PROCLAMATION OF ARMISTICE DAY

WHEREAS, Armistice Day, 1927, marks the ninth anniversary of the ending of the great World War; and

WHEREAS, It is fitting and proper that this day be commemorated and that the high ideas and sentiments which actuated our people during the terrible war should be reviewed; and

WHEREAS, The League of Remembrance in New York City was established to secure the annual simultaneous and universal observance of Armistice Day by two minutes' silence at 11 a. m. on Armistice Day and has requested the governors of each state to cooperate with them in order that those who died in the great war might be honored in a very impressive way.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, George W. P. Hunt, Governor of the State of Arizona, do hereby designate and set aside Friday, November 11, 1927, as Armistice Day, and I call upon the people of Arizona to hold appropriate exercises in commemoration of the signing of the Armistice. And I do further suggest that our people observe a two minutes' silence at 11 a. m. on Armistice Day in honor of those who sacrificed their lives in the World War.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the great seal of the State of Arizona to be affixed.

Had Nothing on Noah
The recent death of E. R. McDonald who warned valley people of the flood which destroyed Johnstown, Pa., in 1889, recalls a story which was popular shortly after that disaster: "The hero of the Johnstown flood" went to heaven and began telling of his brave exploits. One venerable listener appeared bored, then turned on his heel and walked away. When the hero asked who the unappreciative gentleman was, he was told, "That's Noah."

Billy Sunday recently told the women in his congregation to bob their hair if they wanted to. How considerate of him.

American People Not Hard-Boiled, Asserts Postmaster General

Postmaster-General New Scoffs at "Fessimists" Who Insist That Friendship and Brotherly Love Are Things of the Past.

Have the American people become "hard-boiled" and calloused, subordinating friendship, neighborliness, and the social graces and amenities characteristic of a former day to the mad scramble for the almighty dollar?

Postmaster-General Harry S. New does not think so. So strongly does Mr. New feel on the subject, that in a message to Greeting Card Manufacturers gathered from all parts of the United States for the Convention of the Greeting Card Association in session at Atlantic City, he pointed to the thousands of greeting cards going through the mails each year as an argument against those who insist that the age of commercialism and the "devil take the hindmost" precept of modern business has struck a death blow to the happy customs and ideals that once stamped us as the most hospitable of all nations.

In his message to the Greeting Card Association Postmaster-General New takes exception to the plaints of those who feel that human beings in general, and Americans in particular, are less friendly and neighborly than in former days, and that men and women nowadays are too centered in their own activities to bother about friends and neighbors. He added:

YOUTH CLAIMS ITS PART IN ARMISTICE DAY SPIRIT

"Let Youth help shape the World while the Vilon Splendid is still before its Eyes."

That is the watchword of the Junior Red Cross and it forms an appropriate link between Armistice Day and the opening of the annual Red Cross membership rollcall. For the essential spirit of Armistice Day is more than a note of rejoicing when a great war ended and of tender memory for America's heroic dead—it is the spirit which yet will bring about peace between the nations, and Youth will have much to do with accomplishing that end.

There is an interesting feature article on this theme in this issue of The Patagonian. Be sure to read "An Armistice Day Message," by Elmo Scott Watson, elsewhere in this paper.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Chairman of State Institutions Ed- inborough has written County Treasurer Mrs. Ackler the following, and taxpayers are hereby requested to take note:

"Failure to enforce the law relating to collection of penalty and interest on delinquent taxes makes it necessary to advise that the first installment of taxes becomes delinquent at 5 p. m. of the first Monday in November, and that the second installment becomes delinquent at 5 o'clock p. m. on the first Monday in May.

"After these dates it is the duty of the treasurer to impartially apply the legal penalties that attach to delinquency.

"The practice of 'holding the books open' beyond the date fixed by statute must be discontinued, and failure to comply with this instruction will force our department to require treasurers to reimburse the county with the uncollected amounts which are legally chargeable to taxpayers."

Los Angeles, Nov. 3.—(Special to The Patagonian)—It is doubtful if there ever has been a more optimistic feeling in the cattle situation generally than prevails at this time. An actual shortage of cattle is claimed by some in the trade—others are of the opinion that as a matter of fact, there are not enough cattle in the country to prove burdensome, yet there may be nothing about the situation to warrant extremely high prices or talk of anything that might be termed an extreme beef shortage.

During the war period when, both for patriotic reason and under influence of high price, an oversupply was created, the crash which followed as a result of a lower market ruined many good cattlemen and some "in-and-outers." Since that time and up until the past year or so, deflation was in progress. Until 1926 most of the liquidation of cattle was forced because of financial pressure and because of lack of sufficient feed. Personally, it seems to me that in 1926 and early in 1927, the movement of cattle to market had much the appearance of a clean-up of undesirable cattle. The result, at least, is that at the present time, western ranges are pretty well cleaned up of old, worn-out breeding stock and aged steers. The ranges are carrying barely enough young stock to move readily at the markets, and the ranges are reseeded and better feed conditions are developing aided by good rains.

Right at this time, the cattle situation as far as the western producer is concerned, is almost ideal. There is a ready market for everything that can be produced above actual replacement needs, perhaps not at high prices but certainly at satisfactory and profitable prices.

September receipts at the 67 public livestock markets in the United States as shown by the department of agriculture, are 17 per cent fewer than for the 5-year average. Likewise, the slaughter of cattle at those points is 13 per cent smaller than a year ago and 10 per cent smaller than for the 5-year average. Stocker and feeder movement to the country show a decline of 22 per cent from a year ago and a 27 per cent decrease from the 5-year average.

Despite these figures, the principal lesson which might be gathered is that the consumer demand on the Pacific coast is steadily increasing. In the face of admittedly smaller cattle population in the country as a whole, the cattle population in California fails to show a proportionate decrease and a slight increase is noted. Thus it may be gathered that supply and demand have had a great deal to do with regulating the cattle population. There has been no pressing need of cutting down cattle supplies in California because the human population has increased more rapidly than the cattle population.

But the cattle population is now well balanced in ratio to the market requirements in most sections of the country. The best minds in the trade see no reason for any rapid expansion of the cattle supply, but rather feel that the natural output of beef breeding herd will provide all necessary requirements and at satisfactory profits to the industry.

SENATE ROW CAUSED WHEN RIVER RESOLUTION APPEARS

Phoenix, Nov. 3.—The House, in committee of the whole, devoted most of yesterday morning's session to discussion of House Bill No. 11, which authorizes the state highway commission to designate a state route highway extending from the San Pedro river a Benson to Stein's Pass via Wilcox, and carry no appropriation. The latter feature has been deleted by Coxton, author of the bill.

In the Senate a report of the special code convention committee was received and accepted. The modified libbaa ergetdr poe Atm i -BY...e75 bill has agreed to permit Arizona printers a bid on printing the code. Under provisions of the new agreement, the governor will be the deciding factor in awarding the contract for code revision work.

The hottest fight of the session developed yesterday when Senate Bill No. 15, introduced by Akers and Joyner, providing for the creation of the position of director of labor statistics on the industrial commission came before the committee of the whole for discussion. The bill was supported at length by Senator Donnelly, Akers and Joyner, and was strongly opposed by Senators Sutter and Favour.

Senator Sutter, in opposing the bill, stated that the reason there has been no labor trouble among employees of whom Sutter referred, was the fact that the employees had been cowed and coerced by the employers until they were afraid to do anything for self-protection. Senator Donnelly warmly defended the bill and cited numerous instances where such an officer of the state would be of benefit in keeping down dissension between employer and employee.

On motion to indefinitely postpone, the only supporters espousing the cause of labor were Senators Akers, Bettwy, Colter, Donnelly, Joyner and Nelson.

The motion to indefinitely postpone carried. Prospects of adjourning by Friday or Saturday seem probable at this time.

SHELLENBERGER TRIAL DEC. 13

The trial of M. L. Shellenberger, accused of first degree murder in connection with the killing of John Yoas, will be started December 13, according to word from the superior court.

