notable exception to this rule, arrived as "Military Governor" after the war between the states and his stay in Mississippi terminated with his retirement from the executive offices.

A student of Mississippi's historical records announces the rather surprising discovery that of the 34 governors who have served that state, only 10 have been native Mississippians.

South Carolina contributed five, Virginia four, Tennessee three, Georgia, North Carolina and Ohio two apiece, Pennsylvania, New York, Texas, Maine and Illinois, one each. It is to make their way through the thick chaparral growth that covers much of their native home and because of the scanty grazing they were accustomed to range over a wide territory.

Mississippi's Governors A student of Mississippi's historical records announces the rather surprising discovery that of the 34 governors who have served that state, only 10 have been native Mississippians.

Americans Go to Canada In the last fourteen years Michigan has sent more of its citizens to become Canadians than any other state of the Union, according to the Canadian department of immigration and colonization.

When the Mexican ranch owners were driven out of the lower border of Texas after the Texans had won their independence in 1836, many thousands of these cattle roamed the wilderness for a quarter of a century.

The full history of these brands would fill volumes, but here are some of the outstanding facts connected with some of the better known ones:

1—John R. Blocker; 10—Elliott and Dewesse; 20—Joe Gunter; 21—Preston Rose; 22—Charles Goodnight; 23—S. A. Maverick; 24—Anna Martin and Sons; 25—George W. Saunders; 26—D. H. Snyder; 27—J. J. Myers; 28—John Lytle; 29—Mark Withers; 30—E. B. Millett; 31—W. T. Waggoner; 32—H. L. Kokernot.

11—A. H. (Shanghai) Pierce, who drove cattle from Matagorda county on the gulf and whose steers were known from the Rio Grande to the Canadian line as "Shanghai Pierce's sea lions."

12—Capitol Land Syndicate, whose XIT brand was generally known as "Two in Texas." Their holdings covered ten counties and included three million acres, giving in payment for the state capital building at Austin.

13—C. C. Slaughter's "Lazy S" brand was on more than 12,000 cattle a year in the trail-driving period after the Civil war.

21—Preston Rose was the first man to fence land in Texas and attempt to improve the longhorn breed.

22—Charles Goodnight, owner of the famous Goodnight ranch, Lome of buffalo, and experimenter in crossing buffalo and cattle to produce "catalo."

23—S. A. Maverick, whose name is applied to any cattle that bear no brand. He bought a small herd in the 40's, but a negro employed was so careless that he had to sell the few that remained from the hundreds stolen by rustlers.

31—W. T. Waggoner, whose brand was used on 25,000 horses and 100,000 cattle in 1895 after he had started in business with only 242 cows, 6 horses and a fifteen-year-old negro herd boy.

FARM POULTRY

NARROW BUILDINGS NOT SATISFACTORY

According to poultry experts at the Illinois College of Agriculture at Urbana, profitable winter egg production is hard to get on many farms because the chicken houses on such farms are so narrow from front to back they cannot be opened for the necessary ventilation without making them much too cold for the hens when they are on the roosts at night.

Buildings which have been used for other purposes can be remodeled into satisfactory chicken houses at comparatively little expense. Usually this remodeling in a large building will involve the use of a straw loft to cut down the air space in the quarters used by the hens.

The straw loft will have the advantage not only of reducing the cubic air space, but also of equalizing the temperature and of absorbing moisture, so that the house will be warmer and drier during the winter months, as well as cooler in summer, than is likely to be the case when a large building is used without such a straw loft.

Two Reasons Why Fowls Nibble at Each Other

There are two reasons, at least, why chickens peck each other. One reason is that they get something to eat that way which they would not get in any other. If this is the cause the birds can be cured of this habit by feeding a complete or well-balanced ration including minerals, vitamins and protein.

Decline in Turkeys The turkey industry is on the decline. Popularity of other kinds of table poultry, and the many difficulties in raising turkeys, have influenced producers to reduce their flocks.

Poultry Notes

If sexes are equal, goose pair.

The goose-laying season usually begins in February.

Young geese are ready for market when the tips of their wings reach the tail—which is about their tenth week.

It behooves every operator to cull most rigidly at the beginning of the laying year, carrying over winter only the most healthy and vigorous individuals.

Green ducks are marketed at from nine to twelve weeks and should weigh up to nine pounds the pair.

Don't keep surplus ducks or drakes around now to eat their heads off. Get them to market as soon as possible.

Direct sunlight prevents leg weakness or rickets. This condition is very serious to poultry raisers. It can be prevented by the use of egg yolks, cod liver oil, direct sunlight or ultra violet light.

Soy-bean meal from which the oil has been extracted is a desirable food for poultry. Raw soy beans are not liked by hens.

Do not forget that the hen must have grit in order to grind her food. She retains grit in the gizzard for a long time.

If your chicks get "off feed" in some way, try rice. It will sometimes work almost magical cures. Cook it just as you would for use on the table rather than dry instead of slush.

THIS WOMAN'S BATTLE

Wins Against Ill Health

"At times I was hardly able to do my housework," writes Mrs. Margaret Wallace of 1547 Safford Ave., Columbus, Ohio. How many women have found themselves in this same condition! How many women have fought bravely on day after day, cooking, washing, ironing, doing the dishes, and keeping the house clean, when they were in a weakened condition and had not sufficient strength to perform these duties easily and properly!

When Mrs. Wallace was experiencing great difficulty in carrying on the daily tasks, a friend advised her to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she gave it a fair trial. "I just can't give enough thanks to it," she writes. "Now I can eat anything at all and I am feeling better than I have for years. I shall never be without your medicine again."

A woman who is fighting for her health and her family's happiness is a valiant soldier. She wages her battle in her own kitchen. She has no thrilling battles to cheer her on, no waving banners.

Many other women tell us, as Mrs. Wallace did, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was their faithful ally in the struggle for better health.

Worried "Dear, papa likes you." "That's fine." "No, it isn't. Mother never agrees with him."

Keep Eliminative System Active

Good Health Requires Good Elimination.

ONE can't feel well when there is a retention of poisonous waste in the blood. This is called a toxic condition, and is apt to make one tired, dull and languid. Other symptoms are sometimes toxic backaches and headaches.

The kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Many people have learned the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, when the kidneys seem functionally inactive. Everywhere one finds enthusiastic Doan's users. Ask your neighbor!

We rowed under the Walrus stern, and there we came upon an amazing spectacle.

A longboat was always towed astern for the greater convenience in case there was a sudden necessity for its use at sea. This boat had been drawn beneath the stern windows, from which a man was lowering a heavy box or chest, which a second man was receiving into its bow. The man in the longboat heard the rattle of our oars and gave us one lightning glance before he slushed at the mooring-rope and leaped to his own oars. The tide carried him immediately behind us, and I had a vision of a bloody face wrapped in an old shirt. If he knew who we were he gave no sign. He huddled onto a thwart and pulled downstream with the tide.