He will be defended by Duffy & Roblin, while the county prosecutor will be assisted by Duane Bird as special prosecutor. Shellenberger has been admitted to bail in the sum of $10,000, which was furnished by several prominent citizens of the county.

U. S. GAME LAWS STRICT

Not only may violators of the game laws in the national forests be prosecuted on a criminal charge, but the government can recover damages to the extent of the value of the game killed. It was reported to the local forest officers by State Game Warden D. E. Pettis in a recent communication.

One hunter killed six quail out of season in a forest near Phoenix recently. He was fined $25 for violation of the state game law. In addition, he was ordered to pay $60 damages for the value of the quail that he had killed, in a civil suit brought by the state.

A fire started by three careless hunters from Phoenix just north of Roosevelt dam in the Tonto Forest resulted in the burning of the hunters' automobile and all of their camping equipment. As an anti-climax, they were fined $10 each for the offense.

One of the first convictions on the "kill no fawn" law was obtained in the case of two hunters who killed several fawns near Springerville.

MINING CLOSE TO AGRICULTURE

Many a farmer legislature has felt it a duty to pass restrictive mine legislation, under the impression that mining is an alien industry that preys upon, instead of cooperates with, agriculture.

The facts are, that mining and agriculture are the closest friends in the whole world of industry. The miner buys everything from the farmer. He produces nothing that the farmer can raise or sell, and the greater the mine prosperity, the higher the price and the more permanent and exclusive the market for farm stuff.

The metal miner produces a commodity that the whole world must buy. Given the chance to expand, he reaches the farthest market in the world with his imperishable products, every pound of which means more farm products bought right at the mine for labor.

In general, the mining men, who come from every walk of life and so are utterly free from class consciousness or prejudices, know what effect their state laws have on their industry. It would be a boon to many a state for the farmer to understand the kinship of mining and agriculture, and try to frame laws to encourage mine development. To think of the miner as a partner of the farmer would work a revolution in many a state.

The Perfect Man Not Popular

The late Lord Northcliffe, famed British publisher, did not believe that a person whose conduct was always perfectly correct amounted to much. He said: "I don't want men around me who are not capable of making a damn fool of themselves once in a while. It is only by such capers they have a true appreciation of the best things in home and business life."

Mussolini to Abolish Holidays

Mussolini is to abolish all holidays in Italy except two, and these must be observed on Sundays. It will be interesting to see how this policy of all work and no play works out. In view of the Latin fondness for holidays and public demonstrations, it is doubtful that the innovation will add to Il Duce's popularity.

WORK AND PLAY

Farm people work too many hours, according to Dr. Seale Harris, one of the south's most prominent physicians, who declares that an eight-hour day is needed on the farm as well as elsewhere.

He thinks that the farmer gets into the habit of working long hours, and consequently does not put forth as effective efforts as he would if he limited his daily period of labor. Dr. Harris says:

"Farmers ought to be encouraged to work strenuously for eight hours a day and then take more rest and recreation, instead of working feebly 15 hours a day, as many of them do."

While most farmers would resent being told that they work "feebly," there is no doubt that when one knows he is going to tick on the job for 15 hours a day he will not exert himself as energetically as he would for a shorter period.

Vigorous work relieved by a liberal amount of rest and recreation seems to be a good formula for health and efficiency.

U. S. Breaks All World's Records For Quality and Mileage of Roads

THE United States has far surpassed every other road building record set by other nations, from Imperial Rome to Modern France," said J. S. Helm, President of the Asphalt Association, New York, in addressing a conference of Paving Technologists on October 11th, in that city, preparatory to the Annual Paving Conference in Atlanta, during the week of November 28th. "Twenty years ago the total amount of money spent on highways in the United States was less than $75,000,000; today it is over $1,200,000,000. Then we had less than one mile of road out of every twenty miles surfaced with anything but mother earth; today we have over 550,000 miles of surfaced highways, or nearly one mile out of every five outside of municipalities. In the single year of 1926 our engineers surfaced some 44,000 miles of highway—a length almost as great as the combined length of all of the Imperial highways of Ancient Rome and 50% greater than the entire mileage of "The Routes Nationales of France."

Thomas H. MacDonald, Chief of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, who will be the principal speaker at the Sixth Annual Asphalt Paving Conference at Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 28-Dec. 2, 1927.

"One of our real problems," said Mr. Helm, "is due to the fact that automobiles have increased in number faster than our amazing road building progress. Some 22,000,000 automobiles or 85% of the world's supply are now using the highways of the United States and the overflow must move out on the secondary roads to relieve the congestion on main routes. Some of these roads have already been made dustless and smooth by an economical use of asphalt, but the work must be undertaken on a vast scale. Another of our present day tasks is to save our 400,000 miles of macadam and gravel roads from destruction and to salvage the $2,500,000,000 investment by using these roads as foundations for new and modern asphalt wearing courses. This is an economic crime to tear up these old roads and thus lose the very genuine value they have as foundations."

Thomas H. MacDonald, Chief of United States Bureau of Public Roads, who since 1919 has directed the huge national road building program of the Federal Government, and who will be the principal speaker at the paving conference, will emphasize the important administrative policies of the Federal Road Bureau and the measures which are expected to prove effective in solving the problem of living.

salvaging our existing highways and taking care of the great mileage of secondary roads.

Hugh W. Skidmore, president of the Chicago Paving Laboratory and President of the Association of Asphalt Paving Technologists, will preside at the opening session on Paving Research, on November 28th. At this session distinct advances in paving technology will be brought out.

Adaptation of city types of pavement, such as are exemplified by the beautiful pavements of Fifth Avenue, New York; Michigan Boulevard, Chicago, and the famous Black Base pavements of Denver, to country highway conditions will be explained at the Engineering Session. Col. Woolsey Finnell, State Director of Highways of Alabama, is chairman of the Engineering Committee.

The conference, which is made up of state, city and county engineers and officials; paving contractors, manufacturers and producers, is the sixth of the series, the 1925 and 1926 conferences having been held in Detroit, Michigan, and Washington, D. C.; respectively in solving the problem of living.

"Over the hills and far away" is not the only tune that this smart little wind-breaker plays. It speaks alluringly of motoring, fishing and tramping, it plays golf with you when the fall days come; it's your dearest friend on a camping trip at any time and the indispensable accompaniment of every girl going off to school or college. Very simple to make it is, in camel's hair, velour, suede cloth, flannel, tweed, corduroy and other sport coatings, with lining of harmonizing sateen or flannel. A plaid flannel lining is particularly sporty and smart. The notched shawl collar, the belt and the patch pockets are all very new and neat; the soft little felt hat with the rather low crown and the medium brim is, by the way, one of the better sport styles. NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Senator Curtis of Kansas Desires to Head the Republican Ticket.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WE NOW have one openly avowed candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination. Charles Curtis, United States senator from Kansas, has informed his friends in that state—and the public at large—that he will be pleased to be the candidate of the Kansas delegation, and with the announcement comes evidence that he is going after the nomination in dead earnest. He believes that he adequately represents the interests of the great West and that as a conservative who, nevertheless, is liberal on many issues, he will be acceptable to the rest of the country.

Senator Curtis came to his decision after President Coolidge had scolded Senator Fess for the latter's insistence on a third term for the present incumbent. This incident convinced the Kansas senator that Mr. Coolidge really would not consent to be drafted and therefore he sent to his boomers a letter in which he said:

"Having served in the house and senate for more than 25 years, I know the great responsibility of the Presidency and the arduous duties of the office. Nevertheless, if my friends of Kansas desire to send a delegation to the next Republican national convention favorable to my nomination, I shall be greatly pleased to be their candidate. However, I will not consent to become a candidate if the delegation is to be selected with a view of voting for me for a few ballots as a 'favorite son.' As I stated when the question was first to be put to me, I will not allow myself to be used as a stalking horse for anyone."

Already there are Curtis for President clubs in every county in Kansas, and the movement in his favor has many followers in Missouri and Oklahoma. He will have the solid Kansas delegation back of him, and in Washington it is considered that even if he does not get first place on the ticket he will be in position to do effective trading that may get him the vice presidential nomination.