But the man in the stern windows was not so reticent. He leaned far out, wringing his hands and clamoring to be saved.

"Oh, Master Bones, ye wouldn't go for to leave poor Ben Gunn as stood by ye stanch to the end, and held the cabin door the while ye shot the bolt. Ah, and them — villains are a-hammerin'! This moment, Don't ee go, and leave me like this! They'll keelhaul me they will. They'll trice me to the cut."

"Back oars, Darby," I said. "We can't leave the poor fellow."

"And him with Bones!" protested Darby.

"Twas not his fault."

We rowed under the stern, and I called up to the steward—

"Jump into the water and we'll pick you up, Ben."

"Who're you?" he answered shakily.

"Tis Master Ormerod."

"I could hear the blows on the door at the end of the companionway."

"Hasten, man! We can't wait forever."

He jumped, and we hauled him, dripping, into our midst.

CHAPTER XX

Home

A chorus of yelling certified to the invasion of the main cabin, but its note of triumph was changed to consternation as Silver's bloodhounds discovered that their bird had flown.

"Gone!"

"The — knave's scooped us!"

"Boats, inde; boats!"

And presently the clack-clack of oars behind us caused Darby and me to redouble our labors. We drove ashore several rods downstream from the town on the shallow bluff, and we dared not wait to seek shelter within its log walls. Truth to tell, we doubted now that the town itself spelled safety to us. The Walrus' carmenes would make short work of such defenses as Savannah had to boast.

So we pelled up the bluff by a sandy path that debouched upon the cleared fields outside the stockade, urged on by that persistent oar-rattle and the shouts the pirates exchanged betwixt their several boats. Whether they were following us we could not discover, for the night was black as a cellar-vault; and we left nothing to chance, and ran hot-foot through the plantations of the citizens, overhearing, as we passed, the excited comments of the men on the bring-platforms of the stockade, who evidently anticipated an attack from their ugly visitor in the river. We never tarried for breath until we had gained the verge of the forest.

Peter was now in his element. He could find his way about a strange countryside by day or night as easily as a sailor could navigate the trackless wastes of the sea, and he led us in a beeline north and east in the general direction of the outlying settlements which intervened betwixt Savannah and the Carolinas. An hour or so after dawn we emerged upon a village in a clearing, whose inhabitants eyed us dubiously until Darby produced one of the golden doubloons from the store he had acquired during his reign as Flint's favorite.

These people had never before seen gold, and for a doubloon and an onza they sold us an old but serviceable musket with bullet-pouch, powder-horn and store of ammunition, and deerskin garments. They also sold us a small quantity of salt and flour, and put us on the trail to Charleston in the Carolinas.

Of our journey thither I can say only that it was such an odyssey as have long been accustomed to. To Peter and me its perils of forest and sea, and red savages, and wild beasts, were far less formidable than those of the sea, and Molra and Darby thrived upon the experience—so much so that when at last, brier-torn and footsore, we entered Charleston's sedate streets and found awaiting us an ample choice of packet ships to the north we four were unanimous for continuing our journey by land.

"Nen," said Peter. "I don't ever go to der sea again, Bob."

"Ah, who would be fool enough in his ignorance to be wam'herin' wet and bedraggled on the salt waves of the sea when he might venture the forests and be shootin' at the red door and the bears and the catamounts and it may be an Injun, if he was in the full tide of his luck?" snorted Darby.

"I seem to remember one who was all for the sea, and would waive the skill and crossbones in anybody's face," I jeered.

"Troth, and I knew less than that I do now," he replied unblushingly. "Them pirates was enough to break the heart of Pontius Pilate. Barria' Flint, there wasn't a one of them would be able to hold his own against such as us."

"Silver might—"

"He was a clever one, Long John; but he'll be in trouble, you see if he's not," insisted Darby. "Too graspin' he is by half."

"I care not how much trouble he is in," I said. "I want never to see him or any of his crew again."

Molra, sitting beside me on the settle of the tavern-porch, twined her arm in mine with a slight shudder.

"Never again!" she cried. "And if it will be the same to you, Bob, we'll stay off of the sea. I like fine the clutch of the earth on my feet and the whispering of the trees. Men may be cruel on the land, but faith, they're never so cruel as the cruellest of the seafarers. And all my days when I hear the rattle of the surf and the suck of the tide running out I'll be thinking of himself that lies so far and lone under the Spyglass—and of Master Murray. God rest his poor bones, and many another. The sea had them all! Ah, Holy Virgin, what a hunger it has for men!"

But Peter shook his head solemnly. "Nen," he said. "Der sea did not take them all. They died from der greed dot cankered in their hearts. I do not like der sea, but der sea is der same as der land. It works God's will."

We were silent for a space, looking out upon the busy life about us, the negroes in their bright bandanna headresses, the planters passing on half-thoroughbreds, the decent town-folk in hoddin-gray.

Where Name Gamaliel Occurs in the Bible

Two men by the name of Gamaliel are spoken of in the Bible. The periods in which they lived were widely separated. The name of the first is found in Numbers 1:10. He was the son of Pedahzur, a prince or captain of the Tribe of Manasseh, and he is here mentioned in connection with the census of Sinai. He again mentioned in chapters 2:20; 7:54 and 10:23, the latter reference being to Gamaliel as captain of the Tribe of Manasseh at the starting of the Israelites on their march through the wilderness. The second Gamaliel was a Pharisee and celebrated doctor of the law, who gave sound worldly advice to the Sanhedrin respecting the treatment of the followers of our Lord. This will be found in Acts 5:34. It is also learned from 22:3 that he was the teacher of St. Paul when the

"And you, Ben Gunn?" I said to the steward who sat across the porch from us. "Will you come north with us? My father—"

He jumped up, writhing and twisting in an excess of embarrassment, and with something of a tear in his face.

"'Twas yourself was promisin' me I'd not be to wear a livery-shirt," he protested. "And before that ye said as how ye'd find me a berth as a real, tarry sailor-man, a-pullin' on ropes and standin' tricks at the wheel. Yes, ye did, Master Ormerod; and I believed ye, I did—though there's a many think naught o' foolin' poor Ben Gunn."

"I'll not fool you, Ben," I answered. "If you would go to sea, to sea shall you go."