Growth of the Norris boom, which is fostered by the radical Republicans and supported by Senator Borah, is admittedly hurting Lowden's prospects in the West.

DETROIT has been enjoying a spectacular majority campaign that has attracted the attention of the whole country. Mayor John W. Smith, candidate for re-election, is an avowed prohibitionist and declares prohibition never can be enforced and is the greatest force for evil in America today. If he is re-elected, a liberal policy will continue in Detroit, and many of the city's big business men support him because, they assert, that policy has greatly benefited the city, especially in the way of attracting hundreds of national conventions. Opposing Smith is John C. Lodge, candidate of the city council and before that a member of the legislature and a newspaper man. He declined to do any campaigning and says little or nothing on the subject of prohibition.

CAROL, former crown prince of Rumania, decided that perhaps he should be placed on the throne and so wrote a bunch of letters to his leading supporters and Rumanian politicians stating his position. These were entrusted to M. Manolescu, former undersecretary of state, who was arrested with the documents in his possession. Determined to suppress any movement to enthrone Carol, the government grabbed hundreds of his friends in various parts of the country, and put Rumania under martial law with large bodies of troops placed in strategic positions and a strict censorship established. Premier Bratianu announced that the plot had been entirely squelched, but at this writing the news that is seeping across the border indicates that the Carol movement is assuming more alarming proportions. Opponents of the government in Bukharest were said to be greatly aroused, especially after it was reported that Bratianu intended to arrest Julia Manin, leader of the national peasant party.

General Avarescu, once the ally of Bratianu but now his enemy, is credited with starting this Carolist movement. The prince is at St. Malo on the French seacoast. Recently he ostentatiously separated from Magda Lupescu, for whom he deserted his wife. It is said that among the seized letters was one from Magda to her parents saying the announcement of her break with "a dear friend" was a formality only.

EIGHTY miles off the Brazilian coast opposite Porto Segura, the boilers of the Italian liner Principessa Mafalda, from Genoa to Rio de Janeiro, exploded and the vessel went to the bottom in less than four hours. Fortunately the sea was calm and the steamer's radio calls for help brought several other steamships to the rescue, so that of the 900 passengers and crew of 240 all but 68 were saved. Most of the passengers were Italian emigrants who were celebrating their arrival when the accident occurred. The captain and crew are credited with great heroism and coolness in preventing a panic and getting many of their charges launched in lifeboats. The French liner Formosa was the first ship to arrive in response to the S. O. S. call, and her commander's daring exploit in maneuvering close to the Mafalda and taking 110 persons from her decks before she sank was hailed by the survivors as being one of the great deeds in the annals of the sea.

COLORADO'S coal mine strike, which is managed by the Industrial Workers of the World, is becoming more serious. Two of the state's largest coal fields are closed and new mines are involved daily. The leaders persist in picketing mines despite the law and court injunctions and up to this time they have done this peacefully, though they threaten to "march through the state with cannon" if any of their pickets are killed. Governor Adams says the strikers are violating the state law which prescribes that thirty days' notice shall be given before a walkout, and he will not deal with the members of the I. W. W. which Colorado does not recognize as a bona fide labor organization. The governor, however, has declined so far to send troops into the field, stating that the county officials must preserve order until they are ready to admit that they are unable to do so. The people of Colorado fear a repetition of the civil warfare that swept the state in 1913 and 1914, culminating in the battle of Ludlow. The miners demand a wage increase from $5.50 a day to $8.50, an eight-hour day and a five-day week.

REAR ADMIRAL MAGRUDER, who was so presumptuous as to criticize the management of the navy in a magazine article, was relieved of his command at Philadelphia by Secretary of the Navy Wilbur and ordered to report to Washington because he had "talked too much" since the publication of that article. "I do not feel," the secretary said, "that the secretary of the navy should be compelled to get information from naval officers concerning plans for the navy organization by obtaining newspapers or magazines in which such information is published. Such officers are paid by the government to render this service to the people and such information should be presented to regularly constituted authority by appropriate channels."

Admiral Magruder sent to President Coolidge a letter asking for a revocation of the order detaching him from duty at Philadelphia, but the chief executive declined to interfere or to see the admiral.

FALL and Sinclair won a point in their trial in Washington for conspiracy to defraud the government when the court ruled out the testimony given in the senate oil inquiry. Much of the evidence last week was concerned with the Liberty bond payments allegedly made to Fall by Sinclair. Though unable to connect Sinclair directly with this transaction, the government sought to prove that he was interested in the Continental Trading Company, Ltd., of Canada; that with profits from this concern $300,000 in Liberty bonds were purchased, $200,500 of which went to M. T. Everhart, Fall's son-in-law, and that Everhart with part of this paid off debts of companies in which Fall was interested, and turned over bonds valued at $90,000 to Fall direct.

A volume of evidence to support the government's contention that deception and secrecy surrounded the Fall-Sinclair transaction was laid before the jury. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., assistant secretary of the navy at the time the lease was signed, detailed what he understood to be the policy of the navy on the disposition of the oil reserves. He declared he did not learn that the entire Teapot Dome area was to be opened by leasing until some time after the Fall-Sinclair negotiations were consummated. His understanding was that only off-set wells were to be drilled.

THURSDAY, the birthday of Theodore Roosevelt, was celebrated throughout the country as navy day. Naval vessels, navy yards and stations were all open and many navy officials delivered addresses. The keynote of the day was "Develop American sea power and merchant marine."

DWIGHT MORROW, our new ambassador to Mexico, arrived in Mexico City and was warmly greeted by Mexican and American residents alike, all of whom feel that he will go far toward ending the uncomfortable relations existing between the two nations. On Saturday President Calles formally received Mr. Morrow in the great hall of ambassadors and by his order there were present the entire cabinet, members of the foreign relations department and all military officers not on duty elsewhere. The American Chamber of Commerce, the American club and many leading business men also attended.

FIFTEEN universities in the United States are openly teaching socialist beliefs, while proponents of communism and internationalism are using the Federal Council of Churches, the Y. M. C. A., the League of Women Voters and college organizations to foster distrust of the government, according to Fred Marvin of New York. He made this statement in an address before the annual convention of the Reserve Officers' Association of the United States in Milwaukee.

"Those engaged in subversive work against the government are using the Y. M. C. A. with great effect to further their ends," Mr. Marvin declared. "The leaders in this work are secretaries of the organization who were in Russia during the revolution. While this is being done without the consent or knowledge of the great bulk of men and women who support the organization, the proponents of communism are in executive positions and are having their own way."

Relative to the League of Women Voters and the Federal Council of Churches, Mr. Marvin said: "These are high-class organizations formed by high-minded persons, but in some localities they have been misled into supporting the policies of the subversive forces. The Y. M. C. A. and the Federal Council of Churches are innocently led to support those who seek to destroy the government in the belief that the propaganda is tending to advance the teachings of Christ and promoting world peace."

BANKERS of the United States, at their annual convention in Houston, Texas, devoted a lot of attention to flood control and agricultural relief, on both of which they urged legislation. Thomas Ross Preston of Chattanooga, Tenn., was elected president.

Mayor Thompson of Chicago, who has been hallyhooping about flood control, received a letter from Representative Cole of Iowa asking him not to "make vaudeville stuff" out of efforts to solve the Mississippi river problem. What assistance the congressmen are in need of, Mr. Cole said, ought to be supplied by scientists and engineers, "and not by mass meetings assembled by running excursion trains." He added that brass bands or big sticks would not be needed by the house in considering the subject.

ARGUE BRUTALITY IN PRIZE FIGHTS

Two Noted Englishmen Have Joined in Battle.

Is the manly art of prize fighting a "debauch of brutality?" Or is it a "fine exhibition of courage and perseverance?"

On this momentous issue, two of the most noted figures in English public life have joined battle, and the fight is raging with all rhetorical fury of epithets and counter-epithets, exclamations, asterisks and double under-scoring. The debate was opened after a recent boxing contest. The contest was heavily publicized in the London newspapers. Sir Hall Caine, writing in the Daily Express, denounced the exhibition in the most vitriolic terms. Answering Sir Hall Caine's attack, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle set forth a strong defense of boxing in a letter he wrote to the same journal.