And on the morrow I found him a berth upon a Barbados packet, cautioning him to employ discretion in discussing his past life, lest he be handed over to the admiralty officials as a former pirate. He was our last link with the infamous company that had owned the joint rule of my great-uncle and John Flint, and what became of him or of the remnants of Flint's crew aboard the Walrus I do not know to this day. But from the fact that the Walrus was never reported again I have suspected that she must either have been wrecked or voluntarily abandoned by her people. She left Savannah with-in twenty-four hours of our landing there—so much I discovered by correspondence with a merchant of that town.

Did she put back to the Rendezvous and ransack the island's surface for the treasure Flint had buried? Or did she try for the gold we concealed on the Dead Man's Chest? Hopeless ventures, either of the two! As well search for a certain grain of corn in a heaping bin.

And what happened to Bill Bones? Did he elude the pursuit of his deserting comrades and seek an opportunity to lift Flint's treasure for himself? I'll swear that was his intent from the first—precisely as I'll take oath that had Silver been first to get his hands upon Flint's map he would have plotted so that only he and a small circle of his immediate familiars should have shared in the prize. Utterly scornful, one and all! But perhaps Bones never won clear. Perhaps Silver fastened upon his trail and pursued him with that fantastic vengeance they called the Black Spot. I have often wondered what it might be.

As to the treasure, they are welcome to it or any part of it if they can find it. Molra and I talked over the desirability of notifying her Jacobite friends of the board that was buried on the Dead Man's Chest, and for a time she leaned toward this course; but after she had dwelt a while in the Hanoverian prosperity of New York she revolted against the idea of taking any step which would embroil the peace of the realm, and any lingering doubts in her mind were dissipated by the titanic conflict of the Seven Years' war, with its world-wide convulsion of nations that set armies marching to battle all the way from the parched plains of India to the forests of our wilderness country.

"There is no time to think of Hanoverian or Jacobite," said she. "We will all be English together."

"Der Irish, too?" asked Peter gravely.

"Troth, the Irish will be the best of us."

"Troth, the Irish will be the best

"Troth, the Irish will be the best

"Troth, the Irish will be the best

"Troth, the Irish will be the best

"Troth, the Irish will be the best

English?" she cried. "Unless it be the Dutch."

But I am galloping ahead of my story. Drop back across the years—'tis no more of an effort than it was for us to slide down the cable over the bow of the Walrus that night off Savannah—to the settle on the porch of the tavern in Charleston. Ben Gunn was disposed of; our plans were made for the northward journey along the seaboard. All that remained to be done was to come by a priest to wed Molra and me; and that, it seemed, was impossible short of Baltimore, in Maryland. Yet at the last our luck held, for the day we were to start turned stormy and we delayed our departure; and that afternoon a French West Indianman put into the harbor under stress of the weather. Among her company was a kindly Franciscan, and he readily agreed to perform the ceremony.

For the rest, we rode into New York about four of the clock on the afternoon of April the 24th, in the year 1755. My father was in the counting-room of our house in Pearl street, and he came to the door at the sound of the horses' hoofs on the cobbles. The sun was sloping out of the west full into his eyes; and for the time that it took me to dismount and swing Molra down from her saddle he stood dazed, fearful lest the dazzling light was playing tricks with him.

"Is it truly you, Robert?" he cried. "But it must be, for there are Peter and Darby."

"Yes, father," I answered. "And I have brought home another."

He opened his arms with an eager smile.

"There's room here for two of you, boy. Certes, you have but followed in my footsteps and fetched home a wife from your adventures."

"She is the little Irish maid I—"

"Whoever she is, she's more than welcome. But come in, come in, the pair of you. Safe and well—and with a wife! Robert, I can scarce credit it. After a whole year? Peter, God bless you! I knew with you he'd come to no harm. Ah, Darby, you have more sense in that red noddle of yours than when you left here; and if you stuck by Master Robert I've forgiven What a tale you'll all have to tell!"

That night as I lay in the upper room I had occupied since childhood I was aroused by a distant clatter and jangling which became louder and louder. At the corner it broke off with a heavy clang, and a pompous voice proclaimed:

"Past twelve o'clock of a fine, bright night, and Master Robert Ormerod is home from his captivity amongst the West India pirates. God save the king and the worshipful magistrates of New York!"

'Twas Diggory the watchman; and, listening to him, I recalled how Silver had cozened him the night I was kidnapped, and (hereat I fell a-chuckling until Molra stirred sleepily and complained—

"'Tis an ill thing if ye'll not sleep the first night we will be in your own home, Bob."

"No, no, sweetheart," I said, "I was but thinking what an odd bundle of accident is this life we live. For if that fellow braying upon the corner had not been a stupid fool I should never have seen you after I took you to the Whale's Head."

"Do you think so?" she retorted. "Then 'tis you will be the fool, for if Captain Murray had not carried you after me I should have contrived to return to New York, though it kept me treading the highways and byways of the world some fifty years. Now get you to sleep! I am none of your wives to encourage a husband in loose fancies and romantic longings. Your wandering days are by and done with, and the sooner you square your back on them the better will I be pleased. I'll not let you forth again, and of that you may be prime confident!"

So I turned over and went to sleep

Pretty Things that are Made at Home

"I'M GOING to make one just like it"—is not that the way the picture of this lovely dresser set makes one feel? It is certainly a well worthwhile ambition, for seldom does anything in the way of fancywork yield such handsome returns at so little cost as does this charming ensemble of fittings for one's top dresser drawer.

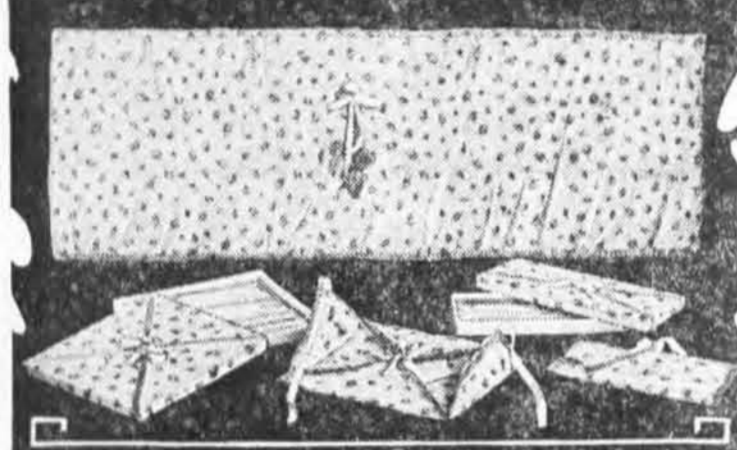

Wouldn't you just love to have your own dresser drawer lined with a perfumed flower-strewn cushion matching in which are cunning receptacles for handkerchiefs, gloves and various knick-knacks? Of course you would, likewise your friends who will exult over a Christmas gift of this sort.

All the material this dainty dresser ensemble requires is: one roll rosebud patterned crepe tissue paper, two sheets of finer cotton, one skein of raffia straw, two shallow pasteboard boxes (one square, one oblong), a bit of ribbon, a trifle of pink paper for lining, and a tube of paste.

Cut the cotton sheeting to exactly fit the bottom of the dresser drawer. Cover this pad top and bottom with the rosebud crepe paper. Use the fine raffia straw exactly as you would silk floss to buttonhole-stitch around the edges of this padded quilt or cushion. Form a square handkerchief case and an oblong glove case in the same way. The together as shown in the picture with narrow ribbon.

Cover both boxes with the rosebud paper. Line them by crinkling the paper or rather puffing. The inside edges are finished with a pink tissue heading formed by twisting very narrow strips at every half inch. Make each article redolent with sweet odor by attaching cunning little sachets which consist of wee colorful paper packs which contain the powder, tied tight at one end, then opening into four tiny petals which look like unfold-more and more lavish with winter's approach.

The new cloakings are exceedingly handsome. One is impressed by the profusion of warm colorings. In plain coatings pile and suede finished weaves vie with each other for supremacy. Novelty woolsens are fascinating in their colorings and patternings. Some of the imported tweeds are nubbled on the surface, some have outline stripes and plaids, while the most intriguing worsteds are interwoven with metal threads in a manner not showy but eminently elegant looking. There is much rivalry between these gay cloakings and those of handsome black.

Velvet returning is featuring the newest cloth coats. With the use of velvet in this manner a wide scope of ideas is being unfolded. The velvet usually matches the cloth in color, often there are wide borderings of the velvet. Sometimes it is stitched on in man, rows. Again it is applied in not only conventional motifs but also in elaborate modernistic patternings. Though one would expect this to produce super-ornateness, the designer takes care that it does not by being careful to use the velvet and embroidery in monotone coloring with the cloth.

Fetching details in the new cloth coats stress long sleeves and the most interesting item is the revival of bell sleeves. These are quite exaggerated in width at the bottom. New also are the up-to-date elbow fur cuffs which adorn the cloth coat. Melon-shaped fur cuffs or half sleeves are very smart. The flat pelts are used, such as squirrel, seal and beaver.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Many there be who fall themselves our friends; Yet, ah, 't heaven sends One, only one, so mated to our soul, To make our half a whole, Rich beyond price are we.

SEASONABLE DISHES

One learns a new method of serving chop suey every few days. The following is a good one to serve for a larger number:

Chop Suey—Mix the cooked meat of a fat fowl, two pounds of veal and one-fourth of a pound of veal tongue; mix with two bunches of celery cut fine, and seasoning to taste. Boil two cups of rice, drain and mix with the meat, add a can of mushrooms, chopped, one sweet pepper, two cloves of garlic and a pinch of powdered cloves. Put into a granite kettle and pour over a quart of rich chicken stock and the stock from the tongue and veal. Simmer two hours and serve hot.

Another—Take round steak cut into cubes, with plenty of suet, using a pound of the meat; brown in hot fat and add half as much onion and an equal bulk of celery cut fine, cover with water and slimmer for two hours on the back of the stove. Serve with seasoned, hot boiled rice.

Cabbage With Oysters—Select a small heavy head of cabbage, cut a slice off the top and scoop out the center carefully, leaving a thin shell. Shred the portion removed and add an equal portion of crisp celery, or dress it with vinegar and salt and pepper, omitting the celery. Fill the shell with fried oysters and serve with the cabbage salad.

A Veal Bird—Veal birds are well known and liked but take some time to prepare. Try this one: Take a thin slice of veal from the leg, two slices if the size of the family warrants it. Spread the veal after pounding it very thin with a nicely seasoned stuffing using crumbs, onion, a bit of sage and salt pork, a cupful diced, moisten with cream, and roll up the meat, tie and place in a hot frying pan with a little fat to brown. Brown on all sides, after dredging with flour. Place in a baking pan, pour over sufficient cream to use in basting and bake until the meat is tender. Baste occasionally.

Nut Bars—Cream one-half cupful of shortening; add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, then the yolk of an egg well beaten, the whites of two eggs beaten stiff and three tablespoonfuls of milk; mix well. Sift three teaspoonfuls of baking powder with three cupfuls of flour. Mix well together; divide into two parts; roll out and cut into bars. Brush with the beaten yolk of an egg and one tablespoonful of milk; sprinkle with one-half cupful of chopped almonds and bake in a moderate oven fifteen minutes.

The Ever Ready Fruit

The banana is always in the market and can always be depended upon for every emergency. It is enjoyed when added to the breakfast food for either child or adult. The food value is increased one hundred calories for every ordinary sized banana. For fruit cocktails or as a fruit salad it is always a well come addition to fruit combinations.

Baked in butter and lemon juice the banana makes a tasty garnish to a platter of steak, or served as a fritter it will, with a good sauce, make a fine entrée or dessert.

Fruit Salad. Mix equal quantities of bananas cut into small pieces, pineapple and oranges. Put into a glass jar and when ready to serve add the following dressing: Beat the yolks of four eggs, one-half cupful of lemon juice, three tablespoonfuls of water, two or three tablespoonfuls of honey and one teaspoonful of salt. Cook over hot water until thick, beating with an egg beater to make the dressing light and fluffy. Add the beaten whites and one cupful of whipped cream, and serve.

Banana Charlotte Russe. Pour a layer of lemon gelatin jelly into a wet mold. When firm line the sides of the mold with lady fingers or sweet wafers. Make a custard of the yolks of three eggs, one cupful of milk, one-half cupful of sugar and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Add one and one-half teaspoonfuls of gelatin dissolved in half a cupful of hot milk, strain, add two cupfuls of banana put through a sieve and the whites of the eggs beaten stiff, with one cupful of whipped cream. Pour into a mold and cool. Serve with a garnish of lemon jelly and sliced bananas.

Banana and Peach Compote.—Wash two cupfuls of dried peaches, cover with cold water over night and cook the next day until tender. Rub through a sieve and sweeten to taste. Add the strained juice of an orange, the pulp of six bananas put through a sieve, with a drop of pink coloring. Serve cold.

A measuring cup kept in the flour bin or box and one in the sugar is a great convenience when in a hurry.

Her Him

The teacher, wishing to arouse the interest of her Sunday school class, asked them to write the names of their favorite hymns.

All the pupils bent their heads over pencil and paper for a few minutes, and then handed in their slips—all except one.

Mary, with downcast eyes and flaming cheeks, handed the teacher a slip of paper bearing the words, "Willie Smith."

He Did Not Mind

be one to show by bark or look that he thought it strange his friend did not look more presentable.