As long as disputes over the merits and demerits of pugilism were confined to sporting circles and an outer fringe of other figures interested in sporting events, little attention was paid to the discussions by the general British public. But now that famous figures in the literary world have joined issue over prize fighting, British newspaper readers are rallying to the standards of the two sides, and the contest rages merrily on. In his article, Sir Hall Caine wrote:

"Is it not time some man who can speak with the authority of the public conscience should call a halt to such orgies of savage, corrupt and degrading inhumanity?"

"I call for such a man to say, in the sacred name of humanity, that these gross exhibitions of merciless savagery and of loathsome trafficking in human suffering must once for all come to an end in England."

Conan Doyle, referring to the contest which caused the flare-up of public comment, stated:

"I think that when war has been brought to an end, those rougher sports may also be discontinued, but until that day—which is, I think, far off—we are bound to encourage manly and virile qualities of every kind among our population."

"I rejoice to think that boxing is taken up by most of our public schools and in the army, and I believe there are few religious efforts dealing with the youth of our cities which do not include a gymnasium and boxing instructor."

"That a weaker man should be beaten by a stronger man would indeed be intolerable, but when we have two men of equal weight and equal experience, either of whom can surrender of his own free will, I see no reason why we should raise any cry of brutality."

Young Eddie Plank Pitched First Ball

Eddie Plank, Jr., eleven years old and tall for his age, pitched the first ball in the game played at Shibe park between the Philadelphia Athletics and the Phillies, for the benefit of the Eddie Plank memorial gymnasium at Gettysburg college.

Word from the boy that he wanted to stand on the same mound and throw one ball from the same hill where his illustrious father wrote glorious chapters of baseball history for himself and for the Athletics, induced those in charge of arrangements to acquiesce to the boy's wishes.

California Leader

The photograph shows Capt. Fritz Colton of the University of California football team. Much is expected of the California gridder this fall.

Jamieson Was Liberal

Charley Jamieson, Cleveland's left fielder, was in a generous frame of mind during one of the Yanks-Indians games. Joe Dugan hit a fly ball to left. Charley ran over to make the catch, but the ball was hovering pretty near the stands and he feared to try for it with both hands. He stuck up his gloved hand, deflected the ball into the box nearby, and Joseph ambled around the bases for a home run. A fan shouted:

"Hey there, Mr. Official Scorer, who gets credit for that homer, Dugan or Jamieson?"

New Records in Next Scrap

Tex Rickard.

$1,400,000 by promoting fights in spite of the suggestion from many that Tunney is by no means the box office attraction that Dempsey was, Rickard is likely to make more money under Gene than he made under Jack.

As for Gene's next opponent, Rickard spiked the reports that he was definitely planning a third engagement between Tunney and Dempsey with a declaration that he intended to conduct a series of elimination bouts this winter, the winner to meet Tunney next summer.

"I am not considering a third Tunney-Dempsey fight," Rickard said. "But I would be glad to have Dempsey enter the elimination series, and if he comes through on top, then there certainly would be no better man to meet Tunney."

"At any rate, we'll have a light next year if we can find some one to give Tunney a good fight."

Gene, who was sitting near enough to hear Rickard's comments, added a touch of spice to the proceedings by suggesting:

"Or maybe a good licking."

Fellowship Best Thing in Golf, Says Bobby

Having exhausted their vocabulary in praise of his golfing record, admirers of Bobby Jones recently called upon the American amateur and British titleholder to tell himself, what the game has meant to him at the annual dinner in his honor at Atlanta, Ga.

"Golf means fellowship," he declared. "It bridges the gap of generations. It is the only game I know where a father and his son may meet on exactly an equal basis; where the good player and the duffer may compete on the keeness terms. I know that I can meet men a hundred times, on a business basis or on a social footing, and never know them. But once you go out on the golf course with a man and play the game with him, you know him. Golf to me has meant, and always will mean, a test of real friendships, beside which all other successes of life are negligible. Of course, it is a great thing in my life. But the greatest thing in golf is fellowship."

Rancor Inspired Jack Sharkey in Maloney Go

One must not lose sight of certain significant phases of the Sharkey-Maloney scrap. It contained elements that drew a new plan of battle from Sharkey which he may never flash again.

In the first place it was distinctly a "grudge" fight, strange as it may seem in these days of highly commercialized ring fighting. Either would almost have forfeited the entire purse rather than lose. And this not because of what mere victory meant in terms of dollars and cents to a battle with Tunney. Genuinely had blood seemed to exist between the gladiators.

This personal friction undoubtedly had a great deal to do with Sharkey's impressive display. It inserted a viciousness in this fighting that had been almost entirely absent in other performances by the same man. His rancor and bitterness toward Maloney flavored his punches with a new sting.

Out in a "Transom"

Howard Camp, the outfielder, tells this one on a former hurler in the Southern league: "One day," Howard avers, "when this pitcher was working, the score was tied and a man on third in the thirteenth inning. Our young hero went to sleep out on the mound and allowed the runner to steal home and break up his ball game."

"What was the matter with you, Johnny?" the befuddled manager inquired.

"I don't know, Jim, I guess I was out there in a transom."

TEX RICKARD launched his campaign for a new record in heavyweight prize fights. It may or may not bring Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey together for a third battle.

Rickard is certain of only one thing—that Tunney's next defense of his world's championship will be under Tex's promotion.

Rickard is not prepared to say who Gene's opponent will be.

Neither is he ready to announce in what city the next extravaganza will be held, although he favors New York.

But he is hoping that whatever the details may be, it will provide a new record in attendance and gate receipts, and that Tunney's reign as king of the heavies will prove even more profitable to him than did Dempsey's.

Tex is willing to admit that he reaped a harvest of approximately which Dempsey engaged, and defollowers of the fight game that Tunney is by no means the box office attraction that Dempsey was, Rickard is likely to make more money under Gene than he made under Jack.

"I am not considering a third Tunney-Dempsey fight," Rickard said. "But I would be glad to have Dempsey enter the elimination series, and if he comes through on top, then there certainly would be no better man to meet Tunney."

"At any rate, we'll have a light next year if we can find some one to give Tunney a good fight."

Gene, who was sitting near enough to hear Rickard's comments, added a touch of spice to the proceedings by suggesting:

There Garth and Etienne found them, the alreadie lying beside his kill. Etienne bent to stare, with an oath, into the features, knotted in their death grimace, of—Joe Mokoman.

"Ambush us, eh?" snarled the half-breed. "You do fine job, Joe Mokoman." And he spurned the body with the bow of his snowshoe.

"So he meant to get that fur if he had to bury us in the snow?" said Garth, turning from the ugly picture to his dog, still whining with the heat of battle. "Good old Shottle!" And the man hugged the hairy shoulders of his friend. "You tracked him down for Garth, didn't you, old comrade of mine?"

"He dam good doz, Shot, eh?" cried Etienne, slapping the shaggy back. He knew more dan some men; he know Joe, he hunt us."

"He thought Joe was a German sharpshooter, didn't you, Shot?" And seated on the snow, Garth rocked to and fro, rubbing the ears of his dog, soothing his excitement in the low notes of a language none but the wriggling alreadie understood.

"Wal, we buree dis skunk een de snow and let m'kieu' fur deeg him out."

"That's all we can do. He must have heard from the travelling Indians we were bound for the Canoe and decided to stop us. Do you suppose that McDonald knows we are here and wicked him on us?"

Etienne shook his head. "He bin up dis end de islan', so de hunter say."

"I'm sorry this happened," said Garth. "There's no telling what kind of a tale they'll make of it. I wish a sled would show up so we could show our evidence."

"Ef we stay on islan' after McDonald's hear bees man een dead, we have to fight for sure."

"I'm not afraid of McDonald," laughed Garth, "but I don't want the Indians drawn into the fight. We're here for fur, not trouble, and I'll have to answer to my superiors for what happens. That's why I want you to be careful when we meet Souci. No fighting—understand?"