No, Nip was not like that. He went into everything with all the zest and satisfaction of his little dog nature.

"I've come to play," said Nip. And they did! Oh, how dirty Nip got and right after his bath, too. He stayed for hours and hours until his family thought he was lost and went out in the motor car to hunt the town for him.

But only a little way down the street they found him, his legs all covered with mud. His face was as black as could be. And he was holding a dirty bone in his mouth which he had hidden once before in his friend's yard.

He saw the car and jumped right in and sat proudly on the back seat, after having wagged his tail and said he had had a nice time.

"Proud as could be, he rode home. Was he ashamed of being dirty? No, not Nip. And so coming did he look with his little pleased face in spite of all the dirt that no one could really scold him.

He was simply given another bath.

But the following day Nip got dirty again. He was sleeping the night before so he stayed clean longer than usual!

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By Mary Graham Bonner

NIP'S DIRT

Nip was a little fox terrier dog, with the sweetest of expressions and the most friendly of natures. He had not been teased when he was a puppy and it is only when a fox terrier is teased as a puppy that he becomes cross when he is older.

Nip was still a little dog and he was still almost a puppy. He was getting a little more grown-up each day but he was still apt to have times when he felt just like the silliest and most playful of puppies and would think of the most absurd things to do.

Now every so often Nip was given a bath. He did not mind his bath as he was bathed without any roughness and he always enjoyed the beautiful rubbing he was given. It made him feel so pleasantly after it was all over.

But if people took the time to bathe him he took the time letting himself be bathed. Sometimes they would say in such a snid, almost scornful tone: "Oh, Nip; there you are all dirty again, and I only took the time yesterday to bathe you."

It was right after one of these most beautiful baths, though, that Nip had an idea.

It was not the idea to have at first that time. But Nip was not apt to consider the right time. He thought time was made to be enjoyed as one thought of things to do.

He would not say to himself: "Now tomorrow at four-thirty in the afternoon I will take a walk and then dig for a bone I have hidden and then take a sleep."

He would do things right away at the time as they came to his little dog mind.

So after the most perfect of baths when he was just as clean as clean could be and had been dried off with a fine heavy towel and then had been given a sun bath, he decided he would like to play.

He had a number of different playmates and some of them were grander than others.

But Nip was not fussy. He was above anything foolish such as snobishness.

He had a friend down the street. The friend was always finding mud even when no one else could find mud. Somehow or other that friend could just seek out muddy places even after days and days when there had been no rain.

It was just an accomplishment of the friend.

"I think I'll go and see that friend," was what Nip had thought, and off he had bounded through the yard, through the next few yards until he reached his friend.

The other dog was already dirty and very muddy, but Nip did not object. Nip was not critical. Nip would never

A photochemist in Germany has developed a process for producing movies in natural colors without greater expense or more trouble than in black-and-white effects. With an ordinary camera and a monochromatic film specially treated by the secret process, a film showing every shade of tone from the top to the bottom of the spectrum is obtained, which can be projected with an ordinary projector.

United States Hospitals

There are 6,800 hospitals of all kinds in the United States, with 802,000 beds, of which 420,000 are concentrated in 480. In addition to these there are 34,511 bassinets, or baby cribs, for newborn infants. Thus 60 per cent of all hospital beds in the United States are constantly filled. It has been found that there is an hospital bed for every 111.5 inhabitants. The five states having the largest hospital facilities are New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, California and Massachusetts. At the end of the list are Delaware and Wyoming.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Alleged Corrupt Political Ring in Indiana Is Facing Exposure.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WHILE the rest of the country looks on with intense interest, Indiana is listening aglance to revelations exposing a great alleged political conspiracy spreading over the entire state and threatening to involve some of its most prominent citizens. Thomas H. Adams, publisher of Vincennes and chairman of an investigation committee named by the Republican Editorial association of Indiana, is responsible for the exposure, and the charges are based on the stories told by D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan and now serving a life sentence for murder. Stephenson, who says he was "framed," seeks vindication and revenge; and the editorial association's committee has made repeated demands on Gov. Ed Jackson for a complete investigation. Mr. Adams, asserting that the governor has dodged the issue, has been trying to persuade the Indianapolis city council to hear the charges before a mass meeting. He also has made repeated attempts to reach Stephenson in his prison, but the warden, backed by the prison board and the governor, will let no one in to interview the convict. The latter, however, managed to smuggle out a letter in which he said in part:

"I have in a place of security the following described documents:
 1. A written contract by the terms of which a certain prominent official of the state of Indiana agrees to pay me the sum of eight hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars ($825,000), or three times the amount I expended in his behalf for election.
 2. I have notes representing the above amount, signed by the official.
 3. I have a written memorandum signed by the same official acknowledging the amounts expended by me in his behalf to be two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars ($275,000), or one-third of the sum above mentioned. This memo recites an agreement where I lose all if he withdraws in the election, but recites three-fourths if he won.
 4. A written agreement with the mayors of three large cities in Indiana binding them to repay me on a ratio of three-for-one for all money I advanced in their behalf, and further agreements are in my possession where these same men agree to allow certain individuals to name all appointments.
 5. I hold two photographic copies (and the plate) of an agreement by and between the mayor of a large city and an organization politician in which the mayor agrees to allow that politician to name all of the city appointments of a certain class. I also have eight affidavits of reputable men who saw the photograph made from the original. I later delivered the original to the politician to whom it was addressed by the mayor.
 6. I have perhaps thirty or forty contracts with less important politicians who have agreed to repay me for funds advanced to them for campaign purposes.
 Publication of this by Mr. Adams being of no apparent avail, he next made public a photostatic copy of the amazing contract bearing the alleged signature of J. L. Duvall, mayor of Indianapolis and president of the Marion County State bank.
 "In return for the political support of D. C. Stephenson, in the event I am elected mayor of Indianapolis, Ind., I promise not to appoint any person as member of the board of public works without their first having the endorsement of J. L. Stephenson," the contract reads.
 "I also agree and promise to appoint Claude Worley as chief of police and Earl Klenck as captain.
 "Signed by me, this 12th day of February, 1925."

With this he gave out a letter purporting to have been written and signed by Duvall. It is written on the letterhead of his bank, addresses Stephenson as "Dear Steve" and continues: "I was talking with your friend just now and in regard to Ramsey getting (off) the ticket, if this is done I will—if the candidate for treasurer—go down the line with you and the boys and do all I can for the success of our ticket this fall.
 "With best regards, I am as ever yours truly, J. L. Duvall."
 Mayor Duvall admitted that he wrote this letter but declared that the alleged contract was a "fake." Mr. Adams said he could prove the signature on the contract was the mayor's, and he also asserted he had plenty of documents and evidence to prove the existence of the corrupt political ring which he seeks to get before the whole people of the state.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has let it be known that he will not take an active part in this fall's congressional election campaign in the way of speeches or letters in behalf of Republican candidates. He refuses to yield to the urgent requests of the campaign leaders, who have represented to him that participation in the campaign is his duty as the titular head of his party. To this the semi-official reply is that, while he is the leader of the party, it is not customary for the chief Executive to assume such leadership in an "off" year election, the only precedent for such action being Woodrow Wilson's ill-fated appeal for the return of a Democratic congress in 1918.