Savanne nodded. "De hunter know Etienne Savanne," said the half-breed with finally. "Deey woid not start trouble' wid beem."

"All right! Now let's make tracks for the Canoe and that medicine lodge of Souci's."

With their snowshoes, they heaped a mound of snow over the body of the skulker in the spruce, to be found by the lynx and foxes, and started. At noon the team turned down into the valley of the Canoe.

In the windbreak of the spruce on the shore of the frozen river, the men from Elkwan found the tips of the hunters. From north and east and south had come the fox trappers with their families for the great medicine making of Souci, the shaman. The wigwams hummed with gossip of the crossing of the strait by the tall factor of Elkwan to fight for the trade with McDonald! Ha! Ha! From valley to valley Mokoman had traveled, urging the hunters to go to the schooner. Black Breatht, too, and Skene had visited many of the camps, but as yet the wily hunters had sold little fur, hoping by their seeming reluctance to obtain higher prices. Also, in the last few days, rumors, vague and terrifying, had claimed. A hunter from the Ptarmigan advised he had been down to the hills above Seal cove and seen fire dancing on the masts of the boat at night; that black magic was being made by the man with the face of a mad wolverine. Another swore that his cousin, trapping on the Calling river, had been to the schooner and heard devil music from a box. An old squaw had already planted panic among the women with a story that bewitched hunters would leave McDonald's ship to desert their wives and children.

All this and more the industrious Etienne gathered from the gossiping Crees from the Elkwan while Garth made camp and fed and chained the dogs. His seeds, planted with such care in the camps of the Ptarmigan and Rabbit, had indeed sprouted, were in fact already bearing fruit. The Crees were ill at ease—suspicious of these strangers who had come to the island with their smiles and trade goods, and in the conjury of old Saul, that night, they hoped and waited for the advice and assurance that it would be safe as well as wise for them to carry their fox pelts to the schooner at Seal cove.

As for the old shaman, Etienne learned that he was camped downstream, beside his medicine lodge, alone, preparing himself for communion with his conferees, the spirits which, that night beneath the stars, he would summon with his magic to speak to the Crees, and remove from their hearts the doubts and fears which harassed them.

"Ah-hah!" mused Etienne as he returned to Garth, busy cooking supper. "Old Saul, he keep away; he not see Etienne Savanne." But, gratifying as was the news he had picked up among the gossiping hunters, Savanne knew his Indians, and feared what the night would bring forth. For the old wizard was past master in the art of playing on the superstitions of the Crees, and with his incantations and mumbo-jumbo would doubtless persuade them into starting at once for Seal cove.

But Etienne had no intention of giving ing Souci a free hand. Secretly, before the ceremony, and openly, when Souci from the tent delivered the admonitions of the spirits, he would brand the old man as the hreling of McDonald, friend of devils. If the outraged Saul dared to start trouble, this might be dangerous to the Crees in a high state of excitement, but the arm of the company was long, its hand heavy, and Etienne Savanne, his servant, fanned as a fighter the length of the coast. So the prospect of trouble gave Etienne little concern, but the loss of twenty thousand dollars in fur, which the Crees had with them, would be little short of a calamity. On his return to his tent, his active mind groped for the best method of, that night, hanging the shaman with his own rope.

"Well, what did you hear?" asked Garth. "Did you see Saul?"

"No, he keep ver' quiet. De Cree have mooch fur, and manee of de men would go to McDonald, but de squaw have fear of devil. A feller by de name of Savanne, he tell de squaw down on de Ptarmigan some bad story, also up on de Rabbit, an' eet mak' dem squaw ver' nervous." Etienne smiled at the success of his efforts.

"That was certainly a good bit of strategy, Etienne, but you say the men are now wabbling in favor of the schooner?"

He Returned to Garth, Busy Cookin' Supper.

"Ah-hah. I tink dat Souci, wid hees spirit, weel beat us tonight."

"We've got to think of something to do—we can't let him get away with all the fox in this camp, man!" urged Garth, handing his friend a heaping plate of beans and bacon.

As Etienne ate, his swarthy face was grave with the problem confronting him. What could he do? He even considered secreting himself in the medicine tent downstream, blind and gagging the old man as he entered, and playing shaman himself. But the danger of discovery by the outraged Crees would be too great. Failure would make matters even worse.

The medicine rite was to take place under the moon, which was late, so deep in council of war lingered white man and half-breed, until the silver disk rode above the white tundra already lit by low-swinging stars. Then Etienne returned from a short reconnaissance to report the hunters and squaws already moving to the rendezvous downstream where a fire glowed in the spruce. Small and cylindrical in shape, its tanned caribou-hide walls painted in red and black with the shapes of animals, the sun, and gr-earth, each bearing a gift and a hope. "The glow of adventure was in their eyes, and in their hearts the glory of hope.

"And out of the bounty of earth and the labor of men;

"Out of the longing of hearts and the prayer of souls;

"Out of the memory of ages and the hopes of the world.

"God fashioned a nation in love, blessed it with purpose sublime, and called it America."

Mythology's Meaning

Mythology may be described as a collection of fables and traditions referring to the forces of nature, to national heroes and to the pagan gods. The nature-myths are primitive attempts to explain the processes of nature, and may be looked upon as the beginning of natural science. The heromyths are akin to sacred mythology.

ing faces of the spirit friends of the conjurer, the medicine lodge stood a short distance from the fire. Gathered in the warmth of the blazing logs, shawed women and hooded hunters, heads together, conversed in low tones.

Higher over the tundra above the valley, the moon uswing through the star-inkrusted heavens. It was a night for magic, and as his curious eyes shifted from the awed Crees to the medicine tent, Gutirre despaired of the efforts of Etienne, in such a setting to nullify the necromancy of old Saul. Moon and stars and the aurora joined with the purple shadows to lend invincible enchantment to the arts of the sorcerer. These simple children of the snows, bewitched by the mystery and magic of the night, would fall willing victims to the voices of the spirits.

The muttered exclamation of Etienne at his side aroused him. "Dere he go."

Faintly, to the measured tapping of a caribou-hide drum, from the tent lifted low wailing. Seizing the arms of their men, the women at the fire stiffened. Swart faces went gray.

Gradually the wailing drifted into a sing-song, which, accompanied by the shell rattle, rhythmically swelled and died. Suddenly the song ceased. Growls and snarls, whines and mewling—the lickerling of benests—filled the forest. Shrieks of a mating wolverine followed the enterwauling of a lynx. A wolf howled, lonely for his kind. From a September ridge drifted the moaning call of a cow moose. In a swamp a bittern chugged, a whooping crane started with his trombone-like blast. From the gloom drifted the hoot of the snowy owl. Down wind, in full cry, swept waxes and Canadas, blue geese and brant. Through a repertory of the voices of the night and the sunlit forest wandered the ventriquist in a marvelous imitation of nature.

Gutirre turned in surprise to Etienne. "He's a wonder!"

"Wait!" was the laconic reply. Then, amid groans and eerie cries, shrieks, as of souls in torment, the whimper of children, sobs of women in anguish, men tortured, the voice of the shaman addressed the spirits he had conjured from the world of demons. His kinsmen, the Crees, were in great doubt and perplexity, and had begged him to call upon his familiar spirits, who saw into the future as one looks from a hill; to whom the devils seeking to destroy the Cree were as children—harmless. "The hunters," continued the shaman, "possessed much fur—"

Etienne's hand gripped Garth's arm, as he interpreted the speech of Saul. "Now he mek' de spirit tell dem to go to McDonald!"

"—Fur of much value which they have tolled for on the cold barrens where the wind always blows," the sepulchral voice went on. "It is the time to go to the traders for the New Year's feast. But the hearts of the hunters are troubled. At the schooner the trader who waits at Seal cove, the Crees have been told evil spirits and devils wait to bewitch them. And the women have begged their men to take their fur across the ice to Elkwan."

With a puzzled look Etienne stared into Garth's eyes.