Political wiseacres say the President's decision is dictated largely by caution, and call attention to the fact that it spares him and the Republican candidates embarrassment, since he and many of them cannot well stand on the same platform. For instance, of the 28 Republican candidates for the senate, 18 are basing their bid for election, chiefly or partly, on opposition to Mr. Coolidge's policies relating to the world court and to agricultural relief.

FLOODS in Illinois, Kansas and Oklahoma during the last week have done immense damage to the crops, and many towns and villages have been inundated. Broken levees of the Illinois river let the waters into Beardstown, Ill., rendering hundreds of people homeless and almost completely isolating the city. In Peoria large industrial plants were forced to close because of flooded fire pits and basements.

TRAPPED about three miles underground by an explosion in the same iron company mine at Rockwood, Tenn., 28 miners met death. Rescue crews worked hard but in vain, being hampered by excessive heat and smoke and the danger from gas.

CHAOS reigns in central China and while the armies of the various factions are fighting desperately along the Yangtze river, it is the non-combatants that are suffering most. As an instance, the correspondent of the Chicago Tribune tells of witnessing the attempt of the Chinese Red Cross to get the civilians out of besieged Wu-chang on launches and lighters. There was room for fewer than 10,000 on the boats, but 50,000 broke through the military cordon and surged out on the piers, from which they fell into the river by hundreds, about 300 of them being drowned. The refugees were enclaved with starvation and told pitiful stories of their sufferings.
 Warfare between the Japanese and the Manchurians was imminent last week along the Korean border. Throughout Manchuria, adjoining Korea, are about 1,500,000 Koreans, mostly farmers, who are Japanese subjects. Recently the Manchurian government repudiated the agreement permitting Japanese subjects to lease agricultural lands, and sent troops to confiscate the crops. The Japanese rushed troops, machine guns and Red Cross detachments to the border and ordered all garrison troops in that region to be held in readiness for action.

BECAUSE he permitted one of the Hohenzollerns, the oldest son of the former crown prince, to march with the Prussian guards in the recent maneuvers, Gen. Hans von Seeckt, commander in chief in the German reichswehr, has lost his job. He was considered the complete militarist, and for six years the chief of the protesting against his rejuvenation of the German army. General von Seeckt created the present army, 100,000 strong, every man a perfect soldier, chosen from 5,000,000 available. Under his plan, it is figured that when the next war comes Germany will have 1,000,000 trained officers and sergeant-majors.

 The Prussian state government and the Hohenzollerns have reached an agreement on how much Prussia shall pay the former royal family to relinquish its claims on everything it left behind. The former kaiser will get 20,000,000 gold marks ($5,000,000) in cash, 280,000 acres of land from his former estates, and three castles, at Schwes, Fuerrath, and Wiltensbrunn, and the former crown prince gets Oels castle in addition.

DICTATOR PILSUDSKI ended his dispute with the Polish parliament by accepting the resignation of the Bartel cabinet and himself taking the post of premier. His cabinet is declared to be the strongest and best that Poland has yet had. Besides the premiership, Pilsudski holds the war portfolio. August Zaloski is again minister of foreign affairs.

THE American Federation of Labor opened its annual convention in Detroit, and incidentally got into a wrangle with the churches of that city. President William Green had been invited to speak at a Y. M. C. A. meeting and other labor leaders had been asked to occupy ten Detroit pulpits, but these invitations were withdrawn at the instance of the board of commerce and the building trades association, which charged that the aims of the federation were not in harmony with ideals of American patriotism. This was vigorously protested by the federation. The federation voted to organize the automobile industry.

SERIOUS have become the depredations of the European corn borer in Ohio, Michigan and Indiana that the national corn borer committee was called to meet in Chicago for the purpose of devising some plan to check the advance of the pest toward Illinois and Iowa. The insects are advancing westward at the rate of twenty to twenty-five miles yearly. Don Curtis of the Iowa State Agricultural college, who called the committee, says the borer is the most formidable pest that ever has threatened the Midwest and that his invasion of the great hog-raising states would be a dire calamity, since they cannot substitute other crops for corn, as Michigan and Ohio are doing.

WHILE Queen Marie of Rumania was buying beautiful gowns in Paris, our government was laying plans for her reception. The State department announced that she would be met at quarantine in New York on October 18 by Assistant Secretary of State J. Butler Wright and taken to Washington on a special train. The next day President and Mrs. Coolidge will give a dinner in her honor. The story that the queen had accepted any contract to appear in the movies in America was formally denied by a member of her party.

PERSONS who followed with avidity the tortuous course of the Stillman divorce litigation—and their name is legion—were interested to read that James "Eml" Stillman, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Stillman, is engaged to wed Miss Lena Wilson, an eighteen-year-old Scotch-Canadian girl who was a servant in the Stillman house in Canada, as were her two sisters and a brother. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson said they were highly pleased with their daughter's choice. The lad is a student in Princeton university, so the wedding will not take place until next June, after his graduation.

FOR the purpose of promoting commercial aviation the airplane in which Commander Byrd flew over the North pole is making a tour of the country in the course of which it will visit about 40 cities. On the first leg of the journey, from Washington to New York, Byrd was at the controls, but for the rest of the trip the pilot will be Floyd Bennett, who made the polar flight with Byrd. The expenses of the expedition are being defrayed by the Daniel Guggenheim fund, which is acting in co-operation with the Department of Commerce.

PICTURES IN THE HOME

By ALMA ZAISS

SOME years ago, when hands of earnest decorators went up and down our land preaching the gospel of simplicity in hanging pictures, most of us listened. We replaced little herds of passe-partouts that speckled the walls with one or two finer, larger pictures, and gave thanks to the artists for their very good advice.
 In one bold sweep they taught us the law of selection which underlies all true artistic achievement. We learned to choose single pictures whose subjects and colorings enhanced the furnishing scheme of a whole room. We saw the compelling attraction of the unit as contrasted with a scattering effect.
 Now, with the old mistakes of indiscriminate and hodgepodge hanging several in the same room; for groups need the influence of the single pictures to stabilize them. We might liken them to casual friendships which, however necessary and refreshing, hardly take the place of those staunch, lifelong friends that build the foundation of things for us. Let us follow that idea in our use of them for the home.