"What he do now? I don' understand," whispered the half-breed.

Garth waited, hardly breathing, through the silence which followed. Then, on the hushed night boomed a voice, hollow, sepulchral.

"Oh, Souci! Great Shaman of the Crees! It is well you call us to warn your people. There has come to the island a sorcerer from a far country—to destroy the hunters of Akhmsk!"

"By gar!" And the fingers of Etienne shut like a bear trap on the arm of the man beside him. "We are de beeg fool!" he muttered, interpreting the reply of the spirit to the unsuspecting Garth.

"This conjurer," went on the voice from the tipi, as the listening Indians gasped with surprise and fear, "was bitten in the face by the devil, Match-Manitou, himself. He is the friend of demons and woe to the Crees who bring their fur to him, for their wives will see them no more."

"Ahuh! Ahuh!" From the women at the fire rose a low wail as they clung in panic to the cowed hunters.

"Go not to Seal cove but across the ice, for there the Crees may trade and feast in safety."

The voice died. Presently another answered in the same vein, and yet another, while the astonished and ashamed Etienne and Gutirre, who had so lightly accepted the treachery of old Saul as a proved fact, electrified by the swift turn of fortune, listened with admiration and gratitude. With the artistry of a master, Saul had played upon the known weaknesses of his people, relying on the mysteries of the medicine lodge rather than on his personal influence—winning the squaws by the judicious planting of rumors, as had Etienne, and stampeding the men with a single stroke at the medicine rites, for no Indian who heard that unearthly voice from the tipi would now dare to trade with McDonald.

"The old son-of-a-gun," clucked Garth. "He went to that ship to throw them off the scent and keep them away from this end of the island. He gets a life job with the company for this night's work."

In an overwaid, whispering group, the hunters and their squaws returned to their tipis, where deep into the night was discussed the marvel of the spirit voices, which the great magician of the Elkwan had invoked for the safety and guidance of his people.

In the privacy of their tent the two men, still dazed by the unhelped success of their mission to the island, gossiped by the fire.

"Forty-six silvers and eighteen black, besides a lot of cross and patch, you say?" Garth repeated, elated with the trade that would come that Christmas to Elkwan.

"Ah-hah! Wor twenty thousand dollar—de beeggest trade Elkwan evair mak'. We do good job wen we breeag Saul Souci from de headwater, w'at?"

"You and Saul turned the trick, Etienne. I can't thank you enough."

In his second year in the trade Garth had made a telling business stroke. In the face of the higher prices of the free-trader—of what seemed inevitable failure, he had, with the help of the crafty old Cree, swung a huge trade to his company. They could hug their fire at Kapiskuk and Attawapiskat, but he had carried the fight straight to the enemy, and had won. Going out to Shot, snug in his snow-hole, Garth poured his happiness into a hairy and comprehending ear, before he rolled into his blankets beside the staunch half-breed who had made it possible.

AMOS PLEADS FOR JUSTICE

LESSON TEXT—Amos 5:1-27.
GOLDEN TEXT—Let judgment run down as waters and righteousness as a mighty stream.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Treating Everybody Right.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Kind of Man God Hears.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Squaring for God Against the Crowd.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Conditions of Divine Approval.

I. Israel's Desolation Predicted (vs. 1-3).

Amos lamented over the doom which was to overtake the nation. Israel is called a virgin because she had never been subdued by any foreign nation (see Isa. 23:12). Her falling to rise no more sets forth the utter desolation and helplessness to which the Assyrians subjected the nation. From this captivity Israel never returned. Those who came back from the Babylonian captivity were largely from Egypt.

II. The Call to Return to God.
God through the prophet says, "seek ye me and ye shall live." The implication is that while the divine judgments are not executed, an opportunity is offered for them to turn to God. In their turning to God they were to renounce:

1. Idolatry (vs. 5, 6).
They were to turn away from the places of idolatry—Bethel, Gilgal and Beersheba. God's judgment was to strike these places.

If they would not come to Him for life He would be their destroyer. "Our God is a consuming fire." The only one who can give life to those who seek Him is the one who shall destroy.

2. Cease to pervert judgment (v. 7).

"Turn judgment to wormwood" implies the bitterness of the perversion of justice to the injured.

3. Cease to detrone righteousness. "Leaving off righteousness" is thought to mean that unrighteousness was allowed to take its place. In this third exhortation the Lord's name is given with the following statement of some of His works:

1. "Maketh the seven stars and Orion;" 2. "Turneth the shadow of death into morning;" 3. "Maketh the day dark with night;" 4. "Calleth for the waters of the sea and poureth them out upon the earth," both in rain and deluge; 5. "Strengthened the spoil against the strong."

III. The Sins Committed by the Wicked Nation (vs. 10-15).

1. They hated the Judge who condemned their wicked practices (v. 10).

2. They abhorred him that spoke uprightly (v. 10).

This most likely referred to the prophets themselves who told them of their sins and urged uprightness of life.

3. They trampled upon the poor (v. 11).

The rich built magnificent houses out of the proceeds extorted from the poor.

4. They afflicted the just (v. 12).

This they did by taking a bribe.

5. They turned aside the poor in the gate (v. 12).

Because they had no money the poor were turned aside.

It was most difficult for the poor to get justice. The times were so evil that the prudent would best keep silence.

IV. The Conduct of the Righteous (vs. 14, 15).

No condition in the world, religious, social or political can become so difficult that the righteous are shut off from help. The righteous can:

1. Seek God (v. 14).

Those who seek God shall have with them the Lord God of Hosts.

2. Hate the evil (v. 15).

Evil must be hated. The sin question must be settled before God can bestow His blessings.

3. Establish judgment in the gate.
It was the custom in that day for the courts of justice to sit in the gate of the city. The prophet urges upon them the responsibility to place honorable men in charge of public affairs.

V. The Judgment to Fall (vs. 16-20).
There is coming a day of retribution. Justice and right shall be vindicated. This will be realized in the day of the Lord (II Thessa 1:7-10; James 5:7). All wrong shall be righted at that time. May we earnestly pray, "thy kingdom come."

VI. Worship Without Holiness of Life an Abomination to God (vs. 21-27).

Sacrifices, observance of feast days and singing, when the heart is out of fellowship with God, is most displeasing to Him.

Two Different Things
The love of God and the world are two different things. If the love of this world dwell in thee, the love of God forsakes thee; renounce that, and receive this; it is fit that the nobler love should have the best place and acceptance.

House Not Made With Hands
The tent-life is the true life until the building of God, the "house not made with hands" is erected. Phil. Ugo Brooks.

The Baptist state convention will convene at Carlsbad for a four-day session, beginning November 8. Several hundred delegates are expected, and a feature of the religious services will be a visit to Carlsbad Cavern on November 11.

A tract of 409 acres of government land in Taos county, New Mexico, will be opened to entry by qualified ex-servicemen, November 7, under the homestead and desert land laws. The land is in the Santa Fe district, and some of it is said to be suitable for agricultural purposes.

Vic Griffith, for a number of years assessor of Pima county, Arizona, and John Pfeiffer, his deputy during the latter years of his term of office, were indicted individually and jointly on charges of embezzlement by the Pima county grand jury at Tucson. The 10 indictments cover a total of $9,030.11.

New Mexico sends out approximately $35,000,000 a year for food and stock feed, a large part of which might be produced in the state. Prof. Dan H. Otis of the American Bankers' Association agricultural commission told the New Mexico Bankers' Association convention at Deming.

The New Mexico Home and School for Mental Defectives, which has been sponsored by the New Mexico Federation of Women's Clubs, is soon to be built, probably at Los Lunas. Mrs. Grace Thorpe Bear of Roswell, president of the school board, said in a message to club women at Alamogordo.

The Rhodes No. 1 well, largest gas well yet brought in in New Mexico, which is in the extreme southeastern part of Lea county, will be completed as a gas well. It is announced by Texas Production Company officials of Roswell. At the depth of 3,160 feet the well is making an estimated flow of 50,000,000 feet daily.

George Shultz, diversion damkeeper at Lensburg, near Las Cruces, is trying to trace the history of a flintlock rifle found by him in the rough country of the Caballo mountains. He and a companion were rounding up cattle when he saw the gun leaning against a rock, apparently as it was left by the owner nearly a century before.

The Indian women of Santa Clara, New Mexico, are entering upon a new era. Under a peace pact just agreed upon by the so-called progressive and conservative factions of the tribe, between which a feud had existed for 30 years, women will no longer have to help the men clean the Pueblo streets. Their place, it was agreed, is in the home.

A. H. Gerdeman, Las Vegas, was elected president, and Tucumcari was chosen as the 1928 convention city by the New Mexico Bankers' Association at the close of its three-day meeting in Deming. SHE WENT FROM BAD TO WORSE

Down to 98 Pounds—Finally Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cleveland, Ohio.—"After having my first baby, I lost weight, no matter what I did. Then a doctor told me I would be better if I had another baby, which I did. But I got worse, was always sickly and went down to 98 pounds. My neighbor told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it helped her very much, so I tried it. After taking four bottles, I weigh 116 pounds. It has just done wonders for me and I can do my housework now without one bit of trouble."

Youth Was "Loaded"

Paul Muller, a German youth of seventeen years, is serving a jail sentence of four months on a charge of burglary, at Shanghai, China. Police refer to Muller as a "walking arsenal and bar." When arrested he was weighted down with 150 rounds of ammunition, two pistols, 18 bottles of beer, two bottles of whiskey, one bottle of gin, six bottles of soda water, two tumblers, six forks, six knives and eight claret glasses. Muller said he "found" the goods.

Apparently Contradictory

Recently I attended an evening party where "chili con carne" was served. During the repast the five-year-old daughter of the family looked up and said: "Daddy, why do we call it chili when it is so hot?"—Exchange.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Frequentness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

Let Youth help shape the World while the Vision Splendid is still before it's Eyes

1918 10th ANNIVERSARY 1928

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

It is peculiarly appropriate that the annual membership roll call of the American National Red Cross should begin on Armistice day, November 11. For there is no other organization in the world which better exemplifies the essential spirit of Armistice day than that which knows no race nor creed nor color—nothing but the need of suffering humanity. So when the Red Cross invites Americans to join while it is holding its eleventh annual roll call from Armistice day through Thanksgiving, November 11 to 24, we can all do so with the knowledge that there can be no more fitting observance of this solemn anniversary than by aiding in the work of the Red Cross—"the greatest mother of the world."

In the sense that Armistice day means the end of fighting, there is no Armistice day for the Red Cross. For in peace as in war it carries on its fight against disease and hunger and devastation. If "peace hath its victories no less renowned than war" then some of the peace-time victories of the American Red Cross, won when tornado or hurricane or flood or fire swept over some ill-fated community, are more to be remembered than are some of its victories won on the battlefield.

There is still another service of the Red Cross which is perhaps but little known in comparison to its other services and it may yet prove to be of a future importance which cannot now be estimated. That is the organization of the Junior Red Cross, which has for its three watchwords "Service," "Friendship" and "Health," and which will begin celebrating its tenth anniversary next year. On its scroll is written these words, "Let Youth Help Shape the World While the Vision Splendid is Still Before Its Eyes."

If indeed youth begins to "shape the world while the vision splendid is still before its eyes," then there may come the time when there will be no more wars, for the Junior Red Cross

Siamese Temple Cats

To the most beautiful of tame cats, says the Berlin Illustrirte Zeitung, belongs the Siamese house cat with its short, smooth hair, which on the body is cream-colored while on the tail, legs, ears and face it is dark brown. The cat in Siam, as in all Far Eastern countries, is a temple animal, and accordingly highly prized and treated with religious care. That fits well with its aristocratic bearing and tastes.

ARMISTICE

Ours, ours they are—
Those dear, dead knights who won the Golden Star;
On far French hills, here in our churchyards lying,
Or in war's wildest wreckage—still unfound
In these torn, piteous fields which they in dying,
Have for us all forever sanctified.
We cannot hallow more that holy ground;
All glory we would give them pale beside
The eternal splendor of these men, who thought
But of the sacred cause for which they fought.

And now, the battles done,
They who gave all, tis they alone who won.
In their great faith there was no
dark misting;
They saw no base self-seekers don
the mask
Of high ideals, to batten on the living.
Their vision was a world secure and just Won by their victory—their only task
To crush one hideous foe; and in that trust
They sped with eager feet, and paid the price,
Unstinting, of the last great sacri-

is literally a "League of Good Will and Better Understanding." Today it numbers more than 5,000,000 school children in the United States. Italy has a million children who are enthusiastic members and the Junior movement has taken hold strongly in other European countries. Japan has more than 200,000 children enrolled in the league.

Although the Junior Red Cross movement would be important for the instruction of the children in the rudiments of home hygiene, first aid and the fundamentals of American citizenship, if for no other reason, it is this international aspect of its work that gives added emphasis to the relation between the spirit of the Red Cross and the spirit of Armistice day. Out of the faith of the millions of children in every nation of the world, enrolled in the Junior Red Cross for the service of humanity, may yet come the realization of the vision held by the men whose memory is honored on Armistice day, as voiced by the poet when he said:

Their vision was a world secure and just Won by their victory—their only task
To crush one hideous foe; and in that trust
They sped with eager feet and paid the price,
Unstinting, of the last great sacrifice.

So history may yet write down the fact that it was these children who kept Their shining vision spotless, un-faded
Until the world, repentant and redeemed,
Grow to the measure of the one they dreamed.

For it has been proved that the domestic cats in all Asia as well as in Europe were not developed by taming the wild animals of the same regions, but that they are descendants of the yellowish cats first domesticated in Egypt and that they have spread from thence over the world.—Exchange.

Electrical Switches

The bureau of standards says that a "lazy-man switch," also called a "three-way switch," is electrically a single-pole, double-throw switch. Using two of them, a light can be controlled from two places, such as upstairs and downstairs in the case of hall lights. A related switch, called a "four-way" switch, is electrically a double-pole reversing switch. Any number of four-way switches may be used with two three-way switches to control a light from any number of points.

Hawks and Owls Destroy Rodents

Many Have Proved Useful in Killing Mice, Rats and Gophers.

To learn exactly to what extent certain birds are aids to agriculture and to determine whether their good qualities overbalance the evil they do, the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture has for many years been making scientific studies of their food habits. All that can be learned out of doors by watching the birds is valuable, but the sure way of finding out what a bird eats is to examine the contents of its stomach to identify what is found.

Utility of Bird Is Estimated.
W. L. McAtee, a biologist in the bureau, describes the method of examining the stomach content of a bird. "It consists of washing all material into a white-lined tray, separating the larger particles on white blotters, catching the more finely ground food on a bolting cloth, transferring this to blotters, and finally identifying the component parts of the whole under a microscope. Identification is facilitated by comparison with collections of seeds, fruit, insects, snails and bones of birds, mammals, reptiles and amphibians; in fact, of all classes of objects eaten by birds. A card prepared for each stomach contains a full inventory of food items and their relative percentages by bulk, and when a sufficient number of these index cards have been accumulated for any species of bird the percentages of the principal items of food for each month are calculated, and the average for the season or year is taken. These are the figures quoted in official reports on the food of birds. From the percentages and the economic value of the food items the utility of the bird can be closely estimated."

Injurious Owls and Hawks.
It is on the basis of such information that the biological survey has been able to combat prejudices against certain birds, such as hawks and owls. The sharp-shinned, Cooper and duck hawks feed largely on birds and are injurious. The great horned owl eats only poultry that is improperly exposed at night, but is otherwise beneficial. The remaining species of hawks and owls, more than fifty in all, have chiefly useful habits. They feed on a great variety of rodents and have a tremendous effect in controlling the number of these pests. The barn owl is one of the most useful of birds. Large percentages of mice, rats and pocket gophers are noted on the feeding cards, showing that the barn owl is constantly doing work of great value to agriculture. Owls as a group have long been persecuted by man, but never has persecution been more unjust. When their numbers are greatly reduced in any community farmers will be forcibly reminded of the fact by a great increase in the number of destructive rodents.