 Old maps can be as impressive as are great pictures, and today they are not only fascinating because of the story they tell, and beautiful by reason of their mellow old colors; but they are most fashionable, too.
 Decorators will give you a long list of artistic reasons for their revival. First, their appropriateness to almost any scheme of furnishings; in early ing completely out, now, we are to be trusted with groups of pictures again. And it is welcome news to many of us who, in spite of the improvement brought by the reign of single pictures, still cherish a sneaking fondness for groups—felt there was a certain friendliness about them that the lone picture, however lovely, did not possess.

G-H-E-S-T

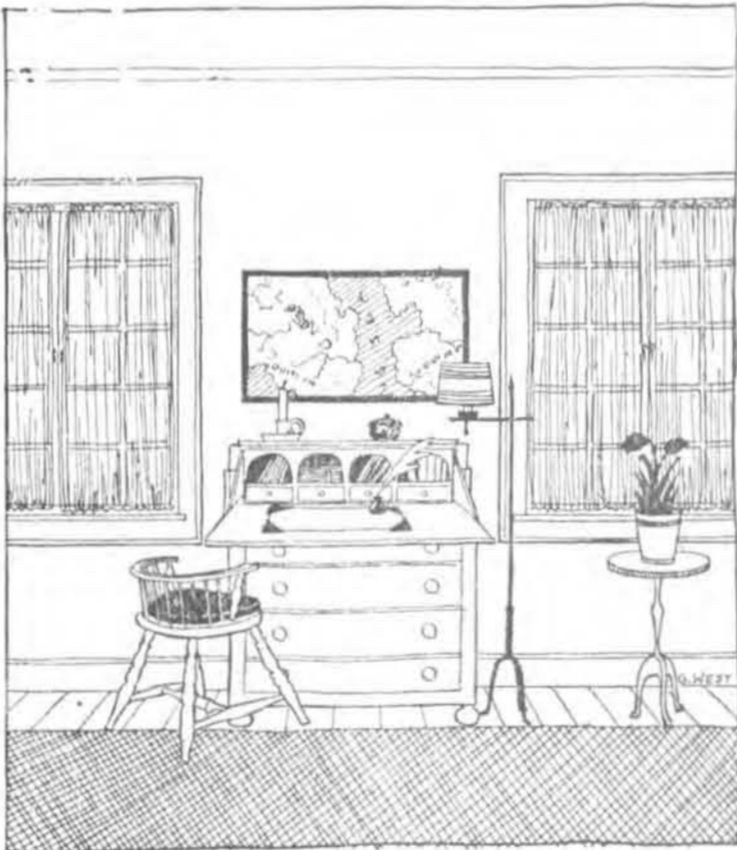

Groups Are "Good."

Properly hung, groups of pictures are delightful. Their modern arrangement most often takes the form of a unit of three or four pictures placed over a dominant piece of furniture such as the dayport, a console table or a heavy chest against the wall. The secretary is a fine anchor for groups placed on either side. The overmental space may have one large American homes, for instance, there was always a map, for the heart of many a loyal colonist cherished dear memories of other lands. Old England and her mighty possessions were not to be so lightly cast out of mind. The exquisite tones in the coloring of maps, and the beauty of the scenery and design, give them high decorative quality.

As for us, what fun to pore over a rare old map and note how far and how fast civilization has traveled since the days of its making!
 Those who are fond of early American furnishings will do well to search the shops for a fine old map, or a good print of one. Frame it in a narrow maple frame, and hang it not too far away from books and the study par-picture and two quite small ones which act as punctuation marks to the larger scene, rather than as pictures of some consequence themselves.

Have You an Old Man in the Attic?

A pictorial screen, with line prints mounted on its panels, offers another good suggestion, and a mirror is the piece de resistance of many a satisfying group.

In building these modern groups great care is taken to have its members nicely related in period, coloring and general treatment, and to see they have harmonizing frames. In size and shape they should avoid too great a variety or too much sameness. On the other hand, and instead of being spread out, hold the pictures fairly close together to better develop the unit idea.

In the room illustrated, for a long time a single landscape had hung over the divan. This year there is this unit of four color engravings, and the landscape is transferred to a bright wall near the window and a great big easy chair. Both changes have given new life and refreshment to the room. Regardless of their charm, it is well to guard against too many groups. One unit is usually more effective than of the room. It will furnish a good stimulant for the imagination as well as a fine bit of atmosphere.

Getting away from this particular period, modern maps have made their appearance in many lovely homes. In any study or library such a map would be well placed, since the colorings are very beautiful, and thus welcome from the artistic standpoint, too. It is like an interesting picture for this and the generations to come.

Elephant Resented Cycle

W. Dillon, assistant collector at Belgaum, India, recently was attacked by a wild elephant, and had an extraordinary escape, says a Bombay correspondent of the London Times.

While riding a motor cycle through the jungle on inspection duty, he suddenly saw a rogue elephant approaching. He stopped the motor, with a view to avoiding the elephant, but it advanced to the attack and smashed his machine to pieces. At this stage another younger elephant arrived on the scene, and also approached Mr. Dillon. It bolted soon afterward in fright, taking the first elephant with it.

Popular Denver Woman Recovers from Illness

Amazing Improvement in Mrs. Wells' Health Surprises Friends. Looks better Than Ever. Says Tanlac Deserves Credit

Thousands of Colorado men and women suffering from nervousness and run-down condition and who are facing a life of pain and despair will discover a way to get quick relief in the experience of Mrs. Belle Wells, 3241 W. Gill Place, Denver, whose recovery from a long siege of suffering surprised her closest friends.
 "If you never feel well and just drag through the days, tired and fagged out; if your stomach rebels at taking food and you spend hours doubled up with pain caused by indigestion; if you are losing weight and feel old—watch out! Get relief before it is too late.
 "A nervous breakdown caused all my trouble. Indigestion, terrible dizzy spells and being unable to sleep sapped my strength.
 "Frantically I sought relief. Nothing helped me. Then after reading about Tanlac I tried this wonderful tonic. The first bottle gave me an appetite. Indigestion disappeared. I arose in the morning refreshed, my nerves calmed down and dizzy spells vanished. I took on weight.
 "Today, I look younger and feel better than I have in years, thanks to Tanlac. It restored my health. I will never be without this tonic."
 Mrs. Wells is only one of thousands who have found relief from pain and gained new strength taking Tanlac which is made from roots, barks and herbs. Heed this advice. Keep well, keep youth and health—take Tanlac.