Storing Vegetables in Cellar or Burying Them
Beets, turnips, carrots, salsify, and rutabagas can be stored by burying them in the soil or by placing damp earth around them in a cool, frost-proof cellar. Cellar storage serves to keep the roots in a crisp and tender condition if a cool temperature can be maintained.

To store roots in this way, some convenient container of about the capacity of an apple box is necessary. The vegetables should be pulled late in the fall, topped about an inch from the crown, and packed in the container in layers of garden soil or sand.

These root crops may also be stored in the field where they are grown. A well-drained location should be chosen and about three inches of straw put on the ground. The roots are then piled on the straw in a cone-shaped pile. The heap is covered with two or three inches of straw with the center drawn together to a height of about a foot above the top roots and tied together to form a chimney. This chimney should be about five inches in diameter. It is necessary to carry off foul air and gases. The straw is then covered with three to four inches of soil. As the weather gets colder, more soil may be added to prevent freezing.

Hogging Off Corn Best Method of Harvesting

Tests made at the South Dakota State college indicate that hogging off corn is a profitable method of harvesting the corn crop even in normal crop years and in dry seasons much corn which would hardly be worth picking can be harvested in this manner with little trouble.

Before turning the hogs into the field, according to the department of animal husbandry at state college, especially if they have been getting a limited grain ration, it is advisable to feed new corn in the lot for a few days. This will help to prevent them going off feed, due to consuming a large amount of new corn, just after they are turned into the field.

Experience at state college indicates that hogs having the run of the cornfield will make just as good gains as hogs fattened in the feedlot. Pigs of 80 to 120 pounds are best for hogging off corn inasmuch as they are better rustlers than heavier hogs. Pigs of this weight are also large enough to clean up the field in better shape than pigs of lighter weight.

Sugar Sirup Needed in the Diet of Bees

Supply Before Putting Away for the Winter.

Beekeepers are advised by Francis Jager, chief of the division of bee culture, University of Minnesota, to feed a 10-pound pail of sugar sirup to every colony of bees, regardless of weight, before putting them away for the winter. This sugar sirup should be made of two parts of sugar and one part of water, boiled for 40 minutes, with an ounce of tartaric acid to every 100 pounds of sugar. While the general condition of bee colonies is good, winter stores are of rather doubtful quality. The dark fall honey may be mixed with honey dew which is poisonous to the bees.

Most beekeepers of Minnesota winter their bees in cellars. A good wintering cellar, says the bee specialist, is one which is about 42 degrees Fahrenheit in temperature, is dark quiet, moderately damp, and free from mice and offensive odors. The bees should be put into the cellar about November 1, or sooner if very cold weather sets in. Colonies with a good queen, strong in bees, covering seven or eight frames at least, and provided with 20 or 40 pounds of honey will usually winter well. The entrance to the hive should be left wide open but should be covered over with wire screen to keep out mice. Bees should be kept in the cellar until the pussy willows or soft maples bloom in the spring, about April 1.

Farmers Should Plan to Save Surplus Roughage

In time of plenty prepare for lean years. This is a suggestion offered by Prof. J. B. Fitch, head of the Kansas college dairy department, to farmers while they are preparing to harvest huge crops of corn, hay and feed.

There is a lot of surplus feed or roughage this year as a result of a very provident season, the dairy head reminds, and the far-seeing farmer will preserve as much of it as possible for future years. Farmers naturally turn to the silo as the best means of conserving the most feed for an indefinite time. And to the farmer who has not yet built a silo, the question arises, which type of silo shall I build?

"In storing feed a silo built above the ground is to be preferred," Professor Fitch declared. "But pit and trench silos are inexpensive, easily built with home labor, and they have proven satisfactory in parts of the state where drainage is not a serious problem. Farmers who want information on building silos should see their county agent or write to the Kansas State Agricultural college."

Modern Machinery Calls for Adequate Housing

Modern farming calls for a great variety of modern machinery. The equipment runs well toward $1,000 for the average farm of the United States. That means that the value of farm machinery runs much higher in the corn belt states. Taking the average value at only $750 per farm for the entire country, it means for the 6,000,000 farms an investment of $4,500,000,000. It is such a stupendous sum that the mind cannot comprehend it. At six per cent, the interest on this gigantic sum amounts to $270,000,000.

Bringing this to the individual farm we find that the interest charge is nearly $60 per year, and on most of our farms it is much more. Machine manufacturers tell us that we could easily reduce the cost of our machinery bills by one-half. How? By proper care. And the most important item in the care of machinery is housing.

Agricultural Facts

- The farmer who milks cows should first consider their quality.
- Good milk production from the dairy herd depends greatly upon careful feeding.
- Farm population of the United States has decreased nearly 4,000,000 in the past seven years.
- Minerals are of great importance. It has been proved that pure limestone, bone meal and charcoal are beneficial.
- The bullsnake is beneficial to agriculture because it has the habit of eating upon pocket gophers, rats and mice.
- Eggs easily absorb odors, because the shell is porous, so store them where they will not become contaminated.
- Less vaccinating has been done this summer than should have been done, because corn has been high and hogs have been low. This is a mistake.
- Although a three-horse team can plow more in a day than a two-horse team, the cost for plowing each acre is more when three horses are used.
- If you want alfalfa hay, it is better to seed down alone with alfalfa, but if you want to improve your alfalfa hay, put five pounds of timothy seed in the mixture.

Unable to See Into Newton's Giant Mind

While Isaac Newton was making a study of the refraction of light upon thin plates, as exemplified in the soap bubble, a neighbor woman who saw him experimenting mistook him for a trifle. "He diverts himself in the oddest ways imaginable," she said. "Every morning when the sun shines so brightly that we are obliged to draw the window blinds, he takes his seat in front of a tub of soap suds, and occupies himself for hours blowing soap bubbles through a common clay pipe and intently watching them till they burst."

Newton's acquaintances testified to his self-forgetfulness and humility. "I do not know," he said of himself, "how I may appear to the world, but to myself I seem to have been only like a boy playing on the seashore, now and then finding a smoother pebble or a prettier shell than before, while the great ocean of truth lay all undiscovered before me."—Kansas City Times.

Far Proper Sicep

"Too many women," says the burlesque of home economics, "are satisfied if their bed has a smooth exterior, not realizing, perhaps, that sheets that pull up at the foot, or blankets that slip sideways are not conducive to unbroken rest."

"There is a special art in making a bed properly. The lower sheet should go on right side up, large hem at the head, and smoothly tucked up on all four sides, with the corners folded in miter fashion.

"The upper sheet should be put on wrong side up, so that when the hem is turned over the blankets to keep their edges clean, it will be right side up. Upper sheets and blankets should be tucked in generously at the foot first, the hem folded down, and then the sides folded in."—Kansas City Star.

A Turn-Down

Vice President Barnhart of the National Surety company of New York said the other day that the modern girl expects a man to spend $50 at least when he takes her out on an evening, whereas her mother was content with an expenditure of $5.

"The modern girl, I'm afraid, is extravagant," Mr. Barnhart went on. "A young bank clerk proposed to a modern girl the other night:

"Darling," he wound up anxiously, "you could live on $80 a week, couldn't you?"

"The girl laughed.

"Yes," she said, "but no longer."

Miss E., a public school nurse, was beginning the regular health examination of a flaxen-haired girl in the first grade.

Instead of using the word "horn," sometimes puzzling to the youngsters, Miss E. asked: "Have you always lived in Indianapolis?"

"Yes," replied the little girl, "but before I came from heaven my mother lived in the country."—Indianapolis News.

Town 1,300 Years Old

The thirteen hundredth anniversary of the church and town of Dewsbury, Yorkshire, England, has been celebrated by special services in the parish church and a historical pageant. There is a local tradition that Paulinus visited Dewsbury in the year 627, the same year that he baptized King Edwin. The archbishop of York said recently, in referring to the tradition: "I dare to give it the force of history."