The GIRL IN THE MIRROR

by Elizabeth Jordan

The graceful writer, Elizabeth Jordan, who has utilized the experiences and observations of her long career as a newspaper woman in New York as a source for fiction plots, is never better than when dealing with romance and adventure in a setting of mystery. Here is one of her most pleasant and satisfactory stories. The characters are delightful, there is a thrill on almost every page and an absolutely unguessable mystery that is not cleared up until the very end.

ARIZONA DECLARES WAR ON THE ROADRUNNER

Phoenix—Wa on the roadrunner, otherwise known as the pascano and chaparral cock, has been declared by the Arizona Game Protective Association. For many years he has been given protection on the basis of an assumed antipathy to the rattlesnake. Tales have been told how the bird built hedges of cactus thorns around sleeping snakes and how the reptiles stung themselves to death after trying to pass the prickly barrier. This is declared a fairy story.

On the other hand, the roadrunner is branded as an enemy of the quail, breaking up nests and eating the eggs, thus destroying the baby quail. It is charged that he kills young chickens in fearless raids on barn yards. The bird, distinguished by his long legs and cocky and upright tail, is often encountered by travelers on Arizona roads.

Herbert—If you refuse me, Madeline, I shall never love another.
Madeline—Ah, that's all very well, but does the promise hold good if I accept you?

You wouldn't marry her for her money, would you?
How else can I get it?

SCHOOL NOTES

(Mary Costello, Editor)

Julia Barcelo and Elmeretta Kane have had the most hundreds in spelling.

The Primary room has been making wagons in construction work and are making fruit and vegetables to fill them.

Several pupils are absent on account of sickness.

The boys of the Third, Fourth and Fifth grades have begun to do work in raffia weaving.

The Third and Fourth grades have started their work for the exhibit.

The Third grade dramatized the story "Two Out of the Bag" for their language work Wednesday. They enjoyed this very much.

The Sixth grade girls are making underalls by hand.

The Third, Fourth and Fifth grades are making holders.

The Fifth grade has started the study of states by groups.

The Seventh and Eighth grade girls are practicing a ghost drill to be given at the Fair.

Those from the grammar school playing in the high school orchestra are Ralph Riggs, Gabriela Perez, Raymond Kin, Clara Valenzuela, Eliza Lewis, Thelma Wilson and Mary Costello.

The whole school is featuring the school district for the exhibit.

Mrs. Fortune is teaching art, Mrs. Carter music, and Mrs. Swyers penmanship in all grades.

Volney Douglas, Gordon Farley and Fidel Valenzuela are going to reconstruct the model of the grammar school for the fair.

FLORIDA'S INSURANCE CLAIMS

In order to expedite payment of loss accruing out of the Florida disaster, the National Board of Fire Underwriters, acting for stock fire insurance companies, has sent a representative to Miami to organize and systematize the thousands of adjustments now pending.

Although there are few, if any, fire losses involved, companies are interested in claims under automobile, flood, windstorm, and other policies.

Underwriters will advise the board of all policies in force in the stricken area, and thus make possible early indemnification of assured persons financially injured by the hurricane and flood. This is modern business service.

GREAT ORE STRIKE IS MADE ON BIG JIM

The Big Jim, ranging from 50 to 125 feet in length. What is known as the Number One ore shoot is the one which is now being cut by the shaft. It is the most southerly known ore shoot on the property, the others being in line along the vein to the north. It is regarded that these ore shoots may unite in depth, as the present "lean" zones between the ore shoots are regarded as places where the porous nature of the vein filling has allowed the mineral content to be leached more rapidly than in the adjoining sections. If this be the case, then the minerals leached from these now "lean" portions will be found to have been re-deposited below the water level.

Drifts and cements will be run from the 250-foot and 350-foot levels, when opened, to develop the entire vein from ore-shoot Number One to and beyond ore-shoot Number Four. This latter being the most northerly known ore shoot. When this work is completed Big Jim will be "sitting pretty" and it will have plenty of water for all milling purposes; it will have more ore than the present mill can handle in many years—and just about then Big Jim will be adding one or two or three more units to what is now called "the first unit of our eventual mill."

City Chap—So you raise all these chickens yourself?

Farmer—Well, I furnish the food, but the hens take charge of their education.

DAUGHTER OF MR. AND MRS. ED ELLIS LAID TO REST

The funeral of Peal A. Ellis who died in Nogales October 11 following an operation for acute appendicitis, was held at the Adobe Church, at Vaughn, on Tuesday, Rev. O. A. Smith of Nogales officiating.

Deceased was born at Vaughn, Arizona, on August 11, 1919, and had lived all of her young life there. Her favorite songs were sung at the funeral service. The pallbearers were close friends and neighbors of the family.

The bereaved family have the sympathy of the community.

P. U. H. S. BOARD OF EDUCATION TO BE ELECTED OCT. 30

The election of five members of the board of education of the Patagonia Union High School district will be held in the several school districts composing the high school district on Saturday, October 30, 1926. For this election the voters need not come to Patagonia to vote, but may vote in their own school district. The election boards for the several school districts will also constitute the board of election for the high school election in each district, the same election board officiating at both elections, at the same time and place. The different election boards will count the ballots after the election and certify the results to the clerk of the board of education at Patagonia, the board of education thereafter canvassing the returns received from all of the school districts.

The qualifications of the voters are the same for each election and are clearly set forth in the laws of this state.

It should be remembered that in this election five members are to be chosen, three of whom must be residents of Patagonia school district and the other two of the outlying parts of the union school district. No one now holding office as a grade school trustee is eligible for membership on the High School Board of Education.

The ballots used have been prepared in accordance with an opinion of the attorney general of Arizona, and will not contain names of any candidate. It will be necessary to designate the term for which the candidate is to serve if elected, and such provision will be made upon the ballots.

NAVY DAY TO BE OBSERVED

Governor Hunt has issued a proclamation designating October 27th as Navy Day, and requesting the people of the state to observe the occasion with appropriate services.

ELGIN NEWS NOTES

The Mexican dance at the Elgin schoolhouse last Saturday night was the largest gathering that Elgin has had for a long time. There were more than 50 people on the floor nearly all night. Americans and Mexicans from Patagonia, Benson, Bisbee, Nogales, and Fort Huachuca were present. Good music was enjoyed and refreshments were fine. All enjoyed the evening and requested Mr. Ortega to give another dance soon.

Hayden Hunt returned Monday from a visit in the northern part of the state and states that it is very dull wherever he went.

Mrs. W. F. Neil is enjoying a visit from her niece, who lives in San Antonio Texas.

Elgin was visited by several soldiers last week.

People along the S. P. road are getting desperate over failure of the company to run its trains from Nogales to Fairbank. The new store has a carload of supplies on the line somewhere and feed is getting short in the warehouse at Elgin.

The nights here are getting real cold as winter approaches.
